Aquinas makes it a greater ſin than prodigality, 22, 2æ *Quæſt.*119. *Art.*3. More particularly, 1. It choaketh the word of God. 2. It cauſeth that a man cannot ſerve God; for it is impoſſible to ſerve God and mammon. It cauſeth that he cannot deſire Heaven, nor ſet his heart on the things that are above; it ſets a quarrel between God and man; for the love of the World is enmity to God. It cauſeth unquietneſſe of mind, Phil. 4. 11,12. and heart-conſuming cares, *Matth.*6.25, 26. makes a man deny himſelf the conveniencies of this life, Eccleſ. 2. 24. & 3. 12,13. & 6.1,2. makes one unhoſpitable, 1 *Tim.*3.3. *Heb.*13.2,5. uncharitable, 1 Sam 25.11. James 5.3,4. cauſeth deceit in commerce, Hoſea 12.7,8.

1 Tim.6.9,10. 3. The evils of puniſhment that enſue upon it. Paul ſaith, It pierceth a man through with many ſorrows. They fall into perdition and deſtruction; they ſhall be damned. Covetous men are ranked in Scripture with whoremongers, drunkards.

It is hurtfull:

1. To families, cauſeth brawls, 1 *Tim.*3.3. neglect of family-duties.
2. To the publick, the Commonweal, Judges 5. 16.
3. To the Church, leads men,
   1. To errors, 1 *Tim.*6.10. 2 *Pet.*2.3.
   2. To Apoſtaſie from the profeſſion of the Goſpel, 2 *Tim.*4.10.
   3. Soul-flattery, Jeremy 6.13,14. & 8.10.
   4. To hinder Reformation, Acts 19. *Revel.*18.15.

Signs of it. How ſhall I know that my heart is covetous?

1. If

1. If a man be alwayes solicitous in caring about the things of the world: our Saviour describes covetousnesse by carking and divisions of heart: This is to mind earthly things. Mat. 6. 25, 34.

2. If joy and fear do depend upon the good successe of these outward things, rejoyce when riches increase, but are dejected otherwise.

3. If a man be quick in these things, and dull to any good thing.

4. If the service of God be tedious to thee, because thou wouldst fain be in the world: When will the new Moon be gone?

5. If he be distracted in Gods service, if their hearts runne after their covetousnesse.

6. If one esteem those that are rich for riches sake.

7. Nigardise, Prov. 11. 24. Eccles. 6. 7.

Means to mortifie this sin:

First, Be affected with your spiritual wants, Psalm 102. 2. Let the heart be deeply sensible of the want of Christ, and his sanctifying power in the heart, these outward things are such great wants unto thee, because spiritual wants are not apprehended, Rom. 7. ult.

Secondly, Labour for spiritual delights and joy, Psalm 4. 6, 7.

Thirdly, Consider the shortnesse of thy own life, James 4. 13, 14.

Fourthly, These outward things cannot stand thee in steed at the day of judgement. Riches cannot deliver a man from death, much lesse from damnation. Meditate of the nature of earthly things, 1. Their unprofitablenesse. 2. Uncertainty. 3. The dangerousnesse of them. Riches are but the blessing of Gods left hand, Prov. 3. 16. of his foorstool, earthly blessings, under-ground blessings, but bodily blessings; thy soul is not the richer for all thy wealth, such blessings as God gives to the worst of men, those which he hates. The Mines of gold and silver are among the Indians who worship the Devil. Agur prayed against riches, Prov. 30. 8. They are called thorns and thick clay, deceitfull, uncertain riches.

Fifthly, Remember that God requires the more of thee: Salomon therefore saith, He hath seen riches kept for the hurt of the owners. As you increase your revenews, so you increase your account, you will have more to answer for at the day of judgement.

Sixthly, Christs Kingdom is not of this world, therefore he calleth upon his Disciples to prepare for a Crosse.

Seventhly, Meditate upon the word of God prohibiting covetousnesse, and turn the precepts thereof into confessions and prayers. To apply the reproofs, threatnings and commandments of the word of God against any sin is a common remedy against all sins, and so also against this. Psal. 119. 36.

Eighthly, Seriously consider of Gods gracious promises for matter of maintenance in this life, that you may trust in God, Psalm 34. 10. & 84. 11. & 23. 1. Heb. 13. 5. Matth. 6. 33. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

God is your Father by special grace, by regeneration and adoption, Mat. 6. 32. 2 Cor. 6. 18. a loving and rich Father, and Almighty. He hath already given you:

1. Body and life, Matth. 6. 25.

2. His Son, Rom. 8. 32.

3. His Spirit to dwell in you, to guide and lead you, 1 Cor. 2. 12. Rom. 8. 14, 16. Gal. 5. 18.

4. Himself, Gen. 15. 1. Heb. 8. 10.

The Gospel requireth self-denyal, Matth. 16. 24. the bearing of the crosse, and the parting with all one hath, Luke 14. 26. Such as receive the grace of the Gospel are to be pilgrims and strangers, 1 Peter 2. 11. Heb. 11. 13, 14, 15. they conflict daily with the world. The Gospel begets hope of eternal life, Rom. 6. 5. 1 Peter 1. 3, 4, 5.

Be as much for the world as thou wilt, so thou observe three Rules:

First, Let it not have thy heart. Austin speaks of some, who utuntur Deo, & fruuntur mundo, use God, and enjoy the world. Solius temporis honesta est avaritia.

Secondly, Do not so eagerly follow it that it should hinder thee in holy duties.

Thirdly,

Avarus nihil recte facit, nisi cum moritur. Mimus Publianus.

Thirdly, Let it not hinder thee from works of charity. One compares a covetous man to a swine, he is good for nothing till he be dead.

Cruelty.

The word cruelty is derived either à cruore, from bloud, with which cruell men like wild beasts are delighted, or à crudis carnibus, from raw flesh, with which cruel and barbarous men are sometimes fed.

Peter Martyr on the first Chapter of Judges thus defines it, Est habitus vitiosus quo ad aspera & dura citra rationem inclinamur. It is a vitious habit, whereby we are inclined to rough and hard things without reason.

Vide Aquin. 2. 2a Quæst. 159. Artic. 1, & 2. 2 Sam. 21. 1, 2, 3. Isai. 1. 15. See the Treasury of Times, lib. 4. cap. 6. The Civill Warres of France.

Cruelty is a great sin, Gen. 49. 6, 7. 1 Sam. 22. 18, 19. one saith David was never more cruel then when he had violated the peace of his own conscience, 2 Samuel 12. 31. Psalm 124. Rom. 3. 15. The bloud-thirsty men shall not live out half their dayes: Bloud defiles the Land. Seven things are an abomination to God, the hands which shed innocent bloud is one of them.

The Scripture mentions the cruelty of Adonibezek Judges 1. and Herod Matth. 2. 16.

Hatto Bishop of Mentz in a time of famine shut up a great number of poor people in a barn, promising to give them some relief: But when he had them fast, he set the barn on fire, and hearing then the most lamentable cries and screechings of the poor in the midst of the flames, he scoffingly said, Hear ye how the Mice cry in the barn. But the Lord, the just revenger of cruelty, sent a whole Army of Rats upon him, which followed him into a Tower which he had built for his last refuge in the midst of the River Rhene, never leaving him, till they had quite devoured him.

See Bellum Tartaricum, p. 301, 302, 303.

The Ottomans seek to establish their succession in the Empire, with the bloud of their brethren, their neerest kinne and competitors. Guicciardins History of Italy lib. 1.

Who hath not heard of the Duke of Alvah his cruelty in Netherlands? Vide Historiam Belgicorum Tumultuum, p. 244, 245, &c. & p. 4117. and elsewhere there of the Parisian Massacre.

The Spanish Inquisition (so cald, because it began first in Spain,) for the cruelty of it is even become a Proverb. Vide Hist. Belg. Tumult. p. 8, 9, 10, &c. The cruelty of the Papists in their Massacres and other wicked practices is well known. See Master Morlands History of the Evangelicall Churches of the Vallies of Piemont, l. 2. c. 6. The tears of the Indians. The lamentations of Germany, chap. 3. and 6. neare Fryburg Holck, his Souldiers cut in pieces a Revorend Minister, a man of rare Learning and Piety, the dogs would not lick his blood, nor touch his flesh. Morland ibid. See Mr Staughton against Popery, 2. Argum.

The Romans were so accustomed by long use of War, to behold fightings and bloudshed, that in time of peace also they would make themselves sports and pastimes therewith: for they would compell poor captives and bondslaves either to kill one another by mutual blows, or to enter combate with savage and cruel beasts, to be torn in pieces by them.

Montaigne in the second Book of his Essays, chap. 11. saith, After the ancient Romans had once enured themselves without horror to behold the slaughter of wild beasts in their shows, they came to the murther of men and Gladiators.

In the punishment of certain offences among the Jews there was a number of stripes appointed, which they might not passe, Deut. 25. 23. So doth the Lord abhor cruelty under the cloak of justice and zeal against sin. This Law was so religiously observed amongst the Jews, that they would alwayes give one stripe less unto the offender, 1 Cor. 11. 24.

I think it utterly unlawfull for any man, to take pleasure in the pain and torture of any creature, or delight himself in the tyranny, which the creatures exercise one over another, or to make a recreation of their brutish cruelty, which they practice one upon another. Mr Bruens life put forth by Mr Hinde, see c. 9, 10, 11, 12.

A young Prince of Spain was very worthily censured by the Venetian Embassador (as apt to make a mercilesse and cruell Tyrant) because he delighted in his childhood childhood to cut up Leverets alive. Maſter Pierce his ſinner Impleaded, part 2. chap. 4.

There was in the time of Gregory to 10th (about 1275) as our Hiſtories tell us) a brood of mad Hereticks which aroſe in the Church, whom they called Flagellantes, the whippers, which went about through France and Germany laſhing themſelves to blood.

The higheſt degree of cruelty conſiſts in killing the bodies of men, and taking away their lives for revenge, lucre or ambition: murder and cruelty cry in Gods ears, The voice of thy brothers bloud crieth unto me, Gen. 4. 10.

God often upbraids the Iſraelites with this, That their City was full of bloud, and that cruelty and oppreſſion did lodg in it.

Reaſons 1. It is moſt directly contrary to the love and charity which God would have to abound in every man, love doth no evil to his neighbour.

2. It is moſt contrary to the Law of nature, which ought to rule in all mens lives, to do as they would be done to, we abhor ſmart, pain, grief, hurt, loſſe of limbs, of life.

It is evill to do hurt to a creature further than it deſerves.

3. This ſin is contrary to the ſweetneſſe of humane nature which God hath pleaſed to plant in it in the very frame of the body, in regard of which it is juſtly termed inhumanity and ſavageneſſe, and to the graciouſneſſe and gentleneſſe that is in God.

4. It is a ſin againſt the Image of God, as well as againſt his Authority, for he hath pleaſed to imprint a kind of reſemblance of his own excellent nature upon man more a great deal than upon any other creature of this lower world.

There is ſcarce a vice but being entertained and ſerved will end in bloud.

A Fox is a cruel beaſt as well as a Lion, for though he kill not men, yet he kils Lambs and Pullen, and if he were big and ſtrong enough, he would ſet upon men alſo; yea a Weezle is a devouring beaſt as well as a Fox, for he kils young chickens, and the like, he is cruel according to his kind.

Superſtition will breed ſuch mad zeal as will account it ſelf the more pious, the more bloudy, and will think it doth God ſervice in killing others, as Paul before his converſion. The Duke of Medina ſaid, That his Sword could find no difference betwixt an Hereticke and a Catholick, his buſineſſe was to make a way for his Maſter which he meant to do. Ambition careth not to kill the perſon and all his kindred, in whoſe ſtead it hopeth to be advanced, as the ſtories of the Kings of Iſrael, and Heathen ſtories alſo teſtifie. Envy will count no drink ſweeter than blood. Luſt will make way for its own ſatisfaction, by the death of a husband, wife or corrival. Covetouſneſſe and revenge will provoke a man to cruelty. Fear of ſhame hath made many a harlot kill her own infant. Theſe vices make a man the more bloudy, becauſe they extinguiſh the light of nature, and choak the check of conſcience. Paratur gladiatoris ludus, ut libidinem crudelium luminum ſanguis oblectet. Homo occiditur in hominis voluptatem, & ut quis poſſit occidere, peritia eſt, uſus eſt, ars eſt: ſcelus non tantùm geritur, ſed & docetur quid poteſt inhumanius, quid acerbius dici? Diſciplina eſt, ut perimere quis poſſit: & gloria eſt, quòd perimit. Cyp. Epiſt. 2. Donato Vide plura ibid.

Curſing.

It is to wiſh evil to a thing or perſon, it virtually * contains in it all evil, as bleſſing contains in it virtually all good.

See Doctor Gouges Whole Armour.

* The Plague, Pox, Vengeance, the Devil take thee. The mention of the Devil makes it appear how deviliſh thou art. A natura abhorret ſibi ipſi malum imprecari; à charitate mutuus, alteri. Profana Ethnicorum vocis ſunt, peream, diſpeream, & ſimiles. Dorſche Pentad. Decades. Diſſert. 1.

The holy Ghoſt notes it of unſanctified men, Their mouths are full of curſing and bitterneſſe, Rom. 12. 3.

The Sichemites Judg. 9. Goliah, 1 Sam. 17. 38. Shimei, the mother of Micah.

Reaſons 1. Abundance of contempt of God, and uncharitableneſſe in the heart.

2. The Devil ſtirs up curſed conceits in mens mindes when they are angry: James, Their tongues are ſet on fire of hell, therefore with it they curſe their neighbours.

Sr Gervaſe Elwayes Lieutenant of the Tower was hanged. Being in the Low Countries, and much addicted to gaming, he wiſhed, that if ever he played more above ſuch a value, he might be hanged, but he did, and ſo the juſt judgment of God fell upon him accordingly as he ſaid. Howels Londinopolis. Mr Ball hath the ſame ſtory (I ſuppoſe) in his Power of Godlineſs, l. 4. c. 3.

We muſt learn to bleſſe and not curſe, as S. Peter exhorteth, becauſe we are heirs of bleſſing, as our Saviour exhorteth, Bleſſe them which curſe you; Strive to reverence God and love thy neighbour. Conſider of the Commandements of God, which forbid it, and his judgements, curſing ſhall clothe thee as thou didſt love it.

Thoſe raſh and vulgarmaledictions are very ſinnefull, Peſtis te abripiat, abi in malam rem, utinam ſuſpenſus eſſes. Dr Ames Caſ. of Conſc.

There is a double curſing, one is a warrantable, lawful, needful duty, when any man doth in Gods name, and by Gods authority pronounce or denounce evil againſt any thing or perſon, withal praying that the thing may fall out accordingly; thus Chriſt curſed the Figtree, and Eliſha the Children. The other ſinful, the vomitting out vile and diſgracefull ſpeeches, miſchievous and wicked wiſhes.

The Ancients obſerve, that when God gave the Devil leave to afflict Jobs body, he ſpared his tongue, that feeling his pain he might eaſily raile and curſe.

Chap. XVII.

Of Deceit, Diſtruſt, Divination, Diviſion, Drunkenneſſe.

Deceit.

Eſt proprie per dolum in verbis, per fraudem in factis. All the Latine Lewis the eleventh would have his Son Charles the 8th to learn, was this, Qui neſcit diſſimulare neſcit regnare. It was a Proverb ordinary in Rome, that the Pope (Alexander the ſixt) never did that which he ſaid; and the Duke (his Sonne) never ſpake that which he meant. Guicciardins Hiſt. of Italy, l. 6. p. 225. He ſaith there alſo of Pope Julio the 2d, p. 232. No man more eaſily beguileth another, than he that hath the cuſtome and name never to deceive any. Fraus oritur ex ſimilitudine. Alchimy is like gold. The Italians have a Proverb, He that deceives me once, it is his fault; but if twice, its my fault.

DECEIT is when we make ſhew of one thing and do another.

The Court a meer Schoole of fraud and diſſembling, Godwins Annales of England, Court-holy-water is a Proverb, Gen. 11. 9. whence Aſtu craft, deceit, from ἄστυ, that is, a City, it is a Citizen.

It is that vice by which men are apt to make ſhew of good they intend not, and again to hide the ſhew of that evil they do intend, or by which men cover over bad purpoſes with fair pretences, that they may the more eaſily accompliſh them, as in Saul to David, whom he deſired to thruſt upon his own ruine in fighting with the Philiſtims, and his pretence was to honour his valour by making him his ſon in law. Jacobs ſons uſed it againſt the Sichemites, Judas againſt Chriſt, he came with a kiſs when he meant nothing but miſchief.

A ſpirit of falſehood is gone out amongſt profeſſors, we know not mans heart by his tongue, the greateſt part of the Nation is turned into a lye.

It is a great ſin, David blameth this fault in Doeg, Pſalm 52. See Pſalm 5. 6. it is a ſin condemned by nature, for no man can chooſe but complain if he meet with it in others; and by Scripture more, Mark 7. 17. Rom. 3. With their tongues they have uſed deceit, Rom. 1. 29. 1 Pet. 2. 1. Deceitful men ſhall not live out half their daies, David. The bread of deceit ſhall be gravel in the belly, Salomon, The deceitfull man ſhall not roſt what he took in hunting. Of all vices it takes up moſt of the lodgings about us, 1. Our ſpirits, Pſalm 2. 2. 2. Our thoughts, Pſalm 38. 12. 3. Our hearts, Proverbs 12. 20. 4. Our mouths, 1 Peter 2. 22. 5. Our lips, Pſalm 34. 12. 6. Our tongues, Pſalm 15. 3. 7. Our bellies, Job 15. 35. 8. Our feet, Job 31. 5. All our members, Acts 13. 10.

There is fraud in bargaining and converſing, Davids whole carriage to Achiſh was nothing but a pack of fraud, Abraham helped himſelf by deceit, ſaying of his wife, She is my ſiſter. Iſaac practiſed the ſame deceit with leſſe probability or ſhew of of truth. Plain Jacob was drawn by his mother to uſe deceit to get the bleſſing.

Reaſons 1. The cauſes of it are want of the fear of God, and of charity to men: a Chriſtians faith and love muſt be ἀνυπόκριτος without diſſimulation, S. Paul ſaith it twice of both.

2. It is an abuſe of a good gift, yea one of the beſt natural gifts, wit, reaſon and underſtanding, Corruptio optimi peſſima.

3. It overthrows the welfare of humane ſocieties, and is contrary to charity, equity, and all well-ordered laws.

Diſtruſt.

It is a kind of ſhaking, or looſneſſe of the heart for want of ſomething to ſtay upon, for attaining of good or avoiding evil, Iſa. 7. 2.

1. We muſt not diſtruſt God, as Ahaz did in Iſa. 7. and Sarah when ſhe heard of her having a ſon, and the Iſraelites when they murmured in their tents, and ſaid, They ſhould periſh in the wilderneſſe; and David, I ſhall one day periſh by the hand of Saul.

we have not only his providence, but his promiſes to relie upon, Pſal. 34. 10. & 84. 10 & 37. 3. Heb. 13. 5.

2. We muſt not diſtruſt men without cauſe, thinking they will not do ſuch things as they have promiſed or undertaken, or as they ſeem willing to do, which was the fault of Saul, who diſtruſted the loyalty both of David and of the people, only becauſe they in their Song aſcribed to David ten thouſand, and miſtruſted Jonathan alſo as if he had been diſloyal.

3. We muſt moderately diſtruſt our ſelves and our own wit and ſufficiency, as Salomon did, ſaying, I am but a child, and I cannot go in and out before this great people: And Paul when he ſaid, I am not ſufficient to think any thing as of my ſelf. We muſt not ſo diſtruſt our ſelves, as to be diſheartned from attempting to do our duties, which was Moſes his fault, that becauſe he was not eloquent refuſed to go to Pharaoh, but alone in ſuch meaſure, as to make us ſeek more earneſtly to God for his help and aſſiſtance.

Divination.

Divination is quædam prænunciatio futurorum, ſaith Aquinas. In general is a courſe, way or proceeding to effect ſtrange and unwonted effects by means not allowed or ordained by God, either in the courſe of nature, or any ſpecial inſtitution; as for example, to find out ſecret and hidden things, who did this or that, where ſuch a thing is which is loſt, what ſhall become of ſuch a man in ſuch a buſineſs, and to hurt a man and ſtrike him with a diſeaſe, or to help another and cure him of a diſeaſe, or the like.

De divinationis nomine nolim multum contendere. Tantum dico, divinationis nomen mihi quoque videri impropriè Aſtrologicis præſtigiis tribui, quoniam is verè dicitur divinare, qui interno quodam impulſu, non autem ex cauſis aliqua prædicit. Beza Epiſt. 29. Augurium eſt divinatio quæ ex avium volatu, cantu aut paſtu capitur, dicturque augurium quaſi avigerium, quia ex geſtu avium ſumebatur, inde tamen transfertur ad quamlibet divinationem. Cornel. a Lapid. in Num. 23. Modus quo exequuntur has divinationes ineptus eſt, & merito à mathematis ingeniis etiam inter tenebras derideretur: per garritus aut volatus avium, per paſtum pullorum, per exta animantium, per ſtridorem ſulcum, per voces temere jactatas. Lod. Viv. de verit. Fid. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 13. Vide Thom. Aquin. 2ª, 2æ Quæſt. 95. Artic. 1, 2, 3, &c. Et Zanchium de divinatione. Conflat Hebræos. (Caput quos Nichaſh vel Nachaſh, tum ſerpentem, tum divinationem ſignificat) ex ſerpentibus olim divinationes ac auguria inſtituiſſe. Dickinſoni Delphi Phœnicizantes c. 2.

Of theſe ſtrange effects ſome are plainly diabolical, which are done by a manifeſt direct and perſonal concurrence of Satan and aſſociation with him, ſuch as all Sorcerers, Conjurers and Witches uſe, and thoſe which have familiar Spirits, who raiſe up the Devil himſelf to appear in likeneſs to them, and anſwer and do things for them, and ſuch as were uſed of old in Oracles, where the Devil diſguiſed himſelf under the appearance of a god.

2. Mixtly natural and diabolical, when Satan is not directly conſulted with all, but certain natural things are imployed to the end whereto in nature they ſerve not to cover the Devil from mens eyes, and ſo to work more ſecretly, as in all thoſe which are termed curious arts, Acts 19. 19. ſuch as are the uſe of charms, and ſpels, and divinations of all ſorts, and the caſting of figures, and obſervation of heavenly bodies, out of them to pick the knowledg of contingent events, which becauſe they have no certainty in their nature, therefore cannot be collected out of theſe natural things, upon which alone certain and neceſſary things do follow. This Art of Divination and all the reſt are nought, for they came from Satan and ſerve to ſet him up in mens minds, and to quench the reſpect and fear of God.

Diviſion.

All creatures in their natural eſtate are ſevered and divided one from another.

Primum bonum ſummæ Trinitatis eſt indiviſio. The Unity in the Trinity is the chiefeſt thing, and the Devil among the vulgar is known by his cloven foot. The Pythagoreans have ſet a note of infamy upon the number of two, becauſe it was the firſt, that durſt depart from Unity. Numerus binarius infamis eſt, quia primus auſus eſt diſcedere ab unitate; for nothing is ſo diabolicall as diviſion, nothing more divine than unity. Doctor Stoughtons Happineſſe of Peace, pag. 5. See Doctor Reynolds Sermon of Brotherly Agreement on Phil. 2. 1, 2.

1. They are divided from God the only and chiefeſt good.
2. From the Angels, 1 Cor. 11. 10.
3. One from another, Iſa. 9. beginning.
4. From themſelves. We are joyned to Satan and comply with the Idols of our own hearts, Ezek. 14. beginning.

1. The nature of this diviſion is not only local, as that of Ruben, Judg. 5. 15, 16. by the River Jordan, or in externals, but ſpiritual which is the worſt, as ſpiritual union is the beſt. This makes the difference in mens minds, judgments, wils, conſciences, Acts 26. 9. John 16. beginning, divided in the very ends they propound, and the means that lead to thoſe ends, and the rule.

Inter ipſos autem Doctores olim fuiſſe diſſidia, vel id argumento minime dubio fuerit: quod inter Paulum & Barnabam, inter Polycarpum, & Anicetum, inter Irenæum & Epiſcopos Galliæ, inter Chryſoſtomum & Epiphanium, inter Theodoretum & Cyrillum, inter Hieronymum & Auguſtinum, diſſenſiones fuere. Wolphius de vera & Catholica Eccleſia.

The cauſes of it are ſad, the luſts and ſins of our own hearts, the juſt indignation of God.

Theſe ſins eſpecially,
1. Idolatry, Judges 5. 8.
2. Covenant-breaking, Lev. 26. 25.
3. Pride, Jer. 13. 9. compared with 14.
4. Hypocriſie, Iſa. 10. 6.
5. Apoſtaſie.

Sinne,
1. Divides one Nation from another.
2. Divides the ſame Nation, Iſa. 9. 21. Jer. 14. 17.
3. Makes diviſions between City and City, and Citizens of the ſame City, Jer. 13. 13, 14.
4. Makes diviſion in Families, Luke 12. 51, 52.
5. Divides ſingle perſons.
6. Makes a breach between a perſon and himſelf, ſets a mans conſcience againſt him.

Arguments againſt diviſion and falling into parties.

Firſt, Diviſions are a judgment of God upon a Nation, Zech. 13. 14.

Secondly, Conſider the ſeveral ſins that falling into parties puts men upon.

1. It puts them on great thoughts of heart, Judges 5. 15.
2. Men break forth into bitter cenſuring and reviling of thoſe which are not of their own party, Prov. 21. 24. James 4. 11. they ſet up their own will in oppoſition to God.
3. It cauſeth men to be glad to hear evil one of another, and take up any report for for truth, Nehem. 6. 6. and glad of any mischief that shall befall them, Ezek. 25. 6.

4. This laies upon men a necessity of joyning with any to oppose that party, though they be never so contrary in religion or affection.

Thirdly, Falling into parties is a certain way of ruine.

1. In the just judgement of God, Hosea 10. 2.

2. In the nature of the thing, Judges 5. 5.

In cause of religion every subdivision is a strong weapon in the hand of the contrary part, Hist. of Conncel of Trent, l. 1. p. 49.

Studium partium est maxima pars studiorum. See Isa. 9. 21. Jerusalem was destroyed by division of them into parties. Josephus. Dum singuli pugnant, universi vincuntur. Tacitus.

The Turks use to pray unto God, to keep the Christians at variance.

There are some cementing or reconciling graces, faith, repentance, charity, and humility.

There is much talk of peace and unity, peace with truth, or peace and holiness are joyned together in Scripture.

We should pray to Christ to heal our divisions, that he would make us one, we should put on love which is the bond of perfectnesse, Col. 3. 14, 15. See Phil. 3. 14, 15.

Drunkennesse.

Drunkennesse is a great sin, Isa. 28. 1. Deut. 32. 32. Prov. 23. 29, 30, 31.

Hos. 4. 11. Luk. 12. 45, 46.

The Scripture condemns it, Be not drunk with wine, saith the Apostle; Salomon forbids to keep company with a wine-bibber; the Prophet denounceth a woe to the drunkards of Ephraim. Drunkennesse is one of the fruits of the flesh, and a drunkard one of those whom Paul excludes from heaven; Nature condemns it, it trampleth under-foot at once the whole Law and Gospel too.

It is magna animæ submersio. August. It is vitium maximæ adhærentiæ, as the Schoolmen say, seldome left.

First, For the Law it violates each Commandment; The first, the drunkard makes his belly his god, he cannot exercise knowledg of God, love, fear, confidence, remembrance of sin, or any virtue. It breaks the second Commandment, it is a direct breach of our vow made in Baptism, and renewed in the Lords Supper, for this is one of the works of the Devil which we then renounced. Again it hinders a man from praying, reading, meditating, or doing any good and religious duty. It breaketh the third Commandment, because it is an abuse of one of Gods creatures, and so takes Gods name in vain, it causeth that one can neither see God in his works, nor do any works to his glory, nor shew forth thankfulness for benefits, nor patience in crosses, and because it fils the mouth full of foul and desperate oaths. The fourth, he is unfit to sanctifie the Sabbath, and if one be drunk on the Lords-

Lords-day, it is a great prophanation of it, for it is far from a holy work. The fifth, it makes one deſpiſe Parents, Magiſtrates, all Governours, it makes him abuſe Wife, Children, Servants, and all his Inferiours, it makes him lift up himſelf above his equals, and deſpiſe all in compariſon of himſelf. The ſixth, it is a hurt to his own body, and breeds vile diſeaſes, dropſie, fever, redneſſe of eyes, makes him raile, revile, quarrel and kill, and commit all inſolent injuries, and hazards himſelf to untimely death, Gal. 5. 21. The ſeventh, for it fils heart and tongue and all full of filthineſſe, it inflames the body to luſt, a drunken Lot will commit inceſt, Rom. 13. 13. The eighth, it is a waſting of time and goods, and a robbing of a mans ſelf and family, it often enciteth to cozenage and beguiling, it is groſſe injuſtice. The ninth, it makes him full of bragging and boaſting and backbiting, his tongue is as full of vanity as his head of vapours. The tenth, it fils the mind full of leud imaginations, and expoſeth him to Satans ſuggeſtions. Perkins on Rev 2.14. It is againſt the Goſpel, it oppreſſeth the heart, and takes away reaſon, that a man grows hard-hearted, and fils men full of preſumption.

There was a ſtreet in Rome called Vicus ſobrius, the ſober ſtreet, but is there a village in England that may be called Villa ſobria, the ſober village?

The Lacedemonians were wont to bring forth their ſervants being drunk, and to ſhew them to their children, that ſeeing their beaſtly behaviour they might grow to a greater loathing and deteſtation of their drunkenneſſe.

If a man (though he loaths drunkenneſſe) ſhould (to ſymbolize with wicked company) drink immoderately, yet it is drunkenneſſe: it is true he is not ebrioſus, an old ſoaking drunkard, yet he is ebrius, he hath committed the ſin of drunkenneſſe.

There is a two-fold privation of reaſon:

1. Aptitudinal, when a man drinks ſo immoderately, that there is a diſpoſition to diſturb reaſon, yet becauſe he is of a ſtrong brain and conſtitution, he can bear it without any diſturbance, and this hath a woe, Woe to thoſe that are ſtrong to drink, that have ſtrong brains and bodies to carry their liquor away, and never cry out with him, Duos ſoles video.

Iſaiah 5. 22. 1 Peter 4. 3. See Hackwels Apol. p. 337, 339, 344.

2. Actual, either total and compleat, when reaſon is fully intercepted, and that is to be ſtark drunk, to be a vivum cadaver, as Chryſoſtome cals it well, a breathing carkaſs; one cals them Ventri-dæmones, belly-devils, who like Diogenes could live in a barrel barrel all their life time. Or partial, when a mans fancy is wholly disturbed, yet he is so farre tipled, that both his fancy and judgement are darkned, and the house runs round with him.

Means to avoid it:

1. Shun the company of drunkards, and all occasions.
2. Cry to God to help you against this vice, and consider the terrible threats against it, 1 *Cor.*6.9.
3. Get thy sensual appetite mortified.
4. Taste of Christs wine, the sweetnesse of having Communion with him, *Ephes.*5.18.

Wards Woe to drunkards. Amef. de consc. lib. 3. cap. 16. By Solons Law it was punished with death in every one though he were a Magistrate or Prince. No civil State but have made severe Laws against it. If Chrysostome were now alive, the best of all his Homilies should be spent to cry down drunkennesse, as he did swearing in Antioch. Vide Aquin. 2a, 2ae Qu. 150. Artic. 1, 2, & 3. Aristotle said, Every drunkard was worthy of a double punishment, both because of his drunkennesse, and the evils afterward. In the Scripture we have two notable instances of Gods loathing this sin, in Noah and Lot, Gen. 9. 21. & 19. 33. though many excuses might be brought. Consider 1. That the power of wine was not so well known. 2. Noah used constantly to drink water. 3. It was but once. 4. He was aged, old men (saith Aristotle) are sooner drunk, because of the weaknesse of their natural heat, which is easily overcome by that of wine. Lot being sad and solitary took wine perhaps to refresh him. Yet though Lot ignorans committed that offence, yet not ex ignorantia, he was the cause of his own ignorance.

Chap. XVIII.

Of Envy, Error, Flattery, Gluttony.

Envy.

ENVY is a grief for the prosperity of others. Est * agritudo susceptа propter alterius res secundas, quæ nihil noceant invidenti.

The first instances that we have of sinne, are Adams pride and Cains envy. Envy is the mother of strife, they are often coupled *Rom.*1.29. & 13.13. 1 *Cor.*3.3. 2 Cor. 12.20 *Gal.*5.20. *Jam.*3.14. Natural corruption doth most of all bewray it self by envy. The Devil first envied us the favour of God, and ever since we have envied one another. The children of God are often surprized with it, Numb. 11.29. John 21.20,21. It breaketh both Tables at once, it beginneth in discontent with God, and endeth in injury to man.

Macrobius l. 2. Sat. c. 2. saith acutely of Mutius a malevolous man, being sadder then he was wont, Aut Mutio nescio quid incommodi accessit, aut nescio cui aliquid boni. The Heathens when they saw an envious man sad, they would demand whether harm had happened unto him, or good unto his neighbour.

Aristotle cals it the Antagonist of the Fortunate. Parum alicui est si ipse sit felix, nisi alter fuerit infœlix.

Livor semper lippus est, saith Petrach, this humour is alwayes ill-sighted. All bleareyed men are offended and hurt with the light, so envy is provoked at anothers good and honour. The better the party envyed is, the better he behaveth himself, the more bitter the envier doth grow against him, and the more his hatred increaseth. Saul had still a more violent spleen against David by how much he discovered more wisdom, courage, and the more the hearts of his servants were set upon him. Who can stand before envy? saith Salomon, Prov. 27.4.

He grapled at laſt with envy as the worſt.

The old ſaying is true, Tolle invidiam, mea tua ſunt, & tua mea.

Eraſm. lib. 17. of his Epiſt. in an Epiſtle to Sr Thomas More, ſaith of Conradus Goclenius, Invidere quid ſit, ne per ſomnium quidem unquam intellexit: tantus eſt ingenij candor.

The objectum quod of it, is, Good of any kind, true, apparent, honeſt, profitable, pleaſant, of mind, body, fortune, fame, virtue it ſelf not excepted; the objectum cui, is generally any other man, Superiour, Inferiour, Equal. We envy a Superiour becauſe we are not equalled to him, an Inferiour leaſt he ſhould be equal to us, an Equal becauſe he is our equal. Men of the ſame Trade or Profeſſion envy each other.

The chief cauſe of it is pride and inordinate love of a mans ſelf: the impulſive cauſe is manifold, as if he be an enemy, a corrival.

Hatred (when one loaths and wiſhes ill to another) agrees with envy.

1. In the ſubject, alwayes he which envies another hates him, but not on the contrary.

Secondly, In the efficient cauſe, which is pride, and a blinde love of mans ſelfe.

It differs from it:

See the difference between envy and hatred. Dr Willet on Gen. 37. 4.

Firſt, In the ſubject, for hatred may be in one in whom envy is not.

Secondly, In the objectum quod, which in envy is only good, but in hatred it may be evil.

Thirdly, In the objectum cui, which is larger in hatred than envy, for we envy men only, not God, nor our ſelves but others, but we may hate not only other men but our ſelves and other creatures, yea God himſelf.

Flattery.

See Dr Halls Holy Panegyrick, pag. 480. Communiter nomen adulationis attribui ſolet omnibus, qui ſupra debitum modum virtutis volunt alios verbis vel factis delectare in communi converſatione. Aquin. 2a 2æ Quæſt. 115. artic. 1.

It is called by Hayward in the life of King Henry the firſt, the moſt baſe brokery of words.

Flattery is a ſpeech fitted to the will and humours of others for our own advantage. See 2 Sam. 15. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

One may pleaſe others much, and yet not flatter them, when he ſeeks not his own advantage in it, 1 Cor. 3. ult.

We flatter,

Secondly, Applaud their evils as goodneſs. Or

Thirdly, Amplifie their good parts above their merit. Or Fourthly, Extenuate their evil more than is meet, Iſa. 5. 10.

Flatterers are men that dwell at Placenza, as the Italian ſaith, Iſa. 30. 10. They may well be called Cementarij Diaboli, the Devils danbers, Ezek. 13. 10. See Pſal. 12. 2, 3.

Dionyſius the Tyrant had flatterers about him, who like Dogs would lick up his ſpittle ſpittle and commend it to him to be as ſweet as nectar.

Diogenes compared flattering language to a ſilken halter, which is ſoft becauſe ſilken, but ſtrangling becauſe a halter; and ſaith, As Tyrants are the worſt of all wild beaſts, ſo are flatterers of all tame.

Plus perſequitur lingua adulatoris, quam manus perſecutoris, Aug.

None can be flattered by another till he firſt flatter himſelf.

Canutus King of * England and Denmark, well repreſſed a flatterer at Southampton, who bare the King in hand that all things in the Realm were at his will and command. He commanded that his chair ſhould be ſet on the ſhore, when the Sea began to flow, and then in the preſence of many, ſaid to the Sea as it flowed, Thou art part of my dominion, and the ground on which I ſit is mine, wherefore I charge thee that thou come not upon my Land, neither that thou wet the cloathes or body of thy Lord; but the Sea according to his uſual courſe flowing did wet his feet, then he ſaid, None was worthy the name of a King, but he to whoſe command the earth and Sea were ſubject, and never after would be King.

Open hoſtility is better then ſecret flattery. An ungodly mans ſins are acts of hoſtility, his duties acts of flattery, Pſal. 78. 36.

We ſhould ſhut our ears to flatterers, and rather ſeek to do what is commendable, then to hear our own commendation.

Plus aliis de te, quam tu tibi, credere noli.

Auguſtus Cæſar and Alexander Severus are reported to have been ſo ſtrict againſt flatterers, that if any did but extraordinarily bow himſelf, or ſhew but the leaſt ſign of flattery toward them, they were preſently baniſhed and expelled their Courts.

Gluttony.

This ſinne hath been ſo proper to this Nation of England that one puts voraces for an Epithete of Anglis and another, when he will ſay he is full even to the brim, expreſſeth it thus, Si ſoul comme un Anglois, He is glutted like an engliſh man. Smindyrides, perditiſſimus ille juvenis jactare ſolitus eſt, ſe à viginti annis ſolem, nec priorem, nec pecidentem vidiſſe, aſſiduè ſcilicet in lecto aut in menſa occupatus. Drexel. Æternit. prodromus, c. 2. ſect. 8. Clemens Alexandrinus writeth of a fiſh which hath not a heart diſtinguiſhed from the belly as other fiſhes have, but it hath the heart in the belly. So theſe gluttons which make a God of their belly, have a heart in their belly.

Gluttony is a ſinne, Iſa. 56. 12. Amos 6. it is an immoderate delight in meats and drinks. This was Dives his ſinne, Luke 16. one of the ſinnes of Sodom, Ezek. 16. 49. Fulneſs of bread, and of the old world.

This ſinne is committed five wayes:

Præpropere, Lautè, Nimis, Ardenter, Studioſè.

Apicius was a great Glutton among the Romans. See Martial of him l. 3 epig. 17. and Raderus his Commentary.

Συβαριζειν and Sybaritica Menſa, are become a Proverb, and their great luxury was a cauſe of their deſtruction, as Hiſtorians witneſſe.

Reaſons 1. From the cauſes of it, it ariſeth from ſenſuality, a brutiſh vice whereby one metamorphoſeth himſelf into a ſwine in diſregarding the divine, ſpiritual, excellent, ſupernatural good offered to his reaſon, and by that alone to be conceived, and placeth his happineſs in corporal delights and pleaſures that tickle his ſenſes. Such an one that ſo feeds, eats not to live, but lives to eat, and in that ſenſe is ſaid to ſerve his own belly, and not the Lord.

Secondly, The effects of this vice are very bad:

1. It hinders Mercy and Liberality to the poor. Lazarus could not have the crums of the Rich Mans Table, either they have no heart to give, or nothing to spare.

Galienus the Emperour being plunged in pleasures, when news was brought him, that Egypt was revolted against him, What (quoth he) shall we spread our Tablecloaths no more in Egypt. Geta another Emperour sate at the Table three dayes together, without rising, and all his meats were served in according to the order of the Alphabet. Treasury of Ancient and Modern Times, l. 9. ch. 24. 25. Vitellius was so dissolute, that he would have four several meales each day allowed him. Breakfast, Dinner, Supper, and Collation. One seeing so many young Gentlemen follow Epicurus at his first setting up, said, The cause was, it was young mens Philosophy that was professed in that School.

2. It often overthrowes the Estate, He that loves Wine and Oyl shall not be rich.

3. Oppresseth the heart and burieth all good Meditations and Affections, for fat it alwayes senslesse.

4. Draws men to the practice of Unjustice, as 1 Sam. 21. 30.

A Christian must take heed of all excesse in food, 1 Cor. 9. 29.

Reasons. First, A moderate Diet keeps the body healthful, that we may glorifie God and have ability of strength to serve him.

Secondly, Excess of Diet will breed lusts, and further the power of concupiscence in men.

Thirdly, The body is to be an instrument of the soul in all service to God: glorifie God in soul and body: much eating unfits, and is sinfull.

Fourthly, We must eat to the glory of God, when we are hungry, that hereby God may be glorified in our calling.

Fifthly, It is idolatry to mind the belly, Phil. 3. 19. Rom. 16. 16. such belly-gods were the Monks, and many of the Romans.

Sixthly, It is a sin against the body, the Apostle aggravates fornication from this consideration.

Seventhly, It indisposeth to any spiritual duty, Luke 21. 34. a full belly can not study.

Impletus venter non vult studere libenter.

In Scripture a fat heart is as much as stupid and senslesse.

First, Many like Josephs Master Potiphar take account of nothing but what they must eat and drink, that they may be sure to fare well; our feasts usually are turned meerly to an exercise of this vice.

Nomen sobrietatis sumitur à mensura. Dicitur enim aliquis sobrius, quasi brium, id est, mensuram servans. Aquinas 2ª, 2æ. Quæst. 149. Artic. 1.

Secondly, All should exercise Temperance in Diet, let a little content thee, let the end of thy eating be strength and health, not a pleasing of thy tooth: the rich must inure themselves sometime to a hard short meal, that they may do more good to others.

Motives.

First, Gluttony is a beastly sin, yea it makes men worse than beasts, for they can take delight in such things, yet will not exceed.

Secondly, It is an abuse of the creatures which are given to us for our good.

Thirdly, Injurious to the poor.

Remedies against sensuality,

Signes of sensuality. 1. When one looks upon nothing as certain, but what is in present view. 2. When a mans affections run out to present and sensuall things. Sensualitas est appetitus rerum ad corpus pertinentium. 3. When spiritual and supernatural truths make no impression on a man.

1. Consider what ever God hath spoken is certainly true, whether sense can apprehend it or no, 1 Pet. 2. 21.

2. The life of sense is a brutish life.

3. He is kept from conversing with the highest objects, sence can not know the general nature of things, nothing of God, nor the excellency of the soul.

4. Satans

4. Satan presents such objects as are suitable to the senses, so he did to David, Achan.

5. Sense is a great deceiver, Salomon made experiment of all sensible injoyments to the utmost.

6. Sense was made to be the servant of faith and reason.

Chap. XIX.

Of Hypocrisie, Idleness, Ignorance, Impenitence, Injustice, Intemperance.

Hypocrisie.

It can not so properly be said to be one single sin, as the sinfulness of other sins, as sincerity is not one grace, but an ornament which beautifies and graces all other graces.

Hypocrisie is that vice by which men content themselves to seem good, but are not carefull to be so in very deed; that is a good discription of it, 2 Tim. 2. 3, 5. See Matth. 23. 14. & 24. 51.

In that measure we like of sin, in that measure is hypocrisie in us. Greenham.

Hypocrisie consists in Dissimulation and Simulation: Dissimulation is to hide the evil which is, that it do not appear. Simulation is to make a shew of the good we have not.

There are two kinds of Hypocrites.

1. Such as are gross and know they do dissemble.

2. Such as have great works of Gods Spirit, as knowledg, joy, sorrow, and reformation of their sins, which do take these to be true graces, because they come near them and are like them; as the foolish Virgins.

Hypocrisie is when a man seems outwardly to be that which he is not inwardly. Perkins on Revelation. See Dikes Deceitfulnesse of Heart, cap. 2. pag. 29. Doctor Sclater on Rom. 2. 2. page 164. and Master Baxters vain Religion of the Formall Hypocrite, Constantius the father of Constantine, to try his Courtiers, commanded all to sacrifice to Idols, pretending to discard all that refused so to do, but contrarywise those that obeyed, he put from the Court, saying, Quomodo fidem Imperatori præstabunt inviolatam, qui Deo sunt perfidi. Eusebius. How will they be true to their Prince, who are disloyal to God?

A very hypocrite may make somn account of serving God. Saul durst not fight till he had offered sacrifice, 1 Sam. 13. 11, 12. A man may hear and that with joy, and believe, and bring forth a blade of forward profession, and yet be an hypocrite. The Pharisee boasted that he paid tithe of all that he possessed, that he fasted twice a week. Paul was unrebukable according to the Law, and after a sort conscionable in exercises of Religion. Psalm 50. God tels the hypocrite he will not reprove him for his sacrifices, this way he was not much behinde hand.

See Isa. 32. 6. and 58. 2. Jer. 12. 2. Psal. 50. 16, 17. Mat. 23. 27, 28.

Reasons 1. A certain natural spark of the knowledg of God is left in man since the fall.

2. It is a credit to be somewhat Religious.

3. It is fit to feed their pride and a conceit of their own goodness.

4. This is a means of nourishing him in his false and presumptuous hope of salvation.

Hypocrites have divers pretences,

1. Of praise and respect among men, Matth. 6. 2. religion sometimes hath a good name.

2. Self-revenge, 1 Sam. 18. 17. 2 Sam. 3. 9. 1 King. 21. 22.

3. A deſire of gain, 1 Theſ. 2. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 15.

4. Worldly greatneſs, 2 Kings 10. 10. 2 Sam. 16. 7.

The difference between the religion of the hypocrite and true-hearted:

1. In the matter, the one meditateth in the word read and heard, applying it to himſelf, by turning it into matter of ſorrow or joy, confeſſion or petition; the hypocrite will never thus apply the word of God unto himſelf in the ſeveral parts of it.

2. The hypocrite hath alwaies a falſe or evil end in his devotion; either he aims at praiſe amongſt men, or earning heaven to himſelf notwithſtanding his bearing with himſelf in ſome ſins, he aims not at the pleaſing of God and getting grace and power to himſelf that he may overcome ſin.

James 1. 26. 3. They differ in the fruit and manner of performing theſe exerciſes; the hypocrite neither hath nor careth to have the power of theſe acts working mightily in his heart. The Phariſees contented themſelves to waſh the outſide of the cup and platter, and to be zealous obſervers of the letter of the law, being yet within full of all wickedneſs. The moſt accompliſht hypocrite can not expreſs, 1. The life and power of a Chriſtian, 2. Nor the joy of a Chriſtian.

The open prophane man may be worſe than the hypocrite in ſome reſpect, he diſhonoureth God more, and ſinneth with a higher hand, and with more contempt of God, and alſo with more hurt to men by his example, than the wicked man doth. Yet the hypocrites caſe in other reſpects is worſe than the ſtate of the prophane man.

Hilderſam on Pſalm 31. 7. p. 718, 719.

Quo quis ſanctior eſt hypocrita, eo deterior eſt Evangelij hoſtis. Luther.

1. In this life, he is hardlier brought to a ſenſe of his ſin, and to repentance for it Mat. 21. 31.

2. In the life to come, becauſe they have ſinned againſt greater means and light, they ſhall receive the greater damnation, Mat. 11. 24.

Many an hypocrite will, 1. Conſtantly hear and frequent the beſt Miniſtry, Iſa. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31, 32. 2. Will keep a conſtant courſe in prayer, and that not in ordinary prayer only, but even in extraordinary too, Luke 18. 12. compare Zach. 7. 5. & 8. 19. together. 3. Is a ſtrict obſerver of the Sabbath Day, Luke 13. 14, 15. John 5. 10. 4. Loveth the ſincerity of Religion and hateth Popery, will-worſhip and idolatry, with all the reliques and monuments of it, Rom. 2. 22, 23. 5. Goeth a great deal farther in the reformation of his life, than the civil man doth, 2 Pet. 2. 20. Luke 11. 42.

We ſhould labour for a ſpirit without guile, Pſal. 32. 2.

That ſpirit is,

1. An humble ſpirit before, in, and after duty.
2. An honeſt ſpirit, carried equally againſt all ſin.
3. A plain ſpirit.

Goſpel conſiderations againſt hypocriſie:

1. God ſees it, it is open to him, Heb. 4. 12, Gen. 17. 1. 1 Theſ. 2. 3, 4, 5. Pſal. 139. 1, 2, 3, 23.

2. He will bring the cloſeſt way of ſinning to light.

He often diſcovers Hypocrites in this life.

1. Becauſe none can do it but he.

2. To brand hypocriſie, takes away their gifts, Joh. 15. 6. ſuffers them to turn Apoſtates: but he will diſcover the hypocriſie of all at the great day, Eccl. 12. ult. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

3. Hypocrites are ſeldome converted, Matth. 21. 31. becauſe they think themſelves to be in a good condition.

4. It will be more ſad with hypocrites than any others, becauſe they have had great hopes, Job 8. 13, 14. & 27. 8. & 13. 16.

5. It is an odious ſin, not only to God, Mat. 24. 51. but men good and bad; the good hate him, becauſe he only ſeems to be godly, and the prophane, becauſe he ſeems to be ſo.

Idleneſſe.

Idleneſſe is a vice of ſpending time unprofitably: See Matth. 20. 3, 6. and 25. 26.

It is vivi hominis ſepultura. Seneca Epiſt. 828. Salomon often condemneth ſluggiſhneſſe, Prov. 6. 9, 10, 11. which ſaying he repeats again, Prov. 24. See Prov. 20. 13.

An idle man is a burden to himſelf, a prey to Satan, the Devils cuſhion, ſemper aliquid age ut te diabolus inveniat occupatum. A grief to Gods Spirit, Eph. 4. 28, 30.

Bodily ſloth you cannot bear, and ſoul-ſloth Chriſt cannot bear, Matthew 25. 26.

See Maſter Wheatly of the example of the Sodomites. Boccace ſaith, Sardanapalus firſt brought idleneſſe into the world. It was the eaſe and idleneſſe of Capua that deſtroyed Hannibals Army, and delicacies of Babylon, which corrupted Alexander himſelf. The Duke of Rohans Treat. of modern War, c. 4.

Reaſons,

1. Becauſe it is a ſin againſt nature, for all living creatures put out that ſtrength God hath given them.
2. It is againſt Gods Commandment, In the ſweat of thy browes thou ſhalt eat bread.

Sins accompanying idleneſſe.

1. Inordinate walking, 2 Theſ. 3. 11, 12.
2. Talebearing, 1 Tim. 5. 13. Prov. 11. 13.
3. Theft, Eph. 4. 28. 2 Theſ. 3. 12.
4. Drunkenneſſe, Amos 6. 1.
5. Filthineſſe, ſee 2 Sam. 11. 1, 2. Ezek. 16. 49. Idleneſſe is the mother and nurſe of luſt. Idle Monks and Friers, and lazy Gentlemen are moſt given to this ſin.

2. Dulneſſe, idleneſſe is the ruſt of wit.
3. Poverty, Prov. 10. 4. & 20. 13, 19. & 6. 10, 11. & 24. 34.
4. Shame, Prov. 10. 5. & 6. 6. & 12. 11.

It is againſt the order of nature which God ſet in all his creatures at the firſt, the heavens ſtand not ſtill but by miracle; Adam laboured in Paradiſe, much more ſince the fall; Job 5. 7. The ruſt fretteth unuſed iron, and the mothes eat unworn garments.

Chriſt ſpent all his dayes in labour. Rebeccah and Sara were good houſe-Wives.

This is the ſin of great perſons who have received great mercies from God, Cretians, idle, ſlow-bellies. Diogenes, that he might not ſeem idle in the midſt of buſineſſe, would needs be doing, though it were but by rolling of his Tub.

This

This ſin is condemned,

1. Exceedingly in the word, by Salomon, Prov. Eccleſ. Iſaiah, and by Paul, and in moral Philoſophy.

2. It is a mother ſin, as was ſhewed before.

3. Produceth many plagues, rheums, obſtructions, and other inconveniences, as hath been alſo ſhewed, and expoſeth one to great danger.

The Hollanders and Turks, bring up all their children to ſome skill in ſome manuall Trade, ſaying, they may ſpend their Patrimony, and then their hands may keep them.

A good remedy againſt idleneſſe is diligence in ſome honeſt calling. Jacob and his ſons, Moſes and David were ſhepheards, 1 Sam. 12. 1, 2. Let him that hath an office wait upon it. This humbleth the mind, profits the eſtate, and makes a man able to do good to himſelf and others, intereſts a man to the things of this life; he that labours not muſt not eat, in all labour there is abundance. It fits him for religious duties; if it be moderate, makes the life cheerfull, prevents evill fancies.

Ignorance.

It is a great ſinne, a ſtate of darkneſſe, Mat. 4. 16.

There are ſeveral kinds of it.

It 1. Ariſeth from the generall corruption of nature.

2. It ariſeth from ſome defect in nature, as in Ideots.

3. It ariſeth from ſome violence upon nature, ſome crack in the natural faculties, as in Lunaticks.

4. It may ariſe from want of the means of knowledg, Prov. 29. 18.

5. It may ariſe from ſloathfulneſſe and neglect of the means of knowledge, Prov. 17. 16.

6. It may ariſe from the hatred of knowledge, and the means of it, this is ſtiled affected ignorance, Job 21. 14. Prov. 1. 22. John 3. 19, 20.

7. There is an inflicted ignorance, which God ſends in a way of wrath and judgment upon the ſouls of men, who neglect Chriſt the means or love darkneſſe, 1 Cor. 14. 38.

Ignorance is the mother and nurſe,

1. Of miſ-devotion and ſuperſtition, Acts 17. 22, 23.
2. Of Idolatry, Gal. 4. 8.
3. Prophaneneſſe, Jer. 10. 25.
4. Errour and misbelief, Mat. 22. 29.
5. Of unbelief, Rom. 10. 14.
6. Of hardneſſe of heart and impenitency.
7. Of all evil in practiſe, Hoſ. 4. 1, 2.

It is a greater evil in theſe times of light, Eſay 11. 9. Dan. 12. 1.

Directions to cure us of this evill.

1. Be convinced of your ignorance if you will be cured of it, John 9. 39.
2. Take pains for knowledg, Prov. 2. 3.
3. Adviſe and confer with knowing Chriſtians.
4. Pray much, Prov. 2. 3.

Impenitence.

Impenitence is a great ſin under the Goſpel, Acts 8. 22. The longer one lies in any ſin the more is the heart hardened, Jer. 16. 1. Epheſ. 4. 18, 19. He which hardeneth his heart againſt many reproofs, ſhall ſurely periſh; obſtinate, impenitent ſinners ſhall be deſtroyed, 1 Sam. 12. 25.

Impenitency perfectly conforms one to Satan, who is in malo obfirmatus, and ſins without remorſe, In malo perſeverare diabolicum.

Reaſons. First, Repentance is Gods gift, therefore denying of it is Gods curſe.

Secondly,

Secondly, Hereby the higheſt favour of God is deſpiſed; the offering of repentance is a mercy that belongs to the ſecond Covenant; obſtinacy in ſinning is a denying of Gods juſtice, and abuſing his mercy.

Thirdly, So long as one lives in any ſin without repentance, ſo long God looks on him as continuing in that ſin, his mind is not changed.

Fourthly, Without repentance [a] there is no remiſſion, Acts 5.31. Luke 24.47. therefore the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt is unpardonable, *Heb.*6.6. becauſe one cannot repent.

Fifthly, Final impenitence is a certain evidence of ones reprobation, Rom. 2.5. Heb. 12.17.

Sixthly, Under the Goſpel there are the greateſt arguments and motives to repentance, *Mat.*3.2. Acts 17.30. Chriſt himſelf ſent John before him to preach the doctrine of repentance, and he himſelf did alſo preach it; he bad men amend their lives, becauſe the Kingdom of God was at hand. And his Apoſtles alſo preacht the ſame doctrine of repentance.

[a] The promiſes of the Goſpel appertain to thoſe onely, who walk not after the fleſh, but the Spirit, who are heavy laden, and take Chriſts yoke upon them, to thoſe for with theſe, which confeſſe their ſins, and leave them, which mortifie the deeds of the fleſh by the Spirit, or ſuch like conditions they are limited.

He is a wilfull ſinner which either holds in himſelf a purpoſe that he will ſinne, or is irreſolute and not ſettled in a firm purpoſe of not ſinning, or that purpoſeth to mend, but not till hereafter.

Injuſtice.

Injuſtice is a ſin.

Every man is to have his own, and to be permitted the quiet enjoyment of that wherein he hath intereſt.

They execute no judgement. Salomon ſaith, In the place of judgement there was iniquity, I looked for judgement, and behold oppreſſion. Iſaiah.

Reaſons. First, The excellency of the thing abuſed; judgement is a part of Gods authority. It is Gods judgement which you execute, ſaith Jehoſaphat; therefore it is a foul thing to abuſe a thing ſo ſacred, and of ſuch high reſpect.

Secondly, The cauſes of it are covetouſneſſe, diſtruſt of Gods providence, ſhaking off the fear of God, and extinguiſhing the light of nature, denying Gods Lordſhip over the whole world.

Thirdly, The effects of it are bad:

1. It defiles a mans conſcience. Judas caſt away the thirty pieces which he came unjuſtly by.

2. It will ruinate his ſtate and family. A man ſhall not roſt what he caught in hunting.

3. It blemiſheth the name, and ſtains a mans reputation. The Publicans were in ſuch hateſull eſteem among the Jews, that they were ranked with the very harlots, and moſt notorious ſinners, becauſe they cared not what, nor from whom they gat.

4. Riches deceitfully gotten is vanity toſſed to and fro by them which ſeek death; a man ſhall be damned for unjuſt gain, unleſſe repentance and reſtitution come between. The Apoſtle ſaith, God is an avenger of all which do ſuch things; Know ye not that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God?

Intemperance.

It is an inordinate appetite or immoderate deſire and uſe of meat and drink, and this is when a due mean is exceeded, either in the coſtly preparation of them for our ſelves or others, or in the too liberal and exceſſive uſe of them ſo prepared.

Democritus ſaid that intemperate men were valetudinis ſuæ proditores, betrayers of their own health, and killers of themſelves by their pleaſures, ſo that Sybaritica menſa, and Sybaritica calamitas, are for the moſt part inſeparable. The Philoſopher could ſay, The intemperate man is ſeldom a penitent man.

De-

Degrees of Intemperance:

First, More secret.

1. When mens thoughts runne after what they shall eat or drink, Mat. 6.25. When animus est in patinis, Rom. 12.13.

2. When we delight too much in it; as Philoxenus who wisht he had a neck like a Crane, that he might take the longer delight in swallowing of his meat and drink.

3. When we feed securely, Jude vers. 12. are too much taken up with the creatures.

Secondly, More notorious:

1. When men eat more than their stomacks will digest, Prov. 23.1,2.

2. When they are too dainty, nothing will down but what is delicious and costly, as the rich man in the Gospel.

3. When they eat and drink unseasonably, as Esay 12. 13. Amos 6.1,2. when they eat one meal too hastily after another, not allowing nature sufficient time for concoction, and those that will be still tippling.

There may be an offending:

1. In the quantity of meats and drink; this was Sodomes sinne, Ezek. 16. Fulnesse of bread.

2. In the quality, Luke 16.19.

3. In the manner of enjoying the creatures. They should be enjoyed,

1. With caution, Jude 12.

2. With piety. We must,

1. Receive them from God who is the giver and sanctifier of them, 1 Tim. 4.5.

2. Enjoy them in God, meditate on his bounty; our liberty in Christ, the sweetnesse of spiritual things, Luke 14.16.

3. Refer all to God, 1 Cor. 10.31.

Arguments to disswade us from Intemperance:

It quencheth the vigour of our spirits: Man hath longer entrails than other creatures, that meats may not have too quick a passage; the brain the seat of wisdome is removed from the belly the kitchin of the body.

It brings a blot on the name, diseases on the body, enslaves a man, brings him under the power of the creature.

It is contrary to the ends of a Christian life; our spiritual conflict, takes away our delight from God.

Helps against it.

1. Read, hear and practice the Word.

2. Pray.

3. Joyn fasting with prayer.

4. Consider the bounty of the Lord in giving us good things, and for what end, viz. strength.

5. Consider the preciousnesse of time:

1. It is short: we have a great deal of work to do in a little time.

2. Too much of it is spent already, 1 Pet. 4.3.

3. It is uncertain how long I shall enjoy this season, there is no season like the present to repent in.

4. We must give an account for time, Psalm 95.10. Luke 13.7. Jer. 25.3.

6. Consider:

1. The baseneſse of pleasure, Eccles. 7.4. & 2.2.

2. The danger of it, it leaves a sting, Prov. 14.13.

CHAP. XX.

Of Lying, Malice, Murmuring, Oppreſſion.

LYING.

LYing is a voluntary uttering of that which is falſe againſt a mans knowledg and conſcience, with an intention to deceive: See *Prov.*12.19,22.& 13.5. Eſt qui dubiè profert mendacium nec mentitur: & eſt qui veritatem quam neſcit, affirmat, & mentitur. Bern. *ſuper Cantica. Serm.*17.

In reſpect of the end it is diſtinguiſhed into perniciosum, officioſum, and jocoſum; a hurtfull, officious, and merry lie. Anguſt.in Enchirid. ad Laurent. Aquinas 2ª, 2æ *Qu.*110. *Art.*2. The end of a pernicious lie is to hurt, *Gen.*3.4,5. & 37. 31, 32. of an officious lie to profit, *Exod.*1.17,18. *Joſh.*2.4,5,6. of a merry lie to delight.

Mendacium à menda. Mendacium nominatur ex eo quod contra mentem dicitur. Et ideo ſi quis falſum enunciet, credens id eſſe verum, eſt quidem falſum materialiter, ſed non formaliter: quia falſitas eſt præter intentionem dicentis. Aquin. 22, 2æ Quæſt. 110. *Artic.*1. See *Elton on Col.*3.9. and Dr Gouge on Heb.6.16. Sect.142,143. When one utters a ſpeech, reſerving the other part in his mind, it is no better than lying; when that which one ſpeaks is falſe, it will not be helpt with that which is reſerved; elſe no man or Devil can have the lie given him. Arius ſubſcribing to the Councels Decrees, ſware it was true, as it was there written (meaning the Paper kept cloſe in his boſom or ſleeve.) Juſt like to the Jeſuites abſurd equivocating, or counterfeited perjuries and couſenage in abuſing the words of S^t Paul, Factus ſum omnia omnibus, ut omnes lucrifaciam. Watſ. Quodl. of Religion and State, Quodl. 2. Anſw. to 5th Article. The Papiſts tell us, that S^t Francis had five wounds of Chriſt made in his fleſh by an Angel, with the nails ſticking therein, and continually bleeding till his dying day. Their golden Legend was compiled by a leaden brain, and publiſhed by a brazen fore-head. Neque poteſt eſſe in ullo libro acervus mendaciorum major, quam in Legenda illa plumbea, quæ de perſecutione Anglicana apud vos circumfertur. Ibi legas Catholicos inſutos ferarum pellibus à rapidis canibus dilaniari; ibi glires pelvibus inclusos Catholicorum viſcera exedentes; ibi Catholicos ad equorum præſepia relegatos, fano ibi paſcendos: nec legas ſolum, imò & videas; aræ enim ibi ſculptæ imagines. Falſa, ficta, fucata omnia. Epiſc. And. Tortura Torti. Thomas Walſingham a Monk of S^t Albanes, ſaith, it was a good argument in his dayes in every mans mouth, Hic eſt frater, ergo mendax, ſicut & illud: Hoc eſt album, ergo coloratum: Such a one is a Frier; and therefore a liar, as that, This thing is white, and therefore coloured. The Cretians were infamous lying.

We muſt not tell a lie for Gods glory, Job 13.7. much leſſe for to help my neighbour.

Officious lying is neither permitted nor approved in the word of God.

The Scripture forbids all lying without reſtriction. God threatens to deſtroy all thoſe that ſpeak leaſing, Pſalm 5.6. See *Prov.*6.16. *Mat.*5.37. *Eph.*4.25. Col. 3.9, *Revel.*21.27. & 22.15.

Though there be no inſtance of a ſporting lie in Scripture, yet it is a ſinne, *Prov.*26.19.

The very Heathens themſelves abhorred all lying. Ariſtotle ſaith, A lie is evil in it ſelf, and to be diſpraiſed.

There is,

Firſt, A lying to God:

1. When we put him off with falſe appearances, Hoſea 11.12.

2. When we perform not thoſe profeſſions and promiſes we make to him in time of trouble, Pſalm 78.36.

Secondly, To men.

It is a great ſinne.

Reaſons. Firſt, The Law of God is againſt it; the ninth Commandment, and the Goſpel, Coloſ. 3.9.

Secondly, It is againſt the nature of God, Titus 1.1. The Father is the God of truth, John 17.3. The Sonne is truth, John 14.6. The holy Ghoſt is the Spirit of truth, John 16.13. and the word of God which is the word of truth, *Ephes.*1.13. It makes us like the Devil, John 8.44. God never dispensed with a lie, he hath with polygamy, stealing.

Thirdly, It is against natural conscience; a little child will blush at a lie.

Fourthly, It is basely esteemed of by all generous men, they abhorre above all things the imputation of lying. It comes from fear, and tends to deceit. It was in great reproach among the Persians, saith Brissonius.

Fifthly, It is contrary to all civil Society, which is upheld by truth, takes away all commerce betwixt man and man. Mendax hoc lucratur, ut cum vera dixerit, ei non credatur. It is the just reward of a liar not to be believed when he tels truth. It is an Hebrew proverb which Hottinger quotes, Pœna mendacis est, ut si dicat verum, ne tunc quidem sufficiens sit, cui adhibeatur fides.

Sixthly, Omnibus peccatis cooperatur. Aug. It hath an influence on all sins. Lying and stealing are joyned together, Ephes. 4. Levit.19.11.

Seventhly, The punishment of it is great, as we may see in Gehezi, Ananias and Saphira, Acts 5.5. and often in the Proverbs [a] the Lord abhors it, *Revel.*21.8. & 22.15. Liars are joyned with great sinners. See Esay 63.8. & Prov. 6.17. See Psal.5.6. Prov.19.5. [a] Prov.6 17. & 12.21,22. & 13.5.

Popery is a doctrine of lies, 1 Tim. 4. 2. Mental equivocation maintained by them is sinfull. See Dr Gouge on *Heb.*11.31. *Sect.*89. Et Barnesium de Æquivocat.

Lying is evil:

1. In Magistrates, *Prov.*17.7.
2. Ministers, 2 *Cor.*11.31.
3. Private Christians.

The great honour of the Saints is to walk in the truth, 3 John 4. See Ephes. 4.5. Buy the truth and sell it not.

Erasmus had such an antipathy with lying, that from his youth he would usually tremble at the sight of a noted liar.

Helps against lying:

1. Hate it, Psalm 119.136.
2. Love the Law, ibid. & *v.*29.
3. Remember your spiritual conflict: A Christians strength is his sincerity, *Ephes.*6.14.
4. Heedfulnesse, watch against it, Psalm 39.1.
5. Avoid the causes of it.
   1. Boasting, Psalm 12.10.
   2. Flattery, Psalm 12.2. Hosea 7.3.
   3. Carnal fear and distrust, *Deut.*33.29. Psalm 81.5.

Malice.

It causeth a man to receive pleasure in the practice of cruelty; so the brethren of Joseph, and Cain, 1 Sam.19.13. to the 18.

Reasons. First, It is most of all contrary to charity, therefore it must needs bring forth quite contrary effects to it; and as that makes a man to take pleasure in doing good, so this in doing evil, for both vertues and vices cause him in whom they rule to take content in those things wherein they are exercised, and by which they are strengthened and increased, as both charity is by well-doing, and malice by doing evil.

Secondly, Where malice doth rule, the Spirit of God is quite gone, and the light of nature extreamly dimmed, and a man is given over into the power of Satan; for in giving place to wrath a man gives place to the Devil. Well said a godly man of Cain, he had half killed and consumed himself with malice before he killed his brother.

Thirdly, It distempers the judgement, will and affections. Malice is commonly hereditary, and runs in the blood, and (as we say of Rennet) the elder it is the stronger. Dr Hall. The Heathen man held that between Militia and Malitia there was as little difference in sense as in sound.

Murmuring.

Murmuring.

It is first, A ſinne reproved by God, and a provocation of him, Jonah 4.8. The Iſraelites were very guilty of it, ſee Numb. 17.12. Pſalm 106.25.

Secondly, It is a high degree of ſinne.

1. Hereby thou exalteſt thy will above Gods, and makeſt it the rule of goodneſſe.

2. You put God out of his Throne, out of Government; in every murmuring againſt his diſpenſations thou denieſt his Sovereignty, limiteſt his power, Pſalm 78.20.

3. Hereby thou makeſt thy ſelf wiſer than God in divine things, Job 21.22. & 38.2.

See Dr Willet on Exod. 15. Queſt. 37, 38. and Mr Manton on 16. v. of Jude. Murmuring comes from pride: the Devil is the proudeſt creature and moſt diſcontented with his condition. It is a taxing of God, it is in effect to ſay, This is not well done. We are creatures and guilty creatures, God is too juſt to do us wrong. 2. From Impatience. 3. Preſumption of merit, Iſa. 58. 3. 4. Carnal affections. 5. Unbelief and diſtruſt, Pſal. 106.24, 25, Heb. 10.5.

4. This is a way to provoke God to greater diſpleaſure, Amos 4. 12.

1. It is injurious to others, puts men on acts of violence, Numbers 17.10.

2. To our ſelves: 1. Diſcontent makes us miſerable. 2. Brings judgement: Miriam was ſmitten with leproſie for murmuring againſt Moſes, Numb. 16.46.

There are ſeveral kinds of murmuring:

First, Againſt Men,

1. Equals, envying them,

2. Superiours.

1. Magiſtrates, Jude 16. Men think Magiſtracy an incroachment on their liberty.

2. Miniſters, Exodus 16.8. 1 Samuel 8.7.

Secondly, Againſt God:

1. His Decrees; we can ſee no reaſon why God ſhould paſſe by one, and chuſe another, Matthew 11.27. Gods Decrees are above our reach, Rom. 9.20. Homo ſum (ſaid one humbly) ſecreta Dei non intelligo.

2. His Laws, Rom. 8.7. Pſalm 2.3. Pſalm 106.24.

3. His Providence, in general when the wicked proſper, Pſalm 73.22. particularly, 1. When we want: 2. When we looſe friends: we had them from the Lord at firſt, Job 1.22. Abſtulit ſed & dedit. Seneca.

Arguments againſt murmuring and diſcontent under Gods adminiſtrations:

First, It is a Chriſtians duty to be content with the things preſent, Hebrews 13. 1 Theſſ. 5.18. ſuch an one can never be thankfull; a little is enough, and too much a ſnare, Luke 12.15.

Secondly, All your murmurings are againſt God, Numbers 14.27. & Exodus 16.8. you charge God with folly, Job 1. ult.

Thirdly, This will heighten your ſinne, and adde to your plagues, Revel. 16.19. Eſay 51.20.

Fourthly, If the Lord ſhould hearken to your murmuring, you would quickly deſtroy your ſelves, Hoſea 13.11.

God takes murmuring moſt unkindly from his own children:

First, It becomes not their privileges; if they have God they have all.

Secondly, It is contrary to their vows and promiſes.

Thirdly, It is below their hopes; what are all troubles in compariſon of Heaven?

God ſees what is fitteſt for us; he hath the bowels of a mother, and the wiſdom of a father, 2 Sam. 15.25, 26. he hath a hand in all things, Pſal. 39.9. Iſa. 38.15. Our condition might have been worſe, Ezra 9.13. they were in Babylon, might have been in hell.

Oppreſſion.

Oppreſſion is a great ſinne, Eſay 3.15. Pſalm 14.4. & 17.12. Amos 8.5. Micah 3.3. Habakkuk 2.11,12. & 1.14. Jeremy 12.13. & 5.27,28.

Pride and unjuſtice in the extremity meet in an oppreſſour. The Prophet cries out of them which grinde the faces of the poor, of them which are like the Wolves in the evening, of them which covet fields and take them by force, becauſe there is might in their hands.

Reaſon. It is an abuſe of a ſpecial gift of God quite contrary to his appointment which gave it. God made the ſtronger therefore to be the ſtronger, that he might defend the weak, as the greater limbs and bones of the body hold up the burden of it.

Chap. XXI.

Of Perjury, Polygamy, Pride, Prophaneneſſe.

Perjury.

See Dr Gouge on Heb.6.16. Sect.127. Mr Calamy of Covenant-breakers, on 2 Tim. 3.3. Cook on Littleton, p.294. B. and Knowles his Turkiſh Hiſtory, p.297.

PErjury is Mendacium juramento firmatum, a lie confirmed with an oath, ſo Peter Lombard Diſtinct.39. which is expreſly forbidden, Leviticus 19.12. Zechary 5.4. Matthew 5.34. which the Heathens thought God would avenge. The ſame thing by the addition of an oath, that a lie is in a bare promiſe, ſaith [a] Dr Sanderſon.

It is double: Firſt, When a man affirmeth or denieth upon oath, that which he believeth in his own heart to be quite contrary.

Secondly, When he bindeth himſelf by oath, to do or forbear that which he for the preſent time hath no purpoſe nor intention to perform.

The old ſaying is, Once forſworn and ever forlorn.

No Caſuiſt doubts of it, that a Turk may be guilty of perjury, and for it be puniſhed by the true God, if he forſwear himſelf, though he ſwear but by Mahomet a falſe Prophet.

Such an one that compels a man to perjury is a murderer, ſaith Auſtin, Duplex homicidium, ſay the Schoolmen.

A fellow hearing perjury condemned in a Pulpit by a learned Preacher, and how it never eſcaped unpuniſhed, ſaid in a bravery, I have oft forſworn my ſelf, and yet my right hand is not a whit ſhorter then my left; which words he had ſcarce uttered, when ſuch an inflammation aroſe in that hand, that he was conſtrained to go to the Chirurgion and cut it off, leaſt it ſhould infect his whole body; and ſo his right hand became ſhorter than his left, in recompence of his perjury, which he lightly eſteemed of: The Theatre of Gods judgements, ch.28. of Perjuries.

The ſmall ſucceſſe that the Emperour Sigiſmund had in all his affairs (after the violation of his faith given to John Hus and Hierom of Prague at the Councel of Conſtance, whom though with direct proteſtations and oaths he promiſed ſafe conduct and return, yet he adjudged to be burned) doth teſtifie the odiouſneſſe of this ſin in the ſight of God.

The Doctrine of the Councel of Conſtance is, That a man ought not to keep faith with Hereticks. Id. ibid.

Polygamy.

Lamech firſt brought it into the world, Abraham into the Church, by Sarahs means; Jacob was forced to it by a kind of neceſſity.

After the Floud, ſome Patriarchs uſed it, ſome Kings of Iſrael, ſome private men. Amongſt the Patriarchs, Abraham and Jacob; David and Salomon amongſt the Kings exceeded; amongſt private men Elkanah; whether they had diſpenſation for that practice, by revelation, or otherwiſe, I cannot ſay, nor can they prove it, who ſo will ſay. Montagues Acts and Monum. ch. 4.

It is a ſin, and is evidently blamed by Moſes, Levit. 18. 18. that is, Ye ſhall not take more at once: That this verſe is meant of Monogamy, is proved by Analogy with v. 16. And Salomon by way of recantation after his exceſſive faultineſſe therein (having had a thouſand wives and concubines) ſaith, Prov. 5. 18. Rejoyce with the wife of thy youth, wife not wives, the firſt to whom thou didſt joyn thy ſelf in youth. The Scripture cals ſecond wives in Polygamy vexers or enviers, Geneſis 4. 23. 1 Samuel 1. 6. The Prophet Malachi Chap. 2. 14, 15. in the Old Teſtament, and Chriſt in the New, Matth. 19, 9. reproves it: If one be guilty of adultery that puts his wife from him, and marries another, then alſo if he keep her and takes another to him beſides her, 1 Cor. 7. 2. his proper wife.

It is a ſwerving from Gods firſt inſtitution.

Secondly, The conjunction of one man and woman is ſufficient for the ends, for which Matrimony was firſt ordained, viz. mutual helpfulneſſe, and increaſe of mankind.

Thirdly, It is the beſt way to quench luſt, and order the appetite.

There are two kinds of Polygamy, Simultanea and Succeſſiva, the having of more wives ſucceſſively, or at one time. The Montaniſts and the Novatians held, That if a man buried one wife he might not marry another, and the Church of Rome forbiddeth the bleſſing of ſecond Marriages in the Church: but this Polygamy is not only allowed Rom. 7. but in a ſort commanded alſo 1 Tim. 5. 14. and the Fathers juſtifie it. It is only the having of many wives together, that is condemned by the Old and New Teſtament, and Fathers.

We read not that Jacobs marriage with two ſiſters, nor Lots daughters inceſt with him was condemned, yet they were ſins.

king of that place, Levit. 18. 18. taking the word Sister for one so by blood, which was spoken of a Sister by Nation, as those clauses to vex her, and during her life, do evince, Prov. 19. 2. But no such place was extant in Abraham and Jacobs time.

That Polygamy, though so common and connived, was in the Mosaical Law inhibited, Levit. 18. 18. in those words, A wife to her sister, that is, one to another, as that form is commonly taken, seems evident enough, and so Junius takes it.

That of God by Nathan to David, 2 Sam. 12. 8. seems not to be any approbation, but that all which was Sauls came by the disposal of God into Davids power, though it appeareth not that David made such use of that power, which yet he might have done without any such notorious wrong unto any, as he offered to Uriah.

Pride.

See Cartw. on Prov. 16. 18. Mr Whately in the Sodomites. It was one of the first sins in Heaven, 1 Tim. 3. 6. one of the first sins in Paradise, and one of the first sins that springeth up in us. A Frenchman therefore compares it to the shirt, which is the first put on, and the last put off. The Schools say, Humility is Vacuum Spirituale, and Pride, Plenitudo Diabolica. Superbia in communi est, qua quis inordinatè supergreditur illud quod est. Unde etiam definiri solet, Propriæ excellentiæ affectatio inordinata. Amesi. de Consc. lib. 5. cap. 18. Vide plura ibid. Et Aquin. 22, 22æ Quæst. 162. Art. 1, & 2.

Pride is a great sin, Prov. 16. 5. Psalm 101. 5. Dr Harris said, It is better to be an humble Devil than a proud Saint.

It is a vice whereby one makes a high account of himself, Esay 2. 11, 17. it makes a man some body in his own esteem; it makes one count himself something, as Paul saith, He that counteth himself something when he is nothing, deceives himself, Gal. 6. 3. it is called being great or high in ones own eyes, a lifting up or exalting ones self.

To set forth Tarquinius in the deepest dye of basest ignominy, the Romans named him Tarquinius superbus, Tarquin the proud.

I have known some Citizens, yea, women in London, who having learned to read Hebrew, were so conceited of themselves, that they have despised the ablest Divines about the City, and have almost doubted of the salvation of all persons that could not read Hebrew. Dr Walton's Considerator Considered, chap. 2.

Initium omnis peccati superbia est: Quid est autem superbia, nisi perversa celsitudinis appetitus? Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 4. c. 13.

It is an overweening conceit of a mans own excellency; self is his God, his chiefest good and utmost end; the greater the excellency is, the higher the pride; it is a greater pride to be proud of gifts and parts, than to be proud of riches and honour, and to be proud of grace than of gifts, of ones own righteousnesse. The root of all other sins (saith * Aquinas) ex parte aversionis is superbia, ex parte conversionis avaritia. Pride refers to self-excellency, covetousnesse to creature-excellency. Pride is the measure of corruption, and humility of all grace.

* 12, 22æ Qu. 84. Art. 1.

There is, First, Moral pride, an over-high conceit of our selves, discovered by our disdain and contempt of others, 1 Peter 5. 15.

Secondly, Spiritual, discovered by a contempt of God, Malachi 4. 1. Nehem. 9. 16. Jeremy 13. 15, 17. Every impenitent and obstinate sinner, is thus proud, because

1. He neglects God, Psalm 10. 4.
2. Opposeth him, James 4. 6.
3. Slights him,
   1. In his Authority, 1 Samuel 12. 9.
   2. Power, 1 Cor. 10. 22. Deut. 10. 16, 17.

Pride against Superiours is most hatefull, Esay 3. 4, 5. Of all Superiours God is the highest and deserves chiefest respect; he hath absolute jurisdiction over us, and propriety in us, Esay 45. 9.

What

What ſwelling and ambitious Titles are thoſe in the ſtiles of the Roman Emperors, Invictus, Victor, Defenſor, Triumphator, and the like! Thoſe of the Pope, as Univerſal Biſhop, Prince of Prieſts, Supream Head of the Univerſal Church, and Vicar of Chriſt here upon earth! of the great Turk, and ſome other mighty Princes!

Cardinal Wolſey was the firſt (ſaith Polydore Virgil) that among all Prieſts, Biſhops and Cardinals, ever wore ſilk for his uppermoſt Veſtment. He was puffed up with ſo great pride and opinion of himſelf, that when he wrote to the Pope or foraign Kings concerning the weightieſt affairs of the Kingdom, he for the moſt part began his letters thus, Ego & Rex meus.

The Spaniards are extreamly proud; a poor Cobler on his death-bed, as Barclay relateth in his Icon animorum, commanded his eldeſt Sonne, coming to him for his laſt bleſſing, To endeavour to retain the Majeſty worthy ſo great a Family: Memineris (ſaid he) in majeſtatem aſſurgere familiâ Tuâ dignam.

This is one of the ſins which the fear of God will make a man to hate, Prov. 8.13. one of the ſins of Sodom which procured unto her that ſtrange overthrow, Ezekiel 16.49. See Eſay 28.1. *Jer.*48.29. Rom. 1.30. 1 Tim. 3.2. A vice whoſe name is comprehended in a Monoſyllable, but in its nature not circumſcribed with a world.

Reaſons. Firſt, It is a moſt abſurd and unreaſonable vice for ſuch a mean creature to ſwell, mean in his creation, vile ſince his corruption.

Secondly, A moſt harmfull and pernicious vice; this cauſeth the man in whom it is to be loathed of God, The proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord, Prov.16.5. and haughty eyes are one of the things which his ſoul hateth, He reſiſteth the proud, it makes men to deſpiſe him, and count him baſe, he is by it made uncapable of doing and receiving good.

Prov.6.16. & 11.2.& 15.25. & 18.12. Pſal.138.6. Jam.4.7.

Thirdly, It is a great ſin againſt the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, *Mat.*11.ult. Chriſts whole life was a conſtant lecture of humility.

The firſt judgment was occaſioned by this, when the Angels entertained ambitious thoughts againſt God.

Fourthly, It oppoſeth God as God; other ſins ſet againſt Gods juſtice, mercy, his Law; but this againſt God as he is God, it is to make ones own will the ſupream Rule of all things.

Fifthly, It is a ſin which runs out in many kinds and objects, it may ariſe from our very graces, ſo that a man will be proud, becauſe he is not proud: It was Mr Fox his ſpeech, As I get good by my ſins, ſo I get hurt by my graces; the more univerſal any ſin, the more dangerous.

Pride hath three degrees:

Firſt, Cloſe and ſecret pride, when though it be retired as a King into his cloſet, yet it rules, *Jer.*48.26 it bears rule in all unſanctified men, for they dare oppoſe Gods Commandments, croſſe his directions for their luſts ſake, murmur againſt him; this is to prefer themſelves above him.

Secondly, More open, when being fed fat with wealth, it makes a man plainly to count himſelf ſome worthy perſon, this is high-mindedneſſe, 1 *Tim.*6.17. and being puffed up, 1 *Cor.*8.1.

Thirdly, Moſt open, when it dares even conteſt with God, and ſets light by him in plain terms, as Pharaoh, Exod 5.2. Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel 3.15. the King of Tyre, Ezek.28.26. Antichriſt, 2 *Theſ.*2. and ſome Heathen Emperors would be worſhipped as God.

It is commonly the ſinne of young men, covetouſneſſe of old folk. Dr Hackwell.

Amongſt all vices there is none that diſcovers it ſelf ſooner than pride; for the ſpeech, we read of a proud mouth, Jude 16. For the gate, we read of a ſoot of ſaw Plato to delight in neatneſſe and cleanneſſe, and to have his beds well dreſſed, he went and trod upon his beds, and ſaid, Calco Platonis faſtum; Plato replied, ſed majori faſtu, but with a greater pride. When Plato ſaw Diogenes go with an old Cloak full of holes, he ſaid, He ſaw his pride through the holes of his Cloak. The Pope ſtyles himſelf Servus ſervorum, yet takes upon him to be Lord of Lords, to depoſe Kings. Multo deformior eſt illa ſuperbia quæ ſub quibuſdam humilitatis ſignis latet. Neſcis enim quomodo turpiora ſunt vitia quæ virtutum ſpecie celantur. Hier. l.2. Epiſt.22. Romanenſis Eccleſia ſuperba & ſupercilium quantum ſit, teſtis ſit doctrina ſuorum meritorum. Teſtis item ſit ſtatus & faſtus vitæ. Humf. Jeſuit.part.2. de natura Eccleſ.ratio tertia. Marius tyrannus eò ſuperbia devenerat, ut ſe opſonem furavium fuiſſe non meminerit: Sed quis hujus novæ gloriæ exitus? Uno die factus eſt Imperator: alio victus eſt Imperare: tertio, a quodam milite ſuo gladio, quem fabricarat, eſt jugulatus. Humfred. *de nobil.l.*1.

pride, Pſalm 36. 11. For apparel, of a crown of pride, Eſay 28.1. of a chain of pride, Pſalm 73.6. Many that know not the man, yet point at him, as he walks in the ſtreets, and ſay, There goes a proud fellow, which men uſually pronounce of no vice beſide, but the drunkard; and therefore doth the Prophet Habak. 2.5. joyn them both together.

It bears rule when it is not conſtantly obſerved and reſiſted with ſorrowfull confeſſions, and ſelf-judging, and earneſt prayers to God againſt it.

Spiritual pride is diſcovered:

First, By a want of appetite after ſpiritual things; ſome think they know enough already, and have grace enough.

Secondly, By poaring on their own excellencies, and not minding their imperfections.

Thirdly, By deſpiſing plain truths and ordinances.

The Effects of it in all eſtates:

First, A proud man cannot brook a wrong without chafing and diſtemper.

It entertains croſſes with anger, and bleſſings with diſdain. Mal. 1.2.

Secondly, It breeds contentiouſneſſe, aptneſſe to ſtrive, to fall out, to be, and continue to be at variance with other men, Onely by pride cometh contention, Prov. 13.10.

Thirdly, Such an one worketh in proud wrath, when he is angry he carries himſelf haughtily, and cares not what he ſayes, with whom he is angry; to deal in proud wrath argues a proud man.

Fourthly, Headineſſe and high-mindedneſſe and ſelf-willedneſſe: Paul joyns headineſſe and high-mindedneſſe together; the better a man thinks of himſelf, the more apt he is to be ruled by himſelf, and not regard the counſel of others, it is ſaid of the proud builders of Babel, This they did, and would not be ſtopped.

Secondly, In proſperity he brags and boaſts, and ſets up himſelf, never fears any alteration, but is ſecure and ſaith, He ſhall not be moved.

Thirdly, In adverſity he whines and mutters, and is full of complaints, and is ready to uſe ill ſhifts, and cannot frame himſelf to an uſefull and patient bearing of it.

Laſtly, Conſider the hurt it doth in the world.

First, It hinders men from receiving good either from God or man.

1. It hinders the good of illumination: God teacheth the humble. See Jer. 13. 15. Prov. 26.12. Pſalm 25.9.

2. The good of Sanctification, Except you become as little children, you cannot be my Diſciples.

3. The good of comfort, To him will I look, who is of a contrite ſpirit.

4. It is the main impediment of converſion. See Exod. 18.11. Job 26.12. Mal. 4.1. Luke 1.5.

Secondly, It depriveth us of all the good we have received, and unfits us for doing ſervice.

Thirdly, It is the mother of all ſins; covetouſneſſe grows on it, Hab. 2.5. it whets revenge, Eſther 3.16.

Helps againſt it:

The remedies of pride. Why art thou proud, duſt and vanity, vile earth, ſtinch lapped up in ſilk, magnified dung, gilded rottenneſſe, golden damnation? Dr White in a Sermon at the Spittle.

First, Pray to God to ſhew it and make it hateſull.

Secondly, Meditate of your own meanneſſe and baſeneſſe, bodily and ſpiritual.

Thirdly, Be diligent in ſome vertuous calling.

Fourthly, Obſerve Gods judgements on pride, either upon your ſelves, or thoſe that are near you, Daniel 5.22. 2 Corinth. 12.7. It is the ſure fore-runner of ruine.

Fifthly, Draw out the Spirit of Chriſts humiliation, Phil. 2.5,7.

Sixthly, Let every act of pride be accompanied with a ſubſequent act of humility, 2 Chron. 32.25. 1 Chron. 21.8.

Seventhly, Treaſure up ſome holy principles, and keep them alwayes preſent and ready in your thoughts, Pſalm 119.9.

1. The

1. The only way to exaltation is not to affect it, He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, Jam 4.10.

2. The ornament of an high estate is not outward splendour, but a lowly mind, James 1.10. when one can be minimus in summis;

3. Those that are most worthy of praise doe most despise it, Proverbs 11. 12.

Eighthly, Take heed of those things which nourish pride, idleness, voluptuousnesse, delighting in earthly vanity, looking much abroad to others faults, promising our selves much prosperity, long-life in the abundance of outward things.

Prophaneneſſe.

There is prophaneneſſe of spirit and practice, of opinion and wayes:
First, In reference to God,

1. Of Spirit, when men live and never think of God, Psalm 10.3. Ephes. 2. without God in the world, hath not his heart fixed on God, meditates not on him. Likes not the thoughts of God, Rom. 1.28.

2. Practice in our words and works, Job 21.14.

Secondly, In reference to sin:

1. Of opinion, when one makes light of sin; fools make a sport of sin.

2. Of practice, when men live in the open practice of it, Isaiah 3.9.

Thirdly, In reference to the doing of that which is good:

1. Of opinion, when men have light thoughts of holy duties, Job 21.14. Malachi 3.13,14. Some have thought they have thriven the better since they left off holy duties.

2. Practice:

1. To live in an open neglect of duties.

2. To perform them slightly, Malachi 1.13. have an indifferency of spirit to Religion, and the things of God, can be Protestants or Papists.

It is prophaneneſſe to preferre earthly things before spiritual, Heb. 12.12. Luke 14.18. to slight the works of God, Isa. 26.11. to think God takes no notice of what we do, Zeph. 1.12.

Chap. XXII.

Of Railing, Rebellion, Revenge, Scandall, Schiſme,

Railing.

Railing is a great sinne.

Our Saviour having condemned rash anger, proceedeth to blame this evil effect of it, saying, He that saith Raka, or he that calleth his brother fool; plainly enough intimating, that commonly distempered and inordinate anger doth bring forth such language. See what companions the holy Ghost hath yoked with railers, 1 Cor. 6. 9. & 5. 11. Matth. 5. 22.

Psalm 50. David saith, He heard the reproach of many. Saul railed on Jonathan, and called him the Sonne of the perverse rebellious woman, as much as if in plain English he had called him whoreson varlet. Nabal railed on David and his servants which were sent unto him; and Rabshakeh railed on the living God; the Jewes railed on Christ, saying, Thou hast a Devil. Shimei on David, 2 Samuel 16. 5, 6, 7, 8.

Railing is the uttering of ſuch words and terms againſt any man as do aim at his diſgrace, to make him appear contemptible, hatefull and vile.

Not only thoſe rail which rail others vile names, as rogue, fool, aſſe; this is the higheſt degree of railing; but all vilifying termes, Thou, What art thou? a ſinner for thee, thou art this and that, caſting in a mans teeth his faults and imperfections, yea or any words tending to reproach, is railing.

Reaſons why it is ſo great a ſin:

Firſt, It is contrary to equity, which requires that a man ſhould deal no otherwiſe with his neighbour than he would have his neighbour to deal with him, no man can brook railing terms, but abhors them.

Secondly, It is againſt charity:

1. It is a fruit of bitterneſſe and wrath in him that doth it, and ſhews that he is provoked and inflamed; now charity is not provoked.

2. It tends to the diſgrace of another to blemiſh his name, and make him appear vile and contemptible to others, which is againſt the rules of charity; for charity covers faults, and this layes them open.

3. In ſome caſes it is contrary to truth and verity.

Men are prone to this ſin, becauſe they are full of pride, paſſion, bitterneſſe, uncharitableneſſe, which ingender it.

A man ſhould be able to bear himſelf railed at:

1. Becauſe we deſerve greater evil at Gods hand.

2. We are never the worſe for it.

3. Becauſe it argueth folly and pride to be troubled at anothers railing on us: folly, in thinking our ſelves the worſe for ſuch ſpeeches; pride, in that we cannot endure to be deſpiſed.

Rebellion.

Rebellion is two-fold { 1. Againſt God. 2. Againſt Man.

1. Againſt God.

A wilfull practiſing of known tranſgreſſions, or neglecting of known duties.

It is diſhonourable to God, as rebellion againſt a Prince.

1 Sam. 15. 23. See Iſa. 1. 2, 20 Pſal. 5. 10. Samuel told Saul that rebellion was as the ſin of witchcraft; the Witch makes the Devil a god, the Rebel makes himſelf a god.

As he that entertaineth in his mind a falſe conceit of things, is guilty of error; but if he ſettle himſelf in this falſe conceit, and hold it faſt, that is a prejudice, a rooted and grounded error: ſo he which in his will entertains a deliberate purpoſe of ſinning againſt his knowledge, or the evident means, is guilty of rebellion: he that ſtands to his purpoſe ſtill and ſtill, and goes on in it againſt reproof and admonition, he adds ſtubbornneſſe to his rebellion.

Three things concur to the making of rebellion:

Firſt, A perſon ſubject to Authority that in duty ought to be under the government of another.

Secondly, A Governour that hath a juſt and lawfull title to govern and rule.

Thirdly, Acts of that inferiour, croſſing, thwarting, oppoſing the commandments of that Governour.

So it ſtands between God and us when we ſin.

1. We are his Subjects, perſons that in duty ought to be at his command, and to order our ſelves according to his will, becauſe he made us and preſerves us, and giveth us all things which we have upon condition of obedience, therefore it is equal we ſhould be guided by him, and rebellion is unreaſonable; we ſhall not get but loſe by it.

2. He hath abſolute right over us.

3. Sins do contradict the Commandment and Laws of God which he hath revealed and made known: thus ſin is like rebellion, therefore ſo termed in Scripture, Pſalm 51. 2. 2 Sam. 15. God ſaith often of Iſrael, They are a rebellious houſe. It is an actual refuſing to be under the ſovereign Authority of God our Lord and King.

is

Reaſons. It is an actual denying of Gods Sovereignty, and as it were a depoſing of him from his Government of the world, a robbing him of the honour of his Wiſdom, Juſtice, Power, Authority, it is an oppoſing of our will to Gods will, by holding in our ſelves a purpoſe of doing what he forbids, and not doing what he commands, for our pleaſure, profit or credits ſake, as Saul ſpared the cattel for his profit which God would have killed.

2. Againſt Man.

It is a great fault for children or ſubjects to be diſobedient to their Parents or Princes.

2 Sam. 18. 9. to 18. The fifth Commandment.

Many of the Kings of Iſrael did fall by the treaſon of their Subjects, as the ſtory recordeth. Mordecai when he knew of two Eunuchs which plotted againſt the life of Ahaſhuerus, was carefull to reveal the matter to Eſther, and ſhe unto the King, whereby the conſpirators were puniſhed and he eſcaped. A wretched and untimely death befell Elies ſons for not hearkning to their fathers admonitions, and other ſins.

1 Sam. 22. 15. 1 Sam. 24. 6. & 26. 9, 11. Eccl. 10. 20. See Prov. 17. 11. & 20. 20. & 24. 22.

The cauſes of rebellions, conſpiracies, treaſons and inſurrections are alwayes nought and evil, they have their original from one of theſe three vices, ambition, diſcontentment or ſuperſtition: moſt of the conſpirators which are noted in the ſtories of the Kings of Iſrael to have ſlain their maſters, and reigned in their rooms, were ambitious. Now all theſe three are foul faults, and therefore rebellion which flows from them.

The effects alſo which follow upon this fault are moſt loathſom and evil:

1. The practiſers ſeldom or never fail to bring on themſelves miſchief and deſtruction, as Sheba who rebelled againſt David, and divers others; the Kings of Iſrael which came in by treaſon, their ſons ſtill by treaſon likely thruſt them out; ſo that even Jezabel could ſay, Had Zimri peace which ſlew his maſter?

2. It brings miſery to a whole Nation, it brings with it likely civil war, and ſo all manner of confuſion.

Reaſons. 1. It is plainly and often condemned in Scripture, and therefore croſſeth cleer and many precepts.

2. It is a great fault in regard of the miſchievouſneſſe of it, for it tends to overthrow all the comfort of mens lives, and to deſtroy the welfare of humane ſocieties.

3. It is a great ſinne in reſpect of the perſons againſt whom it is committed, a Father is the name of the greateſt ſweetneſſe and goodneſſe, and a King of the greateſt Power and Majeſty, the one being alſo a common Father, and the other a domeſtical King; the one is a lively picture of Gods goodneſſe, the other of his greatneſſe.

4. In regard of the great obligations by which the perſons offending ſtand bound to their duty; the one, the child is bound by the ſtrongeſt bonds of nature, ſeeing he is as it were a piece of the Father which oweth to him his being, education, preſervation and maintenance: the other the Subject is bound by the ſtrongeſt civil bond, viz. an oath.

How many malefactors when they come to be hanged, have moſt bitterly complained of their undutifulneſſe and diſobedience to their parents, as the cauſe of all their miſery!

The Pope of Rome and his Jeſuited faction teach and maintain rebellion and treaſon in Subjects againſt their Princes, giving to the Pope power in order to things ſpiritual to depoſe Kings, and to free their Subjects from the Oath of Allegiance which they have taken.

Quid bonis in eo regno ſperare jam licet, ubi optimi duo reges religionis obtentu parricidarum ſicis ſunt confoſſi? Quanquam non univerſa Gallia in hoc parricidium conſenſit, verum oppido pauci ſuperſtitione depravati, & omnis legitimæ poteſtatis oſores acerrimi. Caſaub. Epiſt. 397.

It is a wicked Doctrine of thoſe Pontificians, who teach, That an Heretical Prince, that is in their ſenſe, one that caſteth off the yoke of the Roman Religion, doth thereupon forfeit his Temporalities into the hands of the Pope, and ſo make him in ordine ad ſpiritualia, to be the diſpoſer of Crowns and Kingdoms. Dr Reynolds Sermon on 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20.

Revenge.

Thankfulneſſe is accounted a heavy burthen, revenge a ſweet refreſhing, therefore men naturally are more prone to revenge a wrong than require a good turn. Proniores ad vindictam ſumus, quam ad gratiam. Bodin.

Men for the moſt part are very revengefull, prone to revenge, as Cain, Joſephs brethren, Eſau, Abſolom, Haman. The ſons of Jacob bitterly avenged the wrong done to their Siſter. Saul, 1 Sam. 15 24. & 18.26. The Phariſees who perverted Gods Commandment. For when God ſaid, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour, they added another ſentence to it, as if it had neceſſarily followed thereupon, But ſhalt hate thine enimies, as if God had enjoyned love only to neighbours, that is, ſuch as did dwell quietly by us, and uſed us in a kind and neighbourly faſhion; but that he allowed us to hate ſuch as were our enemies and did miſuſe us; to this purpoſe they perverted another ſaying of the Law, A hand for a hand, as if God had there given way to revenge, and allowed every man to return evil for evil, whereas that is ſpoken of the Magiſtrates duty in puniſhing wrong-doers, not of every mans own liberty, as if he ſhould do wrong.

Gratia oneri, vindicta in queſtu habetur. Tacitus. Non minus mali, referre injuriam, quam inferre. Lactant. l.6 de vero cultu. Qui enim referre injuriam nititur, eum ipſum à quo laſus eſt, geſtit imitari. Id. ibid. I can hold there is no ſuch thing as injury, that if there be, there is no ſuch injury as revenge, and no ſuch revenge as the contempt of an injury. Dr Browns Religio Medici. Verè magni eſt animi quaſdam injurias negligere, nec ad quorundam convicia habere vel aurem, vel linguam. Eraſm. Epiſt. lib. 2. Ægidio. Generoſa profecto mens, quæ aut non commovetur injuriis, aut acceptarum, vel multa obliviſcitur. Polit. Ep. l. 5. Ep. 8.

Reaſons.

Firſt, Carnal reaſon perſwades us, this is a thing very equal and righteous, becauſe it ſeemeth to approach ſomewhat near to that, which is indeed a known and approved rule of equity, viz. to do as we would be done to; wherefore corrupt reaſon a little varieth that maxime, and alloweth us to do as we are done to, and ſaith, Why ſhould I not uſe him as he uſed me?

Secondly, Carnal reaſon doth alſo perſwade, it is a courſe of ſafety and ſecurity for ones ſelf. For by this means one ſhall make men more afraid (thinketh that reaſon) to do me wrong, if I return their wrongs upon them.

Thirdly, Pride poſſeſſeth all men naturally, this ſtirreth men up to revenge.

Fourthly, Every mans heart aboundeth with ſelf-love, and love cannot endure to ſee evil done to the perſon loved.

Fifthly, We are all void of charity and love to our brethren; hence there is an aptneſſe to be provoked and do them hurt, if we ſeem to have any cauſe.

Sixthly, It gives a kind of pleaſure and ſatisfaction to hatred or envy, of which it is a kind of exerciſe, as ſcratching doth to him that hath the itch.

Revenge is a requiring of evil for evil, a doing hurt again to them, from whom one hath received hurt, and meaſuring ill meaſure for ill meaſure. A dog in the Law was an unclean beaſt, becauſe he was revengefull.

1. Revenge tranſgreſſeth the plain light of nature which bids us do as we would be done to, and every man would be forgiven, and not have revenge taken upon him.

2. It is a manifeſt enemy to peace and concord, which we ſhould ſeek and follow after.

3. Injurious to God, a preventing of him, as if he were not careſull enough to execute juſtice.

The beſt and wiſeſt Heathen writer of moral vertues, hath delivered it as a general principle, that a man muſt not hurt any other, but with this caution and limitation, unleſſe he be firſt provoked by ſome injury.

Phocion when he had done great ſervice for Athens, yet they ungratefully putting him to death, he charged his ſon at his death that he ſhould never remember the Athenian injuries. The King of France after would not revenge the wrongs done to him before when Duke of Orleance.

Signs

Signs of Revenge:

1. A pitileſſe diſpoſition, by which one is rather glad than ſorry for anothers evil.

2. Exceſſe in puniſhing.

Some Directions or means for the crucifying of this unruly affection:

Firſt, You muſt ſubdue pride, and labour to make your ſelves baſe and vile in your own eyes, being worthy of all the wrongs and indignities that can be offered to you in regard of your own ſinfulneſſe.

Secondly, You muſt obſerve God in wrongs, as David, The Lord hath ſent him to curſe.

Thirdly, You muſt often conſider of the goodneſſe of God in forgiving your ſins many and hainous, Epheſ. 4. 12. & 5. 2.

Fourthly, You muſt often ponder of the neceſſity of this duty which appears by three things:

1. The clear and expreſſe commandments given about it, Matth. 5. 39. reſiſting evil, that is, by doing the like evil to him which he doth to thee, but prepare thy ſelf to bear that and another, rather than by doing the like to repell the former, whereby he meeteth with the cavils which fleſh doth enforce to juſtifie revenge, or elſe I ſhall be perpetually obnoxious to wrongs. Be it ſo, ſaith our Saviour, thou muſt rather bear it than reſiſt, Rom. 12. 17. & 19. 1 Theſſ. 5. 15. No man may render to any evil for evil, that is, evil word for evil word, evil deed for evil deed, taunt for taunt, blow for blow.

2. The great danger if it be not mortified, our ſins ſhall never be pardoned; we pray in the Lords Prayer, Forgive as we forgive; he therefore which forgiveth not, can never have any true aſſurance of being forgiven, Matth. 6. 14, 15. Lo as manifeſt a promiſe and threat as any the Scripture containeth, or can be made. Now to forgive a wrong and requite it with ſome evil done to the wrong-doer, are as quite contrary as any thing in the world, ſo that he which will do the one doth not the other; as he which ſues and impriſons a man for debt doth not forgive his debt; ſo he that recompenſeth a man evil for his evil, doth not forgive his evil.

3. The worthy examples which we have of good men that have gone before us in mortifying it, as Chriſt and other Saints.

To theſe meditations adde fervent prayers to God, that he would vouchſafe to ſeaſon our hearts with humility, meekneſſe, forbearance; that he would ſtrengthen us to paſſe by wrongs, injuries, indignities, that he would give us his Spirit to crucifie this as well as the other luſts of the fleſh.

Scandall.

A Scandal or offence is that which is or may be in it ſelf an occaſion of falling to another. Any thing whereby we ſo offend another, as that he is hindred from good, drawn into, or confirmed in evil, is a ſcandal. One ſaith, It is an indiſcreet or uncharitable abuſe of my Chriſtian liberty.

Dictum, aut factum minus rectum, præbens occaſionem ruinæ. Vid. Aquin. 22, 22. Quæſt. 43. Art. 1. Scandalum eſt dictum, vel factum, aut exemplum, quo alius fit deterior. Zanch. Scandalum eſt, quo quis impellitur in ruinam & evertitur. Cameron. Prælect. in Matth. 15. 14.

There is Scandalum, 1. Datum: 2. Acceptum. A ſcandal given, when a man doth that which is in it ſelf unlawfull, or elſe if it be lawfull he doth it in an undue manner, Rom. 14. 20, 21.

Firſt, Scandals given,

1. When men by corrupt Doctrine endeavour to juſtifie wicked practiſes, Rom. 16. 17.

2. By ſinfull practices, Prov. 29. 6. & 22. 15.

3. By giving juſt ground of offence in appearance of evil, 1 Theſſ. 5. 22. 2 Cor. 8. 19, 20.

4. In the abuſe of lawfull liberty, goe to the utmoſt bounds of it, Rom. 14. per tot.

Matth. 18. 7. Vide plura ibid. Bona res neminem ſcandalizat, niſi malum mentem. Tertul.

Secondly,

Secondly, A ſcandal or offence taken, when men take offence at that which is good, where there is neither evil nor any appearance of it, John 6. 61. 1 *Pet.*2.7. Men take offence at true Doctrine and good actions, the Diſciples at Chriſts doctrin of the Reſurrection. 2. When their ſins are reproved, *Levit.*19.16,17.

Schiſme.

See Dr *Prideaux Eph. Backsliding. Crakenthorps Vigilius dormitans,c.*13. The Donatiſts divided themſelves fromthe then Catholick Church, becauſe it was not pure enough for ſuch ſanctified Communicants: they Schiſme in the Church is much like ſedition in the State. As the name of Hereſie, though it be common to any opinion whereof one makes choice whether it be true or falſe (in which ſenſe Conſtantine the great called the true faith, Catholicam & ſanctiſſimam hæreſin) yet in the ordinary uſe it is now applied only to the choice of ſuch opinions as are repugnant to the faith. So the name of Schiſm, though it import any ſciſſure or renting of one from another, yet now by the vulgar uſe of Divines it is appropriated onely to ſuch a rent or diviſion as is made for an unjuſt cauſe, and from thoſe to whom he or they who are ſeparated ought to unite themſelves and hold communion with them. Tota ratio Schiſmatis, the very eſſence of a Schiſme conſiſts in the ſeparating from the Church, I ſay, from the true and orthodoxal Church. It is a renting or diſſolving of that unity which ought to be amongſt Chriſtians. See Mr Marſhals Sermon on Rom. 12.4,5.

eried up liberty of conſcience when they were under power, but were much againſt it after. Auſtin layes down this concluſion, Unitatem Eccleſiæ per totum orbem diſperſæ propter nonnullorum peccata non eſſe deſerendam, which is indeed the whole ſum of that Fathers diſputation againſt the Donatiſts. See Mr Morice his Cœna, quaſi Koινη, p.86,87. Schiſma eſt eadem opinantem atque eodem ritu utentem quo cæteri, ſolo congregationis delectari diſſidio. Aug.cont. Fauſt.Manichæum. *l.*20. And again, Schiſmaticos facit non diverſa fides ſed communionis diſrupta ſocietas. Independentes illi quos (cum nihil familiari nobis ciſmarinis lingua ediderint) uſque nunc niſi de nominis infamia noſſe non licuit. Blondel. de Jure Plebis in Regem, Eccl. Diſſert. p. 72. Schiſma definiunt Juriſconſulti ſeparationem ab unitate & communitate Eccleſiæ citra errorem in fundamento. Sharrock. de officiis ſecundum Natura Jus. c.11.

Schiſm or Church-diviſion, is

A ſinne againſt as many clear and earneſt precepts and prohibitions, as any. See 1 Cor. 1. and third Chapters, and 14th of the Romans, 3. Epheſ. Phil. 2. begin. & 3.15,16. *Rom.*16.17. & 15. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. 1 Pet. 3. 6. It is a ſinne againſt the great new Commandment in the Goſpel, John 17.21. & 13. 34. & 15,12,17. and againſt the great deſign of the Goſpel, John 11. 52. Epheſ. 1. 10. & 2.14,15,16. againſt the ſcope of the working of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 13. Acts 2. 46 & 4. 32. againſt the very nature of Chriſtianity it ſelf, 1 Theſſ. 4. 9. againſt the neereſt bonds of relation, members of Chriſt and of one another, Rom. 12. 4,5. 1 Cor. 6. ult. againſt the very ſafety of the Church, Matth 12.25. It is contrary to the hopes and ends of Chriſtianity, *Epheſ.*4. 13. The ſucceſſe of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and the ſalvation of thoſe without, John 17. 21.

Schiſme upon the ſound of the word imports diviſion, diviſion is not, but where communion is, or ought to be. Hales of Schiſm.

It is a ſeparation of Chriſtians from that part of the viſible Church, of which they were once members, upon ſlight unneceſſary grounds. Dr Mayne on Heb. 10. 24, 25.

It was a memorable ſpeech of Calvin, who ſaid, He would willingly travel all over the Seas and Countreys in the World to put an end to the differences that were in the Reformed Churches.

Eſt hoc certe triſte & perniciоſum Schiſma quod Satan, ut operi Reformationis tanto efficacius obſiſteret, ejuſq; curſum remora-

Cameron well diſtinguiſheth of a double Schiſme, 1. Negative, which is a bare ſeceſſion or ſubduction, and is lawfull: Non ſeparatio, ſed cauſa facit Schiſmaticum. Caſſand. Where cauſe of Schiſm is neceſſary, there not he that ſeparates, but he that occaſions the ſeparation, is the ſchiſmatick.

2. Poſitive, when there is a certain conſociation, which uſeth Eccleſiaſtical Laws, the Word of God and adminiſtration of the Sacraments ſeparatim, which he calleth ſetting up an Altar againſt an Altar; this is called Schiſm Antonomaſticus, and κατ' ἐξοχὴν, ſaith he, de Eccleſ. Mr Lawſon in his Politica Sacra & Civilis, *Chap.*14.

Chap. 14. ſhews, That the Independent Power of Diſcipline doth not primarily belong unto a Congregation, he ſaith, this at leaſt gives occaſion of Schiſm.

Different forms of Churches and Church-government in one State, muſt needs lay a foundation of ſtrife and diviſion therein. It is no wiſdome (ſaith Mr Durry in a Letter) in a State, to reject an approved way of Government, which all the beſt Reformed Churches have received all this while, and acknowledged to be Gods way, and by experience found to be ſafe, ſound; and in ſtead of it to take up another, which it is not yet known what it is, nor was ever tried but in two, or at the moſt three Churches, and that for the ſpace of a few years. The ſlighter the cauſe of Separation, the greater the fault of Schiſm; when men hold the ſame Faith and orthodox truths, yet ſeparate for leſſer matters.

Though the names of Hereticks and Schiſmaticks have been made only Bug-bears to fright children with, in this time of our troubles, yet ſo long as Chriſtianity continues, thoſe that ſeparate themſelves from the Church upon pretences concerning the ſubſtance of Faith, ſhall be properly called Hereticks: But if the cauſe concern not the ſubſtance of Chriſtianity, Schiſmaticks. Mr Thorndikes Due way of compoſing the Differences on Foot.

The true Saints in the ſeven Churches of the Revelation were never bid go out of them, though they were very corrupt, as they were out of Babylon, Mr Vines. The firſt Separatiſt in the Scripture (ſaith one) was Cain, Gen. 4. 16. Enforcements to love are clear, 1 Cor. 13. 1. That Queſtion of Separation in Scripture is dark. See Mr Gilleſpy Miſcel. cap. 10. & 15. And Mr Manton on James 3. 17. & Jude v. 19. Schiſma eſt ſeceſſio in Religionis negotio, vel temeraria, vel injuſta. Cameron. de Eccleſ. Schiſm is a cauſleſſe ſeparation from external Communion with any true Church of Chriſt. CHAP.

Chap. XXIII.

Of Sedition, Self-love, Self-seeking, Slander.

Sedition.

SEdition is a ſin whereto people are much inclined.

It is to leave our preſent Governours which rule us according to Law, and follow other Governours who riſe up of their own accord: to leave a David, and follow a Sheba.

Vide Scultet. Annal. Dec. 1. p. 239, 240. Nihil unquam magis deteſtatus ſum quam ſeditionem, nec adhuc ullâ in re mecum pugno. Eraſm. epiſt. l. 28. Floriano Morino. See 2 Sam. 20. 1, 2.

The Iſraelites raiſed ſedition againſt David by means of Abſalom and Ahitophel, and proceeded ſo farre in their rebellion, that they brought it to a pitcht field, and would not give over till their Captain with twenty thouſand more were ſlain in the battel, 2 Samuel 19. Corah, Dathan and Abiram, ſtirre up a great multitude againſt Moſes and Aaron. At another time, of themſelves they roſe againſt Moſes, and were ready to ſtone him, becauſe they wanted water. At another time, they cry to have a Captain, and return back to Ægypt.

Mr Hobbs in his Rules of Government, Chap. 12. reckons up theſe two (among other wild ones) as ſeditious opinions, that the knowledge of good and evil belongs to each ſingle man; and ſaith, Legitimate Kings make the things they command juſt by commanding them, and thoſe which they forbid unjuſt by forbidding them. This is to make Subjects beaſts, and the Magiſtrate God. 2. That faith and holineſſe are not acquired by ſtudy and natural reaſon, but are ſupernaturally infuſed and inſpired into man: which if it were true (ſaith he) I underſtand not why we ſhould be commanded to give an account of our faith; or why any man who is truly a Chriſtian ſhould not be a Prophet. This opinion is ſo contrary to Scripture, and the judgment of all ſound Divines, that I need not ſpend time to confute it. See Phil. 1. 29. Epheſ. 1. 8. Heb. 12. 2. One indeed ſaith, The habits of Faith, Hope and Charity, are infuſed after the manner of acquiſite; God having ordained not to infuſe them, but upon the means of hearing, praying, caring, ſtudying, and endeavouring. Some ſay, There are no graces wrought in us, but ſeveral actings of the Spirit, as the Spirit acteth with us, where grace is wrought we need the Spirit to excite and draw it forth; but the Scripture is plain for infuſed habits; grace is called a good work in us, Phil. 1. 6. the Law written in our hearts. God is ſaid to ſhine into our hearts, 2 Cor. 4. 6. we are ſaid to be partakers of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. See Eph. 2. 10.

Plaiſer's Apello Evangelium, c. 11.

1. It is a ſin it is plain by Scripture; How ſeverely did God puniſh it in Corah and his accomplices, making the earth to gape wide and ſwallow them up! Solomon condemns it, ſaying, Meddle not with ſuch as be given to change. See Gal. 5. 20. Yea, it is a great ſin, as is evident,

Firſt, It is contrary to the light of Scripture; in the Law, he that curſed, that is, railed upon, or uſed ill wiſhes againſt the Ruler of his people, was to be put to death, how much more then he that ſhall riſe up againſt him! The Scriptures of the New Teſtament are full of precepts for duty and ſubjection, Rom. 13. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 13, 14. Give unto Caſar that which is Caſars, ſaith our bleſſed Saviour, Give to every one his due, fear to whom fear, honour to whom honour belongeth, you muſt needs be ſubject for conſcience ſake. And the Apoſtle willeth Titus to put them in mind to obey principalities and powers, and be ſubject to Magiſtrates, and ready to every good work; as if a man were unfit for any good work, if he be not duly ſubject to authority.

The Jeſuites are ſtill tampering about Kingdomes, Monarchies, Commonwealths, and temporal States, how to bring them into mutinies, contentions, ſeditions, rebellions and uproars. Watſon's Quodlibets of Religion and State, Quodl. 5.

Quodl. 5. Answer to the fourth Article. They are like unto Æsops Trumpeter, who being taken in warre made his lamentation, saying, That he never drew his Sword against any, nor shot at any: but the enemy answered, Thou hast animated others, thou hast put courage, rage and fury into all the rest. S. Peter and Jude do blame them which despise Government, and speak evil of them in authority.

Secondly, It is contrary to the light of nature; for even among those Nations which never had any divine revelation, yet the necessity of duty to Magistrates was alwayes maintained as a thing which they perceived absolutely requisite for the welfare of humane societies, seeing without government the societies of men could never continue in a good estate, no man could possesse his own goods, enjoy his own lands and house, live comfortably with his own wife and children, or give himself to any profitable calling and endeavour.

Thirdly, It is contrary to those principal vertues by which all men ought to governe themselves in the course of their lives, unlesse they will be brutish; appetite ruleth beasts; reason ought to guide man, and a setled habit agreeable to right reason. Now the main and fundamental vertues are Religion, Justice, Charity and Prudence, against all which sedition doth evidently oppose it self.

1. Religion tieth our souls to God, and commandeth us to give him his due; God is not duly feared and honoured, if his Ordinance of Magistracy be despised.

2. Justice bindeth us to men, and requireth to give every man his due, which we do not, if we deny subjection to the Magistrate, by whose power all men else should be helped to the attaining of their right.

3. Charity bids us do good to our neighbours as to our selves, and how will he do good to other neighbours, who will not perform his duty to his Governours, who are appointed for the common good?

4. Discretion and prudence advise to take that course which is most requisite for our own and the common happinesse, seeing no member can be long safe, if the whole be not kept in safety. It is quite contrary to the common welfare, and consequently to a mans own at length, that the body be rent asunder with sedition.

Fourthly, It is a great sin, since it proceedeth from bad causes and produceth ill effects; Ambition, envy, and discontent at the present estate, and foolish hopes to have all remedied by a change, are the mothers of sedition. 2. The effects of sedition are lamentable; where envying and strife is, there is sedition and every evill work, James. Envying and strife likely bring sedition, and sedition cometh accompanied with every evil work, viz. with civil war, which puts the sword into the hand of the multitude, and makes them bold to kill, spoil, burn all which lies in their way without difference or respect of persons, religion and justice are exiled, and fury and passion do what they please. The reason why men are so prone to this sin, is because they are naturally full of those vices which are apt to breed it, viz. ambition, envy, discontent, fond hopes.

Self-love.

It is a vehement and inordinate inclination to ones own content in things carnall, earthly, and sensual, 2 Tim. 3. 2. See 2 Cor. 12. 7.

There is,

1. A naturall φιλαυτία or self-love, by which every one from the instinct of nature loves himself, his own body, soul, life, Eph. 5. 29. the Scripture doth not condemn this.

Ignorant men, and those that are raised from a mean condition, are apt to think too well of themselves, God and nature teach us to love our selves, Matth. 19. 10. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self; self in subordination, not in opposition to God, regular self, Zanchius in Ephes. 5. 28. See Doctor Gouge on that place.

2. A divine ſelf-love, by which every one that is born again by the holy Ghoſt from the inſtinct of the Spirit, loves himſelf, as is fitting, to the glory of God and good of the Church, theſe two kinds of ſelf-love were in Chriſt.

3. A deviliſh ſelf-love, whereby one by the inſtinct of corrupt nature and inflamed by Satan, ſo loves himſelf, that he loves no other truely, and ſeeks only his own things.

This is a great ſin.

1. There is much of the contempt of God in it.
2. There is much idolatry in it.
3. It is a devilliſh ſinne, pride and ſelf-love was the Devils ſin.
4. It is the cauſe of all other ſins.
5. It is the ſetting up of a particular, finite, limited good, before an infinite, univerſal, boundleſſe good.

Effects of it,

1. To praiſe our ſelves, *Prov.*27.2. and boaſt of our ſelves as the Phariſee.
2. To be imbittered againſt reproofs.
3. To attempt things above our power and place.

Remedies againſt Self-love.

We ſhould love our beſt ſelves, *Mat.*6.33. *Luk.*10.42. and conſider what reaſon we have to love God above all. He is the original, univerſal good, and the cauſe of all good in the creature.

The right knowledg of God and our ſelves, will cure this corrupt ſelf-love. Conſider the baſeneſſe of our original, and our evils as well as excellencies, and the purity of God, Job 40. 4, 5. We ſhould watch and pray againſt this corruption, and accuſtome our ſelves much to the exerciſe of ſelf-denial.

It is lawful,

1. To will our temporal good with moderation.
2. To prefer our neceſſities before the neceſſities of others, to defend our own lives, rather than the lives of others, unleſſe he be a Magiſtrate, Thou art better than ten thouſand of us.
3. To maintain our reputation and juſt priviledges.

Self-ſeeking.

It is an evill at all times to ſeek great things to a mans ſelf.

Self is the great Idol, ſelf-conceit, ſelf-love, and ſelf-ſeeking: Self-conceit in the underſtanding, ſelf-love in the affections, and ſelf-ſeeking in the whole converſation.

Reaſons.

1. God hath written a Treatiſe * of purpoſe to take men off from the creature.
2. There are divers commands to the contrary, *Phil.*4.5. prohibitions, *Mat.*6.21. ſharp reproofs, *Eph.*5. *Jam.*4.4.
3. God is much delighted with ſuch a diſpoſition of the ſoul, as it is taken off from creature-comforts, *Pſal.*131.

* Eccleſiaſtes.

The greatneſſe of this evil.

1. It is the root of all other ſins, the firſt ſin that came into the world.
2. It is an error circa finem, nay, an errour concerning the utmoſt end, therefore the more dangerous.
3. Self as ſtanding in oppoſition to God, is that againſt which all the curſes of the Law are denounced, *Iſa.*22.16,17. & 23.8.
4. For theſe ſelf-ſeekers only the torments of hell are prepared, Ceſſet propria voluntas & non erit infernus. Bern. God hath ever ſet himſelf againſt ſelf-ſeekers to deſtroy them and their houſe, *Prov.*19.21. Iſa 44.25. *Pſa.*33.10. *Iſa.*59.5,6. *Jer.*22.13. *Hab.*2.9.

This is eſpecially evil in the calamities of the Church, Numb. 14. 11, 12. what is this ſelf compared with the Churches good? this is condemned in Baruch, Jer.

Jer. 45. 4, 5. it is unſeaſonable. We reade not of any Saint in the Scriptures given to covetouſneſſe. 2. Hypocrites were given to it, Saul, Demas, Judas.

Gods prerogative is,

1. To have high eſteem from the creature as the chiefeſt good, to this ſelf-love is oppoſite.

2. To give Laws to the creature as an Abſolute Soveraign, to this ſelf-dependance is oppoſite.

3. To have the truſt of the creature as an Independent eſſence, to this ſelf-will is oppoſite.

4. To be the utmoſt end as the Supreme cauſe, to this ſelf-ſeeking is oppoſite.

Signs of it.

1. When one puts himſelf on the profeſſion of Religion for ſome worldly advantage, Gen. 34. 22, 23. John 6. 26.

2. When men are enemies to Chriſts Croſſe, Phil. 3. 18, 19.

3. Envy to others, Gal. 5. 26.

Remedies againſt it, Conſider

1. The greatneſs of the ſin, God ſhould be the chief end, to ſet up ſelf in his room, no man leſſe enjoys himſelf, than he that ſeeks himſelf.

2. You will have the greater judgment, Mat. 23. 14.

3. Frequently pray againſt it, and caſt back the praiſes given to thee unto God.

See Mr Calamy his Sermon on Phil. 2. 21. againſt ſelf-ſeeking.

Phil. 2. 21. May not our things and the things of Chriſt conſiſt together.

1. All men are not Chriſts nor led by his Spirit.

2. Many that profeſs themſelves to be Chriſts, are none of his, Rev. 3. 4.

3. Thoſe that are ſpiritually quickned, keep not cloſe to Chriſt, See Mat. 12. 30.

Slander.

Slander is a great ſin, Pſal. 52. 3. Rom. 1. 29. It was the ſin of Ziba, Haman againſt Mordecai, Detractio eſt aliena famæ per verba denigratio, Aquin. 2a. 2æ. Quæſt. 68. Art. 1. the ſmiting of a mans good name, the Latins call it detractio, becauſe it is a kind of theft, in that it ſtealeth from a mans good name. See Ameſ. de Conſc. l. 5. c. 15.

Convicium non avitiis, ut alicubi dubitat Feſtus dictum eſt: neque porro à concitatione, ut ridiculè cenſebat Labeo. I. (ſed à conlatione vocum, ut optime alij, quaſi convocium unde & ſyllaba ſecunda longa eſt Tanaq. Fab. nat. in Phæd.

The cauſe of it is flattery, envy, and twatling, uncharitableneſſe, or malice, or both is the prime cauſe of it, uncharitableneſſe is the bare abſence of charity, malice is a diſpoſition quite contrary to charity, either becauſe a man loves not or hates his neighbour. Charity doth no evill, we ſhould do as we would be done to.

The effects of it are bad, it ſets one man againſt another, and ſo doth miſchief to both, ſlandrous tongnes that told Saul in ſecret David ſought his hurt, made him to perſecute him ſo vehemently. The ſlanders of Haman cauſed Ahaſhuerus to make a Decree for the deſtruction of all the Jews in his Kingdom, Joſephs Miſtreſſes ſlanderous accuſation brought him into much trouble.

False accuſers, 1 Tim. 4. David was ſlandered by Saul, Chriſt was called a glutton, drunkard, a companion of Publicans and ſinners, yea, an Impoſtor and deceiver, and what not? but he bare all; and we never read of any complaints he made for this abuſe. Regium eſt male audire cum bene feceris. Slandering is againſt the fifth Commandment, becauſe it robs a man of the honour and dignity which is due unto him: againſt the ninth Commandment, becauſe it blemiſheth the good name and fame of another: and the ſixth, it is contrary to charity. Jeſabell took away Nabothi life by a ſlander.

There are whole Pſalms of execration for this ſin.

There are four principal parts of ſlander.

The 1. and worſt, when a man doth purpoſely forge a lye againſt his neighbour, without any ſo much as ſhew or ground, as Mephiboſheth was ſerved by his naughty ſervant Ziba, and as David himſelf was ſerved by the bad Courtiers about Saul.

2. When there hath been ſuch a thing done or ſaid, but he miſreports it, adding or diminiſhing, wreſting and perverting it, and ſo makes it ſeem evil that was not ſo in the intention and practice of the doer, as they wreſted our Saviours words to a blaſphemous ſenſe.

The third kind, when one reports a falſe rumour that he hath heard and taken up upon truſt, as Tobiah ſaid it was reported, and ſuch a one did ſpeak it, that Nehemiah meant to rebel.

4. When men complain of a good deed, as if it were ill to them that will account it ſo, as the enemies of the three children accuſed them to Nebuchadnezzar, and thoſe that told Jeſabel of Obadiahs hiding the Prophets.

Helps againſt it.

1. Speak nothing of any man that tends to his hurt and diſgrace, of which you are not certain, that you cannot prove to be true, Report is a lyar, therefore truſt it not.

2. Though you do know any evil of your neighbour, yet report it not, but when duty binds you, and only to ſuch as duty binds you, I mean chiefly of private faults, or of publick, if they be ſuch as cannot be made better by ſpeaking of, nor do good to others by being known.

3. Be not tatlers, perſons full of tongue, apt to be ſtill ſpeaking, he that ſpeaketh much, will ſpeak much evil, and among the reſt, ſome ſlanders, when other talk faileth he will fall upon the faults of men.

4. When you talk, forbear medling with other mens matters, be not buſi-bodies. He that 1. Is of few words, 2. When he ſpeaks, medleth as little as may be with others matters, 3. Forbears to talk of their faults, but as much as he muſt needs by the bond of duty, and then is ſure to ſay nothing but what he knows and can prove, that man ſhall not prove a ſlanderer. Make not your ſelves petty Devils by ſlandering and falſe accuſing, many have learned that evil precept of accuſing boldly, becauſe ſomething will ſtick.

Chap. XXIV.

Of Tale-bearing, Vain-glory, Violence, Unbelief, Unkindneſſe, Unprofitableneſſe, Unſetledneſſe, Unthankefullneſſe, Uſury.

Of Tale-bearing.

Si accuſaſſe ſufficiat, nemo erit innocens.

Tale-bearing, It is a ſin eaſily to believe falſe tales, as Saul had an open ear to thoſe Sycophants which were ready to accuſe David to him of treaſon and conſpiracy, Ahaſuerus to Haman who traduced the Jews as a people careleſs of the Kings Laws, David to Ziba.

Reaſons 1. It is an encouragement and hearkning unto thoſe whoſe trade is to invent and believe lies.

2. It makes a man guilty of thoſe lies to which he hath given furtherance and countenance, and ſo he is partaker of anothers ſins.

3. It is againſt the clear principle and rule of all actions, viz. to do as we would be done by, one is offended if another readily receive falſe tales againſt him.

Men are ſubject to this fault, becauſe they are not ſo perfect in wiſedom and charity as they ought to be, uncharitableneſſe, evill ſuſpitions, guiltineſſe, willingneſſe neſſe to have others faulty, and imprudent temerity, are the cauſes of this over-haſty crediting tales. A good man neither taketh up, nor receiveth a ſlander againſt his neighbour, Pſalm 15. 2. let thy countenance be like the Northwinde to back-biting tongues.

Vain-glory.

Vain-glory is a great ſin, John 7. 18. Mat. 6. beginning. We are naturally prone to it, Gal. 5. 26. It is the maſter-ſinne in ſanctification, as unbelief in juſtification. As pride is an inordinate appetite of ones own excellency: ſo is vain-glory an immoderate deſire of mens praiſe for this excellency. Cuſſe of Affectation.

It is when either by vain means which deſerve not praiſe, or when by good duties in themſelves praiſe-worthy, men ſeek the praiſe of men, more than the glory of God, John 5. 44. See Mr Murcots Sermon on that Text. But by holy means to ſeek a good name amongſt men, with intentional reference to the glory of God, is not to be vain-glorious, ſee Phil. 4. 7.

It is an inordinate deſire of account and eſteem from men.

The Philoſophers (which Jerome was wont to call Animalia gloriæ & popularis auræ mancipia) in thoſe very Books which they wrote againſt vain-glory, whiles they did underwrite their own names, are condemned as guilty of that vanity which they ſeemed to oppoſe.

It is inordinate,

1. When a man deſires to be eſteemed for thoſe things, which are in truth ſo vile, mean, baſe, that they do not at all commend, grace or countenance him which hath them, as riches, high places in the world, learning, wit, ſtrength, beauty, nimbleneſſe, eloquence.

2. When a man deſires eſteem from men, with a neglect of the eſteem and account which he ſhould deſire to have with God.

See John 5. 8. 1 Theſſ. 2. 6. Saul ſaith to Samuel, Honour me before the people, ſee 1 Sam. 18. 8. Haman would be worſhipt with religious worſhip. Κενοδοξία ſemper vulgatiſſima peſtis eſt in mundo, quod etiam gentiles poetæ & hiſtorici vehementer reprehenderunt. Non eſt pagus, in quo non reperiatur unus atque alter, qui præ alijs non velint ſapere & magnifieri. Præcipuè tamen hoc vicio laborant homines ingenioſi, qui de eruditione & ſapientia certant. Hic nemo vult alteri cedere, juxta illud, Qui vult ingenio cedere, nullus erit. Pulchrum eſt enim digito monſtrari, & dicier hic eſt. Sed in privatis hominibus, imo etiam magiſtratum gerentibus, non tam pernicioſa eſt, ut in his, qui Eccleſiæ præſunt. Lutherus in Gal. 6. Poteſt gloria dici vana tripliciter. Uno modo ex parte rei de quâ quis gloriam quærit, puta cum quis quærit gloriam de eo quod non eſt, vel de eo quod non eſt gloria dignum, ſicut de aliquâ re fragili & caduca. Alio modo, ex parte ejus à quo quis gloriam quærit, puta hominis, cujus judicium non eſt certum. Tertio modo, ex parte ipſius qui gloriam appetit, qui videlicet appetitum gloriæ ſuæ non refert in debitum finem, putà ad honorem Dei vel proximi ſalutem. Aquinas 2ª, 2æ. Quæſt. 132. Artic. 1.

As Mr Fox was going along London ſtreets, a woman of his acquaintance met him, and as they diſcourſed together, ſhe pulled out a Bible, telling him that ſhe was going to hear a Sermon, whereupon he ſaid to her, if you will be adviſed by me, go home again; but (ſaid ſhe) when ſhall I then go? To whom he anſwered, When you tell no body of it.

Two Captains on the ſame ſide in our Civill Wars, diſcourſing together, one of them (with ſmall cauſe, and without any meaſure) did intollerably boaſt of his perſonal performances, as if he had been of the Quorum in all conſiderable Actions: At laſt not aſhamed of, but wearied with his own loquacity, he deſired the other Captain to relate what ſervice he had done in theſe Wars; To whom he returned, Other men can tell you of that. Mr Fullers mixt Contemplations in Better Times. 9.

Bernard being tempted to vain-glory in a Sermon, ſaid, Satan, Non propter te hoc opus cœptum eſt, non propter te, nec in te finietur. I neither began for thee, nor will I make an end for thee.

One muſt deny himſelf in all vain-glory attributed to him, Rom. 12. 3. 2 Cor. 12. 6. ſee Acts 14. 14, 15. Rev. 19. 10.

He muſt,

1. Be nothing in his own eſteem, 1 Cor. 11. 31. he muſt judg aright of his eſtate, indowments and actions.

2. He muſt be content to be nothing in the thoughts of other men, Zach. 13. 5.

Labour to have your names in Heaven. Luke 10. 20. Rev. 2. 17. and be contented with the praiſe that comes from God only, 2 Cor. 5. 9. John 5. 4. and 12. 43.

Motives to ſhun vain-glory.

1. There is no greater folly in the world than flattery, and there is no greater flattery than ſelf-flattery.

2. This diſpoſition will betray a man to divers enemies.

1. It will make a man exalt himſelf.

2. It will ſtrengthen a mans heart againſt admonition.

3. Its eaſie for the vileſt men to keep up a credit in the world; the Phariſees were counted the only Saints.

4. God will be highly diſpleaſed if we take to us falſe honour, as he was with Herod.

How to diſtinguiſh real glory and vain-glory.

1. All true honour is grounded on real excellency, and that which is ſo in Gods account, 1 Pet. 3.3,4.

2. True honour muſt be à laudato viro, from one that is praiſe-worthy.

3. From perſons that know you.

Violence.

Violence is a great ſin.

It is unrighteouſneſſe born forth with ſtrong hand, with ſtrength of body, wit, or purſe of friends, unjuſtice maintained and backed with ſtrength.

Two things muſt concur to it.

1. An uneoual and unrighteous intent and practice.

2. A proſecuting ſuch intent and practice with might of any kind, as in one inſtance the Prophet noteth, They covet fields and take them by force.

A man of violence is he who will bear out a bad matter with money, favour, wit ſtrength, or any outward helps he can uſe for that purpoſe.

That this is evill, appears by that place where David affirms of God, that the man which loveth violence his ſoul hateth, that is, he hates him in all extremity, with an utter hatred, the reaſon is, becauſe he hath ſold over himſelf to ſinne; he ſinnes of wilfullneſs, is an obſtinate ſinner, a deſpiſer of God, he hath buried all juſtice and equity, love and charity, and ſhamefully abuſeth thoſe gifts to miſchief, which God hath furniſhed him with for better purpoſes, it begins in very children, the ſtronger, bigger, and craftier, will wrong the weaker and fillier.

Violence burſting forth into any extremities of dealing, was in the old law puniſhed with the like of that that was done, Lev. 24.17.

Unbelief.

There is misbelief, aſſenting to that which is falſe, the Apoſtle cals it believing a lie, 2 Theſſ. 2. 11. and unbelief, denying our aſſent to the truths of God. It is unperſwadableneſſe, a refuſing to be perſwaded, Gen. 9. 27. and diſobedience, Heb. 11. 31.

Hilderſam. See Ball of faith, p. 208. There is a twofold unbelief. 1. Pura negationis, negative, as in Pagans and Turks. When one barely wants faith, having not the means of grace, John 15. 22. Epheſ. 2. 12. 1 Tim. 1. 13. and 5. 8. 2. Prava diſpoſitionis, poſitive, ſtanding out againſt the revelations of the Goſpel, Heb. 3. 12. 2 Theſſ. 2. 12. Acts 28. 24. There is an unbelief which is the infirmity of faith, Mark 9. 24. and an unbelief which oppoſeth faith, the hiſtoricall, promiſſive, or preceptive truths.

Infidelity was the firſt ſin, Gen. 3. 4. and is the mother of all ſins, Heb. 3. 12. The evil heart is called the heart of unbelief, Heb. 5. 12. as faith is the fountain of all graces, Acts 15. 9. Our Saviour often checks his Diſciples for this, Matth. 6. 30. it is called diſobedience againſt the Goſpel, Rom. 11. 16.

It is againſt thoſe moſt lovely and ſoul-raviſhing Attributes of God, his mercy, goodneſſe, free-grace, longanimity, patience, bowels of compaſſion.

It cals Gods power into queſtion, Pſalm 78. 19, 22.

2. It diſhonours his truth, 1 John 5. 10.

The holieſt men complain of ſpiritual ſins, unbelief, pride, ſelf-love, the love of the world, unbelief is the root of them all.

It is called a provocation, Pſalm 78. 4. Heb. 3. 8. which notes the higheſt act of diſpleaſure. See Pſalm 106. 7. the unbeliever is abominable to God and good men, Pſalm 15. 4.

It is a departing from God, Heb. 3. 12. ſee John 3. 33. Chriſt marvelled at it, he wondred at no other ſin, Mark 6. 6. it is ſorely puniſht by him, Pſalm 78. 21, 22. Jude 5. Matth. 23. 37, 38.

It is hard to find out unbelief to be a ſin, not that unbelief whereby we aſſent not to the doctrine of the Scripture, but that whereby we do not apply Chriſt for our only Saviour, for ſeeing the Law of God is partly ingraffed in our nature, we eaſily believe that what oppoſeth that is a ſin, but the Goſpel being wholly ſupernatural and meerly by divine revelation, therefore what oppoſeth that is not preſently acknowledged to be a ſinne, the Scripture diſcovers this unbelief.

The Spirit convinceth us of unbelief, and the ſinnefullneſſe of that ſtate, John 16. 9.

1. It diſcovers the nature of it, and therein our ignorance, 2 Cor. 4. 4.
   1. In reſpect of the reality of the Goſpel, that there is ſuch a thing as pardon, a reconciled, juſtified ſtate, faith, hope.
   2. In reſpect of the glory of the Goſpel, 2 Cor. 4. 4. 2 Cor. 3. ult. Chriſt is precious to them that believe.

2. Shews the diſtance that unbelief makes between God and us in our approaches to him, Heb 3. 12. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 3. 12. Sect. 128. 129. 130.

3. Diſcovers our rebellion and oppoſition to God and the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, Rom. 10. 3. by cavilling, objecting, and hard thoughts of Chriſt.

Secondly, The Spirit convinceth us of our unbelief, in reſpect of the objects and effects of it.

1. Its objects. 1. Chriſt as he hath all merit and ſatisfaction, in our approaches to God, we cannot ſet that which is in Chriſt by way of ſatisfaction againſt our own guilt. 2. We are not able to ſee pardoning promiſes ſpeak pardon to us through the Bloud of Chriſt; as that promiſe, Iſa. 1. 18. John 15. 22.

2. We improve not the Covenant, we look not upon Chriſt as the Head of it. As he is the party that makes good the Covenant with God for us, though I have many miſcarriages, yet he hath fully ſatisfied and made reconciliation with God for me, as he is the Head of the Covenant alſo to us, what need I doubt but I ſhall have ſtrength? pardon is given into the hands of my Mediator.

Chriſt,
1. Took upon himſelf the ſeals of the Covenant, Circumciſion, Baptiſm.
2. Turned the Covenant into a Teſtament by his death, was the mediator and ſurety of this Covenant.

2. In reference to the effects of unbelief.

1. The Spirit ſhews a man what weakneſs and corruption he lives under ſtill by reaſon of unbelief.

2. Lets him ſee how much terrour and guilt he ſtill lies under, he cannot call God father, Heb. 10. 22.

3. Diſcovers the comforts and joyes of believers, both from Scripture and the experiences of others of Gods people, 1 Joh. 1. 4. Joh. 15. 11. and yet much wrath and guilt ſtill lies upon his conſcience.

4. The Spirit convinceth of unbelief by a Saints often being at a loſſe in the things of the Goſpel. 1. He goes a long time together, and cannot meet with one promiſe to ſuit his condition. 2. When he hath a promiſe, he can make no uſe of it, cannot plead it with faith and expectation. 3. He cannot walk in the ſtrength of a promiſe.

It is joyned,
1. With unthankfulnes for the moſt glorious mercy, redemption, and ſalvation.
2. Pride, preferring our own vanities before the Son of God.
3. With preſumption.

Laſtly, Gods Spirit convinceth us alſo of the ſinfulneſs of unbelief.

1. By clearing up to the ſoul, that he lies under the breach of the great Goſpel-command.

2. By ſhewing what it is to neglect the love and grace of the Goſpel, Heb. 2. 3. Matth. 24. 51.

4. It binds all other ſins faſt upon us. The guilt of our ſinnes, Rom. 1. 32. Col. 2. 12. It is a ſeminary of all other ſins. 1. It defiles the Conſcience, Tit. 1. 15. 2. Rejects the word. 3. Blinds the eyes, and hardens the heart, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Epheſ. 4. 19.

3. By

3. By presenting to the soul how ill God takes it when we will not believe him.

There are divers actings of unbelief in the soul.

1. When we can trust God no further than we can see a probability in second causes, 2 Kings 7. 32. Luke 1. 18.

2. When we can trust him no longer than he goes in our way and rode, 2 Kings 5. 11, 12. Ego sæpe certas rationes conatus sum præscribere Deo, Luther.

3. When a mans confidence is weakned, and his faith discouraged by every petty difficulty, Mark 14. 30. the spies that went to view the Land of Canaan.

4. When we can not believe Gods bare word without some extraordinary providences, which may be as signes of his accomplishing it, Psalm 106. 24. John 4. 49.

There are divers aggravations of this sin.

1. Other sins deserve damnation, but this formally opposeth the way of salvation. Some say only unbelief damns a man, which is not true in a rigid sense, for every sin damns a man unrepented of, but only unbelief is more opposite to the way of curing than other sins.

2. It is opposite to the chiefest grace faith, Illud est optimum cujus privatio est pessima: The Scripture honours faith, giving remission of sins, the righteousnesse of Christ, and salvation it self to it.

3. It dishonours God and Christ, and the holy Ghost; it is the glory of Gods love that he becomes thy God, though he so great and thou so vile, this is the honour of Christ to thee, A Son is born, a Child is given; God shews the riches of his free-grace here, thou grudgest him the honour to be the pardoner of thy sins.

4. It is most rooted in us; hence the Lord so often checks his disciples for their unbelief; and faith is called The work of God in a speciall manner, because of the difficulty of it, and the contrariety of our natures. Hence Comfort you, comfort you, again and again, because the heart of man terrified for sin, doth utterly refuse all true comfort in a right way.

5. It hath more fair pretences for it, more arguments than any other sin; that is a dangerous sin which comes upon us as a duty, I am unworthy.

6. It puts the lie upon God, John 1. 5, 10. God saith he will be thy God, Christ saith he will put away thy sins, thou saiest he will not.

7. The devil most tempts a godly man to this sin, as the incestuous person, the devil had almost tempted him to final despair, as he would hold the prophane man in security, so the penitent sinner in irksome unbelief.

8. It hath the most terrible and sad effects, it breeds daily unsettlednesse and tossings of heart, therefore doubting and uncertainty is opposed to faith, at last it will breed secret impatience and grudging against God, and in the end open hatred of him.

The children of God should

1. Be humbled for their staggering through unbelief, as David, Psalm 73. 13. compared with vers. 22. and Psalm 77. 8. compared with the 10. it is because they look too much to the second causes, as David to Saul.

2. They should consider that the choicest mercies have come without likelihood, as to the people of Israel in Egypt, to David, Joseph.

3. Their staggering will not help them, will not procure the mercy, nor keep off the misery.

4. Consider how strong Abraham was in the faith, and how this honours God, Rom. 4. 20. See the 11th of the Hebrews.

There are three cases in which the people of God may expect a mercy, though there be no likelihood of it.

1. When God stirs up their hearts much to pray for it, and their hearts are inlarged in the duty, 1 Sam. 1. 10.

Omne peccatum formaliter consistit in aversione à Deo, unde tanto aliquod peccatum est, gravius, quanto per ipsum homo magis à Deo separatur. Per infidelitatem autem maximè homo à Deo elongatur. Aquin. 2ª, 2æ. Quæst. 10. Artic. 3. Infidelium quidam sunt, qui nunquam susceperunt fidem, sicut Gentiles & Judæi, & tales nullo modo sunt ad fidem compellendi, ut ipsi credant, quia credere voluntatis est; sunt tamen compellendi à fidelibus, si adsit facultas, ut fidem non impediant, vel blasphemiis, vel malis persuasionibus, vel etiam apertis persecutionibus. Aquin. ibid. Artic. 8.

2. When

2. When they often think of ſome of Gods Attributes, as Abraham did on Gods power, Sarah on his faithfulneſs, Heb. 11. 11.

3. When there are ſome dawnings of that mercy, though all be clouded again, as that was a dawning to David, when they cried, Saul hath kild his thouſand, and David his ten thouſand. 2. When David found Saul in the cave and did cut off the lap of his garment, 1 Sam. 24. 20.

How to get out of unbelief.

1. Be ſenſible of it.
2. Earneſtly beg faith.

Unkindneſſe.

Unkindueſſe is a fault.

This is contrary to a plain precept, Put on kindneſſe; and Be kindly affected one toward another.

Reaſons:

1. It ſprings from bad cauſes, ſome habitual diſtempers of ſelf-conceit, pride, malice, or ill education, and a kind of teſty and pettiſh temper, or ſome preſent paſſion of anger, grief or fear, which withdraws the mind from the conſideration of that which is comely and convenient.

2. The fruits of it are evil. It diſcontenteth and offendeth thoſe to whom it is ſhewed.

1. We muſt conſider of our ſlips in this kind, and be humbled for them.

2. Let us learn to mend this fault, and to be plentifully conſtant in the practiſe of the contrary duty, even to be kind, affable, and gentle in our whole carriage, and at all times to all men, ſo far as juſt occaſion offers it ſelf, and not to give over our ſelves ſo far to any paſſion either of grief or anger, as not to exerciſe this virtue.

Unprofitableneſſe.

See Iſaiah 27. 11. and 28. 13. Jer. 4. 22. Luke 13. 34. Iſaiah 53. 1. Nehem. 9. 30.

Reaſons of it:

1. Negligence, Mat. 22. 5. Acts 24. 25.
2. Inordinate cares and affections, Mat. 13. 22.
3. A ſpirit of willfulneſſe, Pſalm 85. 2. Prov. 1. 32. Ezek. 3. 7. voluntas tua infernus tuus.
4. From the righteous jugdment of God, Iſaiah 28. 13. Ezek. 24. 13.
5. From Satan, he blinds men, 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Unſetledneſſe.

Some are unſtedfaſt in their judgments, and unſetled in their practiſes.

See Gen. 49. 4. James 1. 8. The people changed four times in twelve years, in Henry the eighths time, they were Papiſts; in King Edward the ſixths time, they turned Proteſtants; in Queen Maries time, they turned Papiſts; again, in Queen Elizabeths time, they became Proteſtants. My Lord Paulet being asked, why he altered his Religion ſo often in the Reign of ſeverall Princes, he anſwered, Ex ſalice non ex quercu natus ſum. See Mr Fox of Dr Pern.

Facta eſt fides temporum potius quam Evangeliorum, annuoi atque menſtruos Deo fides decernimus. Hil. ad Conſtantium Auguſtum. Eccebolius Conſtantij tempore præ ſe ferebat magnum zelum Religionis Chriſtianæ, ſub Juliano autem acrem in Paganiſmo ſe oſtendit. At Rex cognito hoc facto eum quem antea tantopere dilexerat confeſtim capite multari juſſit, dicens. Si Deo fidem non ſervaſti, quomodo homini ſinceram conſcientiam ſervabis? Vedel. de prudentia vet. Eccleſ. l. 2. c. 4.

Such Christians as are unstable are easily seduced, 2 Tim. 3. 6. 2 Peter 2. 14. & 3. 16.

One Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria was nicknamed Euripus because of his ebbing and flowing.

One sort of Sectaries there is which will not ingage to hold any thing, but are known by believing nothing; these passe now under the name of Seekers.

The usual way in these daies is to play the Scepticks, and question almost every thing in Religion, and hold nothing, or else to place Religion in some new opinion. Spiritus Sanctus non est scepticus, Luther.

Unstedfast Christians are rotten-hearted, Psalm 78. 36, 37. and will never hold out in time of danger, They are ready to run into any errour, 2 Peter 1. 16. 2 Peter 2. 14.

Rivet. Discus. Grot. Dialys. Sect. 8. p. 262. taxeth Grotius of great inconstancy.

Causabone Epist. 513. to Scaliger, saith thus of Lipsius, Omnino magnam literæ jacturam in eo fecerunt, majorem tamen facturæ, si quam verbis docuit constantiam, vita exhibuisset.

We should labour to be stedfast,

1. In all the truths of the Gospel in opposition to errour.
2. In the true worship of God, in opposition to superstition.
3. In the practise of piety against sin and iniquity.

See Mr Bridge on 1 Pet. 5. 10. The Good and means of establishment.

A Christian that is constant in the faith, is Gods house, Heb. 3. 6. 1. God highly honours this grace of constancy, Rev. 2. 13. 2. Will highly reward it, Mat. 10. 32.

The happinesse of the Saints in Heaven is, that they are confirmed in good, and the misery of the damned in hell is, that they are obfirmed in evill.

Such unstable christians should be carefull to wait on the Ordinances, the Ministry, Eph. 4. 14. Pray to God to stablish them, see 1 Thes. 3. ult. & 2 Thes. 2. ult. and frequent the company of setled and stablished Christians, and take heed of seducers, Matth. 24. 24.

Unthankfullnesse.

Unthankfulnesse to God or man is a great sin. To God, an unreasonable and unjust sin.

It is contrary to plain precepts, Col. 3. Be ye thankefull; and in respect of God he saith, In all things give thanks.

The nine Lepers are secretly taxed by our Saviour for not returning to give thanks unto him, when he had delivered them from that foul and infamous disease of the leprosie: The Apostle also taxeth the Gentiles for it, saying, That they glorified not God as God, neither were they thankfull. This was blamed in Hezekiah, that he rendred not according to the benefit received, was not thankfull enough.

Reasons. 1. It springeth from evil causes, either from the strength of pride and self-conceit, in that a man thinketh himself worthy of all that which is done for him and more, and conceiveth that all should serve his turn, or from notable folly and unreasonableneſse, that he wanteth wit to consider of his own need of benefits, or at least from some sudden and vehement passion and distemper.

2. The effects of it are also naught, it offendeth men, it causeth them to repent of their labour, cost, love; and if it be practised toward God it offendeth him also, and hindereth him from bestowing benefits.

A people are unthankfull under Gods mercies.

1. When they are insensible of their own unworthinesse and vileneſse.
2. When they attribute them not to Gods goodneſse, but to the instrument, fortune, fate, constellation, their own wisdome, Hos. 2. 8. when they take them not a new from him daily.
3. When they take them in the lump, and not every mercy in pieces.
4. When they use them in the Devils service, grow worse by them, Hos. 2. 8.

5. When

5. When they slight and neglect spiritual mercies.

Let us blame our selves and be humbled for our unthankfulnesse in defrauding God or men of their due praises and acknowledgment for mercies received; unthankfulnesse to God shews great blindnesse of mind, great want of humility in the consideration of our own unworthinesse and want of faith in Gods providence, let us be humbled for it, and crave pardon of it.

2. Let us be careful to reform it, and be constant in the contrary duty.

Usury.

Usury (say some) is a lending for gain. In respect of the interest to be received over and above the principal, for the meer use, it's called usury. Usury (saith Mr Stubbes in his Motive to good works, Section 4.) is any thing over and above the principal which was lent, be it never so little, either in money, corn, grasse, grounds, lands, meat, drink, cloathes, or any thing else whatsoever.

One describes it thus, Usury is when a man makes a gain of lending, and binds the party borrowing without consideration of his gains or losses to repay the principal with advantage. It is hard to define some vices, as Heresie, Sacriledge, and also Usury.

It is matcht with theft, Ezek. 18. 13. with adultery, vers. 10. and with violence, vers. 11. It is condemned there amongst the great transgressions of the moral Law, therefore that Law, Levit. 25. 36. is not Judicial, as some say, but Moral, see Exod. 22. 25. & Deut. 23. 19. Psal. 15. 5.

See Dr Willet on Exod. 22. Quæst. 44. That Usury is simply unlawfull, yet all gain by the loane of mony (saith he) is not unlawfull, see his quæst. 47. See him also on Levit. 25. page 625, 626, 629.

Usura dicitur, quasi usu æris, id est, usus æris, & est commodum certum quod propter usum rei mutuatæ recipitur. Cookes 5th Report, Claytons Case.

To borrow a thing on usury is to covenant with the lender to return him not only the thing lent in the full quantity of it, but something over and above only in new and recompence of the lending of it; which is unlawfull, saith Mr Elton on the eighth Commandment, and he proves it by Jer. 15. 10. and answers there the chief objections brought for usury of any kind.

St Francis Bacon [c] cals it the bastard and barren imployment of money, and the bastard use of money.

[c] Henry the 7th p. 59. & 66.

Rivetus in Catholico orthodoxo, Tractatu quarto, quæst. 15. Salmasius de Usuris, c. 4. and Zanchy on Ephes. 4. and Mr Perkins on 8th Command. and Dr Ames on Psal. 15. and de Consc. l. 5. c. 44. and Dr Hall in his Cases of Consc. seem to allow of it in some cases.

Yet Dr Hall in his Practicall cases of Conscience saith, All usury which is an absolute contract for the meer loan of mony is unlawfull, both by law natural and positive, both divine and humane.

A Councell hath defined that to say Usury is not a sin, is no better than Heresie.

There is not a toleration of usury by that Act Eliz. 13. c. 8. but a limitation of it; the Title of it is An Act against Usury, and it calleth it a detestable sin.

Chap. XXV.

Of Witchcraft.

See Doctor Willet on Exod. 20. 18. That Witches ought to die. Never did any truſt in the devil, but he deceived them, even for the baſe things of this life, witneſs all Witches (his moſt devoted and profeſſed ſervants) if ever he made any one of them wealthy: all ages are not able to ſhew one.

Perkins on Heb. 11. The Hebrew word Exod. 22. 18. ſignifies a woman Witch, as Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael de creatione and others have obſerved; which ſhews 1. That women are moſt prone to witchcraft. 2. That though the Witch be a weak woman, yet ſhe muſt die without mercy.

Witchcraft is a great ſin, 1 Chron. 10. 13, 14. God would not have Witches to live, therefore he would not have others to uſe their art and counſell, Deut. 18. 10, 11. he forbids all to conſult with familiar ſpirits, and more plainly, Levit. 19. 31. ſee 20. 6.

Reaſons:

1. The cauſe which moveth any to ſeek unto them, is diſtruſt in God, or impatience under Gods hand, or ſome inordinate deſire of knowing or doing things which the Lord allows not to know or do, things ſecret and ſtrange.

2. The perſons ſought to are in league with the Devil, and ſo are an abomination to God, Deut. 18. 11.

3. The effect of ſeeking unto them is dangerous, it works confidence in them, and ſo in Satan whoſe vaſſals they are, and withdraws the heart from God.

Bodin lib. 4. Dæmon. proveth by many examples and confeſſions of Witches, that Witchcraft hath no power upon the Regenerate, or upon Magiſtrates, who execute the Laws againſt them; which is fully confirmed by King James, Dæmonol. l. 2. c. 6.

See Bp Carletons Examinat. of Sr Chriſt. Heyd. Book. c. 5.

Saul was convinced of the evil of Witchcraft, his zeal ran out againſt Witches, yet after he himſelf went to a Witch.

The Saxons puniſhed this crime with baniſhment, as unworthy of their ſociety, that would communicate with Devils. Bacons uniform Governm. of England, part 1, chap. 40.

Gaule hath written Select Caſes of Conſcience touching Witches and Witchcraft.

Thomas Cooper hath alſo written the myſtery of Witchcraft, and cals Popery the Nurſe of it.

Roberts and Mr Perkins have written of Witchcraft.

Gyfford hath written of the ſubtile practices of Devils by Witches and Sorcerers, and a Dialogue concerning Witches and Witchcrafts. To which is annexed, The Arraignment and Execution of the Witches of Warboyſe; a rare Piece, both for its ſtrangeneſſe and ſcarceneſſe.

Since the death of the Witches, not any one of the five daughters of Mr Robert Throckmorton (all which before were ſorely handled) had any fit at all, but were in as perfect health, as ever from their birth.

See the Book ſtiled, The Perfect Diſcovery of Witches.

Semertus gives theſe reaſons why women are more inclinable to this ſinne than men. 1. Becauſe they are of weaker judgment, and therefore more eaſily deceived by Satan. 2. They are deſirous of revenge, and therefore old women if they hate any are ready to uſe all means to hurt them, Practic. Med. l. 6. part. 9. c. 5. Aliquoties Eugenbagio uxor fuerat conqueſta butyrum ſibi è vaſe, in quo liquatur veneficio ſuripi. Itaque ipſe in Contention diaboli, in vas illud alvum dejecit, additis hiſce: Egregium verò te angelum præſtat, qui amaſiæ tuæ, veneficæ familaris, en tibi, hoc offertuæ veneficæ. Fallum deinde, ut nihil ſuerit ablatum Mejo. Ad. in ejus vitâ.

Chap. XXVI.

A Diatribe of Errour and Hereſie.

Some ſay, there be two main defects of wit, Errour and Ignorance, to which all others are reduced; by ignorance we know not things neceſſary, by errour we know them falſly. Ignorance is a privation, errour a poſitive act. From Ignorance came vice, from errour, hereſie. Burtons Preface to his Melancholy.

Errour is to judge otherwiſe than the thing is, taking truth for falſhood, or falſhood for truth.

Errour in judgement is worſe than in practice; then the conſcience takes part with ſin, and a man thinks he ought to do what he doth.

Therefore the Authour of the elegant Diſcourſe touching the Peace and Concord of the Church, Chap. 5. is far wide, when he ſaith, That nothing but diſobedience and unbelief exclude a man from eternal ſalvation. The Apoſtle mentions Hereſie among the works of the fleſh, Gal. 5.20. and ſtyles them damnable Hereſies, 2 Pet.2. 1. Omnis Hæreſis pœna, & exterminatione digna eſt; præcipuè illa, quæ principia Religionis quæ in civitate colitur & exercetur, evertunt. Salmaſii ad Miltonum Reſp.

Every errour is a plot of the Devil to ſuppreſſe ſome truth. In the day thou eateſt thereof thou ſhalt die the death, ſaid God to our firſt Parents; the Devil told them, They ſhould not ſurely die. That Doctrine of Arius was vented, to undermine that great truth of Chriſts God-head: That of the Pelagians to overthrow the Doctrine of Free-grace: That of the Antinomians in teaching believers cannot ſinne, to overthrow that truth of the Goſpel, that we muſt mortifie ſinne.

The whole body of Antichriſtian Doctrine is a lie, 2 Theſſ. 2. 11. Papatus eſt mendaciorum officina. The chief lie is that aſſertion, That the Pope when he is in the Chair, cannot erre, is infallible.

In Gregory Nazianzens dayes there were ſix hundred errours in the Church. Dr Sclater on 1 Cor. 11.18,19.

It was well concluded in the 39. Seſſion of the Councel of Conſtance, That every tenth year at the fartheſt, there ſhould be a general Councel held to reform ſuch errors in the Church, as probably in that time would ariſe.

Errour is infectious and ſpreading:

1. In reſpect of the party himſelf, it ſpreads all over him; the underſtanding, *Levit.*13.44. the will and affections, 2 Tim. 2. 17,18.

2. It ſpreads to others.

This is the moſt remarkable evil our Saviour takes notice of *Matth.*24. and that three times, verſes 5,11,24.

All the primitive Fathers ſpend moſt of their painfull writings againſt hereſies and errours.

All the Primitive Churches to whom the Apoſtles wrote Epiſtles, are expreſly warned, either poſitively to ſtand faſt in the truth, to hold faſt their profeſſion, or negatively to beware of, and to avoid falſe teachers, and not to be carried about with divers and ſtrange Doctrines. See Mr *Gilleſpies Miſcel. chap.*11. & 12.

Zanchy * mentions three cauſes of all errours:

The firſt and principal, not ſo much our natural blindneſſe in divine things, as the depravation of mans judgement, 1 *Cor.*2.14.

* De tribus Elohim *pars altera, l.*1.*c.*1. Sicut reliqua omnia mala, ſic etiam omnes hæreſes in mundo excitantur & foventur auctore quidem Satana, omnis mendacii parente. Id.ibid. A triplici fonte omnes errores videntur profluere. Seducentium aſtutia, ſedulitate, impudentia. Seductorum ignorantia, impietate, Paſtorum deſidia & ſupina oſcitantia. D. Hickmanni Concio. De Hæreſ. orig.

Secondly,

Secondly, Ignorance of the holy Scriptures, *Matth.*22.29.

Thirdly, An evil conſcience, 1 Tim. 1.19.

Mr Wills on 2 *Tim.*3.1. *pag.*253, &c. gives ſome marks and characters of erroneous perſons.

Vortius delivers Media & remedia contra hæreſes, good remedies againſt errour and hereſie. See Diſputat. Theol. parte tertia, De Errore & Hæreſi, Pars octava.

Preſervatives from errour:

1. Have a care to be eſtabliſhed in the truths of God, 2 Pet. 1.12. ſpecially the main truths of Religion, Corrupt Teachers beguile unſtable ſouls.

2. Get experimental knowledge, *Epheſ.*3.1. 2 *Pet.*3. two laſt verſes, and mourn to ſee the truths of Chriſt corrupted.

3. Love not any ſinne, 1 Tim. 1.19. 2 Tim. 3.6. Sinne makes way for errour.

1. Diſpoſitivè, Heb.13 9.

2. Judicialiter, 2 Theſſ. 2.11.

4. Try the Spirits, 1 John 4.1. Every man pretends to ſpeak by the ſpirit; bring their Doctrine to the Rule, try to what end the Doctrine tends, whether to exalt God and abaſe man, Matth. 7.15,16. or to ſet up the dark wiſdome and proud will of man, as merits, Free-will, Univerſal Redemption, the denying of Gods Decrees and Perſeverance, Sub laudibus naturæ latent inimici gratiæ. Auguſt.

5. Beware of communion with falſe teachers, Rom. 16.17. Titus 3.10. 2 epiſt. of *John v.*10.

6. Be conſtant in reading and hearing the word of God, Heb. 4.11, 12, 13, 14. 2 *Tim.*3.13.

Hereſie.

The word Hereſie and Heretick were in the Primitive Church, not alwayes of ſo ill a ſound as theſe later Ages have made them. Sr Roger Twyſdens Vindication of the Church of England, ch.8.

The word Hereſie is uſed in Scripture indifferently, in a good ſenſe for a Sect or Diviſion of opinion, and men following it; or ſometimes in a bad ſenſe, for a falſe opinion ſignally condemned. No Hereſies are noted ſignanter in the Scripture, but ſuch as are great errours practical in materia pietatis, ſuch whoſe Doctrines taught impiety, or ſuch who denied the coming of Chriſt directly, or by conſequence, prime and immediate. Dr Taylors Liberty of Prophecying, Sect. 11. See more there.

As forbidding to marry, and the hereſie of the Nicolaitans.

Hereſie is a choſen opinion contrary to the grounds of Chriſtian faith, and obſtinately maintained by ſome that profeſſe Chriſtianity; and therefore Hereticks muſt not be Atheiſts, carnal Chriſtians, Infidels, Turks or Jews, nor weak minded Chriſtians.

Hæreticus eſt, ut mea refert: opinio, qui alicujus temporalis commodi, & maximè gloriæ, principatuſque ſui gratia, falſas ac novas opiniones, vel gignit, vel ſequitur. Auguſt. de utilitate credendi. Hæreſis juxta nominis veram ſignificationem electio dicitur, quòd ſcilicet eam unuſquiſque eligat diſciplinam, quam putat eſſe meliorem: venitque à verbo Græco αἱρεῖσθαι, quod Latine ſonat eligo. Inde Philoſophorum ſecta aut opiniones, hæreſes appellatæ ſunt. Hæreſis eſt dogma falſum fidei orthodoxæ repugnans. Alphonſus De Caſtro adverſus Hæreſes. lib. 1. cap. 1.

The Lawyers define it, Pertinacem erroris in doctrinæ Chriſtianæ articulo defenſionem.

Some ſay, Hereſies have declared themſelves, not ſo much from the matter, whether fundamental or not, as from the perverſe manner of holding an opinion againſt any ones conſcience, being lawfully convicted of the ſame.

The great Hereſie that troubled the Apoſtles, was the Doctrine of the neceſſity of keeping the Law of Moſes, the neceſſity of Circumciſion, againſt which Doctrine they were therefore very zealous, becauſe it overthrew the very end of Chriſts coming.

Idolatry

Idolatry was the prevailing sin of the Old Testament, and Heresie of the New, saith Cunæus.

Heresie is a crime consisting in misbelieving some Article of the Faith. Schisme consists in dissolving the unity of the Church. Mr Thorndikes Principles of Christian Faith, ch. 25. See more there.

Heresie is contrary to faith, Schism to charity. Aquinas and others.

Heresie opposeth the truth of a Church, Schism the peace of it. See Mr Vines on 1 Pet. 2. 1. Schisma de cæremoniarum, & rituum Ecclesia observatione nascitur, hæresis de doctrina. Danæi Proleg. ad Comment. Aug. de Hæres.

It is a pertinacious defending of any thing which overthrows the Fundamental Doctrine of Faith contained in the word of God: an obstinate errour against the foundation. Dr Halls Case of Consc. 5th Case.

The Scripture calleth masters of impious Sects, Men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith, given over to strong delusions, to the belief of a lie, false Apostles, false Prophets, men already condemned, and that by themselves, Antichrists, enemies of God.

For Heresies, among the Ancients Epiphanius; Austin (Tomo 6to. De Hæresibus ad quod-vult-Deum.) and Philastrius wrote professedly, of which two, see Austins Epistle, Quod-vult-Deo & Præfat.

Among the Neotericks, Prateolus[a] is most full and methodical, by reason of that alphabetical order, not of things (as Alphonsus de Castro) but of persons which he observeth.

Præter veteres illos Irenæum, Augustinum, Philastrium, Damascenum, Tertullianum, Clementem Alexandrinum, Hieronymum, qui aut de Hæresibus nominatim scripserunt, aut earum in libris suis utcunque meminerunt; recentiores aliquot eodem in argumento summa cum laude versatos memineram. Imprimis autem Gabrielem Patreolum, atque illustrissimum magnorum Annalium Conditorem. Quorum ille Hæreseon omnium luculentissimum Catalogum literato ordine contexuit: Hic in Annalibus suo quamque tempore consignatam reliquit: uterque uno in conspectu qua apud veteres illos dispersa erant, ac dissipata, proposuit. Petav. Præfat. ad animadvers. in Epiphanium. [a] He reckons up five hundred and twenty heresies.

Epiphanius reckons eighty Heresies, he and Philastrius, and Austin also, put some in among Hereticks, which did not deserve it. Many are reckoned Hereticks for opinions in matters disputable.

Austin reckons up fifty seven capital heresies.

Voetius in his third part of Select Theolog. Disputat. propounding this Question, An omnes sint hæreses, quæ tales in Catalogis hæresium aut alibi dicuntur? Answers negatively, he saith, That opinion of Arius about the equality of a Bishop and Presbyter, is unfitly numbered among heresies by some of the Ancients.

Virgilius was condemned of heresie, for saying, there were Antipodes.

Though Augustine and Epiphanius accounted Arius an Heretick, for that and other opinions, yet as Dr Whitaker saith (in his Answer to Campians tenth reason) few of the ancient Fathers (besides them) did so and therein, (he saith) Hierome was of his mind. See Mr Cranwell of this point. Quod Epiphanius inter hæreses hanc Episcoporum dejectionem annumerasset, erat privati hominis sententia, nec mala; nam etiam Augustinus ei subscripsit; non erat tamen Ecclesiæ publica definitio. Marcus Anton. *de Dom. Irenæus wrote only against some heresies. Vincentius Lirinensis gives directions how to beware of Hereticks.

Wise Irenæus soberly acute,
The Valentinians madnesse did refute.

Dr Holyday his Survey of the world, Book 10.

Philastrius reckons it a Heresie, that assertion, that there are fixed stars in the Heavens. Non privata doctorum sententia, sed publica Ecclesiæ definitio facit rem de fide, & damnat hæresim.

Heresies are distinguished either by the Author, as Arians, Manichees, Pelagians, so Epiphanius and Austin distinguish them. By the time, before Christ, in his time, or after him. Irenæus and Tertullian handled them according to the series of time; Philastrius numbers eight and twenty Heresies before Christ, and an hundred twenty eight after him.

Hereſies in the Eaſtern Churches made way for Mahumetaniſm.

The firſt great Hereticks that were, ſtruck all at the diſparagement of God, and their Hereſies were againſt the Trinity of Perſons, or againſt the Divinity of Chriſt, or againſt the proceeding of the holy Ghoſt; ſomething that concerned God. Dr Arrowſmith on John 1.13.

Mos eſt eorum qui hæreſin pariunt, ita veritatis confeſſionem præ ſe ferre, ut nullo modo à verborum ambiguitate diſcedant, quam diſcipulis ſuis exponere poſſint ſenſu planè contrario veritati. Forbeſ. Inſtruct. Hiſtorico-Theol. l. 8. c. 27.

Hereticks either at their firſt entrance totally forbear the deliverïng of errours, or elſe they deliver them ſo darkly and ambiguouſly, as that they may find ſubterfuges and evaſions, whenſoever they are charged with them.

Jerom and Auſtin complain of Pelagius this way. Auſtin was ſometime almoſt well perſwaded concerning Pelagius, ſo ſeemingly orthodox were his expreſſions about grace.

Errour and Hereſie waiteth upon the Churches outward proſperous condition; and no ſooner is ſhe freed from open perſecution, but the Devil waiteth on her to ſow theſe tares. The Church was ſcarce freed from the ten perſecutions, when the hereſie of Arius and other diviſions, ſet vehemently upon the Church. When the Goſpel brake forth in Germany, flouds of Anabaptiſts, Libertines, Antinomians followed it.

Hereſies are to be judged by the Scripture, by the Apoſtles, Nicene and Athanaſian Creeds.

He is an Heretick who denieth the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith. Hereſie is directly oppoſed to faith, and faith being compleated in the Articles of the Chriſtian Creed, it cannot be hereſie, unleſſe it be a contradicting of one of thoſe Articles in the words, or in the ſenſe. Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, lib. 2. cap. 3.

In the Apoſtles Creed, Et perſonarum trium, hoc eſt Trinitatis liquida confeſſio, & verbi ac Filii Dei incarnatio continetur, quod utrumque Sociniani abnegant. Petav. De Incarnat. l. 16. c. 11.

The Socinians would fain be called and received as Chriſtians, becauſe they receive and imbrace the Apoſtles Creed, and yet they deny the Divinity of Jeſus Chriſt, his ſatisfaction to Divine Juſtice for the ſins of his people; they deny the holy Ghoſt to be a Perſon, or elſe they make him to be but a finite created Perſon. Mr Hickmans Laudenſium Apoſtaſia.

He ſaith there alſo, He that will obviate many heretical abominations now abroad in the world by any words in the Creed, ſhall but loſe his labour.

In caſu vel hæreſeos, vel ſchiſmatis, ſuccurrebatur Eccleſiæ per Concilia à Metropolitano, vel Patriarcha; vel denique Generalia æque ab Imperatore ritè concalabantur. Baſier De Antiqua Eccleſia Britannica Libertate.

Hereticks are condemned by the General Councels.

When the Devil raiſed up four groſſe abominable errours immediately after the Churches obtaining of peace, there was a general concurrence of the plurality of the viſible Church and Officers thereof, for diſcovering, confuting and condemning the ſame, and cenſuring the abettors thereof.

The

The first Heresie, viz. of Arius, which denied the Eternity of the God-head of the Sonne, was condemned by the first famous Councel at Nice, during the reign of Constantine the Great, and by his concurrence.

The second errour of the Macedonians, who denied the Personality of the holy Ghost, was condemned by the second general Councel, which was the first at Constantinople: This was convocated by Theodosius the great.

The third errour of Nestorius, who divided Christs Natures, and asserted him to have two Persons, as well as two Natures, was condemned by the third famous general Councel at Ephesus under Theodosius the second.

A fourth principal fundamental errour, was that of Eutyches, who contrarily to Nestorius, did confound the Natures of Christ, and assert him to have but one Nature, as he is but one Person. This was under Martianus the Emperour.

Some errours are inconsistent together, and opposite * one to another, wherewith yet in Gods secret justice the Devil may be permitted to assault and trouble the Church. By these diversities of errours the Devil maketh the truth more disputable unto the men of the world. The Papists give too much to works; the Antinomians too little. Durham on Revel. 7. vers. 1. Lect. 1. pag. 383, 384. See more there.

* Verum quis decretorum constantiam ab hæreticis requirat, aut pugnare secum ipsos incredibile censeat, qui ab veritate semel abstracti, novis in dies errorum ambagibus implicantur? Petavius De Incarnatione, lib. 11 cap. 1.

Satan hath used the ablest and most refined wits to devise and defend impious novelties against the orthodox faith, as Arius, Sabellius, Pelagius of old, and of late Servetus, Socinus, [a] Arminius.

Arius a subtil sophister, Nestorius of a quick wit and voluble tongue.

[a] Jacobus Arminius vir doctus & acri ingenio, sed qui parum tribuebat Antiquæ Ecclesiæ judicio, nihil Reformata. Epist. Dav. Dissertat. de Prædest. c. 4. Jacobus Arminius vir ingenii excitatioris, verum cui nihil arrideret, nisi quod aliqua novitatis specie se commendaret. Præfat. ad Eccles. Aff. Synod. Dordrecht.

Pelagius, Socinus, Arminius were never charged with want of sobriety in any thing, but their opinions, and I believe their opinions found much the better reception for their exemplary conversation. Dr Kendals Answer to Redemption Redeemed, c. 1.

It is noted in ancient History, That there was never almost an eminent Heresie or Heretick, but had some special women for the promovers thereof, who often took to themselves the name of Propheteses. Simon Magus had his Helena; Carpocrates his Marcellina; Apelles his Philomena; Montanus had two, whom he called Propheteses, to wit, Priscilla and Maximilla: and Augustine frequently mentioneth one Lucilla, who was a great ring-leader of the Donatists; so it is like the Nicolaitans had such a Propheteese, for furthering of their designe.

Mr Durhams Lect. 6. on Revel. 2. v. 18. to 30. Mrs. Hutchinson in New-England a great advancer of Familisme and Libertinisme.

Arius spread his nets by opportunity of his conversation with the Princes sister, and first he corrupted her, then he seduced the world. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, part. 2. Sect. 12.

We should labour to be stedfast and unmoveable:

1. In all Gospel-truths, Christ came to reveal them, John 1. 17. and should oppose all Gospel-errours. 2 Cor. 1. 21.

2. We should labour to be established in the truths called in question in this age; some think that some truths are opposed in every age, 2 Pet. 1. 7.

3. In all fundamental truths, that of the Resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. ult.

We should avoid the company of Hereticks and Seducers, Rom. 16. 17. 2 ep. Joh. 10. Errour is more catching than vice, and more spreading.

We should constantly oppose six kinds of errour:

1. All such errours, as are contrary to the light of nature, to deny that there is a God, yeeld not to the least doubt that tends to Atheism.

Amongſt all Hereſies, none are more dangerous nor infectious than ſuch as aſſail the ſacred Trinity, God bleſſed for ever.

2. All errours which are deſtructive to Chriſtian Religion. The Socinians deny the Deity of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt, the Satisfaction of Chriſt; the ancient Church would not call the Arians Chriſtians. To be a Chriſtian is to believe in Jeſus Chriſt. If he be a meer creature, it's a curſed thing to believe in him, to worſhip him with divine worſhip, to truſt in his bloud, to hope for ſalvation by him.

Mr Poole's Plea for the Godhead of the holy Ghoſt. Epiſt. to the Reader.

3. All ſuch errours as deſtroy the Proteſtant Religion.

4. All ſuch errours as deſtroy the power of godlineſſe:

The Nicholaitans, Carpocratians, Adamites, and ſeveral other Hereticks, did profeſſedly give themſelves over to a looſe and libidinous life. Community of wives was an Article of their Creed,

1. The Familiſts ſay, there is no Hell after death, no Heaven or Hell but within them.

2. The Ranters ſay the perfection of a man lies in ſinning, and not being troubled for it.

3. Thoſe which ſay they are above Goſpel-ordinances.

4. The Antinomians ſay, God doth not ſee ſinne in his own people; that he was no more diſpleaſed with David committing adultery, than worſhipping God in the Temple.

5. Antiſabbatarians: the fourth Commandment is the hedge between the two Tables. Exod. 16. 28. Tolle Sabbatum, & tolle Religionem.

and promiſcuous adulteries were their conſtant practice. Maſter Willes on 2 Tim. 3. 1. pag. 279. See more there.

5. All ſuch errours as deſtroy Magiſtracy and Miniſtry. He that would have every one a Magiſtrate, and that would have every one a Miniſter, would have no Magiſtrate nor Miniſter.

6. All thoſe errours which deſtroy the neceſſity, the efficacy, the freeneſſe and peculiarity of Goſpel-grace.

The Pelagians which deny original ſinne, take away the peculiarity of Goſpel-grace.

The Arminians the efficacy of it, when they ſay God perſwades a man to be converted, but doth not effectually call him; to put the ſtreſſe of mans ſalvation on free-will, not free-grace.

For the means which Satan makes uſe of to draw men to hereſie, ſee Dr Moſſoms firſt Sermon upon 1 Cor. 11. 19. pag. 6, 7, 8, 9. And for preſervatives againſt the infection of Hereſie; See his ſecond Sermon on 1 Corinth. 11. 19. pag. 19, 20.

See Euſebius in the life of Conſtantine, l. 3. c. 63.

Conſtantine the Emperour made an Edict touching the meetings of the Marcionites, Novatians, Valentinians, and other Hereticks of that age: In which it was enjoyned, That none of them ſhould from thence forth hold any Aſſemblies, and that for the more certain conforming unto his Decree, thoſe Churches or other houſes whatſoever they were, in which they uſed to hold their meetings ſhould be demoliſhed to the ground.

The Arians deny Chriſt to be God; the Seeker thruſts Chriſt out of his houſe, that is, the Church; the Familiſts make as many Chriſts as Saints; the Antiſabbatarians deſtroy the day of Chriſt; the Arminians the grace of Chriſt.

The Hereſie of the Anthropomorphites and the Euchytæ, and the Doctrine of the Chiliaſts, and Origen gelding himſelf, proceeded from the literal ſenſe of ſome texts of Scripture.

Etiamſi hæreſis aliqua in publico Concilio non ſit damnata: Ea tamen ex verbo Dei debet dijudicari atque refutari, juxta illud, 1 John 4. v. 1. Crocii Syntagma Theol. lib. 1. cap. 10.

It is moſt profitable for Hereſies to be known and diſcovered, which have riſen up in the Doctrine of Faith.

2. That

2. That the ſound Doctrine may be better examined and weighed, 1 Corinth. 11. 19.

3. That the wickedneſſe of thoſe opinions being diſcovered, the authours of them, and thoſe which fooliſhly have believed them, may be made more odious.

The multitude of errours (which now abound in our Nation) is computed by ſome to be an hundred and eighty. Perhaps many of thoſe enumerated (upon a ſerious ſcanniug) will not appear to be errours; yet the number of them is very great, and too many ignoran perſons (it's to be feared) are ſeduced daily, and drawn into errour.

Antinomians or Antinomiſts.

Antinomi, quaſi legem impugnantes, vel legi

So called, becauſe they hold that there is no uſe of the Law under the Goſpel.

Some ſay the firſt Author of this Sect was one John Agricola of Iſleby, who ſet forth forth his opinions 1535. But the first that appeared here, was John Eaton, Curate of S^t Katherines Colemans Parish in London. He writ the Book called The Hony-comb, wherein he endeavours to prove, That God does not, nor can not see any sin in justified people.

divina contrarij dicuntur. Prateolus.

Mr Ruterford in his Surveigh of the Spirit. Antich. part 1. chap. 1. saith, The Original of the Antinomians seems to be from the old Katharoi called Puritans, who being justified, affirmed they were perfect, and free from all sin, as the glorified in Heaven.

The name of the party was first taken up from their opposition to the Law; but in my judgement they do more dangerously oppose the Gospell or Law of Grace, than the pure Morall Law. Master Baxters Epistle Dedicatory to his Continuation of a Dissertation for Justification of Infidels. In his Inf. Church Memb. part. 2. Sect. 8. be saith, it is the most dangerous plausible errour that almost ever invaded the Church, insinuating into well meaning minds, under a false pretence of advancing Christ and free-grace.

They say,

First, That the Moral Law is of no use to believers, and not a rule of life.

1. Then there can be no duty nor sin, Rom. 4. 15. 1 John 3. 4. no duty without a rule, and every sin is a transgression of the Law.

2. It is a great priviledge to be under the Law as a Rule, Deut. 4. 8. Psalm 147. 20.

3. Then the Image of God would be blotted out, Heb. 8. 10. See Rom. 2. 13. & 3. 31. 1 Cor. 7. 19. against them.

Secondly, That God sees not sin in his people, nor afflicts them for sin.

They urge Numb. 23. 21. Isaiah 50. 20.

He doth not indeed impute their sins, nor lay their burden upon them: But

1. He sees the sins of his people to be sins, as well as those of other men, else it would argue a defect in his knowledg, to see things otherwise than they are. They are bound also to humble themselves for them; 1 Cor. 11. 31.

2. He so sees sin in his children, as to correct them for them, but not to satisfie his justice. It may stand with his everlasting love to chasten his children for sinne here. See Isaiah 54. 8. & 27. 8, 9. Levit. 26. 41.

3. They tell us that we must look at nothing in our selves, nor fetch comfort from it, and earnestly exclaime against the Preachers of the Gospel, for teaching men to look at any thing in themselves, and to take comfort from the evidence of their graces, and tell us, that we must look to Christ alone, and call all those Legal Preachers or Professors that be not of their mind in this. Mr Baxters Crucifying of the world, part. 2. Sect. 24. See more there.

Be in Christ, and sinne if you can.

That God sees sin in justified persons, see Dr Gouge on Heb. 4. 13. Sect. 78.

They say that a child of God ought not to ask pardon for sin, and it is blasphemy so to do. David askt forgivenesse Psalm 25. and 51.

The chief Leaders of the Antinomists in England were John Eaton, Tobie Crispe, John Saltmarsh. Mr Gataker, Rhutherford, Hinde, Ley, and Burgesse, have well opposed them.

Such as are against the keeping of any Sabbath, whether the Jewish Sabbath, or Christian Lords-day.

They say all dayes are alike to Christians.

The Sabbatarians held that the Jewish Sabbath was still to be kept by Christians.

Aniscripturists.

Aniscripturists will not have the Scripture to be judge in the Controversies of faith, Isaiah 8. 20. Nor a rule of their actions.

Antiscripturiani, totam Scripturam Sacram rejiciunt, dicentes eundem se spiritum cum Prophetis & Apostolis habere.

Quakers say, God never appointed the Church to be guided by Ink and Paper.

The written Word is of Divine Inspiration, 2 Tim. 3. 16. not only the matter, but the Writing. The Prophets and Apostles were guided by the Spirit in writing of it: is a surer rule than a voice from Heaven, 2 Pet. 1. 19, 20. Gal. 1. 8.

Idcirco omnes libros & eruditionem spernunt, conciones Ecclesiasticas rejiciunt, spiritu solo contenti. Lucæ de Iuda descriptio Orbis, &c.

Antitrinitarians.

An contra Sabellianos & Arianos, & hujusmodi Trinitatis hostes Catholica propugnari doctrina potuit, sine limata & exquisita quarundam rerum notitia; velut quid natura sit, quid hypostasis, persona, essentia, relatio, ac reliqua similia? Petav. Proleg. In opus Theolog. Dogm. c. 5.

Who deny the Trinity. See Dr Mores Explanation of The Grand Mystery of Godlinesse, l. 10. c. 6.

Petavius Dogm. Theol. Tom. 2. De Trinitate, c. 6. saith, Pluto was the Author of all the opinions against the Trinity.

Anthropomorphites.

Anthropomorphitæ primum exorti sunt in partibus Ægypti, tempore Theodosij majoris, qui cum Arcadio & Honorio filiis, tribus annis imperium tenuit & Syricij summi pontificis, Anno Domini 395. A sort of Hereticks, proceeding from one Audæus, by birth a Syrian, but living for the most part in Ægypt, who miserably mistaking many Texts of holy Scripture, conceived and taught that God was made of humane shape, and had the same members that men have.

They misinterpreted that place, Gen. 1. 26. See Porters God Incarnate, lib. 3. cap. 5.

Apollinaristæ or Apolinarians.

Apollinaristæ, vel Apollinariani dicti sunt, ab Apollinari viro Laodiceno, qui imperante Valentiniano Cæsare, & summum Romanæ Ecclesiæ pontificatum agente Damaso Hispano, circiter Annum Domini 377. insignis habebatur. Prateolus. Constat, omnes propemodum hæreses, quæ verum, & Catholicum Incarnationis dogma labefactare conata sunt, ex Apollinaris fonte fluxisse. Petavius De Incarnat. lib. 1. cap. 6.

Of whom Apollinaris junior, was the ringleader. See Socrates his Tripartit Historie, l. 5. c. 44.

He held,

1. That Christ in his Incarnation did assume a body without a soul.

Ex omnibus, præcipuum ejus fuisse decretum illud, ac sectæ caput videtur; animam in Christo propria carnisse mente, & hujus vicem supplevisse divinitatem verbi. Petav. De Incarnatione, l. 1. c. 6.

2. He brought that body with him from Heaven.

3. That sin is part of a mans essence.

This Heresie was condemned in the second Oecumenicall Councel celebrated at Constantinople, where it was determined, that Christ was compleat and perfect man.

They would not professe two Natures in Christ, because they feared, least either they should adore both, and so honour the creature equally with God, or honour only one, and leave out the other.

Apostolici.

They would have no possessions, but approved voluntary poverty.

Ariani.

Arius (ut inquit Philastrius) ab Ario Alexandriæ urbis Presbytero, auctor fuit hæresis Arianæ, quæ malè auspicatum ab auctore nomen adepta. Petav. De Trinitate l. 1. c. 7. Vide plura ibid.

The Hereſie of Arius, the greateſt that ever was in the Church; the labours, troubles, and conſtancy of Athanaſius againſt this Hereſie of greateſt note, and moſt glorious of any Confeſſor that ever the Chriſtian Church had before or ſince. Dr Rogers Proteſtants faith profeſſed in all ages, chap. 12. See Mr Durhams on Rev. 8. 5, 6, 7. Lect. 2d p. 420, 421.

They denied the equality of the Son with the Father, in reſpect of the divine nature, they alleadged for the confirmation of their errour, Prov. 8. 22. and Col. 1. 15. which places Athanaſius learnedly explained, and took off their Objections.

The firſt place is corruptly tranſlated created for poſſeſt and had; ſo Chriſt himſelf interprets it, John 17. 5. they urged alſo Marke 13. 32. Luke 2. ult. John 11. 34. Thence inferring, becauſe Chriſt was ignorant of the day of judgment, and many other things, as man, and as the Sonne of God, therefore he was not conſubſtantial to his Father. The Orthodox Fathers ſay, thoſe places are to be underſtood of Chriſt, in reſpect of his Humane, not Divine Nature.

The Orthodox Chriſtians uſed this Doxology, Glory be to the Father, and to the Sonne, and to the Holy Ghoſt.

The Arians ſaid, Glory be to the Father, by the Sonne, in the Spirit.

Epiphanius (though otherwiſe moſt diligent) erred (ſaith Petavius) in the deſcription of the Arian hereſie. He thought that Arius died before the Councel of Nice, in which he is refuted by the conſent of all Writers. He being alive was condemned by the Synod, and by Euſebius his help being reſtored after ſome years, he died at Conſtantinople; as Socrates, Ruffinus, Theodoret, Sozomen, & ante omnes Athanaſius relate. See John 10. 30. & 17. 23. & 14. 11.

When the Arians alleadged Joh. 17. 3. againſt the Divinity of Chriſt, inferring thence, that by the word alone, the Son was excluded from this true and ſoveraign deity. The Fathers anſwered, That it behoved to underſtand the excluſion ſignified by this Word, according to the purpoſe and ſubject of what there was ſpoke, which was only to exclude falſe Gods, and found out according to the opinion of Gentiles.

The Arian Hereticks (ſaith Zuinglius) continued 35. or 37. years, yet at laſt it was extinguiſhed.

Doctor Rogers his Proteſtant Faith profeſſed in all Ages, cap. 10.

Arminians.

So called from James Arminius Profeſſor of Divinity at Leyden in the Low Countries, whoſe name at firſt was Jacobus Hermanni, which he changed into Arminius, ſaith Hornbeek, Summa Controverſ. Relig. l. 8. De Remonſtrantibus. They are called alſo Remonſtrants, from a Remonſtrance offered by them to the States of Holland.

They

They revived the Hereſie of Pelagius, who lived in the dayes of the Emperours Arcadius and Honorius, and held that men by nature might fulfill the whole Law of God. They deny Predeſtination, by ſaying, that it is only the will of God to ſave them that believe and perſevere, and that there is no other decree of Election, contrary to Acts 13. 48. & Epheſ. 1. 4. Rom. 8. 30. They ſay, Election is of faith, not of perſons.

Dr Heylins Hiſtoria Quinq. Articularis, cap. 5. See his Animadverſion on the tenth book of the Church-Hiſtory of Britain.

Arminius dying in the year 1609. the heats betwixt his Scholars, and thoſe of the contrary perſwaſion were encreaſed. The breach between them growing wider and wider, each ſide thought fit to ſeek the countenance of the State, and they did accordingly; for in the year 1610. the followers of Arminius addreſſe their Remonſtrance, (containing the Antiquity of their Doctrines, and the ſubſtance of them) to the States of Holland, which was encountred preſently, by a contra-Remonſtrance, exhibited by the contrary Party: from hence the name of Remonſtrants, and contra-Remonſtrants, ſo frequent in their Books and Writings.

Vide Orationem Doctoris Kendall de Doctrina Neopelagiana.

The Neo-pelagian Doctrine is an enemy to Chriſtian faith, piety, comfort.

The Pelagians of old, and the Arminians of late, talke much of the Soveraignty, Virginity, and Liberty of mans Will; what ſhipwrack it alone, hath eſcaped in the fall of man, and of the ſufficiency of a moral ſwaſion, to mans converſion; as if God needed to do no more to ſave us, than the Devil to damn us: of all the faculties in the ſoul, thy will is the worſt.

There are five Points which they hold, to be ſeen in Dr Heylins Hiſtoria Quinqu. Articularis, par. 1. cap. 5.

Thoſe five Articles of the Remonſtrants do exalt mans freewill.

In the firſt Article, God is ſaid to have choſen them which would believe, obey and continue in faith and obedience.

In the ſecond, it is affirmed that Chriſt obtained reconciliation with God, and remiſſion of ſins for all and every one, if by faith they be able to receive theſe his benefits.

In the third and fourth Article, the efficacy of converſion depends upon mans will, ſo that it is efficacious to converſion if a man will, and inefficacious if he will not.

In the fifth Article, perſeverance in faith is aſcribed to mans will, which is derogatory from the Fathers free Election, the Sons Redemption, and the Holy Ghoſts Converſion.

Review of certamen Epiſtolare, by Theophilus Churchman, p. 100.

The Articles as they were at firſt compoſed, have ſomething in them againſt Arminianiſme, which is not to be found in them as now they are Printed. Thoſe of Ireland 1615. do oppoſe Arminianiſm, and Bp Uſher was the chief compoſer of them. They agree with thoſe of Lambeth 1595.

See Dr Heylins Appendix to his Eccleſia Reſtaurata of Free-will and Grace; And Mr Hamiltons Anſwer to Dr Pierſon about Reformation of the Doctrine of the Church of England.

None can come unto Chriſt, unleſſe it be given unto him, and unleſſe the Father draw him. And all men are not ſo drawn by the Father, that they may come unto the Son; neither is there ſuch a ſufficient meaſure of grace vouchſafed unto every man, whereby he is enabled to come unto everlaſting life.

Browniſme.

Robertus Brownus Cantabrigienſis in Theologia tyro, à quo novi ſectarij Browniſtæ dicti. Camd. Annal. par. 3. p. 347.

Robert Brown, the Father of the Browniſts, was the firſt that did ſeparate himſelf from our Reformed Church of England, and he ſaid, That we had not a Church, a true Church. He went into France, and being at Geneva, he ſaw the Sabbath much profaned, and the Wafer-cake given in the Sacrament inſtead of bread; whereupon he began to think better of the Church of England, and returning home, he became Paſtour of a place called a Church, a Village in Northamptonſhire.

graciously, effectually, and savingly present, can no more be denied the name of a true Chruch, than that man can be denied the name of a true man, who eateth, drinketh, walketh, speaketh, reasoneth, and performeth all the operations of sense, motion, and understanding; we may feel in our selves the power and efficacy of our Ministry and Sacraments.

Francis Johnson and Henry Ainsworth put forth a Confession, but afterwards there arose such a contention between them, that they excommunicated one another.

Carpocratians.

From Carpocrates, He taught (saith Eusebius, lib. 4. cap. 7.) that Christ was a meer man, born of Joseph and the Virgin Mary, after the manner of others.

2. That the world was not created by God, but by Angels.
3. He denied the Resurrection of the body.
4. He rejected all the Old Testament.

Carpocratiani seu Carpocratitæ, à Carpocrate quodam hæretico dicti sunt. Aug. & Prateolus. Carpocrates fuit principium Gnosticorum auctor, perinde ac Simon ille Samarites Magus, ut præter Iraneum, Epiphanium, & Theodoretum, Tertullianus affirmat, atque inter cætera Jesum ex Josephi & Mariæ conjugio cæterorum more progenitum asserit. *Petav. Cathariſts.

This name was challenged by themselves.

First, They held a State of perfection in this life, and boasted of themselves that they were pure, and gloried in their merits.

Secondly, They denied repentance to them, who after Baptism denied the faith through infirmity or fear of persecutions.

Thirdly, They condemned second marriages, and after Baptism, detested them as adultery it self, but in this they did not all agree.

Fourthly, They re-baptized those which after Baptism did slip or publickly offend: for they acknowledged no other means to reconcile man to God in the Church, but Baptism.

Cathari appellari voluerunt, id est, puri, propter munditiam, quam superbissimè & arrogantissimè jactabant; utpote qui sese dicerent sine peccato esse: Ideoq; omittebant illud orationis Dominicæ, Dimitte nobis debita nostra, eo quod nulla peccatorum venia opus haberent. Prateolus. Cathari idcirco dicti sunt, quòd se reliquis vita moribusque puriores esse jactarent. Danæus in Aug. de Hæres. Vide Aug. de Hæres.

Circumcellions.

So called from certain Celles where they lived, a cruel sort of Heretick.

Circumcellliones, genus hominum agreste & famosissimæ audaciæ; non solùm in alios immania facinora perpetrando, sed nec sibi insana feritate parcendo. Aug. de Hæres. Ad Quod-vult-Deum, c. 69.

Collyridians.

Worshipped the Virgin Mary, and offered Cakes to her, as the Jews did to the Queen of Heaven.

I am partly of opinion, that the Church of Rome is not willing to call the Collyridians Hereticks, for offering a Cake to the Virgin Mary, unless she also will run the hazard of the same sentence, for offering Candles to her. Dr Taylors Liberty of Prophesying, Sect. 2.

Collyridiani indè dicti sunt, quòd statâ quadam die anni, Collyridem Virgini Mariæ offerrent in sacrificium, illam ultra decorum glorificantes. Epiphanius.

Donatists from Donatus.

Donatista seu Donatiani à Donato quondam Cascnsio, qui contra Cecilianum bellum movit, primùm dicti sunt, vel ab alio Donato Carthaginis Episcopo qui tempore Constantij Imperatoris & Liberij papæ floruit, circa annum Dom. 358. Præcolas de Schismate Donatistarum. Vide Forbes. Instruct. Historico. Theol. lib. 14. cap. 4.

His Heresie was, that the Church of Christ was only in the South-part of the world, in Africa, and no where else, misapplying that Cant. 1. 7. and that true Baptism was only there.

See Dr Bramhals Replication to the Bishop of Chalcedon, c. 2. p. 80.

Mr Baxter (of Conversion, chap. 1. Sect. 14.) shews the original of the Donatists, Because a Bishop was but Ordained by one that had been a Sonne of a Traditor of the Bible, they separated from him, and from all the Church that held communion with him, for his sake.

Austin long contending with this pernicious Errour, at last overthrew it.

The Donatists were most desirous of death, for defending their Heresies.

Dr Cosins Scholastical History of the Canon of the Scripture, c. 7.

They were divided into divers Sects, of which the Circumcellions were one, a Sect more noted than the rest, and so called, from ranging up and down the Countrey where they lived (in Africk) and setting up their Cells abroad in the Fields every one, at first like Eremites by themselves, and afterwards taking in their women to Cohabite there among them. A sort of people, they were so furious, and full of mischief and violence, both to themselves and others, that they did not only set upon those who chanc'd at any time to pass by that way, and come within their reach, (making no conscience to murther them, if they found them not to be of their Party) but many times also they would lay violent hands upon their own persons, and either murder themselves, or threaten other persons with present death, if those persons would not do it for them, when they were in danger to be taken, and punished by the Law, which the secular Power had then made against them; this they called their Martyrdome, teaching and exhorting all their followers, rather to destroy themselves, or to kill one another, then to suffer any publick shame or punishment, as common Malefactors.

Ebionites.

Ebionitæ à quodam Ebione secundo sæculo orti sunt, circa annum Domini 80. Præcolus. Duplex Ebionitarum factio fuit. Nam alij merum ac simplicem hominem asserebant esse Jesum, atque à Joseph o Mariaque genitum. Alij è sancto Spiritu & Virgine susceptum ita fatebantur, ut Deum ac verbum esse ante exitisse antea negarent. Euseb. lib. 3. cap. 21. Origenes contra Celsum, Tom. 2. Petav. in Epiphan. de Hæres.

From Ebion the disciple of Cerinthus, Qui superiorum omnium hæresium venena collegit, saith Epiphanius.

1. They affirmed that Christ was a meer man, begot by natural generation.

John wrote the Gospel against Ebion, and declared Christs Divinity.

2. They joyned the Law and Jewish Rites, and Circumcision together with the Christian Profession.

They rejected all the Epistles of S[t] Paul, upon pretence, he was an enemy to the Law of Moses.

3. Of the four Gospels, they only received Matthew.

Symmachus, who turned the Bible into Greek, was once the Ring-leader of this Sect.

These Hereticks were the most ignorant of the Christian Religion, whence they are called by an Hebrew name Ebionim, that is, poor and indigent, because of their little knowledg of holy things. Faustus Socinus De auctoritate Scripturæ, c. 4. Irenæus l. 1. adversus hæres. c. 26. & Eusebius l. 3. Hist. Eccles. c. 27. have written fully of them.

Enthusiasts.

Enthuſiaſts.

I dare pronounce with a loud voice afore-hand, that if ever Chriſtianity be exterminated, it will be by Enthuſiaſme. Dr More's Preface to his Explanation of the grand myſtery of Godlineſſe. See his Book alſo Lib. 16. cap. 3. and his Enthuſiaſmus Triumphatus.

Enthuſiaſtæ Valentis Imperatoris & Damaſi ſummi Romanorum antiſtitis temporibus exorti ſunt, circiter annum Domini 380. Prateolus. Ementitus Enthuſiaſmus eſt, quando quis ſuis opinionibus, doctrinæ, aut factis extra ordinarium divini Spiritus pratendit & mentitur afflatum cœleſteſque revelationes. Cujuſmodi homines quovis tempore fuerunt varij, qui viſiones & ſomnia, allocutiones ſeu Angelicas, ſeu divinas, & revelationes cœleſtes jactarunt. Hornbeeck Summa Controverſ. Relig. l. 6. De Enthuſiaſ. & Libert. Vide plura ibid.

They allegorize the Scriptures into a meer moral or myſtical ſenſe.

They ſay, That all of the true Church have ſuch underſtanding of the myſteries of Godlineſſe, and that by immediate inſpiration and revelation, as there is no need of any Miniſtry. On this ground, they cry out againſt Schools of learning, Colledges, Univerſities, Arts, Tongues, and other means of attaining knowledg. From this proud conceit they are called Enthuſiaſts. Dr Gouge on Heb. 8. 10. Sect. 71.

The Enthuſiaſts, who pretend ſo much that Spirit which God never gave them, and upon this pretence boaſt themſelves to be ſpiritual men, judging all, and to be judged of none, as they uſe to abuſe the Scripture, are enemies to all Government, and their Doctrine tends to the diſſolution of all order Eccleſiaſtical and Civil. Lawſon againſt Hobbes Chap. 3.

He received the Goſpel by revelation.

Revelations properly are either prophetical, of things future, as the Revelation of John; or elſe Doctrinal, as the Revelation of Paul, and what God would have us believe and practiſe.

1. What ever Revelation leads you to believe or practiſe any thing contrary to the written word is a diabolical deluſion.

2. If it be beſides the Word, and cannot be made out of the written Word, it is a deluſion, Gal. 1. 8.

3. If it leade you to contemn the written Word, it is from the Devil.

Euchitæ, Meſſalians, or Orantes.

Hereticks who were wholly given to prayer, neglecting in compariſon of it all that which is moſt important in Chriſtian Religion to ſalvation, not excepting Baptiſm it ſelf.

Eutychians.

The Eutychians who confounded two Natures in Chriſt. So named from Eutyches, of whom ſee Dr Prideaux his Synopſis of Councels, ch. 1.

Eutychiani, vel Eutychetæ, ab Eutichete vel Eutychio Conſtantinopolitano abbate dicti ſunt, qui Theodoſii 2di Imperatoris, & Leonis hujus nominis primi Romanorum pontificis temporibus emerſerunt, circa annum Domini 443. Prateolus. Vide Petav. de Incarnat. l. 1. c. 13, 14, 15, 16.

Eutyches was not the firſt, but only the more famous Author of his Hereſie. Vide Althuſii Hiſtor. Eutychianam. c. 11.

Petavius ſaith, there are three hainous offences of the Eutychian hereſie:

1. That he denied, that the fleſh of Chriſt was taken from the Virgin.
2. He affirmed, before the Union there were two Natures.
3. He acknowledged only one Nature in Chriſt after the Union.

1. Poſt adunationem una tantum in Chriſto natura.
2. Corpus Chriſti de Cœlo deſcendit, non de ſacro Mariæ Virginis corpore aſſumtum. 3. Divinitas Chriſti paſſibilis eſt. Althuſ. Hiſt. Eutych. cap. 11. Sect. 4.

He ſaith, That no hereſie did ſpread more, and continued longer in the Eaſt, it being yet in Alexandria, Ægypt and Æthiopia. Si aliqua, certè hæc hæreſis Eutychiana longè lateque diffudit virus peſtilentiſſimum. Althuſ. Hiſt. Eutych. cap. 2. Sect. 3.

As there was never Hereſie that ſo grievouſly wounded the Church of God, as that of Eutyches (except perhaps Arianiſm) ſo was no part of the Church ſo deadly wounded by it as that of Ægypt. Purchas Pilgrim. 1. part. l. 1. c. 13.

Eutyches was condemned in the Oecumenical Counſel of Chalcedon, anno Domini 451. Vide Althuſii Hiſtor. Eutych. Sect. 11. c. 11.

The Eutychian Hereticks denied the Natures of Chriſt to be united in one Perſon, that is, they denied him to be both God and Man, ſaying, his Humanity was taken into his Divinity after his Aſcenſion.

The Fathers diſputing againſt them, ſay, The ſubſtances remain entire, though joyned in the Perſon.

Althuſius in his fifth and laſt Section of his Book before-quoted ſaith, The Papiſts and Calviniſts charge their Church with Eutychianiſme, and labours to vindicate the Lutherans from it. He ſaith, it was Eutyches his errour, to acknowledge onely one Nature in Chriſt. This is our Doctrine, we believe in Jeſus Chriſt the true Sonne of God, and the true Sonne of Mary; we believe that there are two Natures in Chriſt, and that they abide in him.

Familiſts.

The Authour of which Sect was one David George of Delph, after him one Henry Nicholas born in Amſterdam.

They ſay, Grace is Chriſt himſelf working in us; it is not we that repent, but Chriſt; they deny all habits of grace. See Rom. 8. 26. Jude v. 20. There is ſomething created in us, Pſalm 51. The ſeed remaining, 1 John 3. 9. called the new man, the new creature, the good treaſure, Matth. 12. 33. elſe our defects would be charged on the Spirit. At firſt converſion we were objects of grace, after we are inſtruments of grace.

The Familiſts deny:

1. The Humanity of Chriſt. A Seeker hath written well againſt them in a Book ſtiled, Hallelujah to the Son of David.

2. That the Scripture is a Rule of Faith, and our converſation. They talk much of the light within them; the Word and Spirit go together, Iſa. 59. two laſt verſ. Pſalm 119. 105. The Law without me, the Scripture. It is

1. A Rule, therefore called canonical.
2. A compleat Rule, 2 Tim. 3.
3. An unerring infallible Rule.

The Primitive Church was ſoon corrupted by Familiſts and Libertines, as the Epiſtles of Paul, James, Peter, John and Jude ſhew.

They dream of ſome dayes of the Spirit, wherein we ſhall have a greater light than is in the Scriptures; they fancy the time of the Law to be the dayes of the Father; the time of the Goſpel to be the dayes of the Sonne; and the latter end of the world to be Seculum Spiritus ſancti, as the Weigelians phraſe it. The holy Ghoſt was never more glorioufly poured out than at Chriſts aſcention, Acts 2. 17.

The Family of [a] Love affirm, That the Elect and Regenerate ſin not. But as long as original ſin is in them, they do and ſhall ſin.

Though the depth of the myſtery of Familiſme, and I doubt of Quakeriſme too, be that which every good Chriſtian ought from his heart to deteſt and abhor, namely, The ſlighting, nay, I may ſay, the utter rejecting of the Perſon of Chriſt, as to his Humane Nature, with all his Offices aſſigned to him by his Father; yet this is an Arcanum that is kept hid from their Novices. Dr Mores Preface to his Explanation of the Grand Myſtery of Godlineſſe.

He

He ſaith there alſo, Familiſme is no Sect at all, of Chriſtians, but a total Apoſtaſie from Chriſtianity. See his Book *l.6. c.*18,19.

Love is the badge and cognizance of all Chriſts faithfull members. It is the fulfilling of the Law, and hath filled almoſt every page of the Goſpel, and all the writings of the Apoſtles, *Gal.*5,6,13,14. In thoſe later verſes, this Law of Love is ſo carefully deſcribed, that the abuſe of this to Luſt and Libertiniſm is plainly excluded, againſt ſuch as talk ſo much of Love, and are but Libertines at the bottom. See 1 John 5. 2. & 4.10,11,20. *Epheſ.*4.31. Col. 3.12. 1 Pet. 1.22. 2 Pet. 1.5. 1 *Cor.*13.4,5,6,7,8.

Gnoſticks, or Knowers.

Illuminate men who gloried of a light within them.

*Irenæus l.*1. *adverſus hæreſes c.*24. makes Carpocrates to be the author or chief of them.

Gnoſtici propter exſellentiam ſcientiæ ſic ſe appellatos eſſe, vel appellari debuiſſe gloriantur.

They were called Borboritæ for their great filthineſſe which they were ſaid to exerciſe in their holy duties.

Cum ſint ſuperioribus omnibus vaniores atq; turpiores. Nonnulli eos Borboritas vocant, quaſi Cænoſos propter nimiam turpitudinem quam in ſuis myſteriis exercere dicuntur. Aug. *de Hæreſ. c.*6. Hæreticorum fax illa & ſentina. Montacut. Antidiat.

Tertullian publiſhed his Scorpiacum againſt them. It was their hereſie, that it was no matter how men lived, ſo they did but believe aright.

Which wicked Doctrine Tatianus a learned Chriſtian did ſo deteſt, that he fell into a quite contrary, Non eſt curandum quid quiſque credat, id tantum curandum eſt, quod quiſque faciat. And thence came the Sect Encratites: Both theſe hereſies ſprang from the too nice diſtinguiſhing the faith from the piety and good life of a Chriſtian: They are but one duty. Dr Taylors Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 2.

This was the ground of the Gnoſtick Hereſie, or rather Apoſtaſie, the fear of perſecutions.

Paul, Peter and Jude fore-told, that there ſhould ariſe a Sect of vile men, who ſhould be enemies to Religion and Government, and cauſe a great Apoſtaſie, which happened in the Sect of the Gnoſticks, which thoſe three Apoſtles and John notoriouſly and plainly do deſcribe.

Dr *Taylors Ductor Dubitantium. l.*1. *cap.*4.

Helvidians.

They were called Antidicomarianitæ, becauſe they oppoſed the perpetual Virginity of the Virgin Mary. For they affirmed, That ſhe had children by Joſeph her husband after the birth of Chriſt; and this they would prove from Mat. 1. ult. & John 2.12. & 7.3.

Helvidiani exorti ab Helvidio, ita Virginitati Mariæ contradicunt, ut eam poſt Chriſtum alios etiam Filios de viro ſuo Joſeph peperiſſe contendant: ſed mirum ni iſtos prætermiſſo Helvidii nomine, Antidicomarianitas Epiphanius appellavit. Aug. de Hæreſ. ad Quod-Vult-Deum, c. 84.

Herodians.

They were ſo called from Herod the King of the Jews; they thought him to be the Meſſiah.

Matth. 22.

Jovinians of Jovinianus.

He held, That they who have a full and perfect faith, when they are regenerate by Baptiſm, cannot ſin any more after Baptiſm.

Levellers.

Levellers.

Some would level mens

1. Perſons: They ſay under the Goſpel all men are equal, and there ought to be no diſtinction (ſay they) of Maſters and Servants, Superiours and Inferiours, Magiſtrates and Subjects.

The fifth Commandment ſhews a diſtinction. The Apoſtles in all their Epiſtles ſet down the diſtinction between Inferiours and Superiours, Magiſtrates and Subjects, and ſhew their duties.

Chriſtian Religion teacheth men to be good, but takes not away the diſtinction.

Object. Gal.3.28.

Anſw. There is no difference as to divine acceptation, but in civil reſpects there is.

2. Eſtates. There ſhould be no propriety (ſay they) but every man ſhould be as rich as his brother. Plato and Lycurgus brought in a community of Eſtates and Women. They would have their Eſtate brought into a common treaſury, and none ſhould have right to his Eſtate more than another. Under the Goſpel there ought to be a community of goods. See Acts 2.44,45. & 4.32.

There are diſtinct Dominions, rights, and proper intereſts in temporal things. How elſe can there be thefts, buying and ſelling, giving or receiving, borrowing or lending?

2. This right and proper intereſt in temporal things, is not founded in grace, Dominium rerum temporalium non fundatur in gratia, Deut.2.5,9,19.

The community in uſe among the Church of Jeruſalem, was free, not compulſive, *Act.*5.4. Not of propriety but uſe, Acts 2.45. they could not have given and diſtributed as men had need, if they had not been owners.

Act.12.9. The houſe of a Tanner. Lydia's houſe, Act.16.

1. It was a limited, not abſolute community, therefore all did not part with their houſes, they ſold ſome part of their poſſeſſions.

2. This was not practiſed in other Churches, not in the Churches of the Gentiles, Rom.12.13. 1 Cor.16.1,2.

Mr Farindon in his 6th part, 26th Sermon on Micah 6.8. ſaith, Humility is the beſt Leveller in the world, and there need none but this.

Libertines.

So called à libertate Evangelica quam prædicant.

A prophane and curſed Sect of wicked men.

Libertini noſtri ab abuſu libertatis hujuſq; profano prætextu dicuntur, qui nullis verbi divini regulis, nulli diſciplinæ Eccleſiaſticæ, aut profeſſioni uſtrictos ſe opinantur; ſed Spiritus ſui arbitrio vivendum eſſe. Hornbeeck Summa controverſ. Relig. l.6. de Enthuſiaſ. & Libert. Vide plura ibid. They are therefore called alſo Quintiniſta.

The founders of this Sect of the Libertines were Coppinus and Quintinus, both Flemmings and Papiſts: ſo Calvin in his excellent Tract againſt them. This Sect began anno 1529.

They abuſed the Scripture it ſelf againſt the Scripture, pretending that ſentence of Paul, 2 Cor.3.6. as if Paul by the letter underſtood the Scripture, but by the Spirit, internal Revelations out of the Scripture; or Allegories which any one may invent or feign; whereas that place is not to be underſtood of the whole Scripture, but of the Law, neither of the Law abſolutely, but as it is ſeparated from Chriſt and the Goſpel by men, which will be juſtified by it, which alſo kils not by it ſelf, but as it convinceth men of ſinne, which alſo is from God. See *Gal.*5.13.

When a reverend Doctor in Divinity did mildly reprove ſome Libertines for their licentious life, they did produce, 1 Cor. 6.9. (being corruptly printed, ſhall inherit) in juſtification of their vicious converſations. Mr Fullers Mixt Contemplat. in Better Times.

Macedonians.

Macedonians.

So called from Macedonius Bishop of Constantinople, who held, That the holy Ghost was lesse than the Father, and but a creature.

They were therefore called Pneumatomachi, that is, fighters against the holy Ghost.

Macedoniani sunt à Macedonio Constantinopolitanæ Ecclesiæ Episcopo, quos & πνευματομάχους Græci dicunt, eo quòd de Spiritu sancto litigent. Nam de Patre & Filio rectè sentiunt quòd unius sint ejusdemque substantiæ vel essentiæ, sed de Spiritu sancto hoc volunt credere, creaturam eum esse dicentes. Augustin. de Hæres. ad Quod-Vult-Deum, c. 52.

This Heresie was condemned in the second universal Synod, celebrated at Constantinople by an hundred and fourscore Fathers, in the year 383.

Manichees.

Manes a mad man, as his name signifies, feigned himself to be Christ, chose twelve Apostles, and sent them abroad to preach his errours, whose Disciples were called Manichees; they made two Gods; one of good called Light; another of evil called Darknesse; which evil God did make impure creatures of the more faeculent parts of the matter; he created the world; he made the Old Testament. They taught that the soul was the substance of God; that warre was unlawfull; that Christ was not true man, nor came out of the womb of the Virgin, but was a phantasme. Many of which errours they sucked from the Gnosticks and Carpocratians. B. Bramhals Reply to S. W. S. Refurat.

This heresie was known in the time of Aurelian the Emperor. Vide Besold. Synops. Hist. univers. c. 15. p. 180.

Augustine[b] was almost nine years entangled with their heresie, but after wrote largely against them.

[b] See his book De utilitate credendi ad Honoratum.

The errours of the Manichees are many and grosse, as Austin and Epiphanius report them; the principal was that of their two contrary principles, the one good, the other bad, both eternal. Mr Ley his Discourse of Disputations concerning matters of Religion, chap. 4.

For those words, Exod. 7. 3. they sacrilegiously condemned the Old Testament.

There is only one cause essentially good, and the fountain of all good, viz. God, from whom no evil can proceed: But sinne (quatale) is not ens (since every being is good) hath not properly an efficient cause.

Marcionites.

Marcionites from Marcion, whom Polycarpus called Primogenitum Satanæ.

1. He baptized those who died without Baptism.
2. He taught that Marriage was unlawfull.
3. He denied the Resurrection of the body.

Rather than Marcion would yeeld that good and evil proceeded from the same God, he ran upon a grosser impiety, and made another, two principles, one of good, and another of evil.

They thought that Melchiſedech was not a meer man, but a power of God greater than Chriſt; becauſe Chriſt was of the order of Melchiſedek.

Millenaries.

Chiliaſts, or Thouſandaries

They are ſo called from their opinion of a thouſand years.

In the firſt Age after the Apoſtles, Papias pretended he received a tradition from the Apoſtles, that Chriſt before the day of judgement ſhould reign a thouſand years upon earth, and his Saints with him in temporal felicities; this thing proceeding from ſo great an Authority, as the teſtimony of Papias, drew after it all or moſt of the Chriſtians in the firſt three hundred years. For beſides that the Millenary opinion is expreſly taught by Papias, Juſtin Martyr, Irenæus, Origen, Lactantius, Severus, Victorinus, Apollinaris, Nepos, and others famous in their time. Juſtin Martyr in his Dialogue againſt Tryphon ſayes, it was the belief of all Chriſtians exactly orthodox, and yet there was no ſuch Tradition, but a miſtake in Papias. Dr Taylor's Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 5. See more there. And Dr Mores Explan. lib. 5. &c. ch. 17.

By a miſtaken ſenſe of Rev. 20. 6.

Their expectation of Chriſts perſonal reign on earth in his Humane Nature and preſent glory, with all his Martyrs, and many Saints, for a thouſand years together, is inconſiſtent with the Doctrine, Prophecies and Nature of the New Teſtament, wholly groundleſſe. What ſolid foundation can we have for this thouſand years perſonal reign of Chriſt on earth with his Martyrs and Saints (which is counted the fifth Monarchy) during this terme of the New Teſtament or Covenant, but from the New Teſtament it ſelf?

Nota mihi ſunt eorum fabulæ, qui Millenariorum nomen acceperunt, propterea quòd aſſererent, Chriſtum poſt reſurrectionem in terra mille annis, cum ſanctis ſuis, in ſummâ pace, & tranquillitate, devinctâ in abyſſo Satana, regnaturum, magna deliciarum affluentiâ, quas alij ſpirituales, alij corporales affirmabat, hac Johannis auctoritate ſuum errorem roborantes. Ruſca de Inferno l. 5. c. 9. Monothelites.

Monothelites hæresis à dogmate sic vocata. Althusius Hist. hæres. Eutych.

They affirmed, that Christ had but one will, viz. Divine, whereas Christ being God and man, and so having two Natures, he must needs have two wils, one as he is God, another as he is man, for else he were not perfect God and perfect man. This two-fold will we find, Luke 22.42. John 5.30.

Monothelitæ dicti sunt ab una tantum voluntate, quam Christo tribuebant à μόνος unus & θέλησις voluntas. Alfonsus De Castro. Monothelitæ, vel Monenergetæ, ut novo sed apto vocabulo sic eos designem, qui unicam ut voluntatem, sic operationem Christo tribuebant. Petav. De Incarnat. l. 8. c. 2. Vide cap. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. De Monothelitarum hæresi.

Hinc perspicuè constat, aliam fuisse Christi voluntatem, ac Patris; non divinam utique; quam unam & eandem esse nemo Catholicus dubitat; sed hominis propriam; quam proinde, præter Divinam solus habuit incarnatus, qui loquebatur Filius. Petavius.

The first eruption of this heresie was in the 20th year of Heraclius the Emperour from the subtil enquiry of Athanasius the Patriarch of the Jacobites, in which he enquired of the Emperour, whether one operation of Christ was to be professed or two. The Emperour somewhat uncertain consulted by letters with Sergius the Patriarch of Constantinople, who coming from the Jacobites, and being privily a defender of that heresie, which acknowledged one Nature, and so will and action in Christ, gave an answer suitable to his own errour.

This Heresie was condemned with its favourers and defenders in the Laterane Councel of Rome by an hundred and fifty Bishops, anno Dom. 649. at which time so many Spiders webs fell in the midst of the people that all wondered, and by this was signified, that the filth of this heretical pravity was taken away.

And by the 6th Oecumenical Councel held anno Dominicæ Incarnationis 681.

The chief Authors of this Sect were Sergius and Pyrrhus Bishops of Constantinople.

Vide Forbesii Instructiones Historico-Theol. l. 5. c. 1. Qui contra Monothelitas duas in Christo voluntates esse docuerunt Græci ac Latini Patres, tum privatim singuli, tum in sexta Synodo simul universi, hoc unico ferè argumento sunt usi, quod ubicunque naturæ diversæ sunt; ibi & ἐνεργείας esse differentes oportet: proinde ut in Christo naturarum, ita operationum est discrimen. Petavius De Trinitate. lib. 4. cap. 15. Vide illum De Incarnatione, lib. 1. cap. 19, 20, 21.

This errour was a certain consectary and appendix of the heresie of the Eutychians or Apollinarists, and the defenders of one nature only, although they professed openly two Natures in Christ.

These Hereticks when they denied two wils to be in Christ, they meant indeed a Divine and Humane Will. Sed fallendi studio, palam, ac præ se ferebant, duas se voluntates intelligere, carnis, ac Spiritus, ambas humanas, atque inter se contrarias; & hac ambiguitate Catholicis conabantur illudere. Petav. de Incarnat. lib. 11. cap. 10.

Montanists.

From Montanus, who perswaded women to leave their Husbands, to become Prophetesses. He called himself the holy Ghost.

1. They baptize the dead.

2. They say, That those who have once fallen, can never obtain remission of sins, although they repent afterward.

Montanistæ à Montano Phrygæ Natione dicti sunt, à quo etiam Cataphryges seu Cataphryges appellati, quod eorum dux cum esset ex Phrygia provincia, ipsi originem indè traxerint, Spiritum sanctum sibi non Apostolis, insusum prædicantes. Franzius. Montanistæ, ut plerique sentiunt, Montanum ipsum esse Paracletum asserebant, à Christo promissum: ut autem alii placet, in illo plenius locutum esse Paracletum. Petav. De Trinitate l. 1. c. 14.

3. They condemn ſecond Marriages, and account thoſe marriages which the ſurviver made after the death of a yoak-fellow, to be adulterous, contrary to Rom. 7. 3. With which hereſie Tertullian an ancient and learned Father was ſo farre infected, as he wrote a Treatiſe in defence thereof, entitled, De Monogamia. Vide Petav. De Trinitate l. 1. c. 11.

One main ground of their errour was a miſ-interpretation of thoſe Scriptures which forbid men to have two wives at once, and women to have two Husbands at once, as Gen. 2. 24. 1 Tim. 3. 3,10. Theſe are expreſſe Texts againſt Digamiſts and Polygamiſts, but they make nothing againſt ſecond or after-marriages, one mate being dead. Dr Gouge of right conjunction of man and wife. Sect. 8.

By Epiphanius Montanus and his followers were put into the Catalogue of Hereticks, for commanding abſtinence from meats, as if they were unclean, and of themſelves unlawfull. Montanus ſaid no ſuch thing, but commanded frequent abſtinence, enjoyned dry diet, and an aſcetick Table, not for conſcience ſake, but for Diſcipline; and yet becauſe he did this with much rigour and ſtrictneſſe of mandate, the Primitive Church miſliked it in him, as being too near their errour, who by a Judaical Superſtition abſtained from meats as from uncleanneſſe.

Dr Taylors Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 2. That it was no more, Tertullian who was himſelf a Montaniſt, and knew beſt the opinions of his own Sect, teſtifies.

Neſtorians.

Neſtorius Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, and Anaſtaſius his Prieſt did teach (with Cerinthus) That the bleſſed Virgin bare in her womb a meer man, who had only the nature of a man, and was a man in his perſon, and that therefore the ſaid Virgin was not θεοτόκος, but χριστοτόκος, the mother of God, but of Chriſt.

He was condemned by the firſt Councel of Epheſus, and baniſhed by Theodoſius the Emperour, and his tongue rotted in his mouth.

He held that there were two Perſons, as well as Natures in Chriſt.

Theodorus Mopſueſtenus was the Author of Neſtorius his hereſie. Vide Petav. De Incarnat. l. 1. & l. 11. c. 1.

Nicolaitans.

About the year of our Lord 83. Dr Taylor in his Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 24, ſpeaks more favourably of him.

From Nicholas of Antiochia. He was one of the ſeven firſt Deacons, Act. 6. 5. He having a fair wife, and being accuſed of being jealous of her, gave leave to any that would lie with her. Clem. Alexand. l. 3. Strom.

Others taking occaſion of this fact of his, thought it lawfull for any man to have the company of any woman, whom they themſelves liked. Againſt theſe men St John doth write, Apocal. 2. 6.

Nicolaitæ à Nicolao nominati ſunt, uno ut perhibent, ex illis ſeptem, quos Apoſtoli diacones ordinaverant. Iſte cum de zelo pulcherrimæ conjugis culparetur, velut purgandi ſe cauſa permiſiſſe fertur, ut ea qui vellet uteretur. Quod ejus factum in ſectam turpiſſimam verſum eſt, qua placet uſus indifferens fœminarum. Aug de Hæreſ. ad Quod-Vult-Deum.

Novatians.

Novatiani à Novato Romanæ Eccleſiæ Presbytero ſunt nuncupati. Prateolus.

Many of the ancient Fathers, and eſpecially of the Grecians, erred about the author of this Sect, jumbling two of them into one, Similitudine nominum decepti, Novatus and Novatianus. The firſt was a Biſhop of Africa, whoſe moſt filthy life, covetouſneſſe, cruelty, and wicked parricides, Cyprian deſcribes Epiſt. 49. The Sect of the Novatians came both from Novatus and Novatianus, it received a ſpecial increaſe from Novatianus a Romane, and the Scholar of Novatus, whoſe deadly deadly poiſon he diſperſed farre and wide. The Greek Fathers made only Novatus the author of that Sect, as Euſebius l. 6. Hiſt. cap. 33. Theodoret, Epiphanius, and Gregory Nazianzene, and many of the Latines alſo, Auguſt. De hæreſ. Philaſtrius, Ambroſe; Cyprian frequently diſtinguiſheth them in his Epiſtles, and Pacianus, and all the Latines who have written exactly of this hereſie. Petav. animadv. in Epiphan. de Hæreſ. Vide Forbeſii Inſtruct. Hiſtorico-Theol. l. 14. c. 3.

1. They would not receive any into the Church after they had denied Chriſt, albeit they did repent. See Eſay 1. 18.
2. They taught that repentance will not profit them who ſin againſt Baptiſm.
3. They did rebaptize them who had been baptized of the Catholicks.
4. They would not receive them into their Congregation, who were married to a ſecond wife after their Baptiſm.

Novatiani Dogma nullam ſaluris ſpem ſupereſſe lapſis Epiphanius. Petavius ſeems to oppoſe this, and ſaith, they denied ad Eccleſiæ fidelium communionem recipi amplius oportere, neq; penes Eccleſiam reconciliandi jus ullum ac poteſtatem eſſe.

This hereſie continued very long, ſo that it flouriſhed under Arcadius the Emperour, that is, a 148 years after its birth.

See Mr Balls Power of Godlineſſe, l. 1. c. 9. of Purity. And Petav. De La Penitence Publique l. 6. c. 7.

Patropaſſians.

They held, That the firſt Perſon in Trinity, the Father, became fleſh and ſuffered.

Patropaſſiani ſunt qui Deum patrem paſſum fuiſſe aſſerunt: utpotè qui in divinis perſonarum numerum denegent, unamque ſolùm eſſe in eis perſonam aſſerant, diverſis tamen nominibus appellatam. Prateolus.

Pelagians.

So called from Pelagius, one of the greateſt enemies to the Doctrine of Grace that ever the Church had; he made ſuch a ſhew of godlineſſe, that when Hierom wrote firſt againſt his hereſies, he was forced to conceal his name, leaſt by appearing to write on purpoſe againſt him, his book ſhould have been rejected by the people, who did ſo highly magnifie him. Mr Calamy on Phil. 2. 21.

Petav. De La Penitence Publique l. 1. ch. 1. obſerves, That hereticks have gained more by their credit and eſteem with the people, than by all the ſubtilty of their parts, and artifice of their Diſcourſes. See his ſecond Chapter there.

This errour took ſuch deep root, that it cannot be yet extirpated, for it remains yet in Popery, where Semipelagianiſm is evidently taught.

Some have thought, that that place, Rev. 8. 10. was to be interpreted of his fall. Pelagianorum eſt hæreſis hoc tempore omnium recentiſſima, à Pelagio Monacho exorta, quem magiſtrum Cœleſtius ſic ſequutus eſt, ut ſectatores earum Cœleſtiani etiam nuncupentur. Hi Dei gratiæ in tantum inimici ſunt, ut ſine hac poſſe hominem credant facere omnia divina mandata; quum ſi hoc verum eſſet, fruſtra Dominus dixiſſe videretur, ſine me nihil poteſtis facere. Aug. de hæreſ. c. 88. Vide plura ibid. Pelagiani vel Pelagianiſtæ (utraque enim terminatione vocatos invenio) à Pelagio dicti ſunt, qui hoc nomine & ſpeciali hæreſeos diſtinctione primum innotuerunt ſub Theodoſio juniore Imperatore, & Innocentio primo Epiſcopo Romano circa annum à Chriſto paſſo 382. Pelagiana hæreſis non ſimplex, & uniuſmodi fuit; ſed quaſi multiceps monſtrum, variis ex impietatis argumentis, opinionibuſque contexta. Inter quas præcipua erat illa, quæ directè Chriſti gratiam oppugnabat. Petav. de Pelag. & Semipelag. hæreſ. lib. cap. 11. Hinc Pelagiani ſummam erroris, & caput hoc per brevi dicto comprehendere ſolet Auguſtinus, aliique Patres, Gratiam Dei ſecundum meritum hominum dari. Id. ibid.

Their firſt Tenet was this, That Adam ſhould have died, though he had not ſinned by the Law of Nature.

The ſecond, That Adams ſinne hurt himſelf alone, not other men his poſterity, unleſſe by his example alone, Rom. 5. 12. Auſtin, Proſper and Fulgentius argue againſt Pelagius. Infants are puniſht for Adams ſinne, therefore are guilty of it.

The third, Luſt and concupiſcence which are in us by nature, are good; neither is there any thing in it of which we ought to be aſhamed. They ſay this, that they may ſhew that original ſinne is not propagated to children, which are the fruit of wedlock.

The fourth, That children receive not from their parents, nor have original ſin, againſt thoſe places of Scripture. *Rom.*5.12. *Epheſ.*2.2.

The fifth, That the children of the faithfull, although they be not baptized, ſhall be ſaved, and enjoy eternal life, but yet ſhall be out of Gods Kingdome.

Sixthly, That men now fallen have free-will, which is ſufficient to it ſelf to do well againſt that *Epheſ.*2.1. Certum eſt nos facere cum facimus, ſed ille facit ut faciamus, præbendo vires efficaciſſimas voluntati. Aug. *de Gratia & Libero arbitrio. Seventhly, That the grace of God is given to the merits of our works.

Petavius ſayes in this, Primigenia eorum hæreſis conſiſtebat, ut gratiam Chriſti ex meritis dari dicere auderent, and therefore Auſtin on the contrary, labours to prove, Gratiam Dei non ſecundum merita noſtra dari.

Popery.

The Supremacy and Infallibility of the Pope and Church of Rome, is the chief Point on which their Religion reſts. Dr Baſtwick in his Elenchus Religionis Papiſticæ, proves that the Popiſh Religion is neither Apoſtolical, Catholick, nor Romane.

Popery it ſelf is of an hypocritical ſtrain, (though there are many ſincere hearted Chriſtians among the Papiſts) and is notably ſuited to the Hypocrites diſpoſition. It is revived Phariſaiſme, Matth. 23. Mr Baxters vain Religion of the Formal Hypocrite. See more there.

Of all Heretical and Falſe-teachers this laſt age hath afforded, I know none more pernicious than theſe two,

1. Libertines, that teach to neglect obedience, as in every reſpect unneceſſary.

2. Juſtitiaries, that preſs obedience as available to juſtification. Doctor Sclater on Rom. 4. 15.

You are gone from a Church whoſe worſhipping is ſimple, Chriſtian and Apoſtolical, to a Church where mens conſciences are loaden with a burthen of Ceremonies, greater than that in the dayes of the Jewiſh Religion, for the Ceremonial of the Church of Rome is a great Book in Folio.

It is a Magazin of falſhood, and one of the moſt ſhamefull Hereſies which ever were.

See Dr Mores Preface to his Explanation of The great Myſtery of Godlineſs.

We ſhould abhor the Popiſh Religion.

1. For the pride and covetouſneſſe of Rome, the Pope is carried on mens ſhoulders, his ſeat is above the Altar. The Popes Patrimony is large.

2. For their idolatry, Angel-worſhip, Saint-worſhip, Relick-worſhip, Bread-worſhip, Image-worſhip, Croſſe-worſhip, Pope-worſhip.

3. Cruelty, the bloud-ſhed by Rome papal, exceeds that of Rome ethnical. Mede on Apoc.

Luther dying, took his leave of his friends, the Divines in theſe words, Impleat vos Deus benedictione ſua & odio Papæ, therefore called the Whore of Babylon *. Rev. 17. 6. & 18. 24.

We

'Tis known and acknowledged, that the Catholick Religion did not flourish more in any part of Europe, than in that Kingdome, till Henry the 8th his Apoſtaſie. But though Hereſie took firm root in England in Henries time, yet was there no ſetled form of the exerciſe thereof there. King Edward the ſixt, a Prince within age, ſucceeding him, Zuinglius his Doctrine was chiefly embraced.

We of England ſhould abhor Popery, if we conſider

1. The bloudy daies of Queen Mary, read Foxes Acts and Monnments.
2. The Spaniſh invaſion in 88. that invincible Navy as they called it.
3. The barbarous Gunpowder-Treaſon, on the 5th of Novemb.
4. The baſe and wicked wayes the Jeſuites now uſe to bring us back to Popery, they mingle with all ſects to turn us from the true Religion.

They labour to bring all the ſeveral ſects to four things.

1. To cry down the Miniſtry, Anabaptiſts, Quakers, Seekers, agree in this
2. To cry down a ſetled maintenance of the Miniſtry, by Tithes or any way.
3. To cry up an univerſal toleration, that they may play their game.
4. Labour to foment and increaſe our diviſions, that ſo we may deſtroy one another.

Four Reaſons why the common people ſhould abhor Popery.

1. Becauſe they deny them the Cup in the Sacrament, the Prieſt receives both, the Scripture ſaith, drink ye all of this, they do what in them lies, to deprive them of the Bloud of Chriſt.
2. Deprive them of the bread of life, the Scripture; give them leave to read Play-Books, Romances, but not the Bible. The Apoſtles wrote the Scriptures to common perſons.
3. They will not ſuffer you to underſtand your Prayers, you muſt pray in Latine.
4. Will make you bruit beaſts, teach the Doctrine of blind obedience.

Bentivoglio of Flanders, part 2. chap. 3. See more there.

Predeſtinatiani the Predeſtinarians.

They had this name given them, becauſe in their Diſputations upon Predeſtination this was their aſſertion, viz. good works will do men no good at all, if by God they be predeſtinated unto death and damnation; neither will bad works hurt wicked men, if by God they be predeſtinated unto eternal life and ſalvation.

Priſcillianiſts from Priſcillian.

They taught that one might lie and forſwear himſelf with a good conſcience, for the concealing of his Religion, whence their ſymbole was,

Jura, perjura, ſecretum prodere noli.

Pſychopannychites, Soul-ſleepers.

They that ſay that the ſouls do ſleep and deprive them of all ſenſe and knowledg, although in expreſs words, they ſay not, that the ſouls do die, yet indeed they teach the ſame thing, that the others.

For what is the ſoul but the firſt principle, viz. by which we live, perceive and underſtand. If the ſouls therefore ſleep ſo that they neither perceive nor underſtand they do not live, and therefore are not. Is not this to affirm, that they die together with the body. Therefore whatſoever is brought to confirm, that the ſouls live, being ſeparated from the body, confutes alſo the dream of the Sleepers, who when they dare not expreſly ſay, that the ſoul dies with the body; yet in other words teach the ſame thing, in affirming that it ſleeps.

Calvin hath written an excellent Book againſt theſe Sleepers, which he Entitleth Pſychopannuchia, where he excellently proves, that the ſoules ſeparate from the body do remain and live, and alſo exerciſe their proper actions, viz. underſtand, love, injoy happineſſe, a Book worthy to be read in theſe daies.

They

They and ſome Papiſts, when they are urged with the words of the Lord Jeſus, To day thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe, elude the place, by putting the Comma after day, and ſo read the words thus, Verily I ſay unto thee this day, Thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe. See Beza and Grotius in loc. Luke 23. 43.

Their main proof is from the whole tenour of the 15th of the 1 Cor. and more particularly from the 32. verſ. If after the manner of men I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus, what advantageth it me, if the dead riſe not? Hence they think may certainly be concluded, that the ſoul before the Reſurrection of the body hath not the perception or enjoyment of any thing; otherwiſe the very remembrance of thoſe ſufferings for Chriſt, might be a ſolace for Paul when he was out of the body. This is largely anſwered by Dr More in his Explanation of The Grand Myſtery of Godlineſſe, l. 1. c. 6. See alſo his 7, 8, 9, 10. Chapters.

Quakers.

So called from their uſual quaking before they begin to ſpeak, thereby deluding the people, as if they waited for a Reveſation from God.

The Devil delights to be ſerved with gaſtly affections, and the moſt uſual deportments of trembling and aſtoniſhment, as having nothing at all of amiableneſs or excellency in him, to commend himſelf to his worſhippers.

They have laid aſide the written Word, and ſet up another rule in oppoſition to it, an impulſe or light within them.

They ſay,

1. This light is in every man, and ſufficient to bring them to ſalvation without the Scripture.

2. This light is able to make them perfect, and free them from the inbeing of ſin.

3. That it muſt be obeyed without examination.

Mr Prin in his late Quæres, notes the words of an Engliſh Dominican Fryer, ſaying, That himſelf had been at all the ſeverall gathered Churches, Congregations, and Sects in London, and that none of them came ſo near the Papiſts in opinions and Tenets as the Quakers.

They are the genuine offſpring of the Enthuſiaſts in Germany. See Mr Baxters Epiſtle to Mr Tombes his True Old Light, his Quak. Catech. and ſheet againſt them.

There is a Cynical kind of Sect of Chriſtians lately ſprung up among us, who under pretence of a Goſpel-auſterity and ſtrictneſſe, affect a ſordidneſſe and undecency in their attire: and under a colour of an evangelical purity, profeſs unmannerlineſs and ruſticity in their behaviour, making it a great part of their Religion to forbear all outward ſigns and expreſſions of reſpect and reverence, civility and curteſie. I wiſh there be not a ſpice of pride and ſingularity in their Religion, that there be not ſomething of humorouſneſſe, affectation, and ſelf-conceit in the bottom, to ſay no worſe. Two of their erroneous and ridiculous practiſes are moſt remarkable.

Firſt, The caſting off their cloathes, in vain pleading for their practiſe, Iſaiah 20. 3. whoſe act was extraordinary and myſtical, having an immediate command for the ſame.

Secondly, Their other opinion is, that Thou and Thee is to be ſaid to every one one. Their principal argument for their practiſe is drawn from Exod. 33. 12. and many places in Scripture, where Thou and Thee are uſed by God to man, and man to God, and man to man. Thou is not ſo diſtaſtefull a term in Hebrew and Greek as it is in the Engliſh.

Shakers.

A kind of people that pretend to have the Spirit by fits.

I ſpeak of theſe before under the name of Quakers.

Socinians.

It may deſervedly be called a more ſubtile mahometaniſm of Socinus. See Porters God Incarnate, c. 7. p. 25.

The followers of both Lelius the uncle and Fauſtus Socinus, who were Italians of Sienna. In Crellius his Book Omnia hareſis æſtius venena colliguntur. Petavius.

They deny the Trinity, Gods Omniſcience, the Eternity of the Sonne, the Divinity of the holy Ghoſt.

They acknowledge the perſon of the Sonne, but obſtinately deny his Deity, Eternity, ternity, Satisfaction, and alſo the Perſonality and Deity of the holy Ghoſt, although they ſeem not to doubt of his Eternity.

They ſay that Chriſt before the exerciſing of his publick miniſtry, aſcended to Heaven, and after Preacht the Evangelical Doctrine, to evade theſe Texts which we alleadg for the Godhead of Chriſt. As Moſes (they ſay) was taken up into the Mountain before he Preacht to the people. Moſes went as a type of Chriſt indeed into the Mountain, and there received the Moral Law. But Chriſt was not taken up hence to Heaven before he Preacht.

1. That could not have been done without a miracle, and the Scripture would not have been ſilent of ſo great a myſtery really done.

2. He needed not locally aſcend to Heaven, for the Spirit was given here to him, John 3. 34.

3. While he was upon earth, the Father was in him, and he in the Father, John 14. 11, 12. & 8. 29. & 3. 13. & 6. 62.

We ſay according to Scripture, that Chriſt came from Heaven the ſtate of glory, had a being before he was born in the fleſh, John 6. 22, 38. & 16. 28. which is a clear proof of his eternal Godhead.

The Socinians anſwer, things are ſaid to come down from Heaven, which are inſtituted by God or wrought by him.

It is one thing what things are, and another thing concerning perſons; Johns perſon is not ſaid to be from Heaven though his Baptiſm was.

Three things may ſecure Chriſtians from being ſcandalized at, or ſeduced by the errours and hereſies of theſe times.

1. The Scripture hath clearly foretold there muſt be ſuch.

2. Theſe are but the revivings of thoſe Hereſies, which have been in all ages of the Church.

3. The Scripture affords plentifull proviſion of arguments to confute them. To inſtance in that one Hereſie or Blaſphemy of the Socinian at this day, viz. denying the Divinity of Chriſt.

Perniciosa cum primis est haresis Sociniana, quâ, inter hodiernas, sub nomine Christiano, nulla aquo detestanda. Non enim hæc articulum aliquem religionis, sed ejus animam & fundamenta concutit, atque evertit fermè. Hornbeck summa Controv. Relig. lib. 7. de Socinianismo.

Inter hæreses primas ferè vendicant sacrilegi & animæ exitiales errores Socinianorum, hominum, qui rancidas Ebionis, Cerinthi, Samosateni, Arij, & magni illius blasphematoris Serveti opiniones refodunt, fundamenta Christianæ religionis Ecclesia subducunt, sanctam Trium unitatem, deitatem Filij & Spiritus Sancti, satisfactionem Christi, imputationem justitiæ Christi ad justificationem, virtutem Spiritus sancti in regeneratione, resurrectionem mortuorum corporum, & spem vitæ æternæ, quominus tandem religionem Christianam quæ in bene credendo & vivendo consistit, evertunt. Præfat. ad Cocceij examen Apologet. Equit. Polon.

It was foretold by the Apoſtle Peter, 2 Peter 2. 1. and condemned of old by the Fathers and Councels, in Samoſatenus, Photinus, Arius, Ebion, Cerinthus, and others: And laſtly, The Scripture abundantly ſilenced this horrid blaſphemy, eſpecially by St John, both in his Epiſtles, 1 John 2. 18. and Goſpel, which in the judgment of Irenæus and divers others of the Ancients, was written on purpoſe againſt the Blaſphemy of Ebion and Cerinthus, the Predeceſſors and Fathers of our late Socinians. See chap. 1. & 5. 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39. Froſt on John 5. 39.

That place 1 Peter 2. 21. is much abuſed by the Socinians, as though there were no more in the death of Chriſt, than an example: but one end of Chriſts death muſt not exclude another; in the bloud of Chriſt there is both a price and a pattern.

Rom. 4. 25. Who was delivered (viz. unto death) for our offences, not only upon the occaſion of our ſinnes (as the Socinians gloſs it) but for the merit of our ſinnes.

The Socinian doctrine is, as it were, a filthy ſink, into which all Hereſies of former and later ages have emptied themſelves. They will receive no interpretation of Scripture, nor Article of Faith, unleſs it agree with reaſon, Scriptura eſt norma recta ratio eſt index, all is ultimately reſolved into reaſon.

Chap. I.

A Diatribe on the Apostles Creed.

I. Generally.

Sect. I.

Of Belief in general, and of the qualifications of an Article of Faith.

THis Diatribe fitly follows the other of Errour and Heresie. As the Nature of Faith is, so is the Nature of Heresie; contraries having the same proportion. Faith is not only a precept of Doctrine, but of manners and holy life; whatsoever is either opposed to an Article of the Creed, or teacheth ill life, that is Heresie. Dr Taylors Liberty of Prophes. Sect. 2.

Fides nisi ab auctoritate proficiscatur, non modò fides esse, sed ne intelligi quidem potest. Melch. Can.

One thus describes Faith, Fides est Actus mentis testimonio alterius assensum prabentis.

Both the act and the object are implied in one word belief.

Belief in general is an assent of the understanding to any thing related to us, and this for the authority of the Relater.

To believe is to esteem a thing true for the authority of him that speaks it.

There is Opinion, Science, and Faith.

1. Opinion grounded upon probable reasons.
2. Science grounded upon infallible principles.
3. Faith, which in its proper notion, is the assent to somewhat from the authority of the speaker.

This is,

1. Humane, grounded upon report of men, fallible.
2. Divine, an assent unto Divine Revelation, or unto some thing as credible, upon the testimony of God. This is infallible, because it is impossible for God to lie. Male vivitur, si de Deo non bene creditur. Aug. de Civ. Dei l.5.c.10.

Some Divines reduce all Fundamentals to Credenda, Agenda, Speranda. Credenda (saith Zanardus Summa Divinorum Præceptorum Decalogi, parte 1ª. cap. 1.) nobis proponuntur sub quibusdam articulis, quorum præcipui reperiuntur in Symbolo Apostolico.

No division of things contained in Scripture is more frequent amongst Fathers, Schoolmen, and later writers, Roman and Reformed, than that of faith and life, Credenda & facienda, what we should believe, how we should live.

Fides se porrigit ad tria tempora, præteritum, præsens & futurum. Erasm. Explicat. Symb.

Faith, 1. believes that the world was made by God, and whatsoever the Scriptures say was done in former ages.

2. That the world and Church is now governed by him.

3. That whatsoever the Scriptures promise to the godly, or threaten to the wicked, shall come to passe.

The rule of Faith consists of such supernatural truths, as are necessary to be known of every Christian, not only Necessitate præcepti, because God hath commanded us to believe them, but also Necessitate medii, because without the knowledge of them in some tolerable degree, according to the measure of our capacities, we cannot in an ordinary way attain to salvation. B. Bramhals Replicat. to the Bishop of Chalcedon, ch.6.

An Article of Faith properly so called, is that Doctrine, Quæ omnibus Christianis adultis necessariò nota esse debet. Bapti. Bibliotheca portatilis. Qui non credit omnem mandatationem, etsi omnes alios fidei articulos rectè docet, pianque & castam agat vitam tamen damnatus est. Luther. in confess. minuti de cand. O nimis præcipitatum pro magno errore confirmando sententiam. Wendel. præfat. contra Pelag. ad exercit.

Whatsoever we are to believe as an Article of Faith, must have these qualifications:

1. That the proof of it be perfect, otherwise it is not an Article of Faith. Nihil pro articulo fidei Ecclesia proponendum est, quod non ex manifestis certis & firmis Scripturæ testimoniis aperte ostendi & probari potest. Chemnit. Exam. Concil. Trid. pag.91. Credimus quod legimus, & quod non leginus nefas credamus astruere. Aug. de Natura & Gratia contra Pelag.

2. That the ground upon which it depends, be some divine and infallible principle, for otherwise it may create an opinion in one, but it cannot beget a faith.

3. That it be not the object of sense. For Faith is the evidence of things not seen, Heb. 11.1. Fides est credere quod non videz, cujus merces est habere quod credis.

SECT. II.

Of the Apostles Creed, its name, and the reason of it.

IT is called in Latine Symbolum Apostolorum, in English, the Apostles Creed. Creed from the first word Credo, as Pater noster from the two first words, or because those things which every one ought to believe are contained in it. The matter of it is Credenda, truths concerning things to be believed.

Symbolum signifies either a note, badge or mark, serving to distinguish between one souldier and another, or a summe of money cast in, which we call a shot, Symbolum dedi & cœnavi. Terence. But Steven and others will rather have it Symbolam in that sense. Nisi & ipse Symbolam meam (nolo enim cum barbaris Symbolum meum dicere) conferrem. Steph. Epist. Phil. Sidn. ad N. T.

Down in his Treatise of the Authors and Authority of this Creed, shews, why the Apostles Creed is called a Symbole. Publica Ecclesiæ vox legitimis professionis testata formulis, quæ Symbola vocantur. Petav. de Incarn. l. 7. c. 1. De Incarn. l. 10. c. 7. he saith, Symbola velut Christianæ militiæ tesseræ sunt. Down saith there, It is called the Apostles Creed, because the matter therein contained is perfectly agreeable with the Apostles writings, and was collected out of them.

He gives there also good reasons to prove, that it was not made by the Apostles. Mr Cartwright in his Epistle to his brief Exposition of the Creed, seems to deny that it was framed by the Apostles. Crocius Synag. Theol. l. 4. c. 10. De Evangelio, gives also good reasons, against the Apostles making of it.

Because (saith Mr Perkins) it doth summarily contain the chief and principal points of Religion, handled and propounded in the Doctrine of the Apostles, and because the points there are agreeable to their Doctrine.

He gives his reasons also against the Apostles being penners thereof. Estey and Bisield go the same way.

BEllarmine affirms the Devil to have been a very methodical opponent, diſputing againſt Fundamentals, as they lie in order in the Creed.

As the Decalogue is a patern of all duties, and the Lords Prayer a patern of all requests to God, so the Creed is a summe and patern of all Doctrine to be believed.

The blessed Apostles have been so provident for the Church, as to depositе and commit to the custody thereof the Creed, as a perfect Rule and Canon of faith, which are absolutely necessary for all Christians to salvation. B. Bramhall his Replication to the Bish. of Chalcedon ch. 9.

It is a short compendium of the Christian Faith, agreeable to the word of God, and anciently received in the Churches of Christ.

Tertullian (De Veland. Virg. cap. 1.) cals it that one only immoveable and unreformable Rule of Faith. Augustine (Epist. ad Dardanum) cals it the rule common to great and small.

Tertullian cals it, Regulam fidei. Cyrian Symbolum fidei. One cals it, Parvum Evangelium. Aquinas 2ª, 2æ Quæst. 2. Artic. 5. cals the Articles of the Creed, Prima credibilia.

Symbolum Apostolicum aliis Symbolis antecedit longè authoritate: 1. Quia ferè totum ipsius Scripturæ verbis constat. 2. Quia omnibus aliis Symbolis est antiquius. 3. Quia fons est & regula aliorum Symbolorum quæ ejus declarandi causa ad vitandas hæreticorum fraudes & corruptelas, in Synodis Universalibus & Oecumenicis totius consensu Ecclesiæ edita & approbata fuerunt. Ursin. Explicat. Catech. & parte secunda. Quæst. 23.

It is the confession of faith of all Christians, containing the analogy of faith, and the summe of the holy Gospel. It is most deservedly of great credit and esteem in all the Churches of Christ throughout the world.

There are Articles necessary to salvation that are not ipsis contained in that Symbole.

This is the most ancient and principal of all the Creeds. This Creed is sometimes called the Creed without any addition, the Creed κατ' ἐξοχὴν, by way of eminency. It is commonly called the Apostles Creed, because for the most part it is gathered out of their writings, and to distinguish it from the other Creeds. It is called also the Articles of our belief, because the chief points of faith are contained in it. It is a summe of things to be believed concerning God and concerning the Church gathered out of the Scriptures. It farre exceeds all other Creeds in authority.

Angelus de Pus lib. 2. De Præambulis ad Symbolum, cap. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. shews, how the twelve Articles are compared to the twelve precious stones in the brest-plate of the High-priest.

In an ancient Confession of the faith of the Waldenses, copied out of certain Manuscripts, bearing date anno Domini 1120. that is to say, near 400 years before the time of either Calvin or Luther, Article 1. We believe and firmly hold all that which is contained in the twelve Articles of the Symbole, which is called the Apostles Creed, accounting for Heresie whatsoever is disagreeing, and not consonant to the said twelve Aticles. Mr Morlands Articles of the Evangelical Churches of the valleys of Pimont, l. 1. c. 4. p. 30.

Articuli fidei summam continent doctrinæ à Rege Christo Apostolis traditæ. Olevian.

When the Creed was read, it was the custome in Poland, and elsewhere, for Gentlemen to draw their swords all the while, intimating thereby, that they would defend it with their lives and bloud. The standing up at the Creed was (as some say) to note their resolution to strive together for the Faith once delivered to the Saints.

Tertullian lib. de præscript. hæret. saith, They are hereticks which bring in a Doctrine into the Church contrary to the Christians Creed, Gal. 1. 8.

There are two other Creeds besides the Apostles, the Nicene and Athanasian Creed, as they are commonly called, which are not new Creeds, but expositions of the other. They adde nothing to it, but explain some Articles, that either were depraved, or else ill understood by some Hereticks.

The Nicene was called against the heresie of Arius, what contentions followed after in the Churches, till at length the Arian plague hatcht the Mahometan, Voſſius de Tribus Symbolis, demonſtrates, That Athanaſius could not in all probability be the Author of the other Creed. B. Uſher, Dr Taylor in his Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 2. and others are of the ſame judgement. Petavius lib. 7. de Trinitate cap. 8. ſeems to be for it.

Dr John Textorius comforting Muſculus on the day of his death, and rehearſing the Apoſtles Creed, he anſwered, Fundamentum hoc fidei Chriſtianæ ſemper in corde fenui, I have alwayes kept this foundation of Chriſtian Faith in my heart. I wonder therefore what ſhould make ſome Divines of late dayes to ſpeak ſo lightly of the Apoſtles Creed. See Dr Gaudens Eccleſia Anglicana Suſpiria lib. 2. Chap. 6.

That there was at Baptiſm a profeſſion of faith Dr Nicholſon in his Expoſition of the common Catechiſm, proves by divers teſtimonies out of the Ancients.

The Apoſtles compiled this form of words, all Churches received them, all Catechemens were baptized into this faith; in the Roman Church they recited it publickly before their immerſion, to this ſalvation was promiſed; this was the Sacrament of the Chriſtian Faith, the characteriſtick of Chriſtians, the ſign of the orthodox, the ſword of all hereſies, and their ſufficient reproof, the unity of belief, ſufficient, full, immoveable, unalterable; and it is that, and that alone in which all the Churches of the world do at this day agree. The Apoſtles Creed in the more ancient times was briefer than now it is, the mention of the Father being maker of Heaven and Earth, the Sons death, and deſcending into Hell, and the communion of Saints being wholly omitted; becauſe ſome of them perhaps were not thought to be altogether ſo neceſſary for all men (which is Suarez his judgement touching the point of the deſcent into Hell) and ſome that were moſt neceſſary, either thought to be ſufficiently implyed in other Articles (as that of Chriſts death in thoſe of his crucifixion and burial) or thought to be ſufficiently manifeſted by the light of reaſon, as that of the Creation of Heaven and Earth. to be baptized, this Question was asked him, What believest thou? Then he answered according to the form of the Creed, I believe in God the Father, &c. And this manner of questioning was used from the time of the Apostles, Acts 8.38.

SECT. V.

Why are they called Articles of the Creed, or of the Christian Faith.

THey are called Articles of the Creed, because as the parts of the body are distinguished by joynts; so in this confession whatsoever we ought distinctly, and severally to believe, is fitly called an Article. Because (saith Bellarmine Explicat. Symb. Apost.) they are most short sentencees, for an article signifies a little member.

Ut corporis membra articulis distinguntur; ita etiam in hac fidei confessione quicquid distinctè & separatim ab alio nobis credendum est, rectè & apposite articulum dicimus. Catech. SECT. VI.

The Division of the Apostles Creed.

Altingius saith, The Apostles Creed may be divided three wayes:

1. Into twelve Articles of Faith, which are there distinctly reckoned up. Or

2. Into three parts, concerning the Father the Creator, the Son the Redeemer, and the holy Ghost the Sanctifier. Or

3. Into two parts, one of which is concerning God and his works and benefits, the other concerning the Church.

Baius Institut. Christ. l. 1. c. 24 & Angelus de Pas De Præambulis ad Symbolum l. 2. c. 20. like best of this partition; so doth Piscator in his Exposit. of the Creed. Ursins Explicat. Catechet. part. 2. de Liberat. Hom. Explicat. Qu. 24. vide Præfat. ad Calvini Instit. Christ. Relig. & Calvin. Catech. Relig. Christ.

The second division is to be preferred (saith he) partly because it is more evidently expresst in the very Creed, partly because it is delivered in the like forme in Scripture, 2 Cor. 13. 13. Tit. 3. 4, 5. Revel. 1. 4, 5, 6. taken from the objects, viz. the three Persons of the holy Trinity in which we professe to believe, and from the effects of those objects, Creation, Redemption and Sanctification. Luther in his greater Catechism divides it into three parts; so doth Martinius in his Procatechesis. Calvin, Olevian on the Creed, Ravanellus, Viret, Zanchius de Symbolo Apostolico, and Baker divide it into four parts; the first of which contains a description of the Father; the second of the Sonne; the third of the holy Ghost, on which the whole mystery of our redemption depends. The fourth rehearseth in what things our salvation consists. Hæc dispositio pulcherrima est & ordinatissima, saith Zanchy. This way go Calvin, Nowell, Erasmus, and others.

Du Pan in his French Exposition of the Geneva Catechisme, divides it into four parts.

Bishop Hooper divideth it into five parts.

I shall branch it into two parts:

1. The Act, in these words, I believe.

2. The Object two-fold: { GOD, and The Church.

Allen divides it into two general heads:

1. It shews me and every Christian how he stands bound to believe in our God.

2. What every one of us ought to believe concerning the whole company of the people of God, called his Catholick or universal Church.

The like (saith he) is the order of the Law of God; for direction of our life, and of prayer; for the exercise of our faith, and of the Sacraments also, for the strengthening of our faith.

Rami Comment de Relig. Christiana c. 2. The Creed concerneth God and the Church. Perkins.

SECT. VII.

Quicquid in Symbolo Apostolico continetur, disertissimè extat in Scriptura, si capita fidei consideremus; non autem verborum structura & cultus fidei colligatus. Symbolum ipsum in Scriptura continetur. Ravanelli Bibliotheca Sacra. In Symbolo Apostolico paucis verbis tota salutis nostræ economia perfectè exponitur: & nihil in eo est, quod solidis Scripturæ testimoniis non sit confirmatum. Zanchius de Symbolo Apostolico.

THere is no Article of the Faith, which may not be evidently proved out of the Old or New Testament, as both Danæus on the Creed, and Goularti us in Cyprian. Symb. Apost. Corpus & Syntagma Confessionum Fidei, and Rogers in his English Creed shew.

All and every of the Articles contained in the Nicene Creed, the Creed of Athanasius, and that which is commonly called the Apostles Creed, ought firmely to be received and believed; for they may be proved by most certain testimonies of holy Scripture. Articles of Religion of Ireland.

SECT. VIII.

Whether is the Apostles Creed a Prayer?

Quo nomine ignara plebecula cum illud tum decalogum in proclivi fuit ut usurparet. Doctor Dil. p. 229. post Symb. Apost. Laudabilis & necessaria consuetudo est, ut inter cætera religionis capita pueris à teneris Symboli verba tradamus. Martinii Procatechesis Tractat. 4, 7. De usu Symboli.

IGnorant people use that and the Commandments as a Prayer.

Campian made a Prayer of it at his death.

Martinius propounding this question, An Symbolum Apostolicum dici potest precatio? Answers, Non, sed Confessoria narratio, nempe fidei confessio ad Deum & homines directa.

God onely is to be Prayed to; but other things are to be confessed besides God. Prayer is referred to God immediately; but there is great need of confession amongst men. Prayer is especially an exercise of confidence and humility toward God; but confession of the truth.

SECT. IX.

What it is to believe in God the Father, Son, and holy Ghost; and whether there be any difference between those expressions of believing in each Person of the Trinity, and believing the holy Catholick Church, the Communion of Saints, &c.

Non assentior iis qui volunt aliud esse Deo credere & in Deum vel ob hoc, quod Ebræi, quorum phrasis est, quia aliis utuntur dictis Latini sterminis hoc discrimen non agnoscunt, dicunt enim credere Deo & in Deum indifferenter pro eodem. Quatuor sunt loca in quibus sacra Scriptura frequentur ita loquuntur, ut Exod. 14. 31. & 1 Sam. 27. 12. & 2 Paralip. 20. 20. Credere Ecclesiam, & credere in Ecclesiam in idem recidit, vel potius idem est Drusius. Observat. Sac. l. 3. c. 1. Vide illum in c. 14. Exod. v. 31. & Rivetum in Exod. 20. 4. Aug. de Fid. Expos. Sym. Apost. l. 3. c. 4.

TO believe is commonly taken to signifie three things.

1. The acknowledgment of Gods being, Credere Deum, to believe that God is, or that there is a God, Heb. 11. 6.

2. Credere Deo, to give credit to that which God saith, Acts 27. 25. 1 Joh. 5. 10. Rom. 3. 4. Psal. 19. 7.

3. Credere in Deum, to believe in God, John 14. 1. which contains in it the act of the understanding and will, saith Cajetan on the 5th of John; is to trust in him and to relie on him as our God. Psal. 25. 2. Isaiah 50. 10.

This difference is not perpetual, say Altingius and others. See Dr Heylin on the first Article of the Creed, and Hobbes his Leviathan, part 1. cap. 7.

Credere in aliquem nec Latinè nec Anglicè dicitur. Cl. Gatak. Adverss. Miscel. cap. 19.

Though

Though in the holy Scriptures (as they are written in the Hebrew and Greek languages) there is not so exact a difference put between these kinds of phrases; yet they must be diversly understood and interpreted, according as they are referred either to God or man. Allens Doctrine of the Gospel, p. 90.

The Scripture useth a peculiar expression, to believe in and upon Christ, John 3.15. a phrase not used in any humane author, nor the Septuagint.

Credere in Deum Patrem est credere in eum, qui est Pater Domini nostri Jesu Christi: & credere quod idem sit meus Pater, hoc est, sit pater mea erga me affectus voluntate per & propter Christum, in quo me sibi adoptavit in Filium. Ursin Explicat. Catechet. part. 2ª. Explicat. Quæst. 26.

To believe is one thing, and to believe in this or that, is another thing: and it containeth in it three actions of a believer.

1. To know a thing.
2. To acknowledg the same.
3. To put trust * and confidence in it.

As I believe in the Father, and do believe that he is my Father, and therefore *I put my whole trust in him, and so of the rest of the Articles which concern any person of the Trinity.

Saving faith is meant in the Creed by the phrases of believing in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ, and in the holy Ghost. To believe in God the Father, is to believe that he is the most wise and great God, and our Maker and Ruler, and our chiefest good. To believe in God the Sonne is to believe that he is God and man, the Redeemer and Saviour, ransoming us by his bloud, and over-coming death by his death and resurrection, and procuring us pardon and life by his merits. To believe in God the holy Ghost, is to believe that he is the sanctifier of the people of God that shall be saved.

Christ. Relig. l. 4. c. 1. Sect. 3. Non dicit in Sanctam Ecclesiam, nec in remissionem peccatorum, nec in carnis resurrectionem. Art. 8. & Catec. Rom. p. 151. Petavius de Trinitate, lib. 2. cap. 12. acknowledgeth that there is a force and emphasis in that kind of speech, Credere in aliquem.

The Religion of the Christians is wholly practical, even in every Article of the Christian faith, and requires our conformity thereunto. As Christ suffered, so his sufferings should abound in us, 2 Cor. 1.5. as he was crucified, so our old man should be crucified with him, Rom. 6.6. As he died, so we should die with him, and be buried with him by Baptisme. As he arose, so we should arise with him, and as he asconded, so should we seek the things that are above, Col. 3.1.

Dr Gell his Essay, Sermon 15.

The Gentiles Creed, or the Creed in the natural Law is, that God is, and that he is a rewarder. The Christian Creed is, that Jesus is the Lord, that he is the Christ of God, that he died for our sinnes, that he rose again from the dead; He that believes this heartily, and confesseth it constantly, and lives accordingly, shall be saved, 1 John 3.23. The Apostles Creed, or Confession of Faith; Consisting of XII Articles.

As truth is the foundation of faith, so is faith the foundation of an holy conversation. Pure credunt, pure ergo loquuntur, saith the Father, each Article of our Creed, points out to some virtue to be wrought in the mind, and

1. I Believe in God, the Father Almighty, maker of Heaven and Earth;
2. And in Jesus Christ, his only Sonne, our Lord;
3. Which was conceived by the holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary;
4. Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried.
5. He descended into Hell; The third day he rose again from the dead;
6. He ascended into Heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty.
7. From thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.
8. I believe in the holy Ghost:
9. The holy Catholick Church, the Communion of Saints,
10. The forgivenesse of sinnes,
11. The resurrection of the body,
12. And the life everlasting. Amen.

publisht in the outward man. If I believe that Christ is God, it will follow, I must worship him; if he died for sin, we must die to sin. Mr Farindon on James 1. ult.

Rules

Rules for the use and understanding of the Apostles Creed.

1. The Articles of the Apostles Creed, are to be compared with other Creeds, especially the Nicene, Athanasian, Ephesine and Chalcedonian Creeds, because those Creeds are expositions of the Apostles Creed.

2. Whole faith is copulative, that is, true faith is exercised not upon one Article only, but upon them all.

3. That which is believed in one Article directly and primarily, may be also believed in another secundarily; so in the Article of the passion of Christ, I believe secundarily the remission of sinnes, of which there is also a peculiar Article.

Ignatius, Justin, Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen, Ruffinus, (among the antients) have expounded the Creed. Bellarmine and Aquinas of the Papists; of the Protestants, Ursin, Zanchy, Danæus, Piscator; of the Maniches, M^r Perkins, Bisield, Smith, Allen, D^r Pierson have well explained it.

SECT. XI.

THe Adversaries to the doctrine comprised in the Apostles Creed, are Arians, Jews, Turks, Epicures, Atheists.

SECT. XII.

All Christians agree in the Apostles Creed.

THe Apostasie of the Church is intimated more generally in the number of the name of the beast, whose root being 25. as the root of the number of the Apostolick Church 12. intimates, that their Apostasie consists in the general, of adding to the root and foundation of Christian Religion supernumerary Articles of their own invention and coining, being not contented with the Essentials or Fundamentals of Faith, which were clearly and plainly delivered by the twelve Apostles, and are easily and without any dispute and contest understood to be in the holy Scriptures. Doctor Mores Explanation of The Grand Mystery of Godlinesse, l. 5. c. 17.

Symbolum Ecclesiarum omnium fidem loquitur. Cassianus. The Church of Rome pretends to a power of appointing new Articles of Faith; and for denying this, Pope Leo the 10th, condemned Luther in his Bull added to the last Councel in Lateran; for ad solam authoritatem summi Pontificis pertinet nova

One in a Stationers shop in Venice, demanding what was the difference betwixt us and the Catholicks; It was told him none: For we accounted our selves good Catholicks. He unwilling to be put off in his answer, for lack of a due form in his question, pressed to know what was the difference betwixt us and them there: He was answered this; That we believed the Catholick Faith contained in the Creed, but did not believe the thirteenth Article, which the Pope had put to it. When he knew not of any such Article; the extravagant of Pope Boniface was brought, where he defines it to be altogether of necessity to salvation, to every humane Creature to be under the Bishop of Rome.*

editio Symboli. D^r Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, lib. 2 cap. 3. See more there. Aquinas 2^a 2^æ. and the Schools say, That the Pope may make new Articles of Faith, which Pius Quartus put in practice. Doctor Heylin on the Parable of the Tares, sixth Sermon. * Bishop Bedells Examination of Master Wadesworths Motives to the Romane Obedience, chap. 1.

One main Article, which the Pope causeth to be taught in all the Churches subject to him, stands him in great stead; namely, That for the saving of mens souls, an implicit faith sufficeth: whereby a man believeth all to be truth, whatsoever the holy Catholick Romane Church believeth and maintaineth. Verely, for any man to say I believe that, which another man believeth, is as much, as if he said, I see that which another man seeth, though my eyes be shut. The Arch-bishop of Spalato in a Serm. on Rom. 13. 12.

Therefore the Church of Rome hath no cause to condemn us for Hereticks: for we do truely hold and believe the whole Apostolical Symbole or Creed, which is an Epitome of the Scriptures, and the very key of faith.

We deny the Popes Supremacy, Justification by works, Purgatory, the sacrifice of the quick and dead, the Invocation and Intercession of Saints, perswading our selves, that if they indeed had been Apostolical, and the pillars of Religion, they should ſhould in no wiſe have been left forth of the Creed. For it is an overſight in making a Confeſſion of Faith to omit the principal points and rule of faith.

The Queen of France wrote unto the Pope, that there being none of the Reformed, who deny the Articles of Faith, nor the ſix Councels, many thought it fit to receive them into Communion. Dr Rogers his Proteſtants Faith profeſſed in all Ages, c. 10.

Biſhop Bramhall his Replication to the Biſhop of Chalcedon, p. 27. he ſaith there, c. 8. p. 322. that the Church of Rome obtrudeth new Articles of Faith, and Excommunicateth for not receiving them.

In Bp Bramhals Anſwer to Monſieur de la Militiere his Epiſtle, he ſaith

1. Some things are de Symbolo, contained in the Creed, either expreſly or virtually, either in the Letter or in the ſenſe, and may be deduced by evident conſequence from the Creed, as the Deity of Chriſt, his two Natures, the Proceſſion of the holy Ghoſt.

2. Some things are contra Symbolum, and either expreſly or virtually overthrow ſome Article of it.

3. Some things are only præter Symbolum, beſides the Faith; that is, opinions or truths of an inferiour nature, which are not ſo neceſſary to be actually known.

We retain the ſame Creed to a word, and in the ſame ſenſe by which all the primitive Fathers were ſaved; which they held to be ſo ſufficient, that in a general Councel they did forbid all perſons, under pain of depoſition, to Biſhops, and Clerks, and anathematiſation to Laymen, to compoſe or obtrude any other upon any perſons, converted from Paganiſm or Judaiſm.

There are thirteen Articles of Judaiſm or the Jewiſh Religion mentioned by Buxtorf in Synag. Jud. Men. Ben Iſrael Probl. de Creat. Prob. 1. Theſe (ſaith Buxtorf there) are almoſt diametrically oppoſite to the Apoſtles Creed.

Tredecim Articuli Fidei Judæorum, written by Rabby Moſes Ben Maimon, are tranſlated by Munſter into Latine. In the Preface to the Reader he ſaith, Eſt autor hujus libelli Rabbi Moſes Filius Maimon, qui à Judæis ut doctiſſimus & Colitur & ſuſpicitur, multorum voluminum editor & Græcorum Philoſophorum ſectator, id quod dictionis tenor facilè indicat. Vide Hornbeck contra Jud. lib. 1. cap. 3.

Secondly, Of the Apoſtles Creed Specially.

ARTICLE I.

I believe in God, the Father Almighty, maker of Heaven and Earth.

Primus Articulus Patri appropriatur, ut qui prima in Trinitate ſit perſona, & cæterarum fons & origo. Angelus de Pot Expoſit. in Symb. Apoſt. lib. 3. cap. 1. He is ſet before the other perſons, neither in regard of time, nor of dignity, for therein all three are equal, but in regard of order only. He is the fountain of the deity, the Son being from him, and the holy Ghoſt from them both.

THe firſt Perſon is ſet in the firſt place, and deſcribed to us by three things,

1. By his Title, that he is a Father.
2. By his Attribute, that he is Almighty.
3. By his Effect, that he is Maker of Heaven and Earth.

I believe] Its the office of a Chriſtian to believe, not to diſpute, whence the firſt Chriſtians were called Diſciples.

We are taught to ſay, I believe, not we believe.

Firſt, Becauſe in the Primitive Church this Creed was made to be an anſwer to a demand of every particular man that was baptized. Doſt thou renounce the fleſh and worldly vanities? I do renounce. Doſt thou believe? I do believe. See Acts 8.38. 1 Pet. 3.21.

Secondly,

Secondly, Because howsoever we are to pray one for another, by saying, Our Father, yet when we come to years, we must have a particular explicite faith of our own, Hab. 2. 4. All and every one are bound to believe explicitly the parts of this Creed. Bellarm. Explicat. Symb. Apost.

This clause (I believe) placed in the beginning of the Creed, must be particularly applied to all, and every Article following. Fides est tota copulativa.

Fides & verbum Dei se mutuo reflectunt tanquam relata. Alstedii Theologia Catechetica.

In[a] God,] God is the first object of our faith in the Creed. We must know God and believe in him, so far as he is revealed in his nature, properties, and works.

[a] Phrasis Hebraica est, pra in Deo spem, fiduciamve omnem colloco; & hoc verbum hic Christianæ fidei proprium est. Rami Comment. de Relig. Christ.

That there is a God, may be demonstrated

1. From nature, Psalm 19. 1. Rom. 1. 20. The most comely order of the creatures, the constant and regular course of nature; in mans mind the knowledge of principles, and the force of conscience, either in comforting or terrifying, the rewards of the good, and punishments of the evill, heroick virtues, the impossibility of proceeding in causes, in infinitum.

2. From Scripture, by many testimonies, various apparitions, stupendious miracles, prophetical predictions of things future, and the admirable event of things.

Quum dicimus nos credere in Deum, profitemur duo: primum, nos credere esse Deum, eumque unum sive unicum: deinde, nos in illo tanquam Deo nostro fiduciam collocare. Piscat. Exposit. Symb.

I believe in God, who is distinct in three subsistences or persons, called the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. Therefore the word God is but once mentioned, that the unity of the Godhead might be more plainly testified, although the same word is to be referred to every one of the three persons following. I believe in that only one God, who is God the Father, God the Sonne, and God the holy Ghost, and yet not three Gods, but only one God. The other Creeds declare this more fully.

Petavius in his Preface to his second Tome of Dogmata Theologica, c. 6. next the end, having proved the Doctrine of the Trinity out of the Ancient Fathers and Catholick Tradition, concludes, Quin insuper, ut alia decessent, ipsa fidei tessera conservare potuit, id est, Symbolum Apostolicum, & perpetuum, quod Christianismi tyronibus initio tradere, & inculcare-mos erat: ijdemque deinceps fideles facti, memoria, usuque quotidiano retinebant.

1. His Title, [the Father] It is taken here not personally, so it belongs only to the first Person of the Trinity, Matth. 26. 39. but essentially, as it is common to all three Persons, Mal. 2. 10. Matth. 23. 9. as the words following shew.

He is such a Father, as none else is, or possibly can be, he gives us our being, other Fathers are but instruments of it. The very Heathen Poets so describe their gods, that their vulgar names did carry Father in them, Jupiter, Diespiter. To believe in the Father, is to be perswaded, that the first person in Trinity is the Father of Christ, and in him my [b] Father particularly, John 17. 1. Ephes. 4. 5, 6. and that for this cause, I intend and desire for ever to put my trust in him.

[b] Prima S. Sanctæ Trinitatis persona, Pater dicitur, primum ac precipuè respectu Filij sui æterni & unigeniti, cujus Pater est per ineffabilem illam generationem ex eadem substantia; quam Filio totam ab æterno Communicavit. Secundò, Respectu omnium Creaturarum, quas virtute sua è nihilo produxit, eadem sua virtute sustentat atque conservat, Joh 38. 28. 1 Pet. 4. 19. Tertiò, Respectu Fidelium, quos in Christo regenuit & adoptavit, Mat. 23. 9. Bodius in c. 4. Ephes.

Patrem cum audis, agnosce quod habet filium veraciter genitum; quomodo possessor dicitur qui aliquid possidet, & Dominus qui alicui dominatur. Venant. Fortunat. Exposit. Symb. Vide plura ibid.

2. His Attribute, [Almighty] Gen. 17. 1. & 28. 3. Ruth. 1. 20, 21. This is set in the forefront of the Creed, to make us believe all the other Articles, it is not only an Article of our faith, but the foundation of all the other Articles of our Faith. We should not believe that Christ was born of a Virgin, nor the resurrection of the body, unlesse we believed that he was Almighty.

Omnipotentia tantùm hic expressa fit mentio, quod hac vox reliquas Dei perfectiones suo ambitu Concludat; maximè insuper ad fidem, spem, humilitatemque fidelium Confirmandam persuasio omnipotentiæ Dei Conducit. Bayi Institut. Relig. Christ. l. 1. c. 49. Cyrill of Jerusalem saith, God is so stiled here for the Heathens and and Jews, who either thought that God was the ſoul of the world, or limited his power and providence to the Heavens. Petavius de Deo, l. 5. So called, becauſe he rules over all, and doth what he will, Pſalm 115. 3. As the Father is Almighty, ſo is the Sonne, and alſo the holy Ghoſt; yet (as Athanaſius ſaith) there are not three Almightie's, but one Almighty: for the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, are one and the ſame God, and ſo one and the ſame Almighty.

God as God is Almighty, and therefore each Perſon of the Trinity being God, is Almighty.

Patri peculiariter aſcribitur Creatio cœli & terræ, quæ tamen ad Patrem referuntur omnium principium. Zanchius de Symb. Apoſt.

3. His Effect, [maker of Heaven and Earth] Gen. 1. 1. See Heb. [1. 2.] this is a proof of his Almightineſſe. The work of Creation is aſcribed here to the Father, though it be common to all the three perſons equally, the Sonne is Creator, John 1. 2. Heb. 1. 2. and the holy Ghoſt, Gen. 1. 2. Job 33. 4. But the Father alone createth after a peculiar manner, viz. by the Sonne, and by the holy Ghoſt: but the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt createth not by the Father but from him.

Not only the work of Creation, but Gods providence in governing all things is implied, for God did not caſt off the care of his Creatures, John 5. 17.

This Article oppoſeth thoſe Hereticks, which held, that the world was made by Angels, as Simon Magus, Menander, Saturninus, all the Gnoſticks, and the Manichees, which ſaid, that all viſible things were created by the Devill.

Heaven in Scripture ſignifies all that is above the Earth. Earth ſignifies the whole maſſe or body conſiſting of Sea and Land, on which we live, and all things that be in, or upon the earth, Exod. 10. 12. Jonah 1. 9. Nehem. 9. 6. I do truely profeſſe, that I really believe, and am fully perſwaded, that both heaven and earth, and all things contained in them, have not their being of themſelves, but were made in the beginning; that the manner by which all things were made, was by mediate or immediate creation. Doctor Pearſons Expoſition of the Creed, Art. 1.

ARTICLE II.

And in Jeſus Chriſt his only Sonne our Lord.

Petavius de Trinitate, lib. 1. cap. 14. In his 4th Tome of Theologica Dogmata, de Incarnatione, lib. 1. cap. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. he reckons up ten hereſies againſt the Incarnation of Chriſt.

BEcauſe in Chriſtum præcipuus Trinitatis hoſtium impetus ac furor incubuit, therefore the Creed is more large and copious in ſpeaking of him, than any other of the Perſons in the Trinity, there being ſix Articles concerning him.

And] Notes the unity of faith, ſaith Angelus Del Pas. As it is neceſſary to believe in God; ſo is it to believe in Jeſus Chriſt, John 14. 1. He is the only Mediator betwixt God and us, 1 Tim. 2. 5. We cannot have acceſſe to God, but by him, John 14. 6.

This ſecond Article preſents unto us the object of our faith, the ſecond Perſon of the bleſſed Trinity, that as in the Divinity there is nothing intervening betweene the Father and the Sonne, ſo that immediate union might be perpetually expreſſed by a conſtant conjunction in our Chriſtian Confeſſion.

Poſt confeſſionem Dei Patris, qui nos creavit, recta methodo ſubjungitur profeſſio Dei Filij, qui nos redemit, ac poſtea Dei Spiritus Sancti, qui nos ſanctificavit, ut intelligamus nos ab uno Deo creatos, redemptos ac ſanctificate donatos. Bayi Inſtitut. Relig. Chriſt. lib. 1. cap. 134. Qui hunc Articulum, quod Chriſtus Jeſus ſit verus Deus & verus homo, pro nobis mortuus & reſuſcitatus, firmiter credit, & conſtanter retinet, huic reliqui omnes Articuli ſuffragantur, & firmiſſimi aſſentiuntur. Lutherus de Symbolo.

The

The Ancient Christians necessarily published many Confessions, especially in the four Oecumenicall Counsels, to expound this one Article of the Faith concerning the Person of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The second Person of the Trinity is described to us (in this and the following Articles which Concern him) by three things.

1. His Titles.
2. His Incarnation.
3. His twofold estate.

His Titles mentioned in this Article are in number four.

1. Jesus.
2. Christ.
3. His onely Sonne.
4. Our Lord.

Jesus] This name comes of a word in the Hebrew, which signifies to save, and it imports as much as a Saviour, the reason of the name is rendred, Matth. 1. 21. He was called so when he was circumcised, Luke 2. 21. after the manner of the Jews, as in Baptism it is the manner among us to have Infants first named. Rami Comment. de Relig. Christ.

We must take heed of abusing that sacred name any waies.

Cavendum est, ne sacro isto nomine pro signo admirationis abutamur, nevo illud profanemus, aut in vanum assumamus. Bayi Institut. Relig. Christ. lib. 1. cap. 144.

Christ[d]] This is a Greek name, (as the other was Hebrew) and signifies annointed. He was called Messiah in the Old Testament, Dan. 9. 25, 26. which is an Hebrew word, signifying the same thing. See John 1. 41. & 2. 45. The reason of the name appears, Psalm 45. 7. It imports Christs threefold Office, of Prophet, Priest and King.

To believe in Christ, is to believe that he is our Head and Saviour, that we are his members, and shall be saved by him. Nomen Christiani unumquemque admonet suæ professionis, ut memor sit ejus, cujus est discipulus. Bayi Institut. Relig. Christ.

Symb. Apost. Unicus & ad Filium referri & ad Dominum potest. Unus verè Filius: & unus verè Dominus noster, Jesus Christus.* Danæus Exposit. Symb. Apost. Vide Erasm. Explanat. Symb. Apost. Commonly in Scripture these two are joyned together, Lord Jesus, or Lord and Saviour; if he be not our Lord, he will not be our Saviour, Heb. 5. 9.

His only Sonne] That is, the only Sonne of the first Person, the Father, by nature, by generation, Psalm 2. 7. therefore God, and a Person distinct from the Father, Luke 1. 35. See Dr Arrowsmith on John 1. 1.

He only is the eternal and natural Sonne, but we are for his sake by grace adopted of the Father, John 1. 12. Gal. 3. 26.

These words confute Carpocrates, Cerinthus, and the Ebionites, which held Christ to be the Sonne of Joseph and Mary, after the manner of other men. Sabellius, who said that the Father and Sonne was the same Person; and Arius, who said he was not of the same essence with the Father.

Our Lord,] Luke 2. 21. Christ is our Lord.

1. As he is God, Psal. 118. 27.
2. As he is Mediator betwixt God and man, Mat. 28. 18. Rom. 14. 9.

Dominus est qui habet jus vel in rem vel in personam. Ursinus Explicat. Catechet.

He is our Lord,

1. By Creation, Heb. 1. 2.
2. By preservation, Heb. 1. 3. Act. 17. 28.
3. By Redemption, 1 Cor. 6. 20.
4. By particular Covenant, Cant. 2. 16.

ARTICLE III.

Conceived by the holy Ghoſt, born of the Virgin Mary.

IN the foregoing words is ſhewed Chriſts Divinity and Godhead; in theſe and the reſt that follow, is ſhewed his Humanity and Manhood. He was true God aud true Man: yea, theſe words ſhew the manner of Chriſts Incarnation, and how he aſſumed our nature, John 1. 14. that is, the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity, the Son, aſſumed humane nature, and was made man, Phil. 2. 6, 7.

The ſecond Perſon I ſay, for theſe reaſons.

1. By whom the Father created all things, and man eſpecially, by him man being fallen, is to be redeemed; man was at the firſt created of the Father, by the Sonne: and therefore to be redeemed by him.

2. It was moſt convenient, that he which is the eſſential Image of the Father, ſhould take mans nature, that he might reſtore the Image of God loſt in man.

3. It was requiſite, that that Perſon which was by nature the Sonne of God, ſhould be made the Sonne of Man, that we, which are the ſonnes of men, yea, the ſonnes of wrath, ſhould again by grace be made the Sonnes of God.

The Father could not be Incarnate, for to take fleſh is to be ſent of another, but the Father can not be ſent of any Perſon, becauſe he is from none. The holy Ghoſt could not be Incarnate, for then there ſhould be more Sonnes than one in the Trinity, viz. the ſecond Perſon, the Sonne of the Father, and the third Perſon, the holy Ghoſt, the Sonne of the Virgin Mary.

The Sonne of God muſt become man.

1. To ſhew his love hereby to mankind.
2. To honour man.
3. That he might be in all things a mercifull High-Prieſt.

See Heb. 2. 14, 16, 17. verſes.

Cum mortem nec ſolus Deus ſentire, nec ſolus homo ſuperare poſſet, humanitatem cum divinitate ſociavit, ut alterius imbecillitatem morti in pœnam ſubiȳceret, alteritus virtute adverſus mortem in victoriam ſurgeret. Zanch. de Symb. Apoſt.

He that muſt make reconciliation between God and Man, muſt be ſuch a one as may make requeſt both to God and Man. For a Mediator is as it were a middle Perſon, making interceſſion between two other Perſons, the one offended, the other offending.

First, The Conception of Chriſt in theſe words, [Conceived by the holy Ghoſt,] Matth. 1. 20. Luke 1. 35. By the power of the holy Ghoſt, he was conceived in the Womb of his Mother.

This Expreſſion ſignifies three things.

1. The immediate action or operation of the holy Ghoſt, miraculouſly conceiving the Sonne in the Womb of the Virgin, without the ſeed of man.

2. The miraculous ſanctification of the birth, in the Womb of the Virgin; by which the holy Ghoſt ſtopped the propagation of original ſin.

3. The hypoſtatical union of the Divine and Humane Nature, made alſo by the holy Ghoſt, in the Virgins Womb, in the very Article of conception.

Urſini Explicat Catechet. Pars 2ª. Quaſt. 35.

Quia nulla voluptate carnali concupiſcentia conceptus eſt. Auguſt. Enchirid ad Laurent. cap. 38. Non eſt mirum, ſi caro illa Chriſti extraordinaria vi ac lege concepta, nihil de ordinaria contagione traxit. Petavius de Incarnat. l. 11. c. 12. Vide plura ibid.

Secondly, His birth in theſe words following, [born of the Virgin Mary,] Gal. 4. 4. This woman was called Mary, which is the ſame name with Miriam, as it is written in the Old Teſtament. When ſhe conceived and bare Chriſt, ſhe was a pure Virgin, Isaiah 7. 14. It was prophecyed of Christ, who was conceived and born of a Virgin, Matth. 1. 22, 23.

The words of the Creed as they now stand, clearly distinguish the conception of Jesus Christ from his Nativity, attributing the first to the holy Ghost, the second to the blessed Virgin; whereas the ancient Creeds make no such distinction, but without any particular mention of the conception, had it only in this manner, Who was born by the holy Ghost, of the Virgin Mary, understanding by the word born, not only the nativity, but also the conception and generation.

Qui natus est de Spiritu sancto ex Maria Virgine. Ruffinus in Symbolo. Aug. Enchyr. ad Laurentium, cap. 34, 37, 38.

He came of a woman, that he might be our brother, and repair the honour of that sex.

Of a Virgin, that he might avoid the contagion of original sinne.

The name of the Mother of Christ is added, to shew, that he came of the lineage of David, and that therefore he was the true Messias before spoken of. See Doctor Mores Explanation of The Grand Mystery of Godliness, lib. 4. cap. 1. and 2d.

Symbolum exprimit Virginis nomen ad majorem historiæ fidem. Sic expressit nomen Jesu Christi, sic expressit nomen & cognomen præsidis sub Pontio Pilato. Erasm. Explanat. Symb. Apost.

There are four Maries mentioned in the Gospel.

The first is Mary the Mother of Christ.

The second, Mary the wife of Cleophas, the sister of the Virgin Mary, John 19. 25.

The third, Mary Magdalen, named also there.

The fourth, Mary the sister of Martha and Lazarus, Luk. 10. 39, 42.

This Article of our Faith is opposed,

1. By the Jews, who say that the Hebrew word Almah, Esay 7. signifies a young Woman, not a Virgin.

Gen. 24. vers. 16, 43. Rebeccah is so termed, Cant. 1. 3. The LXX. translate it ἡ παρθένος, the Virgin.

2. The Heathens, who say it is impossible, against reason and experience, that a Virgin should conceive. It is above reason, it is a truth grounded on Gods power.

ARTICLE IV.

Suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified dead and buried.

CHrists whole life was a continual suffering, but the things that he suffered at the last, at and immediately before his death, were such, and so great, that they peculiarly are called his Passion, or Suffering. This is that which is here said, [Suffered under Pontius Pilate.]

Passio Christi statim sequitur ejus conceptionem & nativitatem.

By Christs Passion is understood all his humiliation, all the miseries, infirmities, sorrows, torments, both in soul and body, to which Christ from his birth to the hour of his death, was obnoxious for our sakes.

1. Quia in ejus passione & morte tota nostra salus consistit.

This Pontius Pilate was Governour of Judea under Tiberius the Romane Emperour, to whom the Jews were then subject. See Luke 3. 1. He was the Judg that gave sentence upon Christ, and condemned him, as all the Evangelists record. Josephus and Tacitus Annal. l. 15. testifie, that Christ was put to death by him. The Scripture more fully relates what Christ suffered, how he was buffetted, spit

2. Quia tota ejus vita fuit continua passio & calamitas. Ursini explicat. Catechet. Part.

The ancient custome of the world was to make their computation by their Governours, and referre their historical relations to the respective times of their government.

Ejus mentio ad temporis significationem non ad personæ illius pertinet dignitatem, Aug. Serm. 181. de Tempore.

Id non ad historiæ fidem modò spectat, sed ut sciamus mortem ejus conjunctam cum damnatione fuisse. Calv. Catech. Relig. Christ.

We are admonished by this of the fulfilling of the Oracles, Gen. 49. 10. The name of Pilate makes for our confirmation, that Jesus was the exhibited Messiah. For now the Scepter was taken away, because he is condemned by a Romane Judg, saith Ursin Explicat. Catechet.

To believe therefore in Christ suffering under Pontius Pilate, (saith he) is to believe he suffered from his birth, miseries of all kinds, especially at the latter end of his life under Pilate, and that he suffered for me, and by his Passion also satisfied for my sinnes.

Was crucified] Here follows now more particularly after what manner Christ suffered. He was crucified, that is, nailed alive to the Crosse, and so did hang untill he was dead. So the History of the Gospel shews, and hence the crosse of Christ is so much spoken of in Scripture.

Non solum apud Gentiles crucis supplicium exsecrandum & dedecoris ignominiaque plenissimum semper existimatum est, verum etiam in lege Moysis. Catech. Rom. Crucifixus sub Pontio Pilato & sepultus. Rufinus. Ut unde mors oriebatur, inde vita resurgeret: serpens enim qui in ligno primos parentes vicerat, victus est à Christo ligno Crucis. Catech. Rom. pars 1. p. 70.

This kind of punishment was not in use among the Jews, untill they came under the power of the Romans, with whom it was frequent. It was both a painfull and ignominious punishment, inflicted on the meanest persons and vilest malefactors; yea it was a cursed kind of punishment, Christ submitted to it, to free us from the curse due to us by our sinnes, Phil. 2. 8. Gal. 3. 13.

In the most ancient Creeds, Christs Passion was not distinguisht from his Crucifixion, we say suffered and crucified, they only crucified under Pontius Pilate, and where we read, crucified dead and buried, they only crucified and buried.

He was crucified, that we might know he came under the Law, and suffered the curse of it for us.

Dead] Christ suffered death to free us from death, from the second death altogether, John 8. 51. & 11. 26. and from the first death as it is a curse. The nature of it is changed to believers, it is to them as an entrance into life eternal, 1 Cor. 15. 56, 57.

Christ died,

1. To satisfie Gods justice, the wages of sin is death, Rom. 6. 23. Christ stood in our room.

2. That his will and Testament might be firm and effectual, Heb. 9. 16, 17.

3. To destroy him that had the power of death, Heb. 2. 14.

Basilides and the Manichees held, that Christ did suffer in shew. The Patripassians held that the Father suffered.

And buried] Christ being dead was buried, as the Evangelists testifie.

He was buried,

1. That the prophecies and types of the Old Testament might be fulfilled, Psal. 16. 10. Mat. 12. 40.

2. That we might not fear the grave.

3. His burial was a further degree of his humiliation, Job 21. 31, 32, 33.

ARTICLE

ARTICLE V.

He descended into hell, the third day he rose again from the dead.

HE descended into hell,] As all the other Articles of the Creed are grounded upon and clear by Scripture, so is this also, Psalm 16. 10. compared with Acts 2. 25. See Bucer on Psal. 16. 10. not the place of the damned, but the estate of the dead, or the power of death is meant by hell, say many worthy [e] Divines. The meaning of the Article is, that Christ so humbled himself, as that for a while he was in the estate of the dead, and under the power of death, though (as David prophesied of him) he did not long continue in that estate, but was soon delivered out of it, Rom. 6. 9.

Hæc particula licet non in omnibus conciliorum Symbolis & Patrum scriptis reperiatur: tamen universali Ecclesiæ consensu recepta est, & ex puro Dei verbo desumta. Zanchius *de Symb. Apost. This Article of Christ descent into hell, was generally received in after-times, and found in the Recitals and Expositions of the Apostles Creed, both with Protestants and Papists; yet there is much discord among Writers, about the sense of the clause. See Doctor Taylors History of the Life and Death of Christ, part 3. Sect. 16. Master Thorndikes 3. Book Of the Laws of the Church. Doctor Mores Explanat. of the Grand Mystery of Godliness, l. 1. c. 10.

The third day he rose again from the dead,] After Christs humiliation followed his exaltation, the first step and degree whereof was his resurrection or rising from the dead.

Humiliatio mediatoris non debuit diu aut perpetuò esse, sed satis erat eum semel passum & mortuum esse. Ursin Explicat. Cat.

That Christ rose from the dead, all the Evangelists have diligently recorded, and the Apostles diligently preached. See Acts 1. 22. & 4. 33. & 1 Cor. 15. 4, 15. This Article is of great concernment, 1 Cor. 15. 14, 17. To yield to this truth, is the Creed of the Creed. Dr Holyday on 1 Cor. 15. 20.

He rose,

The resurrection of the members, depends on the resurrection of the head.

1. Truely, his soul returned to his body.
2. He rose in the same person, in his Humane Nature, in which he suffered.
3. By his own power, John 2. 19. & 5. 21. & 10. 18.

The reasons why he rose, were

1. For his own and Fathers glory, Rom. 1. 4.
2. To discharge his Office, which he could not have done, if he had continued dead, Psal. 45. 7.

The third day] After that he died. He died the day before the Jewish Sabbath, that is on friday (as we call it) in the afternoon, and was buried the same day. That part of the day stands for the whole day, and also the night before, which (the Jews beginning their natural day, that consists of twenty four hours at evening, Levit. 23. 30.) did belong unto it. Then he rested in the grave all the night following, and the next day which we call Saturday. And the night after he also remained in the grave, rising early in the morning on Sunday, as we call it.

Hac voce & mortis & resurrectionis veritas exprimitur, quasi dicat; & tandem, quâ cæteri homines naturæ lege defunguntur, mortem objit & in eadem quasi mortalem susceperat carne, immortalitatem recepit. Zanchius de Symb. Apost.

Together with that night is reckoned the day following, to which it belonged, and so taking the part for the whole (as sometimes it is taken) Christ was three dayes and three nights in the grave, though otherwise he was little above two nights and one day in it. See Esth. 5. 1.

From

From the dead] That is, the number of the dead, among whom he was in the grave.

He lay so long, that it might be known that he was truely dead, and he continued no longer, that he might not in his body see corruption, and that he might soon comfort his Disciples and others.

Cerinthus denied the resurrection of Christ.

ARTICLE VI.

He ascended into Heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty.

Acts 1. 9, 11.

THis is the second step of Christs exaltation, a visible, local, and true translation of the body and soul of Christ from Earth to Heaven, above all visible Heavens, to the right hand of God, where he now is and remains, whence he shall come to judgment.

He ascended,

1. For his own and his Fathers glory, Eph. 4.20.
2. That we might also ascend, and be certain of our ascension, Joh. 14.3.
3. That it might appear, that his kingdome is not of this world.

Vide Bayi Institut. Relig. Christ. lib. 1. cap. 251. Pet. Mart. loc. commun. & Bodium in c. 1. Ephes. v. 20. Sedere hoc loco non situm & figuram corporis significat, sed eum regiæ summaque potestatis ac gloriæ firmam & stabilem possessione, quam à patre acceptam declarat. Catech. Rom. Psal. 110. 1. Summa est phrasis ex consuetudine magnorum dominorum seu regum, qui quos honorant, à dexteris collocant, & suos habent assessores, quibus regendi partes committunt: sic per Christum pater omnia in Cœlo & in terra regere vult & gubernare. Ursin Explicat. Catechet. Vide Calv. Cat. & Zanch. de Symb. See Smith on the Apost. Creed.

And sitteth on the right hand of God] This is the highest step of Christs exaltation. It is expresly mentioned, Mark 16.9. Heb. 1. 3. It is not the intent of the holy Ghost, to shew what bodily posture now in Heaven Christ useth. But to sit is a posture of State, and Authority. Judges and Magistrates use to sit, and others in token of reverence and subjection to stand before them, Exod. 18.14. To shew Christs honour and dignity, his power and authority, he is usually in Scripture said to sit at the right hand of God. Amongst men it is an honour to be set at ones right hand, 1 King. 2.19.

It consists in four things, saith Ursin.

1. In the perfection of the Divine Nature.
2. In the exaltation of the Humane Nature of Christ.
3. In the excellency of his Mediatory Office.
4. In the perfection of his honour, reverence, and worship, Psalm 97. 7. Heb. 1. 16.

Sitting signifies,

1. Habitation, possession and continuance, as Yashab in Hebrew, Judg. 5.17. and the Greek word often signifies.
2. Rest, quietness, Micah 4. 4.
3. Dominion, Soveraignty and Majesty, Heb. 12. 2.
4. The right of Judicature, Prov. 20.8. Isa. 16.5.

The Father Almighty,] The word Almighty is repeated upon special reason, because Christs sitting at the right hand of God, doth presuppose omnipotency, Rev. 5. In vain were all power in Heaven and earth given to him, unless he were omnipotent as the Father to execute the same.

The Seleucians said, Christ put off his flesh, and placed it in the Sun.

ARTICLE VIII.

I believe in the holy Ghost.

AFter the Articles concerning the two other Persons of the Trinity, the Father and the Sonne, follows this Article concerning the third Person, the holy Ghost.

The Spirit of God in Scripture is taken three wayes.

First, For the Essence, Power, and Nature of God absolutely, Psalm 139. 7. Acts 5. 3, 4.

Secondly, For a Person proceeding from the Father and the Sonne, but having a distinct existence of himself.

Thirdly, For those impulses, motions, and spiritual gifts that come from him, Act. 19. 2. 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6.

1. The Title of the Person, holy Ghost, or Spirit.
2. The action of faith, repeated from the beginning, I believe.

This Person in Scripture is called The Spirit, 1 John 5. 6. Ephes. 5. 18. The Spirit of God, and The Spirit of Christ, Rom. 8. 9. The Holy Spirit, or The holy Ghost, Luke 11. 13. Rom. 5. 5. and 1 John 5. 7. God as God is a Spirit, John 4. 24. And so also holy, Isaiah 6. 3. And therefore God the Father is a holy Spirit, and so God the Sonne; yet the name is appropriated to the third Person, that Person is peculiarly called The Spirit, and The holy Spirit, or The holy Ghost, either as being after an ineffable manner breathed forth (as it were) from the Father and the Son; or as inspiring the Prophets and Apostles, 2 Pet. 1. 20.

Hac tertia Symboli parte sex articuli continentur, quorum primus est de ipsa Spiritus Sancti persona, alter de Ecclesia, quæ per Spiritum Sanctum colligitur, confirmatur & conservatur; quatuor sequentes sunt, de beneficijs Christi per Spiritum Sanctum in Ecclesiam collatis, communione Sanctorum, remissione peccatorum, resurrectione carnis, & vita æterna. Ursini Explicat. Catecher. pars 2da Dominica 20. Tertia pars Symboli tractat de Spiritu Sancto & speciali ejus operatione; quæ est Sanctificatio, quæ declaratur partim ex objecto, quæ est Ecclesia; partim ex effecto, quod est communio sanctorum. Alstedij Theol. Catechet. Spiritus à Spirando, sicut Πνευμα à Πνεω Ursinus ibid.

This Person also is peculiarly called Holy, as working sanctification, and making holy. The Father doth sanctifie, and so the Sonne, but by the holy Ghost, Ezek. 36 27. whence sanctification is called sanctification of the Spirit, 2 Thess. 2. 13.

and they that are regenerated, are ſaid to be born of the Spirit, Joh. 3. 5, 6, 8.

I believe in] A conjunction might have been ſufficient, but that ſo many particulars concerning the Sonne do intervene. For as we are baptized in the name of the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt: ſo do we make confeſſion of our Faith, ſaying, I believe in the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt; and the Ancients, whoſe Creed was ſomewhat ſhorter, made no repetition of the act of faith, but only an addition of the object, And in the holy Ghoſt. Doctor Pearſons Expoſition of the Creed.

To believe in the holy Ghoſt, is

1. To acknowledg the holy Ghoſt as he hath revealed himſelf in the Word.
2. In ſpecial, to believe that he is my ſanctifier and comforter.
3. To put all the confidence of my heart in him for that cauſe.

First, He is God equall with the Father and the Sonne, Acts 5. 3, 4. for we are not to put our confidence in any but God alone.

Secondly, The holy Ghoſt is a Perſon, not an Attribute, as Wiſedom, Mercy, Power. But as the Father is a Perſon, hath proper and peculiar ſubſiſtence, and as the Sonne is a Perſon, ſo is the holy Ghoſt a Perſon likewiſe, Matth. 3. 16. Nothing but a Perſon can aſſume a bodily ſhape, wherein to appear and ſhew it ſelf.

Thirdly, He is a Perſon diſtinct from the Father and the Sonne, they are three, John 5. 7. The holy Ghoſt is called another, viz. beſides the Father and the Sonne, John 14. 16, 17.

Laſtly, The holy Ghoſt is a Perſon proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. He is therefore called the Spirit of the Sonne, Gal 4. 6. and is ſaid to be ſent by the Sonne, John 15. 26. therefore he is mentioned in the laſt place in the Creed.

The work of the Spirit is threefold.

1. To regenerate or bring grace into the ſoul, John 3. 3, 5.
2. To act and exerciſe every grace.
3. To diſcover to us our intereſt in the favour of God, this is called the ſealing and earneſt of the Spirit, Epheſ. 4. 30. & 1. 14. 2 Cor. 5. 5.

Some Divines reckon up theſe as choice effects of the Spirit.

1. It elevates a man to live to God, whom have I in Heaven but thee; The Lord is my portion.
2. It ſubdues and mortifies all the luſts of the fleſh, Rom. 8. 13, 14.
3. It expels formality and cuſtomarineſſe in performing religious duties.
4. Such have a ſpiritual judgment and diſcerning of ſpiritual gifts.
5. It wonderfully helps us, eſpecially in the duty of Prayer, Rom. 8. 26. teacheth us what and how to pray.

The Spirit teacheth, regenerates, unites to Chriſt and God, rules, comforts and confirmes; Theſe ſpecial parts of the Office of the Spirit are comprehended in this Diſtich,

Spiritus ecce docet, renovat, copulatque, regitque,
Et Conſolatur verba ſalutifera.

ARTICLE

ARTICLE IX.

The holy Catholick Church, the Communion of Saints.

HItherto I have handled the first part of the Creed, concerning God; now followeth the second part thereof, concerning the Church.

Ancient Expositors have sufficiently determined what words are to be supplied in this Article, I believe the holy Catholick Church, not I believe in the holy Catholick Church, as in the holy Ghost. Epiphanius in Anchor. reads the Article thus, I believe in the holy Catholick Church, but by this kind of speech he signified, that he believed there was a Catholick Church.

Mr Perkins on the Creed quotes Ruffinus in Symb. Aug. Tract. 29. in Joh.

1. We believe that God hath a Church.
2. We believe it is holy and universal, or Catholick, that it was from the beginning, hath been in all ages, and is all the world over.
3. That we are members of that Church.

Id est, non solum credo Ecclesiam sanctam & Catholicam esse: sed etiam in hanc me insitum esse confido quæ est electorum multitudo.

In the Original langauge of the New Testament, the Church hath her name from being called forth. It is the company of such as God doth call out of the estate of sinne and misery, to the estate of grace and salvation, Acts 2. 47. Corpus & societas fidelium, quos Deus ad vitam eternam prædestinavit. Calv. Cat.

Zanchius de Symb. Apost. Ecclesiæ vocabulo intelligitur tota multitudo electorum, qui ita nominantur ex eo, quod suo quisque tempore efficaciter à mundo seu genere humano vocatur ad nuptias illas cœlestes agni, seu ad communionem cum Deo Patre & Filio ejus. Piscat. Exposit. Symb.

The Church is set forth by certain properties and prerogatives.

The properties are two, holiness and largeness.

The prerogatives or benefits which God bestoweth on it are four.

1. Communion of Saints.
2. Forgivenesse of sinnes.
3. The resurrection of the body.
4. Life everlasting.

The Church is called holy.

Sancta dicitur hæc congregatio quia quotquot æternæ Dei providentia electi sunt, ut in Ecclesiæ coopterentur Corpus, spirituali regeneratione omnes à Deo sanctificantur. Zanch. de Symb. Apost.

1. Because all that are outwardly and visibly of the Church, are called to be holy, 1 Cor. 1. 2. 1 Thes. 4. 7. and do profess holiness, 1 Tim. 2. 10.
2. Because all that are indeed of the Church are holy. They that are of the Church Triumphant, are prefectly holy, and they that are of the Church Militant, are also holy in some measure, though not in full measure, 1 Cor. 6. 11.

It is called Catholick, a word derived from the Greek, and signifies General or Universal, to distinguish it from particular Churches. The Universal Church is the whole company of believers throughout the world, 1 Cor. 1. 2. or the whole number of true Christians upon earth, for we meddle not now with that part which is in Heaven.

Hæc electorum societas Catholica dicitur, id est, universalis: quia ij Dei electi, non in uno tantum loco sunt, sed per totum terrarum orbem diffusi: ita tamen ut in Christo omnes uniti sint per Spiritum Sanctum. Zanchius De Symbolo Apostolico. Ut Ecclesia quæ toto orbe obtineret, distingueretur à Conventiculis hæreticorum & schismaticorum, quales Novatianorum, & postea Donatistarum. Vossij Dissertat. 1. de Tribus Symbolis Sect. 39.

This Article was brought into the Creed after the Nicene Synod against the Novatians and Donatists. This word (Catholick) was not put in our Creed, to distinguish a pure Church from an impure, but to distinguish the Jewish Church in times past tied to Jerusalem, from the Christian Church, which by the coming of Jesus Christ, was spread throughout the world. Mornay of the Church.

It is so called,

1. In it self, because it comprehends all times, places, and persons.
2. In respect of the Jews, Ephes. 2. 14.
3. In respect of the Donatists, which confined it to Africk.

The Protestants teach, that the Catholick Church we believe, is the invisible Church of true believers, and not onely the Romane Church, and those who do subject themselves to the Bishop of Rome. Mr Tombes his Rom. dissuaded Art. 1. Sect. 11. See more there.

To believe the holy Catholick Church, is to believe that Christ hath a people dispersed through the world, which are sanctified by his Spirit, and made a peculiar people, and that I am one of that number.

Learned men of the Roman party are not agreed concerning the Catholick Church; some saying, that it is the virtual Church, that is, the Pope; some that it is the Representative Church, that is, a Councel; some, that it is the Pope and the Councel, the virtual and Representative Church together; some say, the Essential or Diffusive Church is the Catholick.

Fuit aliquando Articulus Fidei, universalem Ecclesiam per totum mundum diffusam, esse Ecclesiam Christi Catholicam, cui Christus ipse perpetuam promisit assistentiam; nunc Articulum hunc Fidei, nostri Romani corruxerant, ut jam Catholica Ecclesia, ipsa Romana Curia intelligatur. Marcus Antonius de Dominis.

Templum Domini was not a more mocking plea among the Jews of old, than Ecclesia Catholica is this day among Christians, those challenge it whole that have it not, and those that have right to it are excluded with equal importunity.

B. Halls let. parænetical to a Worthy Knight ready to revolt from the Religion established, in his Remaining Works.

Hanc particulam sic quidam accipiunt, ut per appositionem exponat priorem, sanctam Ecclesiam. Societatis enim vocabulum est Ecclesia, & inter omnia Christi membra jugis & individua conjunctio est. Erasm.

The Communion of Saints.] This, and the following Articles speak of the benefits of Christ bestowed upon the Church by the holy Ghost.

The first benefit is expresst in these words.

Communion is a relation between two or more, having something common.

If we adde I believe unto these words, the meaning is this; I confesse and acknowledge that there is a spiritual fellowship and society among all the members of Christ, being the faithfull servants and children of God. And withall I believe that I am partaker of the same with the rest.

Calvin, Ruffinus on the Creed, and Austin in his Enchyridion say, That this Article is for the most part omitted by the ancient Writers, yet it is well and fitly inserted; for the Church being one body, the Saints which belong to it must needs have fellowship together.

Exposit. Symb. Apost. Communio est relatio inter duos vel plures, rem sive possessionem communem habentes. Communio sanctorum est aequalis participatio omnium promissionum Evangelicarum; seu, est communis possessio Christi, & omnium beneficiorum ejus: & collatio donorum in salutem corporis, quæ singulis membris data sunt. Significat unionem Ecclesiæ cum Christo & membrorum inter se; & quidem tum Christiana persona, utraque videlicet naturâ, divinâ & humanâ. Ursin. Explicat. Catechet. pars 2da. Dominica 21. Qu. 54. See Dr Pearsons Exposition of the Creed, and Bodius on the 4th of the Ephesians, ver. 4, 5, 6.

By Saints are meant holy ones; of such only doth the Church consist. There are Saints on earth, as well as in Heaven; although not such compleat and perfect Saints, Psalm 16.3. Rom. 15.25. Phil. 4.22.

Saints by imputation, inchoation, and separation.

First, The Saints have communion with God, he being peculiarly their God, and they peculiarly his people; he their Father, and they his children, 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18.

Secondly, They have communion with Christ, he being their Head, and they his members, Ephes. 5. 23, 30. He regenerates and governs them by one and the same Spirit, sheds his love into all their hearts, nourisheth all with the same food.

Thirdly, They have communion one with another, as having near relation one to another, being children of one and the same Father, and members of one and the same body.

1. The Saints in Heaven have communion one with another, they rejoyce one in anothers happinesse, and glorifie God one for another.

2. The Saints on earth have communion among themselves, so as to teach and admonish one another, Col. 3. 6. to comfort one another, 1 Thess. 4. 18. to pray one for another, James 5. 15. to succour and relieve one another, 1 Peter 4. 10.

pray

This Article was put in against Schismaticks.

ARTICLE X.

The forgiveness of sins.

THis second benefit is peculiar to the Church, Isa. 32.24. Jer. 31.33. procured by the death and passion of Christ, whereby God for the merit of Christ esteems of sinne as no sinne, or as not committed, Psalm 32. 1. Esay 44. 22. & 38.17. Micah 7.19. That sinne is forgiven through Christ. See Luke 24.42. Acts 5.31. & 13.38,39. John 1.29. 1 John 2.2,12.

We must adde to this clause I believe, and then the meaning is this: I do not only believe that God doth give pardon of sinne to his Church and people (for that the very Devils believe) but withall I believe the forgiveness of mine own particular sins.

Credo tum omnes electos, tum me quoq; habere à Deo remissionem omnium peccatorum propter satisfactionem Christi in cruce præstitam. Piscat. Exposit. Symb. Apost. Dr Pearson on the Creed.

After Christ is declared to us by whose righteousnesse God is become propitious, and the Spirit by whose sanctification we communicate with Christ and the Church which riseth thence, then remission of sins is added, by which we are ingraffed into the Church.

This Article hath alwayes been expresly contained and acknowledged in the Creed, as being a most necessary part of our Christian profession: and for some ages it immediately followed the belief of the holy Church, and was therefore added immediately after it, to shew that remission of sins was to be obtained in the Church of Christ.

This Article is against the Novatians.

ARTICLE XI.

The resurrection of the body.

THere shall be a corporal Resurrection, a rising again of the body, though the soul be separated from it, and it be laid in the dust, and turned to dust, yet the soul shall be re-united to it, and it shall be raised up.

Neither the Greek nor the Latine ever delivered this Article in these terms, but the Resurrection of the flesh, because there may be ambiguity in the one, in relation to the celestial and spiritual bodies, but cannot be in the other.

Dr Pearsons Exposition of the Creed. Etymi respectu Resurrectionis vox Latina est. Dicitur à resurgendo, & ab illis, qui somno soluti, ad eos in Ecclesia transfuntur, qui è sepulchris seu cœmeteriis resumunt. Hottinger. de Resurrectione. Resurrectio seu resuscitatio erit, 1. Instauratio ejusdem corporis, hoc est, recollectio illius materiæ quæ corpus nostrum constituit, & quæ in omnia elementa fuit dissipata. 2. Unio corporis cum eadem anima quam prius habuit, & vivificatio per eam, & effectio immortalitatis in ea. 3. Glorificatio electorum, & abjectio reproborum sempiterna. Ursinus Explicat. Catechet. pars 2da. Dominica 22. Quæst. 57. Credo corpora omnia electorum, & meum quoque (si mortuus fuero) in fine mundi, in adventu Domini ad judicium, in vitam revocatum iri: animasq; eorundem, itemq; meam, postea quam inde ab emigratione è corporibus in Cœlo beatam vitam egere cœperint, in suum quæque corpus iterum introductum iri, nec non corpora eorundem glorificatum iri, hoc est, incorruptibilia & splendida redditum iri. Resurrectio impiorum per synecdochen membri etiam hic intelligi potest: sicut in articulo sequenti vox æterna tum vitæ æternæ. Piscat. Exposit. Symb.

1. Christs charge, Of those that thou hast given me I have lost none.

2. Their near union with Christ. This is largely handled by Paul, 1 Cor. 15. 13, 16. If the Head be risen, then the members also shall rise againe, vers. 14, 18.

3. Gods covenant made with his Church, with the whole man, Matthew 22. 32.

This seems incredible to a meer natural man; the Philosophers at Athens marvelled when they heard Paul speak of it, Acts 17. 18, 32. But they that believe Gods word, believe this, that the dead shall rise again, John 11. 24. Acts 24. 15. The Heathens derided Christians for believing this great truth, Audetis ridere nos, quod mortuorum dicamus resurrectionem futuram. Arnob. adverſ. Gentes l. 2.

Marcion & cæteri hæretici qui corporis resurrectionem negabant, quum Scripturæ testimoniis, quibus hominem resurgere efficitur, revincerentur, hominem distinguebant in interiorem & exteriorem, atque interiorem hominem, id est, animam verum hominem proprie esse dicebant; contra quos disputat. Tertul. Herald. Ahimadverſ. ad Arnob. l. 2. Multi ex veteribus hæreticis negarunt carnis resurrectionem esse futuram. Quæ hæresis apud Judæos fuit primum orta. Alfonsus de Castro adverſus Hæreses l. 13.

It is a Question, An resurrectio mortuorum sit nota & demonstrabilis natura? Whether the resurrection of the dead be known and demonstrable by nature? Hottinger (Dissertat. 1. de resurrectione mortuorum) saith, Vexata est quæstio, and disputed by the Schoolmen both wayes; but the more plain opinion is (saith he) that it neither can be known nor demonstrated by the light of nature alone, since the resurrection is a supernatural mystery revealed by the Word. Both Jews, Christians and Mahometans bring similitudes from nature to evince it, as Hottinger proves from them severally.

Swallows, worms and flies, which seem dead in the winter season, in the Spring by vertue of the Suns heat revive again. Every morning is as it were a new resurrection.

Omnes Articuli sunt inconcussa fide tenendi, sed hic præcipuè qui præcipuum adfert solatium piis in hoc mundo afflictis: Contra, impiis terrorem, qui sine modo prolaberentur in omnia scelera, si post hanc vitam non persolverentur pietatis & impietatis præmia. Eraſ. Explanat. Symb. Apoſt.

When Mrs Katherin Brettergh was moved to make confession of her faith, she would do it oftentimes, saying the Apostles Creed, concluding the same with words of application to her self. I believe the remission of (my) sinnes, the resurrection of (my) body, and eternal life (to me) Amen. And having done, she would pray God to confirm her in that faith, ever concluding with the Lords prayer, as devoutly and reverently as any that were present.

The efficient cause of the Resurrection is the whole Trinity, singularly Christ in respect of both his Natures, Divine and Humane.

ARTICLE XII.

And the life everlasting. Amen.

THe fourth and last benefit follows in these words.

Life is that whereby any thing acteth, liveth, and moveth it self.

Spiritual life (that alone which in the Creed we confesse and believe) is the most blessed and happy estate, in which all the Elect shall reign with Christ their Head in the Heavens after this life, and after the day of Judgement for ever and ever.

It consistech in an immediate communion and conjunction with God himself, John 17. 21. Rev. 21. 3.

Hic habemus Resurrectionis nostræ metam & clausulam. Quæ hic in Symbolo non ponuntur ulla, quibus fidelis conscientia consolationem recipiat, & in salutis fiducia alatur ac confirmetur. Per consequentiam autem intelligitur, quod si pii resurgent in vitam æternam: ergo impii resurgent in mortem. Zanchius de Symbolo Apostolico. Credo, omnes sanctos, sive credentes, sive electos, & in illorum numero me quoque post celebratum universale illud judicium, à Christo receptum iri in Cœlum, ibique fruiturum æternis gaudiis & æternâ gloria. Piscat. Exposit. Symb. Hic articulus in fine ponitur, 1. Quia post alios impletur perfectè. 2. Quia est effectus aliorum omnium. Est ergo hic articulus colophon totius salutis & vitæ nostræ. Ursini Explicat. Catech. part. 2. Dominica. 22. Quæst. 57.

This

This is the end of our faith, 1 *Pet.*1.9. and therefore fitly put in the end of the Creed.

There are three Degrees of this life:

1. In this life, when men are justified and sanctified, have peace with God, John 5.24.

2. In the end of this life, when the body freed from all diseases, pains and miseries, is laid to rest in the earth, and the soul receiv'd into Heaven.

The third is after the day of Judgment, when the body and soul re-united, shall both be advanced to eternal glory

Thus much of life it self: now follows the continuance thereof, which the Scriptures have noted, in calling it eternal or everlasting, Luke 16.9. & 18.30. & 20.36. John 6.47. & 8.51. & 10.28. & 11.26. 2 *Cor.*5.1. 2 *Tim.*2.10.

It is often expresst by eternal glory, 1 Peter 5.10 Everlasting salvation, Heb. 5.9. and inheritance, *Heb.*9.15. 1 Peter 1.4. the everlasting Kingdome of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 2 *Pet.*1.9.

This circumstance greatly commends the happinesse of the godly, 1 *Thess.*4.17. as it aggravates the misery of the wicked, *Matth.*25.41,46. 2 *Thess.*1.9.

There is no mention of the rising of the wicked in the former Article, nor of their going into eternal death here, because the benefits and priviledges of the faithfull or true members of the Church are only mentioned in the Creed. In that we professe we believe everlasting life, by the contrary likewise is understood the belief of everlasting death.

This Article though not found in all, yet was expressed in many ancient Creeds.

The Devils confesse, and the Pagans have testified, that there is an everlasting life after death, this is Certitudo objecti, assured unto us, as being Promissio Dei. But when I say, that the eternal life is prepared, and belongeth to me, this is Certitudo subjecti, and opus fidei. B. Barlow his Defence of the Articles of the Protestant Religion. Article 5.

Credere vitam æternam est certò statuere post hanc vitam, fore aliam vitam, in qua Ecclesia glorificabitur, & Deus in æternum celebrabitur. 2. Me etiam membrum esse istius Ecclesiæ, & ideo vitæ æternæ participem futurum. 3. Me etiam in hac vita ejus initium habere per fidem. Ursin. Explicat. Catechet. ubi supra. Quæst.57.

Amen] This word is Signaculum fidei. It is also added to the conclusion of the Lords Prayer, *Matth.*6.13. as if a Christian should say, I believe that all these things before rehearsed are most true.

Particula ad aliquid firmandum adhibita, ut fidem assensumque nostrum significet illi rei, cui subjungitur, q. d. verè hoc erit vel fiet: vel etiam voventis & optantis in modum, q. d. Verè sit ita vel fiat: vel certo illud eveniat, quod credo & spero futurum ex animi mei sententia. Cum vox hæc in nullum aliud idioma tam perfectè transferri possit, ut una aliqua vox ei respondens ejus vim & emphasin totam exprimeret, aut exhauriret; merito sane retenta fuit in Ecclesia Christiana, perque omnium Gentium linguas etiam in publico Dei cultu celebrando transfusa. Bedius in cap. 6. ad *Ephes. vers.*23,24.

Chap. II.

Of Mans Recovery.

When the Parſon once demanded about mans miſery, Since man is ſo miſerable, What is to be done? and the anſwerer could not tell: He asked him again, What he would do if he were in a ditch? This familiar illuſtration made the anſwer ſo plain, that he was even aſhamed of his ignorance: for he could not but ſay, he would haſte out as faſt as he could. Then he proceeded to ask, Whether he could get out of the ditch alone, or whether he needed a helper, and who was that helper? Maſter Herberts Remains, Chap. 21.

SEcondly, Mans Reſtauration or Recovery from his miſerable eſtate that he had plunged himſelf into by ſin.

1. That this Recovery is.
2. The cauſes and parts of it.

Of the firſt,

It is a part of Gods ſpecial Providence, whereby man is recovered out of the ſtate of ſinne and ſlavery to Satan, Death and Hell, to an eſtate of Grace, Life and Glory. Death and ſinne entred by the firſt Adam; the ſecond Adam brought life and immortality to light by the Goſpel, *Rom.*5.24,25. *Rom.*5 18,19. *1 Cor.*15.22.

The whole buſineſſe of mans ſalvation was tranſacted between the Father and the Sonne long before it was revealed in Scripture, there was a covenant of Redemption between God the Father and the Son for the ſalvation of the Elect.

God the Father covenanted ſeveral things:

1. He deſigned Chriſt to be our Redeemer, 1 Pet. 1.20. John 6.27.
2. He gave certain perſons to Chriſt to be brought by him to everlaſting life, John 6.37,38. & 17.2,6,9.
3. He appointed Chriſt to the whole work of our redemption.
   1. Appointed him what he ſhould publiſh, John 12.49,50.
   2. Appointed him what he ſhould ſuffer, John 10.18.
4. The Father made many gracious promiſes to Chriſt.
   1. To give him his Spirit, to qualifie him for the work, Eſay 11.1.
   2. To aſſiſt him and carry him thorow the work of mediation, Eſay 42.5.
   3. To give him ſucceſſe, Eſay 53.10,11.
   4. To give him the rule of all things in Heaven and Earth.
   5. To bring him and his to everlaſting glory, Eſay 55.5.

Chriſt covenanted alſo on his part:

1. He accepted this commiſſion, the office of Mediatorſhip, Pſalm 40.5,6,7. *Heb.*5.5.
2. Waited on his Father for aſſiſtance to carry him thorow, *Heb.*2.13. Eſay 5.7, 8, 9.
3. Undertook to do and ſuffer what his Father had deſigned, John 17.4.
4. He expected the reward of glory from his Father for himſelf and all his members, John 17.4,5,24. There was alſo a covenant between God and man.

Rom. 5.14. Who was the figure of him that was to come. Gal.3.16. See my Annotations on 1 Cor.15.47.

God ſtill delighted to deal with a common perſon in the name of all the reſt, in both the Covenants there was a principal contracting party, a common repreſentee, Adam in the covenant of Works, Chriſt in the covenant of Grace, either of theſe was to communicate his eſtate to his poſterity. Both theſe were common parents, authors of life to their ſeed, *1 Cor.*15.45,49.

Chriſt was called Adam, becauſe he did partake of our nature, the ſecond Adam, becauſe he was another common Repreſentee in whoſe acts we are infolded.

But

But they differed

1. In the Dignity of their persons; Adam was an holy man, yet but an earthly creature; Christ is the Lord from Heaven. See Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17, 18.

2. In the Degree of the publick Office; Adam was a common person, but not a Surety for them: Christ was a Surety, Heb. 7. 22. able to give his a new heart.

3. In the Manner of Representation, Adam took nothing from us, and conveyed nothing to us but sin. Christ took sin from us, made our transgressions to be his, and his obedience is become ours, 2 Cor. 5. 21.

This work of mans recovery is Gods master-piece; all other designs are subordinate to this; all his Attributes shine out in this.

God manifested great love to man at the first, in making him happy, in stamping his Image on him, and in making himself his end, but he discovered greater love in the work of Redemption, John 3. 16.

He discovered great power in creating the world of nothing, but greater in mans recovery; it is greater power to restore a creature when fallen, than to uphold it at the first: all other acts of power were but over the creature, this was over his Son, John 10. 18. never was there such an act of grace to take the creature into personal Union with the God-head, Zech. 13. 7.

He made the world in six dayes, but he was thirty three years in redeeming the world.

God discovered great Wisdom in making the creatures, and in his Law; but that prescribed not a way how to satisfie God and sanctifie man, and that so easily, Heb. 2. 12. See Rom. 11. 33.

He declared also his Holinesse and Justice, rather than sin should go unpunished his own Son was punished.

2. The Cause of it:

It comes wholly and onely from the free grace and favour of God, Ephes. 2. 8. By grace you are saved, through faith, not of your selves, it is the gift of God.

The ground of mans restitution was the bringing in of the second Covenant, God vouchsafing to deal with man as a rational creature, was pleased to deal with him in way of a Covenant, the covenant of works being broken, and it being impossible to enter into Heaven that way, Rom. 8. 3. God made a new and better covenant, called the covenant of Grace, of which Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel speak.

In the Covenant of works there was no undertaking, that ran thus, Do and live, sin and die.

This is the way of Gods bringing lost man to life and happinesse by a Mediator. The first covenant was Gods way of bringing man to life by his obedience. The righteousnesse required to bring a man to life in the second covenant is not his own righteousnesse, but the righteousnesse of a Mediator. Here God begins, Hos. 2. 23. Zech. 13. 9.

Man could not come to the favour of God again, unlesse the justice of God were satisfied, there must therefore be a price paid for him, and he must be bought again that was fallen from his Lord and Master. The Law of faith the Gospel, or the Covenant of Grace, 1. Allows a possibility of recovery. Mat. 9. 13. upon repentance; the other Covenant required compleat innocency. 2. It calls not away for infirmities. 3. It grants a pardon of course for some kind of works, sins of ignorance, incogitancy.

The Covenant is, to be an everlasting benefactor in the way of infinite power:

1. A Benefactor, Heb. 11. 6.
2. An everlasting Benefactor, Matth. 22. 32.
3. In the way of infinite power,

Gods Essence is his Churches and peoples, his Power, Wisdom, Glory, Mercy, the Persons or Subsistencies in the Divine Nature are theirs. The Father is theirs to love and elect them, the Father himself loveth you. The Son is theirs, to be born for them, to die for them, to sit in Heaven for them. The holy Ghost is theirs, to dwell and work in them. He ingageth himself to give them principally eternal blessednesse, temporal and spiritual blessings in order thereunto; all the blessings which it is proper for a God to give. He will pardon sinne as a God, Hosea 11. 9. will sanctifie as a God, 2 Pet. 1. 3. will supply our wants, and glorifie us as a God,

2 Cor.

2 Cor. 4. 17. He is God of all the world in regard of ſupremacy and common bounty, more eſpecially of his Church, 1 Chron. 17. 29. He effectually cals them, and takes poſſeſſion of them by his Spirit, Zech. 13. 11. Hoſea 2. 12. and they chooſe him for their all-ſufficient portion, Pſalm 73. 23.

Secondly, They reſign and ſurrender up themſelves to him, 2 Chron. 30. 8. Hoſea 2. ult. their life, time, ſtrength, health, reputation, all are for him, 2 Chron. 30. 8.

Thirdly, They glorifie him as a God by ſubjection to his Sovereignty, and by dependance on his proviſion, Exod. 24. 7. Pſalm 23. 1. are obliged to walk humbly and holily with him, 1 Peter 3. 21.

First, This covenant of Grace was ever one and the ſame, Chriſt the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever; all that obtain life, obtain it the ſelf ſame way. The ſame Covenant that was revealed to Adam when he ſinn'd, was revealed after to Abraham and Noah, the Prophets, and to us. Thoſe that went before, and came after Chriſt, cried Hoſanna, ſaith Gregory.

Secondly, Although for ſubſtance this Covenant be one and the ſame in all ages, yet the external adminiſtrations of it were different, in one manner before Chriſt exhibited, in another after. Then it was adminiſtred by Prophecies, Promiſes, Sacrifices, Types, Shadows: after Chriſt exhibited in the fleſh, it was adminiſtred only in the Ordinances of preaching, and the Sacraments. Their Types, Shadows, Sacrifices, Waſhing, Circumciſion, eating roſted Lambs, held out the ſame Chriſt that our Sacraments hold out.

Thirdly, The Adminiſtration of the covenant of Grace ſince Chriſt was exhibited, is far more glorious; theirs was called the old covenant, ours the new one. This lies in three things.

First, It is more univerſal, a great while the other was only in Abrahams family, and after appropriated to the Nation of the Jews, and ſome that turned Proſelytes, and now the utmoſt Iſles of the world ſee the ſalvation of God.

Secondly, Now the covenant of Grace is revealed more clearly, the things about Chriſt were then dark, babes may now underſtand thoſe things that their Doctors did not.

Thirdly, A greater meaſure of Grace and Holineſſe is now communicated.

We ſhould:

First, Make it ſure that God is ours.

1. By having our hearts ſubdued to him.

2. By loving him as the chiefeſt good, ſeeking his glory as our utmoſt end, obeying him as our higheſt Law-giver.

Secondly, We ſhould improve this Covenant

1. To contentment and complacency in our portion, Pſalm 16. 5. Rev. 21. 7.

2. To comfort in our diſtreſſes, when all is gone, God is left, 1 Samuel 13. 6. Hab. 3. 16, 17. This is the life of Heaven to live immediately upon God, 2 Cor. 6. 10. eſpecially to a ſetled expectation of glory in the hour of death, Pſalm 73. 26.

See of all the Covenants in the Morning-Exerciſe at Giles in the Fields, the ſixth Sermon of the Covenant of Works, by M^r Cooper, the eleventh of the Covenant of Redemption, by M^r Jacomb, where he diſtinguiſheth thus betwixt the Covenant of Redemption, and of Grace, that the fœderati in the firſt are God and Chriſt; in the Covenant of Grace, the confederates are God and believers; and the twelfth, of the Covenant of Grace.

3. The parts of this Recovery are two, ſaith M^r Richardſon.

1. The work of Mans Redemption.

2. The Application of it.

The work of Redemption is the purchaſing of man from his undone condition by a Redeemer or Mediator, or the Recovery of man from his eſtate of ſin and miſery by a full price paid for him by a Redeemer.

2. The Application of it is, whereby it is made ours by imputation.

Theſe two are joyned together, John 3. 16. Mark 16. 16. The one of theſe is the the sufficiency of mans Recovery, the other the Efficiency: Paul and Peter speak often of a price paid for us.

I shall therefore shew,

1. Who this Redeemer is that hath paid this price for us.
2. What the price is that he hath paid for us.

Our Lord, Jesus Christ, Immanuel, the Word made flesh, God and man united in one Person, is the Person. The price that he hath paid was the subjecting of himself in our stead to do what we should have done, and suffer what we should else have undergone, Mat. 18.11. Luke 19.10. Rom. 3.24,25. 1 Tim. 5.15.

The Heathens had some obscure notice of the fall, but could not dream which way the remedy should come, Eph. 3. 12. They spake of vertue and vice in a moral way, but not of righteousnesse and sin as they related to the Law, Joh. 17.3. Act. 4.12. & Act. 1.15, 1 John 3. 11,12, O felix culpa quæ talem meruit habere redemptorem. Greg. Bern. Luk. 15.7.

All the Ceremonies and Sacrifices under the Law had relation to Christ, they were but the shadow, and he was the body.

See Rom. 10.4 Act. 10.43. & 26.22,23.

First, The Nazarite must be sanctified in his mothers womb, to signifie, that Jesus the true Nazarite should be conceived without sinne in the womb of the Virgin.

Quæ legem præcesserunt, variis modis Christum præfigurabant, ejusq; actiones, vitam, mortem regnum, Ecclesiam; ut in morte Abelis insontis, in diluvio, & reliquiis humani generis à Noë servatis: in fide Abrae, in obedientia Isaac, in simplicitate Iacob, in invidia & exaltatione Ioseph, in agno Phase, in egressu Ægypti, in transitu maris rubri, in introductione ad terram promissam patribus. Quæ omnia quòd umbræ essent regni Christi, id circo tam diligenter est ea Moses persecutus. Lod. Viv. de verit fid. Christ. l. 2. c. 7. Christus est sal & vita & lux veteris Testamenti, qui mortuis rebus vitam attulit, & salivis insipida. Id. ibid.

Secondly, His two Natures were signified by the Goat that was killed, and the Scape-goat, and by the two Sparrows, the one killed and the other let go. His Offices of King and Priest typed by the High-priests Crown, Garments and Ornaments. His Death by the Sacrifices, and his lifting up upon the Crosse by the brazen Serpent. His Burial by Jonahs lying in the Whales belly three dayes. His Resurrection by the first fruits, 1 Cor. 15.20.

Every thing in the Temple was a Type of Christ, the Vail was a Type of his Flesh, Heb. 10. 20. the golden Altar of his Intercession, Revel. 8. 3. and the brazen Altar of his Passion, the Temple it self was a Type of Christs body, John 2. 19.

There was not a livelier Type of Christ than the Serpent in the wilderneſse lifted up on the Pole, and that more encouraged sinners to believe in him. See Num. 21. from the 6th to the 10th, and John 3.14,15.

1. There were the fiery Serpents, and the Israelites wounded by them. The Serpent signified the Devil the old Serpent, and the biting the guilt of sin.
2. The Serpent of brasse being without a sting signified Christ who was without sinne.
3. Looking upon him signifies believing.
4. This Serpent was lifted up as Gods Ordinance, and a remedy invented by him, there was no suitableneſse in it to the cure, so Christ must be lifted up and exalted. He is called the Christ of God, he qualified him, Esay 42.6.
5. The Serpent was lifted up as the only remedy to cure those who were bitten by the fiery Serpent: so Christ for souls under the guilt and power of sin.
6. The Serpent was lifted up as a sufficient remedy to heal all that looked on it: so Christ is sufficient for what God required, and we need, Heb. 4.16.
7. The brazen Serpent was an universal remedy for all sorts of wounded people: so Christ for all sinners, John 3.14,15.

The Tabernacle was built with three distinct rooms:

1. The most holy place, in which were the Ark and Cherubims, the most holy place signified Heaven, the Ark Christ, as he is received up into Glory, sitting at his Fathers right hand, protecting his Church, and using the Ministry of his Angels for their good and welfare. See Mr Hide of the office and use of the moral Law in the dayes of the Gospel, p. 52,53.
2. The second was called the holy place, and this did signifie the true invisible

Church of the Elect of God here militant on earth, into which none entered but the Priests, which signified the elect people of God, which are a holy and royal Priesthood unto him, here was a golden Candlestick, which having Lamps was dressed every Evening, and gave light all night, to signifie the work of Christ by his Spirit affording the true light of saving knowledge of himself, and of his spiritual benefits to them, when it is dark night to all the world besides, here was the golden Table which had ever upon it Bread and Incense, signifying Christs giving himself as spiritual Food to his people to strengthen and confirm their hearts in obedience, and also giving the pure Frankincense of his Merits unto them, by which they become acceptable unto his Father.

Manna was a most noble type of Christ, and of our spiritual food by him, John 6. 1 Cor. 10.3. See Camerons 4th Sermon on John 6.58,59. where he treats of the profit and excellency of Manna, and of its defects, and of the true Manna, Jesus Christ, and of the vertues of the Manna in him in a farre more excellent manner, and higher degree, and Baxters History of Manna in his Exercitations.

The third room was the utter Court where all the people came, and it signified the Church visible, wherein are Elect and Reprobate, true and false Christians mixt; there were the Offerings of Buls, Goats and other beasts; and sprinkling of bloud in all the services to be performed, signifying the Revelation of God himself in the Ministry of his Gospel to the sons of men, that they might be brought to believe in him.

Samson and David were two of the most eminent Types of Christ registred in the Old Testament. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 11.32. Sect. 206,217.

The whole Gospel concerneth Christ; the Apostles Doctrine was a long Story concerning Christ, his Person, and the end of his coming, Acts 9.20. 1 Cor. 1.23. & 2.2. Gal. 3.1. 1 John 4.10,14.

We should study Christ:

1. As he is the accomplishment of all that the Old Testament promised; he fulfill'd all that was foretold of him.

2. As he is the accomplishment of all the Types, the brazen Serpent, John 3. the pillar of cloud and fire, the Rock, the Manna, John 6. The Mercy-seat.

3. As he is the accomplishment of all the Sacrifices in the Old Testament, the Lamb, the scape-Goat.

The Sacrifices were of things without life, or things that had life. Things inanimate were dry or moist; if dry, as the Shew-bread, then it was broken in pieces; so Christ, Esay 53.10. Matth. 26.26. Things moist (as wine or oil) were poured out before the Lord; so Christ, Esay 53.12. if things that had life, then was the heart bloud taken from them, For without shedding of bloud there was no remission, Heb. 9.22. so Christ, Revel. 1.5. Mr James on Esay 53.10.

Justification, Rom. 3.24. Adoption, 1 John 12. Gal. 4.5. Regeneration, Jam. 1.17. 1 Cor. 4.7. Repentance, Acts 5.31. Faith, Ephes. 2.8. Phil. 1.27. [a] Iohn 4.10. The happiness of the persons is the infinite satisfaction they take one in another.

The whole Doctrine of Christ in his Person, Works, the Benefits which the Church receives by him, are all the free gift of God, Isa. 9.6. Titus 2.14. Rom. 5.15,16, 17,18. His Person, Spirit, graces are a gift.

Gift is a transferring of right from one to another by free-will, or the free interessing of another in that which is my own: only I forego my own property when I give it another, but God hath still the same right in his Sonne when he gives him to us.

First, Christ is the great gift of God, the greatest that ever he gave. God gave him freely, John 3.16, 17. 1 John 4.9, 10. and Christ gave himself freely, Gal. 1.4. Ephes. 5.25.

Four things meet in him, which shew him to be the greatest gift:

1. He is the dearest and most precious to him that gives him, John 3.16. 1 John 4.9,10. The heart of God was infinitely set on Christ, Prov. 8.30. a metaphor taken from two mates and companions that are born and bred together, and sport themselves in each others society.

Christ is incomparably more glorious than all or any of the sons of men, Psal. 45.2. Cant. 5. from v. 10. ad finem. 1. In respect of his Deity, Ioh. 1.14. & 17.5. Rom. 9.5. Isa. 9.6. 2. In respect of his humane nature, as he was holy, harmlesse and separate from sinners, Heb. 7.25. 3. In respect of the union of the Godhead and manhood in one person.

2. Of

2. Of all things that were in the power of God to give, there was nothing we so much needed; set fancy aside no man needs any thing in the earth but food and raiment; we are miserable for ever if we fail of Christ.

3. It is the comprehension of all other gifts, if we look on the intrinsecal worth of the gift it self; by him we have pardon, grace, glory, Ephes. 1.4. He is God-man, a Prophet, Priest and King, the true Trismegistus. God in giving him gives himself to us; it's a sign of his special love.

4. This is an everlasting gift, not only the gift lasts, but the mind of the giver, he lends thee but other things.

He is such a gift as in a peculiar manner is given to the Church, Esay 59. two last verses, 1 Tim. 4.10. See John 10.15. & 17.9. who ever have this gift are bettered by it.

Secondly, Christ is the free gift of God.

1. There is no one particular concerning Christ, and our salvation by him, but there are Scriptures to prove it, that it is the free gift of God; He gives the Spirit to unite us to him, John 7.39. and the means, Ephes. 4.11. and faith to lay hold on him.

2. What ever may argue a gift to be free, meets in the Lords giving of Christ.

1. When the giver hath no motive to stirre him to it but his own will.

2. When the party doth it out of no need, he is no whit the richer or happier.

3. He gives him to them who have no more, why they should partake of Christ, than others on whom he doth not bestow him.

4. When there is no condition in the receiver, but meerly that he do accept it, he works in our hearts consent of his good pleasure.

5. When he is pleased with this gift, and takes more content in giving than any soul can take in the receiving.

If Christ be a gift, he ought to be receiv'd, John 1.12. Rom. 1.16,17. We should receive him,

1. Humbly in a sense of our want of him and unworthinesse, 2 Samuel 7.18.

2. Thankfully, Psal. 68.26.

2. He ought to be prized and highly valewed, being a great gift, Ephes. 3.8. 1 Pet. 2.7. Matth. 13.46.

3. If God have given us Christ, he will withhold nothing from us, Rom. 8.32. nothing is properly good but what we enjoy in Christ.

4. We should give our selves to him, 2 Cor. 8.5. surrender our selves to his use, Rom. 12.1. and shew a like readinesse in his service, as he shew'd in our redemption.

There was a transcendent excellency in the love of Christ to the Saints in giving himself for them.

First, He loved them with the love of all relations, with the love of a brother, friend, husband, father, God.

Secondly, He loved them above all the creatures here below, he hath made them the first fruits of all his creatures, in some sort more than the Angels.

1. In regard of your nature which he took.

2. In regard of the relation wherein he stands to you, the Angels are his servants but not his members.

3. In regard of his righteousnesse bestowed upon you, it was not the essential righteousnesse of God, but such a righteousnesse as the God-head gave an excellency and efficacy to.

This love of Christ comforts the Saints under the greatest afflictions. They look on this love of his as the fountain of all blessings, it works a conformity in them to Christ.

We may judge of the love of Christ by these marks.

First, Suitable to the manifestation of himself is the love of Christ to thy soul, John 14.21.

Secondly, The more grace he beſtows on a man the more he loves him.
Thirdly, The greateſt communion we have with him the more he loves us, John 14.8.
Fourthly, The more he keeps thee from thoſe ordinary ſnares that others fall into, *Eccleſ.*7.26. *Revel.*13,8.
Fifthly, The more every thing works to thy ſpiritual good, 3.ep. John 2.
Sixthly, According to thy meaſure of fruitfulneſſe, John 15.16.
Seventhly, Obſerve the glimpſes of Chriſt to thy ſoul, Pſalm 35.3.
Eighthly, The more powerfull our prayers are with God, Daniel 10.11,12.

Chriſts Kingdom was ſet up in oppoſition to Satan, when he was born all the Oracles ceaſed. The time was come mentioned John 12.31. the night was paſt and the day was come, and therefore ſuch birds of darkneſſe were not to prevail, as in times paſt they had done. As by the rending of the vail of the Temple of Solomon, was ſignified the abeliſhment of legal worſhip; ſo by the prodigious deſtruction of Satans throne or chiefeſt Temple at Delphos, was ſealed the irrevocable overthrow of Ethniciſm.

Some ſay the Heathens by the light of nature, by the knowledge of the Sunne, Moon and Stars, might come to a ſaving knowledge of God, and urge that place, *Heb.*11.16. He that comes to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him, and ſay, that men might know Gods being and bounty by his works. Others urge, *Rom.*1.19. & Acts 14.17. The Scripture is the only means of knowing God ſavingly, therefore it is called ſalvation, *Heb.*2.3. See 2 *Tim.*1.10.

For that power and God-head ſtrikes a fear into a man, and requires perfect obedience, but doth not promiſe remiſſion of ſins.

It is true that God inſtructed the Heathens by his works of creation and providence. But never any yet could inſtance in one of them, and ſay aſſuredly, that by uſing well their naturals, he came to eternal life.

Zuinglius ſaid, That God did extraordinarily work grace and faith in the Heathens, which opinion of his is much exagitated by the Lutherans, and he is juſtly forſaken by the Orthodox in this point.

The

The Papists and Arminians say, That God gives an universal sufficient grace to all men, even to Pagans. Paul Rom. 1. speaking of them all, saith, They became vain in their imaginations. That is an excellent speech of Austins, Qui dicit hominem servari posse sine Christo, dubito an ipse per Christum servari possit. See Mr Burgesse of Grace, Sect. 12. Serm. 120.

It were a worthy work for one to collect the several places in Scripture, where the relations of Christ to his Church are mentioned, his various denominatioas also and representations are expressed, they being all great props of faith.

We must worship God through a Mediator, John 14. 1. Col. 3. 19. True Religion is not the exercise of the faculties of the soul upon a naked simple Deity, that is a Platonick devotion, Ephes. 2. 19. To take in Christ, and make him Deus factus, but not Deus ab aterno, is the Religion of Socinus, 1 Cor. 2. 2. 1 Tim. 2. ult.

We should know Christ as the only way to the Father, John 14. 6. & 17. 3. Know him in the efficacy of his merits, and fulnesse of his satisfaction, Heb. 9. lat. end. See a transcendent excellency in him, both in respect of his Person and righteousnesse, Phil. 3. 8. Know him in a fiducial way, so as to close with him by faith, John 14. 1. Know him in a way of union and communion, John 6. 53. Col. 1. 27. Rom. 8. 1. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Christ was highly loved and favoured by God, he had the Spirit above measure, John 3. 35. he was superlatively holy, Luke 1. 31. Mark 1. 24. See Daniel 9. 24. Vide Petav. de Incarnat. l. 11. c. 5.

The Scripture expresseth this:

First, Negatively, he was without sin, Heb. 4. 15. 1 Peter 2. 22. 1 Peter 1. 10. Heb. 7. 26.

Secondly, Positively, John 1. 14. Col. 1. 19.

Thirdly, Comparatively, Fairer than the children of men. See Cant. 2. 3. & 5. 10.

Fourthly, Metaphorically, Ephes. 3. 8. He is set forth as a fountain of grace, Zech. 13. 1. Col. 2. 3.

This grace in Christ came,

1. From the pleasure of the Father, John 3. 35. Col. 1. 19.
2. From the Deity dwelling in his humane nature, Psalm 45. 7, 8.

It was necessary that he should be so full of grace:

1. In respect of what he was to do and suffer, Matth. 3. 15. He was to fulfill all righteousnesse, suffered more than any other of Gods children.
2. In respect of the things he was to purchase, and obtain an eternal Kingdom of glory.
3. That he might evidence himself to be the Son of God.
4. Because he was to be a patern of the grace of God; a patern must be most perfect.
5. He was to be the fountain of grace, whence all the Saints receive supply.

He manifested this in the whole course of his life, he fulfill'd his Fathers commands, and in his conversation, John 1. 14. Psalm 45. 2. by the supplies that the Saints have still receiv'd from him.

We should be certainly perswaded of this, love Christ the more for his holinesse, Psalm 73. 25. & 110. 3. Cant. 5. ult. Be conformable to him,

1. In holinesse, 1 Pet. 1. 15.
2. In humility, Matth. 11. 28.
3. In self-denial, Rom. 15. 2.
4. In patience, Esay 42. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 20.

Be comforted hereby in all our temptations and fears, and receive supplies of grace from him.

Consider for this purpose:

1. That the grace of God is still in Christ, Luke 2. 40.
2. He hath it in him to communicate to us.
3. He is very ready to communicate it, Esay 55. 1, 2.
4. We are in an undone condition, and in danger without it, Phil. 3. 8.

5. It is the greatest ornament, 1 Pet. 3.4. it was Christs glory, John 1.14. and so ours, 2 Cor. 3. ult.

6. It is the only way to glory, Psalm 84.11.

Chap. III.

Of CHRIST.

I. His Person.

IN Christ we must consider two things:

1. His [a] Person.
2. His [b] Offices.

In his Person also we must consider two things:

His Natures and the Union of them.

His Natures are two:

The God-head and the Manhood.

The Union of them is such as is called Personal, which is a concurrence of two Natures to make one Person, that is, an individual subsistence, as the soul and body in one man.

I shall therefore treat of these three things:

The God-head of Christ.

The Manhood of Christ.

The uniting of these two in one Person.

[a] John 1.14. & 3.33.

[b] Isa. 61.1,2. Luke 4.18. There is not so full a description of Christ in so few words in any place of the Bible, as in Isa. 9.6,7. 1. His Person is described, in which are two Natures, 1. Humane, A childe is born. 2. Prophetical, The Counsellor. 2. His Offices: 1. Kingly, The government shall be upon his shoulders. 3. Priestly, The Prince of peace.

Concerning the God-head, having shewed that Christ is God, even the second Person in Trinity, I now will shew how he is God, and why he was to be God.

He is called the only begotten Son, John 3.16. & 1 John 4.9. & Iohn 1.14. Gods own Son, Rom. 8.32 Gods onely Sonne two wayes: 1. In time, no Son was ever before him. 2. In dignity, no son was ever like him.

He is God the Son, the Son of God, he calleth himself the Son, and is so called of his Church. Not the Father nor the holy Ghost, but the Son took our nature upon him; for we are admitted into the Church with this faith, being baptized into the Name of the Father, Son and holy Ghost. He became our Saviour, that he might make us sons unto his Father. But consider how he is God, not by Office, not by Favour, nor by Similitude, not in a Figure, as sometimes Angels and Magistrates are gods, but by Nature, he is Equal and Co-essential with his Father; there is one God-head common to all the three Persons, the Father, the Son and the Spirit; and therefore it is said, That he was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, Phil. 2.6. Loe an equality to God the Father is ascribed to him, he is not God in any secondary or inferiour manner, but is in the very form of God equal to him, the God-head of all the three Persons being one and the same.

Angels and Adam were Gods sons by Creation, Job 1. Luk. 3.38. we by adoption, Rom. 8.14. Christ by eternal generation of the substance of his Father. There was no priority, inequality or division in this begetting, the Father was not before the Son, better than the Son, or another besides the Son. Vide Scultet. Delit. Evang. c. 22. Sociniani, qui Christum non nisi hominem agnoscunt, summè venerandum Incarnationis Mysterium, at parum putum figmentum blasphemè rident. Broch System. Theol. Assic. 15. de Christo c. 1.

In the next place I shall shew, why he must be God.

There are four Reasons of it:

1. That

1. That he might be able to suffer.
2. To merit.
3. To do those things which must be done after suffering and meriting. And
4. For the further manifestation of Gods love to man.

First, I say, that he might be of power to suffer what was to be suffered by our Redeemer, that is, the punishment due to our sinnes. For our Redeemer must no otherwise redeem us than by being our Surety, standing in our very stead, supplying our room, and sustaining in his own person that punishment which all our sins had deserved at the hands of Gods Justice. He must be a propitiatory Sacrifice for sinne, he must be made sinne for us, our iniquity must be laid upon him, and he must bear our sins in his body upon the Tree. Christ must suffer for sin. Now the punishment due to our sins was the horrible wrath of God, a burden so heavy as no shoulder of any meer creature could beat it, for there is no proportion betwixt the weakness of man, and the anger of God. Wherefore he was to be God, that the omnipotent power of the God-head might uphold the frailty of the manhood, to the end, that it might not be oppressed with the weight, and sink down in dispaire, discouragement, impatiency, dejectedness, or the like inconveniences, which had he been driven unto he had sinned, and so should have lost himself in stead of redeeming us. This seems to be meant by the brazen Altar upon which the Sacrifice must be burnt, and which was made with wood but covered with brass; so Christ was man, but the weakness of the humane nature was covered with the power of the Deity, that it might not be consumed. Wood would have been burnt with fire, brass would not, man would have been swallowed up with those sufferings, had not the Divine Power upheld the same.

Secondly, He must be God, that the God-head might give worth, value, meritoriousness unto the sufferings and obedience, both which the humane nature performed: To the end, that one man might stand in the stead of all men, and that God might account himself as much satisfied in his Justice, by his sole and short sufferings, as if all men had suffered everlastingly, and as much honoured by his obedience, as if all men had obeyed, it was requisite that that one man should be made more excellent than all men put together, and so he was made by being God and man. For the humane nature of Christ, in that it is personally united unto God, and hath the God-head dwelling in it bodily, so that the body is the body of God, and more worth than all the race of men besides, and so God is satisfied by his sufferings and obedience, so that he may be and is in justice ready to forgive the sinnes of men for his sake. Hence we are said to be the righteousness of God, not of man or Angels, because it is such a righteousness as God accepts of as equivalent to that dishonour offered him by sinne. This may seem to have been signified by the Fabrique of the Ark, Table, Incense, Altar, all which signified Christ, for they were all made of Wood, even Shittim-wood, a Wood not subject to corruption, but this Wood was overlaid with gold, to express that the meanness of the humanity was hidden out of Gods sight, and the excellency of the Deity causeth the Church to be so acceptable to the Father, and to come so near unto him. Therefore the Apostle saith, That God redeemed us with his own blood, had it not been Gods blood, we should not have been washed from our sinnes by it. So the Scape-goat carried away all the sinnes into the wilderness, the Goat that was slain did it not. This Scape-goat signified the Godhead, which though it self did not suffer, yet made the sufferings of the humanity available to wash away our sinnes, as one man of great quality and place is fit to be set in ballance with ten thousand common Souldiers, and his life alone fit to be a ransome for them all, so it is in this case, else we could never have been redeemed.

Thirdly, Christ must do something after his Redemption, which can not be done but by God, he must pour forth the gift of his Spirit upon us, baptizing us with the holy Ghost; as John Baptist taught, and none can send the Spirit of God into the hearts of whom he will, but he that is God. Again, He must overcome sin in us, and Satan for us, and guide and govern his Church to eternal life, through all the multitude of those enemies which lie in wait to hinder their salvation, which no less power and wisdome could do than the power and wisdome of God, even infinite wisdom and infinite power. He must vanquish principalities and powers that must save us, so could none but God himself.

This is Ultimus conatus divini amoris, He could do no more, than lay aside the glory of the Deity for our sakes. Christi servatoris mors refertur ad ineffabilem ipsius erga nos charitatem. Joh. 14. 13. Gal. 2. 24. Ephes. 5. 2. & 25.

Lastly, It made most for the commendation and honour of Gods infinite grace, that he would employ so eminent a person in the business of our Redemption, being a work of so great abasement and difficulty. Suppose that some Angel had been able to do this work, and to do it perfectly, yet it more exalts the excellency of Gods love to mankind, which he intended to shew in this work, that he might convince Satan of lying, when he chargeth him with not loving men, that he would seek no meaner person but his own and onely Sonne. Herein is the love of God made manifest, that he sent his Sonne into the world; and herein is love, that he loved us and gave his Sonne to be a propitiation for our sinnes. As a King might equally dispatch a businesse for the ransoming of his servant by a meaner Person if he would, but to grace him the more, and to shew greater respect to him, he effecteth that treaty by the most honourable personage of the Court.

Nam qua fuit illa charitas, si (quod Socinus cavillatur) non mori non potuit Christus, quia homo fuit? Quoad circumstantias autem, patientis personam, patiendi causam, passionis efficaciam; plusquam sufficiens satisfactio Christi & à nobis dicitur. Neque enim requirebat lex ut Deus moreretur, neque ut sine peccato proprio quis moreretur, neque requirebat denique mortem talem, tanta efficacia quæ esset, ut non mortem aboleret solùm, sed etiam vitam introduceret, eamque illâ, quam Adamus terrestrem perdiderat, multis gradibus præcellentiorem. Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad inferos, l. 3. p. 67.

Chap. III.

Of CHRIST'S being Man.

Sicut in flore fructus prænunciatur: sic in illis ceremonijs Christus venturus significabatur. Ludolphus de vita Christ. cap. 3.

NOW I am to shew in the next place that he was man.

Christ is set forth three wayes in the Scripture:

1. Christus in promisso, so the Patriarchs and Saints beheld him under the old Covenant, he was set forth unto Adam in the seed of the Woman, Gen. 3. 15. to Abraham as the seed in whom all Nations are blessed, to Jacob as Shiloh, to Job as Goel, to David as the Messiah, to Zachary, as the man whose name is the Branch, to Malachi as the Sunne of Righteousnesse with healing in his wings.

2. Christus in carne, Joh. 1. 14. 2 Tim. 3. 16.

Christs Incarnation is called flesh,

First, To shew the greatness of his condescension.

Secondly,

Secondly, Men were not called flesh, till sinne and misery entred into the world, Gen. 6. 3. Christ took our nature when it was tainted with sinne, Rom. 8. 3. Heb. 4. 15.

3. Christus in Evangelio, Christ as he is discovered and set forth in the Gospel, that is the glass wherein we behold the glory and excellency of Christ, 2 Cor. 3. 18. But I am now to speak of his Incarnation, or his being a true man.

Tota divinitas inchoative egit opus incarnationis, non terminative; hac res illustrata simili, tres sorores texunt unam togam, qua utitur secunda. Defensio Fidei Doctoris Elis.

1. He had the name of a man. Luke 24. 47.

2. He came of the race of mankind, of our stock and linage, he came of Adam and Eve.

He is called Man, 1 Tim. 2. 5. Luk. 23. 47. The Son of man, Dan. 7. 13. Mat. 8. 20. & 16. 13. Mark 10. 45. Apoc. 1. 13. This the Scripture foretold before, in saying, That the seed of the woman should bruise the Serpents head, and that in the seed of Abraham all Nations should be blessed, and that a branch should spring out of the root of Jesse: Therefore the Apostle saith, He was made of the seed of David according to the flesh. And he that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God. More particularly Christ is called The Son of Mary, Luk. 1. 31, 44. the holy Ghost goes further and shews of what Tribe he was, Heb. 7. 14. nay of what family, Rom. 1. 3.

2. He had the birth and growth of a man, he was conceived in the Womb of his Mother as a man, Luke 1. 31. He was born in the usual time as a man, Luke 2. 7. swadled like a man, Luke 2. 12. He grew up as a man, both in respect of body and mind * Luke 2. 40, 52. and therefore he was a true man.

* The Papists say, Christs soul was presently replenished with all knowledge, as the Academicks hold, That the soul came from Heaven where it knew all things, and Discere is Reminisci.

3. The same thing is proved evidently by the story of the Gospel, which ascribes to him the parts, the sufferings, the actions and affections that are peculiar to man. He had the essential parts of a man, a body, as it was written, A body thou hast given me, and they took his body from the cross, and laid it in a sepulchre, a soul Matth. 20. 28. & 26. 35, 38. Luke 23. 46. John 10. 15. & 5. 21. Knowledge Understanding, Wisdom and Will which are proper to the reasonable soul are given unto him. He did dispute and reason. He had the integral parts of a man, as bones, flesh, hands and feet They pierced his hands and his feet, A Spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have. They crowned his head with a crown of thorns, and one of the souldiers thrust a spear into his side, and forthwith came out water and blood, he lift up his eyes to Heaven, he kneeled on his knees and prayed, sure he was very man that had all the parts of a man.

Matth. 26. 26. Mark 14. 8. John 2. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 24. That Jesus Christ was man, and that such a man there was, both Jews, and Mahumetans confesse, yet Orthodox Christians only acknowledge him to be God, and that according to the Scriptures, Isaiah 7. 15. Luke 2. 40. He tooke the whole nature of a man. Apollinaris said he tooke the body not the soule, John 12. 28. Luke 24. 39. Isaiah 53. 10.

Heb. 4. 15. The general not perſonal infirmities, nor madneſſe, blindneſſe, lameneſſe. Phil. 2. 7. He was found in ſhape, that is, in carriage and behaviour as a man, John 1. 14. He dwelt amongſt us, pitcht a Tent amongſt us. Mark 13. 8. He was heard concerning his fear, John 4. 6.

4. He had the infirmities which accompany the whole nature of mankind. He was Hungry, Mat. 4. 2. Thirſty, John 4. 7. Wept, John 11. 35. was Weary, he died, as other men do, giving up the Ghoſt, John 19. 30.

5. He had the actions of a man, he ſate down to meat, he drank of the fruit of the Vine, he ſate upon the Well, he went from Jericho toward Jeruſalem. He opened his mouth and taught them, he touched the Leper, ſaying, I will be thou clean, he did ſleep, He cried with a loud voice, and gave up the Ghoſt. So he took upon him the very nature of man, and was made in all things like unto us, but without ſinne.

6. He had likewiſe the affections a man, His ſoul was heavy to death, he ſighed in his Spirit, he was ſtraitned in his Spirit, and teſtified that one of them ſhould betray him, he mourned and wept for Lazarus, he looked upon them angerly, he cried out, I thirſt. Joy, Luk. 10. 21. Anger, Mark 10. 14. Grief, Matth. 26. 38. Love, Mark 10. 21. Joh. 11. 5, 13. Zeal, John 2. 17. Fear, Heb. 5. 7. as in a man were found in him.

The difference of theſe paſſions which are in Chriſt and us, ſtandeth in theſe points.

Firſt, In the ſubject, or (at the leaſt) the cauſe thereof, our affections are ſeated either in the iraſcible, or concupiſcible faculty, and ſo hardly obey reaſon, Chriſts affections (though in the ſenſitive part) were led rather by reaſon than appetite.

Secondly, In the object, ours are often carried to that which is evil, Chriſts only to good.

Thirdly, In the meaſure.

1. The aſſumer was a perſon not a nature, the ſecond Perſon in the Trinity, this confutes the errour of the Patropaſſians, who held that God the Father was Incarnate as well as the Son.

2. That which was aſſumed was a nature not a perſon, Heb. 2. 16. otherwiſe there ſhould be four perſons. We may ſay God was made fleſh, but we can not ſay the fleſh was deified, the humane nature was taken into Communion with God.

3. The manner of aſſuming was by uniting two natures, not convertendo, by changing and altering them, nor componendo, by compounding the two natures, ſo that a third thing was produced, as upon the coalition of ſoul and body reſults a perſon, one of theſe was a perſon it ſelf, nor conjungendo by placing one near another, nor conciliando, as friends are made one by agreement.

Now there are divers good Reaſons why Chriſt was to be Man.

First, He was to be a mediator, a middle perſon betwixt God and Man, and therefore was to take upon him mans nature, that he might familiarly converſe with men, and acquaint them with the whole counſel of his Father, and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, There is one Mediator betwixt God and man, the man Chriſt Jeſus. And St John, That which we have heard, and have ſeen, and have looked upon with our eyes, of the word of life. He muſt be man that he might converſe with men, and be ſubject unto their ſenſes, and ſo was a fit perſon to interpoſe himſelf, and make concord betwixt God and man.

1 John 1. 1.

Valde inconvenienter erat ut una nobiliſſimarum creaturarum à fine ſuo tantiſper frustraretur: ſed humana natura eſt una

Secondly, He was to be man, 1. That he might ſatisfie Gods juſtice in ſuffering for man the things which mans ſins did deſerve, and which were to be inflicted upon man according as it was threatned, In the day thou ſinneſt, thou ſhalt dye. Mans nature had ſinned, mans nature muſt ſuffer for ſinne, that as by a man came ſinne and ſo death, ſo by a man might come righteouſneſſe and the reſurrection from the dead.

The Godhead was too ſtrong to ſuffer, for it is not poſſible that the excellent Eſſence of God ſhould endure or bear any puniſhment, any evil, any miſery, fery, without which yet mans ſinnes could not be expiated; therefore did the Godhead cloath it ſelf with fleſh, that he might ſuffer in the humane nature, that which it was impoſſible it ſhould ſuffer in that high and ſuperexcellent nature.

The Manhood was too weak to bear and overcome in ſuffering, and to deſerve by ſuffering. The Godhead was too ſtrong to bear or ſuffer, wherefore the Godhead was to borrow weakneſs, as I may ſo ſay, of the manhood, and to lend power to it, that that great work might be done which could not be effected without a wonderfull concurrence of exceeding great weakneſſe and exceeding great power.

The Juſtice of God required that the ſame nature ſhould be puniſhed that had offended, Rom. 8. 3. He could not elſe have ſuffered the penalty, Gen. 3.24. See Heb. 7.27. & 9. 22 Without ſhedding of blood there could be no expiation of ſin; there muſt be a active obedience performed in our ſtead to the Law, Gal. 4.4,5. elſe he could not have communicated to us. Union is the ground of Communion, Epheſ. 1.21. Titus 3. 4.

de nobiliſſimis creaturis: cum igitur tota corrupta fuerit per peccatum primorum parentum, & ſic beatitudine privata, & indigna facta, ad quam poſſidendam fuerat inſtituta, conveniens fuit ipſam reparari. Reparatio verò non poterat fieri niſi peccatum dimitteretur: non erat autem juſtum hoc fieri ſine ſatisfactione. Quare oportuit pro peccato totius naturæ humanæ ſatisfieri. Sed ſatisfactio decenter fieri non poterat niſi ab eo qui debebat ſatisfacere & poterat; non debebat autem niſi homo qui peccaverat, nec poterat niſi Deus. Quælibet creatura enim totum ſuum eſſe debet Deo: nedum ut præ alio ſatisfacere poſſit, ac ſic nulla creatura poterat pro homine ſatisfacere; nec ipſe per ſe, cum per peccatum redderetur indignus; ſordes quippe tergere non valet manus quæ lutum tenet. Quia ergo Deus ſumme bonus, & ſumme miſericors eſt, Pſal. 103. 8. decuit ut nulli negaret bonum miſericordiæ, cujus capax erat. Unde cum humana natura cecidiſſet, & tamen caſus ejus reparabilis eſſet, decuit ut eam repararet. Quia verò juſtitia ejus immutabilis eſt, Pſal. 119. 142. cujus decretum eſt ut nunquam peccatum ſine competenti ſatisfactione dimittatur, proculdubio decens fuit ut in humana natura inſtitueret eum qui ſatisfacere ſufficeret, quia hoc purus homo nequibat. Raimund. Pug. Fid. parte tertia Diſt. 3. cap. 5.

2. That he might honour and dignifie the nature of man, by advancing it farre above all Principalities and Powers, yea above every name that is named, and ſo God might declare his infinite and unſearchable grace to that fraile and feeble nature which came of the duſt, by making it the chief of all his workmanſhip and head over all: Therefore hath he attained by inheritance a more excellent name than Angels, being called the Sonne of God, in carrying, as I may term it, the Humane nature to the Divine, that nature was exalted above all other natures. A woman of ſome place is dignified by Matrimony with a King above all thoſe that were her ſuperiours before; ſo that now of all Natures next to the Divine Nature, the Humane Nature by being ſo nearly united to it, is become the moſt excellent and glorious nature. So God willing to ſhew the height and length, the bredth and depth of his love which paſſeth all underſtanding, hath thus glorified the ſeed of Abraham, even above the nature of Angels; for he took not the nature of Angels, but took the ſeed of Abraham.

Thirdly, This was done to foil, cruſh and confound Satan ſo much the more, in cauſing that nature which he envied, ſupplanted and polluted, to become ſo pure, perfect and glorious, and to triumph over him and lead him captive, and tread him under foot and make a ſhew of him openly. The Lord would puniſh Satan in his envy, and make him feel the effect of his power and goodneſs, in doing ſo very much againſt him by a man, to fulfill that, that The ſeed of the woman ſhould bruiſe the Serpents head, and to cauſe him to fall from heaven like lightning before the ſecond Adam; how much ſoever he gloried, as it were, in his conqueſt over the firſt Adam.

It was foretold that he ſhould be man Gen. 3. 15. The ſeed of Abraham. The Ancient Fathers, Irenæus, Juſtin Martyr, Tertullian, obſerve that Chriſt from the beginning of the world, often took the ſhape of a man and appeared in it to the Fathers, and that this was a præludium of his Incarnation.

Laſt of all, The Lord pleaſed to do this for our greater conſolation and aſſurance, that we might know without all doubt we ſhould find him a faithfull and a mercifull high-Priest. For in that he suffered temptation, he knows how to succour them that are tempted. Christ was to be a man of sorrow, and to have experience of infirmities, that by bearing our sorrows, he might be fitted to relieve and succour us in all our sorrows; for he that hath indured any misery himself, is made more tender in compassion, and more able in knowledg to afford comfort unto them that must after taste of the same afflictions. He knows the weight of sin, the intolerableness of Gods wrath, the violence of Satans temptations, and the trouble of being wronged and abused by men. We can bring no misery to him but what himself bare or the like, so now we are assured to find him most pitiful to us, that for our sakes was content in our nature to be most afflicted. You see now that Christ was man, and why he was to be so.

Heb. 2. 17, 18.

Christ took not the nature of man as in the state of innocency, or as glorified, but abased and compassed with infirmities, Isa. 53. 2. Rom. 8. 3.

Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco, said Dido in Virgil. None but a brother had right to redeem, Ruth. 2. 20. see Job 19. 25. By this means he was qualified, 1. To be a Priest, Heb. 5. 1. 2. A Prophet, Deut. 18. 15. 3. A King, Deut. 17. 15.

Consider how he was made man, and that was wonderfully miraculous above the course of nature and beyond the common custom, that he might be wonderfull in his entrance into the world, who was to be wonderfull in the course of his life. For he was not made of the seed of man by copulation as other persons are, but a Virgin did conceive and bring forth a Sonne. Mary descended by direct line from David and Abraham, a mean and contemptible maiden whom no man regarded, because she was poor, she was a chosen vessel to be the Mother of our Saviour, and the holy Ghost did over-shadow her, and the power of the most High come on her to frame a man in her womb of her substance, as you have the Angel telling Joseph in the first of Matthew, and Mary in Luke 1. 35. This was so done,

This was foretold, Isa. 7. 14. and fulfilled, Matth. 1. 22, 23

Christ is said to be a stone cut out without hands, Dan. 4. 34, 35. See Heb. 8. 2. and 9. 11.

1. (Say some of our Divines) To free the manhood from the stain of sin wherewith those are polluted which are begotten by carnal generation, though the holy Ghost could easily have sanctified the substance of a man as of a woman, to frame of it the humane Nature of Christ.

2. To shew the greatness of his love to man by transcending the course of nature for his restitution, and that the making of the second Adam might no less commend the power of God than the making of the first, for it is no more beyond the power of nature to produce a man of a Virgin, than to frame a man of the dust of the earth. This is a great mystery, God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. The second person did assume humane nature to it, so as these two make one person, John 1. 14. Rom. 1. 3. The second person (I say) for it is not proper to say that the Divine nature was made flesh, but the second Person, though the second Person have the Divine nature in him and is God. For though God was made flesh, yet it was not the Divine nature in all the Persons that was incarnated, but the very person of the Son subsisting in the Godhead.

There is a twofold nativity of Christ, one eternall and incomprehensible, as he is the Son of God: The other temporall and miraculous, as he is the Sonne of man; both are contained, Gal. 4. 4. Caterum ex matre sine patre nasci, grandi hoc mysterio non carebat.

Alioqui cur fuisset turpius patrem habere quam matrem, cum praestantior sit vir quam femina? Sed nefas erat, ut homo quisquam diceretur ejus pater, qui patrem haberet Deum. Lud. Viv. de Veritate Fidei Christiane, lib. 2. cap. 10. The holy Ghost did as it were cast a cloud over her, to teach us that we should not search overmuch into the mystery of the Incarnation. Master Perkins on the Creed. Christ was not begotten spermatically nor of the substance of the holy Ghost, but operatively, by the power of the holy Ghost: He was the activum principium, as the Virgin Mary was the passivum principium. Descendens itaque de Cœlo sanctus ille Spiritus Dei, sanctam Virginem, cujus utero se insinuaret, elegit. At illa divino Spiritu hausto repleta concepit, & sine ullo actu viri repente virginalis uterus intumuit. Quod si animalia quædam vento aut aura concipere solere omnibus notum est, cur quisquam mirum putet, cum Spiritu Dei, cui facile est quicquid velit, gravatam esse Virginem dicimus? Lact. Divin. Instit. l. 4. de vera sapientia. Men have been generated four waies, saith Austin. 1. Without either man or woman, as Adam was. 2. Without woman, as Eve was. 3. Without man, as Christ was. 4. With man and woman, as all other men were.

The Schoolmen have divers curious questions,

1. Whether it was convenient for God to be Incarnate.

2. Whether it was necessary for the repairing of mankind, that the Word should be Incarnate.

3. Whether

3. Whether God ſhould have been Incarnate, if man had not ſinned. Aquinas part 3. quæſt. 1. Artic. 1, 2, 3.

That Chriſt ſhould have come although man had not ſinned, will ſcarce be made good. The Scripture acknowledgeth no other cauſe of Chriſts coming in the fleſh but to ſave ſinners, and redeem them who are under the Law, and ſo ſubject to the curſe, Matth. 2. 21. & 9. 13. & 18. 11. Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8. Gal. 4. 5. Heb. 2. 14, 15. Luk. 19. 10. 1 Tim. 1. 15.

Chriſt was born of a Virgin, but ſuch a one as was eſpouſed to a man, Luk. 1. 27. and that for theſe Reaſons.

1. To avoid the infamy and ſuſpition of immodeſty.

2. That her Virginity might be the better evidenced, viz. He bearing witneſs to whom it ſpecially belonged to underſtand how things were, and who was moſt worthy to be believed in that matter.

3. That ſhe might have a moſt intimate helper in bearing all other cares and troubles.

4. To repreſent our ſpiritual conjunction with Chriſt, for we are eſpouſed to him, and yet we ought to be virgins, cleanſed from all pollution both of fleſh and ſpirit, 2 Cor. 7. 1. ſee 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 14. 4.

Doctor Taylor in his Hiſtory of the Life and Death of Chriſt, Part 1. Sect. 3. ſaith, As there was no ſinne in the conception, ſo neither had ſhe pains in the production, and that Chriſt came into the world without doing any violence to the Virginall and pure body of his Mother, Ezek. 44. 2. Matth. 2. 1. Vide Scultet. Delit. Evang. cap. 10. Certè de vero natali Chriſti anno vix ferè ſunt ſententiæ,

The place where Chriſt was born was Bethlehem, which ſignifies a houſe of bread, the beſt place for the Bread of life; and in Ephratah a moſt fruitfull place.

In the Year 3967. ſay ſome, others ſay it is uncertain in what year. In the 42. year of Auguſtus his Reign.

For the moneth there is great difference alſo.

Epiphanius thinketh he was born in the 6th of January. Beraldus at the middle of September. Clemens Alexandrinus at the Spring-time. Others at the 25th of December.

Scaliger objects that the Winter-time was not fit for a Maſter of a Family to undertake ſo long a journey with his wife to be taxed; alſo that Shepherds are not wont in the night time to watch their flocks at that time of the year. Voſſius de Natali Jeſu Chriſt.

Dr Drake in his Chronology gives probable grounds why Chriſt was not born in December, but rather about Auguſt or September. God of purpoſe concealed the time of Chriſts birth, as he did the body of Moſes, as well foreſeeing how it would have been abuſed to ſuperſtition, had it been exactly known. Refert Epiphanius natum eſſe Dominum Auguſto 13. & Sylvano Conſ. die quinto Januarij, anno ab orbe Condito 3948. There is a Tract proving the Nativity of our Saviour to be on the 25th of December, put out in Mr Seldens name, (ſince his death) and ſuppoſed by ſome to to be his Sect. 1. he voucheth Authorities of keeping it on this day, both in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches about the 400 years after our Saviour. See alſo Sect. 3d 4th 7th.

Interpreters indeed render the word ἀγραυλοῦντες Vigilare or excubare, but it may be better tranſlated ſub dio agere: It properly notes to live in the fields, as the original of the word ſhews, which agrees to the day-time, as well as to the night. In England (ſaith Voſſius) we have travelled both before and after the Nativity of Chriſt. Vide Grot. in Luc. 2. 8 & Montacut. orig. Eccleſ. partem priorem p. 47, 48. & Appar. 11. Joh. 19. 28, 30.

This Jeſus of Nazareth perfect God and man, is that Meſſiah promiſed of old, What ever was ſaid of the Meſſiah was accompliſhed by him and him alone.

See Luk. 27. 51

The firſt Chriſtians believed in him, Luke 1. 68. & 2. 25, 38. Chriſt much inſtructed his Diſciples in this great truth, Luke 24. 25, 26, 27, 44. verſes. See Joh. 5. 46, 47. The Apoſtles proved this great Doctrine, Acts 18. 24, 27. & 26. 22, 23. & 28. 23.

Arguments that prove this Jeſus to be the Meſſiah.

See Mr Froſt on 1 Tim. 1. 15.

All the times of exhibiting the Meſſiah delivered in the Old Teſtament are expired, Acts 13. 32. See 1 Pet. 1. 10. The old Teſtament ſpeaks of a twofold coming of Chriſt, in a ſtate of humility, and glory: The Jewiſh Rabbins could not reconcile theſe two; the Talmudiſts diſtinguiſhed of a twofold Meſſiah, Ben-Iſrael or Ben-Ephraim, and Ben-David. The Prophets ſpeak not of ſeveral perſons but of ſeveral ſtates of one perſon. See Ezek. 37. 24.

1. That the promiſed Meſſiah is already come into the world.
2. That Jeſus Chriſt whom we acknowledg and profeſſe, is that promiſed Meſſiah.

Gen. 49. 10. The power of ruling and authority of judging is departed from Judah and hath been a long time, Therefore Shiloh (the Meſſiah) is come.

Hag. 2. 6, 7, 9. The outward glory of the firſt Temple was greater, all the veſſels of the firſt Temple were beaten gold, Dan. 5. 2, 3. of the ſecond braſſe; but Chriſt honoured the ſecond Temple by his own Preſence, Doctrine and Miracles.

The Jews confeſſe that there were five things in which the latter Temple was inferiour to the former.

Heavenly fire came down viſibly on their Sacrifices. They had the Ark of the Covenant: The Cloud, a witneſs of the Divine preſence. Urim and [b] Thummim: And laſtly a ſucceſſion of Prophets, which the latter Temple wanted. Rain. in loc. & de lib. Apoc. tom. 2. Prælect. 134, 135.

Biſhop Uſher ſaid, whenever the Jews were converted, the great argument which ſhould move them, would be the right underſtanding of the propheſies of the Old Teſtament, eſpecially this. Vide Brochm. *Syſt. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy City, to finiſh the tranſgreſſion. That is, The time that the Jews were to live in their own land, and enjoy their own worſhip after their return out of Captivity.

We are wont to apply the ſeventh number to dayes, that a perfect week ſhould comprehend ſeven full dayes. So Dan. 10. 2. Levit. 23. 15. The Prophecy cannot be underſtood in this common and uſual manner, ſo Seventy weeks riſe but to Four hundred and ninety dayes, within which ſpace of time none of thoſe things were conſummated of which the Angel ſo ſpecially propheſieth.

Weeks are alſo taken in Scripture for years not dayes, ſo that every week makes ſeven ordinary years, ſo that phraſe is uſed, Gen. 29. 47. Levit. 25. 8. So it is here taken by Interpreters generally, and they fill up the ſumme of Four hundred and fifteen years, in the ſpace of which the God of Heaven would work wonderfull things which the Angell Gabriel recites here particularly. Montac. Appar. 2.

By this the times of the Meſſiah are paſt, for when the Meſſiah came the Sacrifice was to ceaſe, and there was a ſealing up of the viſion and Prophets, this is ceaſed; there is now no Viſion nor Prophecy among the Jews.

Chriſt wrought miracles, Matth. 11. 4, 5. which only God can do, Pſal. 72. 18. & 86. 10. & 136. 4. and by his own power, others, and his Diſciples, by him, and in his name, Matth. 9. 28, 29. and when he pleaſed, which is proper to God alone, Pſal. 115. 3. & 135. 6. Matth. 8. 2. John 5. 21.

He wrought many and great miracles, John ult. ult. giving ſight to thoſe that were born blind, John 9 32.. See 15. 24. caſting out of Devils, raiſing of the dead to life; miracles of any kind, on Men, Devils, Sea, Tempeſts, Loaves, Fiſhes, openly, before many, not privily in corners, for his own glory, John 2. 11 He alſo gave to others the gift of miracles, Matth. 10. 1.

Petavius in his 2d part of his 4th Tome of Theologica Dogmata, lib. 16. cap. 6. and ſo onward, proves againſt the Jews, 1. That the Meſſiah is come already, and that the time foretold by ſo many Prophets, and deſigned for his coming is paſt. 2. That he whom the Chriſtians acknowledg, Jeſus the Sonne of Mary and God alſo, is the true and only Meſſiah.

Some Hereticks oppoſed Chriſts Deity.

Arius ſaid Chriſt was an excellent creature, but not of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father.

Paulus Samoſatenus, more fitly Semiſabanas, held Chriſt was but a meer man; ſo did Ebion.

He was homo verus, but not homo merus, Auguſtine on 1 John 1. A true man, but not a meer man: He was truely God, equal to the Father; and truly man, like to us in all things, ſin only excepted.

The higheſt Hereſies have riſen from miſguided zeal. Arius upon deteſtation of Gentiliſm, leaſt he ſhould ſeem to acknowledge more Gods than one; by conſeſſing a coequality of Chriſts Divinity with his Father, denied the Deity and Sabellius in deteſtation of Arius, fell into the other extream, and denyed the diſtinction of Perſons. Symmons.

Servetus a Spaniard burnt at Genevah in Calvins time, denied that Chriſt was Gods Son till Mary bore him. He ſaid, Chriſt was not the eternal Son of God, but the Son of the eternal God.

If this be truely believed that Chriſt is the Son of God and Saviour of the world, it will work a reſolution to cleave to Chriſt, though all the world forſake him, nothing will make us ſhrink from Chriſt though it coſt us our lives, and all our comforts.

2. If we believe this becauſe it is written in the Bible, in the Old and New Teſtament the word of truth, then we muſt forbear what the Word forbids, and give our ſelves to be ruled by him, and expect ſalvation from him according to the direction of that Word, then we will believe the whole Word, if we believe this which of all other parts of it hath leaſt of ſenſe and humane reaſon.

Quemadmodum Jeſu Chriſto, orbi revelato, & Gentibus exhibito ſecundum promiſſiones Patribus factas, exorti ſunt ſtatim Antichriſti multi, qui ſe opponerent Dei excelſo brachio, ac titulum & nomen ſibi illud uſurparent, quod Dei unigenito debebatur, ita etiam cum recens adhuc naſceretur, aut etiam paulò antequam de Virgine carnem ſumpſiſſet, multi in Judaa oriebantur, qui & novas religionum ſectas inſtituerent, & ſe etiam pro Meſſia venditarent. Inter caeteros haeretici quidam, quod Baronius obſervat, regnante Herode Idumaeo prodierunt, qui ipſum pro Meſſiâ in Scripturis praedicto, reputabant, cui regnum Iſraelis in aeternitatem promiſſum olim fuerat, eo quod ſecundum vaticinium Jacob, regnum in ea receſſerat de Judâ. Montac. Anal. Exercit. 3. Sect. 4.

Some Hereticks oppoſed Chriſts manhood.

1. The Marcionites which held that Chriſt had not the true ſubſtance, but only the ſemblance or ſhew of a man, alledging Phil. 2. 7. but there a true not counterfeit the humane nature. The Marcionites thought that Chriſt took only a fantaſtical not a true body, the fleſh. 1 Tim. 3 16.

Some held that the Godhead was converted into God manifeſt in likeneſs

likeneſs is underſtood, even as one man is like another, and Rom. 8. 3. ſimilitude is not referred to fleſh, but to ſinfull fleſh, John 1. The Word was made fleſh, not by mutation, as the water was turned into Wine, John 2. 19. nor by confuſion, by mingling the God-head and manhood together, but the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity took a humane body and ſoul into his Divine Nature.

Secondly, The Manichees, which ſaid, He had the true ſubſtance of man, but that he brought his body from Heaven, alledging 1 Cor. 15. 47. and had it not by birth of the Virgin Mary, but that is ſpoken of the Perſon of Chriſt not of his manhood it ſelf.

Thirdly, The Valentinians who held that Chriſt had an aerial body, and aſſumed nothing of Mary but only paſſed as thorow a chanel.

Vide Spanhem. Dub. Evangel. part. 1. Dub. 30. Manichæus Chriſtum veram habuiſſe carnem negavit. Photinus purum fuiſſe hominem aſſeruit. Arius quoad divinam naturam Patri conſubſtantialem & æqualem non credidit. Sabellius Perſonam à Patre diſtinctam negavit. Apollinarius animam rationalem ei ademit. Neſtorius Deum & hominem duplicem perſonam conſtituit. Eutyches divinam humanamque naturam confudit. Valentinianus non fatetur Chriſti corpus ex Virgine ſubſtantialiter ſumptum, ſed fingit de Cœlo depoſitum. Fulgentius ad Tranſim. lib. 1. Cum duæ ſint in Chriſto Domino naturæ, conditionibus diſtinctæ ſuis, ac proprietatibus; & de alterutra quædam in ſacris libris habeantur, quæ in alteram minime congruunt, hæc hæretici perverſè, ac præpoſterè ſic uſurpant, ut quæ unius propria eſſe debent, ad alteram accomodent. Ad hunc modum quæ ad humanam ſpectant imbecillitatem, divinæ Chriſti naturæ impingebant Ariani; ut infra paternam dignitatem Filium abjicerent: quæ vero de ejuſdem divinitate Commemorata ſunt, ad humanam naturam trahebant Eutychiani, ut eam altius extollerent. Petav. de Trinitat. l. 2. Prooem.

Fourthly, Apollinaris confeſſed the fleſh of a man in him, but not the ſoul, but that his Deity was in ſtead of his ſoul. See Matth. 26. 39. The whole man muſt be redeemed, and in its own nature, the ſoul is the principal part of man, ſinne ſpecially adheres to it, and it is a true rule, What Chriſt did not aſſume he did not redeem.

Fifthly, The Ubiquitaries will have his manhood every where, and ſo they deſtroy the very being of his manhood. Each Nature retains their ſeveral eſſential Properties, and it is the property of the humanity to be contained in one place at once. The Papiſts alſo offer indignity to Chriſts manhood, in that they would have his body to be in divers places at once.

6. Others held his body impaſſible. His body was not immediately created by God, nor did he bring it from Heaven, but he was a man of our ſtock and nature, Heb 2. 11, 16, 17. he is often called the Son of man.

See of the Jews converſion. Mercer on Amos 9. 9. and 14. and on verſ. 20. of Obadiah.

7. The Jews look for a Meſſiah to come in outward pomp, yet ſome of their Rabbins ſay, In regno Meſſiæ nihil mundanum aut carnale. By thoſe Arguments, John 5. 30. Acts 17. 2, 3. & 18. 28. Rom. 16. 26. one ſaith, many Jews have been convinced.

Capel. Spicil. ad Matth. 17. 3. & Joh. 3. 14. Druſ. ad difficil. loca. Gen. 8. 1.

Unio importat conjunctionem aliquorum in aliquo uno. Aquinas par. 3. quæſt. 2. art. 9. places of Scripture which ſpeak of the Union of both Natures. John 1. 14. Col. 2. 9. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 2. 14, 16. Unitæ hypoſtaſi Deum & hominem nihil eſt illud, quam naturam humanam

So you ſee what the Scripture tels of the Incarnation of Chriſt, and how he was made of the ſeed of David according to the Prophecy that went before. Now we are to ſpeak of the Union of theſe two Natures.

They are united in a perſonal Union, ſuch I mean, as that both Natures concur to the conſtituting of one individual Subſiſtence, as it is evident by this, that the works and ſufferings proper to one of the Natures are deſcribed unto the whole Perſon, which could not be truly affirmed, if both of theſe Natures were not conjoyned in one Perſon.

The Actions or Properties of the God-head and Manhood both could not be given to whole Chriſt, if the God-head and Manhood both do not conſtitute one Perſon of Chriſt.

For the ſecond Perſon in Trinity did aſſume to it ſelf that frail Nature ſo ſoon as ever it had a being, but had no perſonal Subſiſtence in it ſelf, ſo that it perſonally ſubſiſts by virtue of its ſo cloſe and near an Union with the Perſon of the Son, and ſo whole Chriſt might be the Sonne of God, and the God of Glory might be crucified, and the Bloud of God might redeem us; and ſo whatſoever was done or ſuffered might be attributed to the whole Chriſt, the God-head being intereſſed into that which the Humanity did and suffered, because of this unspeakable Union betwixt them.

Union ordinarily and in things natural is the joyning together of two things by one common bond, but this Union is not so effected, but it is performed by the voluntary and powerful Act of the one of the things to be united, assuming and taking to it self the other after a manner incommunicable.

The hypostaticall Union by the common consent of Schoolmen, is modus substantialis, not a substantiall entity, but only a substantiall manner of being, and the res modificata of it, the thing which it modificates, is the humanity of Christ.

nam non habere propriam subsistentiam, sed assumptam esse à verbo aterno ad ipsam verbi subsistentiam. Bellarm. de Christo lib. 3. cap. 8. Unionis istius modus talis est, ut facta sit, (quemadmodum habetur in aliis Synodi Chalcedonensis) ἀσυγχύτως, id est sine mutatione verbi, item ἀδιαιρέτως, & ἀχωρίστως, id est, sine naturarum confusione, divisione & separatione, est enim arctissima ac prorsus indissolubilis. Ravan. Bibliotheca sacra ad verbum unio. From this Union of two Natures in one Person ariseth a kind of speech or phrase peculiar to the Scriptures, called κοινωνία ἰδιωμάτων, the communication of properties, when the property of one Nature is attributed to the whole Person denominated by the other Nature, as when Paul saith, Acts 20. 28. That God shed his blood, 1 Cor. 2. 8. That the Lord of Glory was crucified. And when Christ saith John 3. 15. that he talking with Nicodemus was then in Heaven. Communicatio idiomatum ex unione orta non est alternata idiomatum infusio, aut permixtio in Naturis: Sed est modus alternationis idiomatum, naturarum propria alternatim tribuens humana Deo, & divina homini Christo, non juxta utramvis, sed juxta illam naturam, cujus sunt propria. Sic Filius Dei factus est ex Davide ad Rom. 1. 3. Sed non secundùm utramvis naturam promiscuè: sed ut sequitur ibidem, secundùm carnem, Nempè secundum naturam istius attributi capacem, sic pari passu Christus est immensus, infinitus, aternus, at secundùm naturam perfectionis istius modi capacem, Deitatem scilicet. Barlow Exercitat. 6. Vide plura ibid. Et Zanchium de Symbolo Apostolico. p. 143. Perav. de Incarnat, l. 2. c. 3. Communicatio proprietatum à Scholasticis appellatur, non quod unius natura proprietas cum altera natura, sed potiùs utriusque natura proprietates cum ipsa Persona communicentur: hoc est, de ipsa Persona tam unius quam alterius naturæ Proprietates enuntientur. Sadeel de veritate humana Naturæ. There is also a communication of gifts, by reason of this personall Union the Humane Nature of Christ becomes enriched with excellent gifts and endowments, as Wisdome, Knowledg, Holinesse, yet finite, and of Dignity, the Manhood is exalted above all creatures whatsoever.

There have been many similitudes to make us conceive how God should become man, from iron throwly fired, there is iron and fire too, of the soul and body which make one Person, of the Scion ingraffed in the Tree, of the Jewel in a Ring, of a Planet in its Orb, all which may something illustrate; but there is as much dissimilitude as similitude in them. Only there are these rules which are good to observe.

Vide Thes. Theol. Salmur. part. 2. De Duarum Christi naturarum Hypostat. Unione.

First, There are two Natures but not two Persons, Aliud & aliud, but not Alius & alius, as there are in the Trinity, it is a Union of Natures*, yet not a natural but a supernatural and mystical Union.

Secondly, The Scripture expresseth it, John 1. 14. The Word was made flesh, it was not turned into flesh as the water was made wine, not by any confusion, as if the Divine Nature were made the Humane, or the Humane the Divine. When we say the Divine Nature took our Humane Nature upon him, we must not think that that Humane Nature consisting of a soul and body was one entire person, as it is in us, for though it was particular, yet it did not subsist of it self before the Union of the God-head to it.

Nestorius said Christ had two Persons. Eutyches makes the natures not to be two existing in one Person, but the manhood deified, from that place, John 1. 14. This saith Brochmand is, Cumulus quidam sadorum errorum. * A personall union, but not a union of persons. A Doctor in Divinity and a Frenchman, having read very learnedly concerning the Trinity, being much admired, and desired by his Auditors to publish the same for the common good, he was exceedingly puffed up thereby, and used this speech, O Jesule, Jesule, quantum hac quæstione confirmavi legem tuam & exaltavi: profectò si malignandò & adversandò vellem, fortioribus rationibus & argumentis scirem illam infirmare & deprimendo improbare. Lord Jesus, how art thou beholding to me? if I had turned my wit against thee, how much hurt could I have done thee? and hereupon God struck him, and so took away his understanding, that he could scarce learne the Lords Prayer and Creed of his own childe. Matth. Paris. Angl. Johan 120. 1. Simon Thurnajus vir doctissimus, qui cùm plus æquo sua gloriaretur doctrina, repentè literas ita oblitus est, ut rudissimus penitus sit effectus. Polyd. Virg. Ang. Hist. lib. 15. pag. 288. Petav. de Incarnat. lib. 15. cap. 6, 7, 8, &c. De duabus in personam convenientibus naturis, & post unionem, sine ullâ confusione, vel extinctione alterutrius in Christo remanentibus.

So the holy Ghost appeared in a Dove.

Thirdly, This personall Union is inseparable, for when Christ appeared like man in the Old Testament that was not an Incarnation, because separable.

* See Master Downs Treatise.

Fourthly, By this means the Virgin Mary is truly called * Deipara the mother of God, so in Scripture she is expressly called The mother of the Lord, for she brought him who was God and Man, though she did not bring forth his Deity, the whole person of Christ was the subject of conception and nativity, though not all that was in that Person.

The blessed Virgin Mary is truly Deipara, the mother of God.

Sanctissimam Mariam Deiparam, Θεοτόκον, Genetricem Dei profitemur contra Nestorium. Et utcunque verum sit quod nonnulli observant, Leonem 1. Romanæ urbis Episcopum, omnium principem, desertis verbis Deiparam, vel Dei matrem appellasse eam, rem tamen ipsam summâ cum veritate conjunctam agnoscentes eadem metipsa appellatione libenter utimur: non tantum quia Leo sic locutus est, sed quia durante Leonem Elizabeth eam ita compellabat. Montac. Apparat. 9. Maria, vocata est, idque verissimè, mater Dei, Θεοτόκος, quia mater est totius illius personæ Christi, quæ una tantum est, neque in partes scindi potest. Christus autem & est Deus verus, & perfectus homo. Zanch. de Oper. Dei part. 3. l. 2. c. 5. De Origine Animorum. Vide Petavij Dogmata Theol. Tom. 4. De Incarnat, l 5. c. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.

Est incarnatio inchoativè & effectivè totius Trinitatis, sed appropriativè & terminativè solius Filij, ut si tres simul consuant vestem, ab uno tamen ex illis induendam.

Consider lastly, The end of this Incarnation, which is this, God and man became one in Person, that God and man might become one in the Covenant of Grace, Gal. 4. 4, 5. Before this, man was at as great a distance with God, as the apostate Angels, but now by this means as he is made sin for us, so are we made righteousnes by him, not that this benefit extends to all, but only to those men who are under the Covenant; and therefore Gal. 3. all the mercies which Abraham had are limited to a spiritual seed; therefore as the mystery is great for the truth, so for the comfort of it, and why should faith think it such an unlikely matter to adopt us for his children, when God hath united our nature to him?

Maref. Colleg. Theol. loc. SO much may serve concerning Christs Natures, both what they be, Manhood and God-head. And Secondly, How they are united into one Person by a personal Union.

Christs Offices in the next place are to be treated of. Wherein consider,

1. His calling to his Office.

2. The Office to which he was called, or which is all one. The efficient cause of these Offices, and the matter or parts of them.

* Annointing signified three things, 1. A solemn separation of one to a work or imployment Thou shalt anoint Jehu to be King over Israel, and thou shalt anoint Elisha in thy room. 2. It signifies the Lords gifting and fitting the person for that work, Psa. 45. Oyl is an instrument of activity and nimblenes. You shall be anointed with the holy Ghost. Saul had another heart after he was anointed by Samuel. 3. Acceptation with God, Cant. 1. 5. when the Lord had separated Christ to this work, he proclaims he was well pleased with him. Christs anointing differs from other mens, 1. His was only spiritual. 2. Above measure and overflowing, whereas others were anointed with material oyl, and they received the Spirit but in measure. There were many glorious appearances and representations of Christ in Scripture both before and since his coming in the flesh, those before were Incarnationis præludia, those since his Ascension were Officij insignia. Before his coming in the flesh he appeared to Abraham and others. See Ezek. 9. 2, 4. & 40. 3: Since his Ascension there were divers visions and representations of him in the Revelations, c. 1, 13. & 4. 3. & 5. 6. & 19. 13, 14. which shew that Christ glorified hath not laid down any of his Offices.

For the cause of the Lords undertaking these Offices, it was the will and calling of his Father who is said to anoint him *, that is to say, to appoint him to them, and and fit him for them, and himself saith, Him hath God the Father sealed, that is to say, ratified and set apart to that work, as a Prince by his Seal doth give Commission to any of his Subjects to undertake such and such a work, furnishing him with Authority to fulfill the same. And therefore the Apostle to the Hebrews saith particularly concerning his Priesthood, that he did not make himself a Priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee; and this calling was ratified with an Oath, saying, That the Lord hath sworn and will not repent, Thou art a Priest for ever, to let us know the certainty and immurability thereof. Now this observation makes to the exceeding great commendation of the goodness of God, that he himself would take care to provide for us a perfect and sufficient helper against this our misery. If we had bethought our selves of a remedy, and procured it for our selves, so much lesse had been the glory of his grace. But when he to whom it little pertained in regard of any good he should get by it, but that he counts it a benefit to manifest his grace by doing good to us; when he (I say) bethought himself of a way to effect this work, and took order to send a Person that was perfectly sufficient to work it out: Now this honour is enlarged exceedingly, and the glory of the work redoundeth wholly to him, and then it must be confessed to be altogether of his grace. It is true indeed that Justice and Mercy do meet together in this work, and each shew it self in perfection, for that he pardoneth our sins and saveth us. Now that Jesus Christ hath deserved pardon of sin and salvation for us, it is a part of righteousnesse. For he is righteous (saith the Scripture) to forgive us; but in that he himself found out a means to satisfie his Justice, and after a sort to tie his righteousnesse to do this for us; this is of meer mercy and grace, for mercy is the beginning and first cause of our deliverance, but yet mercy sets justice satisfied, and so accomplisheth the whole work, not with any wrong, injury or offence to justice, and with the help of it. So we see our Lord Jesus Christ came to undertake this work, the manhood of his own accord did not put himself to do it, the Angels did not perswade him, we did not intreat him or hire him. Nay we nor any other creature had an hand in assigning him to it, but the Father being offended with us, and finding the way of his justice shut against us by our sinnes, made a Covenant with the Sonne that he should undertake it, and appointed it to be done by the way of taking our flesh, resolving that that Person should be the raiser up of lost and fallen man to happiness and felicity.

Now for the Offices themselves which Christ undertook, we must learn them by the Titles which the Scripture giveth unto him. These Titles are a Saviour, a Redeemer, a Mediator, a Surety, a Christ, a Lord, and in explicating these six Titles, I shall sufficiently declare the Offices of our Lord.

Christ is a King, a Father, a Husband, a Friend, a Redeemer, Shepherd, and many such Tiles are given to him, to be props of our faith, no one relation answers all our necessities. 2. That every thing may lead us to him. All the Promises of the Gospell have their efficacy in the relations of Christ, Rom. 9. 5. Look upon them as the ground of your greatest comfort and honour. 2. The knowledge of Christs relations is the only way to make your prayers effectual. 3. All your relations to God are grounded only on your relation to Christ.

First, I say he was a Saviour, A Saviour is a Person that undertaketh to free any that are in distress through the want of good things, and the presence of evil, from that misery under which they lie, by taking away those evils from them, and conferring those good things upon them. Now he is therefore called by the name of Jesus * which signifies a Saviour, because he was to deliver his people from that misery whereinto Adam and themselves had plunged themselves, removing those extream evils which lay on them, and bringing unto them thoſe great benefits whereof they are deprived. Even among us when any City or Commonwealth is oppreſſed by a Tyrant who ſpoileth them of their Liberty and Lands, and holds them in ſlavery and beggery; if any Perſon ariſe and put down that Tyrant, and reſtore every man his Goods and Liberty, free them from their miſeries, and reſtore them the free uſe of their Countrey and Laws, this man is a Saviour, of ſuch a City: ſo is the Lord Jeſus to us. Therefore is he frequently entituled, The ſalvation of God: Mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation, and all the ends of the earth ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God, and our God the God of our ſalvation. So was he figured by all the Judges whom God raiſed up to help his people, for it is ſaid, God raiſed them up Saviours which ſaved them out of the hands of their enemies, and God raiſed them up a Saviour, even ſuch and ſuch a one, they were Types of Chriſt the great Saviour, That ſaveth us out of the hands of our enemies, as that holy man telleth in this Song. This is the firſt Title Jeſus, and the reaſon of it, and it was his Name by which he was commonly known and called, and now known and called, a name of infinite ſweetneſs to us, of infinite honour and praiſe to him; For how much comfort did oppreſſed Nations receive at the hearing of ſuch a Deliverer? How much honour did they ſhew unto him? And therefore when the Apoſtle telleth us of our ſubjection unto Chriſts Authority, he aſcribeth it unto this Name, as ſhewing us, that this is the foundation of his requiring, and our yielding all honour and obedience to him. He takes not upon him to be honoured only, becauſe he will be honoured, or becauſe he is in himſelf worthy of it in regard of Excellency, but becauſe he hath deſerved it at our hands, and is perfectly worthy of it in regard of the things he hath done for us. Chriſt delivers his people from their ſpiritual ſlavery, the bondage of ſin, Satan, the Law, Death, Hell.

The ſlavery of ſin and Satan is all one, the Devil hath dominion over the ſoul only by ſin, our luſts are his ſtrong holds, Satan is caſt out when ſin is broken, 2 Tim. 2.26. See 1 Joh. 3.8.

To be ſlaves to ſin, 1. A baſe bondage, to be at the command of every unclean motion, Gal. 5.19, 22. They are called works of the fleſh, fruits of the Spirit. 2. A dreadful bondage, other maſters are content to have their ſlaves obedience, but the more we do work the more we ſmart.

Chriſt is not only the Saviour of our ſouls, but of our bodies, moſt of his miracles were for the good of their bodies, Luke 22.35.

First, He aſſumed our body as well as ſoul in his Incarnation, he aſſumed our infirmities, naturall, not penall or perſonall.

Secondly, He ſuffered not only in his ſoul, but body.

Thirdly, Chriſt in his body is now in Heaven.

Fourthly, At the day of Judgment, he will come down in his Humane Nature for the good of our bodies.

We muſt therefore truſt him with bodies and eſtates, as well as with our ſouls, and take heed of bodily ſins, drunkneſs, gluttony, lying, ſwearing, fornication.

Where he comes to be a Saviour,

Salvation is provided for loſt man, this ſets out the free grace of God, Tit. 3.4.

First, He breaks all the yoaks of ſin, Iſa. 59. two laſt verſes, Acts 5.31. Rom. 7.14, 17. & 8.2. He delivers his ſervants,

1. From the guilt of ſin, whereby the ſinner is bound over to puniſhment, Chriſt hath diſcharged the debt for us, Rom. 8.1. Gal. 3.13.

If Adam had lived by his righteouſneſſe, it had been life, but not ſalvation. 2. Salvation provided for man is in Chriſt, and in him only, Acts 4.12. This ſets out the admirable wiſedom of God in affording this ſalvation in his own Son, and his ineſtimable goodneſſe to us that in joy the Goſpel, Luke 24.47. 2 Tim. 1.9, 10.

2. From

2. From the ſtain and defilement of ſin, 1 Cor. 6.11. and that partly by repairing the Image of God in the ſoul which ſin had defaced, and by imputing all his righteouſneſs to them, ſo that the ſoul ſtands covered over before God with the beauty of Christ Jeſus, Rev. 1.5.

3. From the reigning power of ſin by his Spirit, Rom. 6. Acts 3.26. Titus 2.14. 1 Pet. 1. 18.

Secondly, Christ delivers his people from the yoak of the Law both Ceremonial and Moral.

1. He hath totally delivered his people from the ceremonial Law, thoſe ceremonies that concerned the publick external Worſhip of God, and their private converſation, multitude of obſervations, and ſome coſtly. Galat. Coloſ. Heb.

2. He hath freed them from the burden of the Moral Law,

1. From it as a Covenant of life, they have life by Christ.
2. From the curſes of it, Gal. 3.13.
3. The rigor of it.
4. As it brings wrath and the Spirit of bondage, 2 Tim. 1.7.
5. From the irritation of it, for by accident it provokes a mans corruption, Rom. 7.8.
6. As it encreaſeth the guilt of ſin, Christ hath taken all the guilt upon his own ſhoulders.

Thirdly, Christ ſets all his ſervants free from the yoke of Death and Hell, the firſt and ſecond death; this is proved out of 1 Cor. 15. 25, 26, 54. John 11. 26. Revel. 2, 10. and 20. 6. 1 Theſſ. 1. ult. Christ delivers his people from the curſe of Death.

In their death, 1. There is an end of all their miſery both of ſinne and puniſhment. 2. A compleating of the graces begun in them. 3. A paſſage from this vale of miſery to heavenly glory.

1. Meritoriouſly by undergoing death, Heb. 2.14,15. In morte Christi obiit mors, he endured the wrath of God due to all Gods people.

2. He effectually applies this to his people in the adminiſtration of the Covenant of Grace.

The Papiſts abuſe the name of Jeſus four wayes:

1. In making it a name of wonder, uſing it idly and fooliſhly in their talk, O Jeſus! Quàm sæpè repetant ad nauſeam usque sanctiſſimum nomen; dicant se de nomine Iesu Iesuitas, festum nominis Iesu devotiſſimè concelebrent, revolvant Psalterium Iesu, & ſtultè ſibi placeant Ethnico battalogiſmo quod in eo nomen Iesu ad quadringentas usque & quinquaginta vices iteretur; non niſi proditores in illum sunt, Judâ ipso fœdè deteriores, qui gloriam ſalutis noſtræ nullis ſi alteri nomini communicandam, ab illa e-

2. In a ſuperſtitious worſhipping of the letters and ſyllables, bowing at the ſound of the word, Vox Jeſu, vel audita, vel viſa, is worſhipped by them. Fideles audito nomine Jeſu, pia conſuetudine aſſurgunt, caput aperiunt, aut genu flectunt. Bayi Inſtitut. Relig. Chriſt. lib. 1. cap. 144. Vide plura ibid. They ſay this is the name which God gave his Sonne after he had ſubmitted to death for us. This name Jeſus was given to Christ long before his exaltation. It is common to others, Jeſus the ſonne of Syrach, and Joſhua, Heb. 4. 8. They do not bowe at the Name of Christ or Immanuel, or at the mention of any other Perſon in the Trinity.

3. In making it a name of a Sect, the Jeſuites are ſo termed from it. Vide Bezam in 1 Cor. 2,21. They ſhould rather be called Ignatians of Ignatius the firſt author of their Society and Order.

4. In abuſing it for a charm to caſt out Devils. The Scripture indeed ſaith, By thy Name, but the meaning is by thy power have we caſt out Devils.

They abuſe that place, Acts 3.16. His Name hath made this man ſtrong, that is, ſay they, the Apoſtles pronounced the Name Jeſus, and the pronunciation of this name hath a force of driving away Devils, or doing other miracles, the Name of Christ there is Christ himſelf or his power.

The Arminians say, Salvation may be had without knowledge of, or faith in Christ Jesus. Vide Musæum contra Vedel. c. 9. Acts 4. 12. Some of the ancient Fathers before the rising of the Pelagian Heresie, who had so put on Christ, as Lipsius speaks, that they had not fully put off Plato, have unadvisedly dropt some speeches, seeming to grant, that divers men before the Incarnation, living according to the dictates of right reason, might be saved without faith in Christ. The Question is not, Whether a Gentile believing in Christ may be saved? But, Whether a man by the conduct of Nature without the knowledge of Christ, may come to Heaven? The assertion whereof we condemn as wicked, Pelagian, Socinian Heresie: and think that it was well said of Bernard, That many labouring to make Plato a Christian, do prove themselves to be Heathens. The Patriarchs and Jews believed in Christum exhibendum & moriturum, as we in him, Exhibitum & mortuum, Gen. 12. 3. & 49. 10. Psal. 27. 8. & 110.

Some say men must be saved by a Christ within them; it is true we must be united to Christ before we can have benefit by him, but that is not their meaning; they say, Christ without us is a mystical and typical thing, and a shadow of Christ within us, and so they will be saved by their own works: So the Jewes, Galat. 2. 16. Menasseh Ben Israel being asked by some of our Divines, How he hoped to be saved, if not by Christ? answered by the Law, therefore the Jews are circumcised. See Gal. 5. 2, 4.

And Parre on the Romans seems from Zanchy and Pareus to justifie it: but it is generally disliked by the soundest Divines. Vide Voet. Select. Disp. Theol. partem tertiam, pag. 161, &c.

Goel Redemptor, Job 19. 25 Isa. 59. 20. 1 Cor 1. 30. 1. Potestate, quia est verus Deus ad redimendum genus humanum sufficientibus viribus instructus. Psal. 49. 8. Isa. 35. 5. 2. Affectu, quia est verus homo propinquitate carnis nobis conjunctus. 3. Effectu, quia interposito sanguinis sui precio nos redemit à potestate Satanæ ac mortis, à peccatis, ab ira Dei, ab æterna damnatione.

The second Title by which he is termed, is a Redeemer, by which is expressed in part the manner how he saved us, even by buying us out of the hands of our enemies, 1 Cor. 6. 20. For to save signifieth to deliver without intimating the means of delivering; but to redeem noteth also the way how the deliverance was accomplished, even by paying a price, a valuable consideration, in regard of which the party captived, and forfeited to death or bonds should be restored to his liberty and good estate again. And this kind of deliverance is the fairest deliverance, and the only way of procuring deliverance, when a person is made miserable by his own default, and fallen into the hands of Justice joyned with perfect strength, so that there is neither reason to use violence against him, nor possibility to proceed by violence. It was so with us, our misery came in regard of God from our own default, so that he was tied by the rules of his own justice to cast us off from himself, and from the enjoyment of those benefits that he had once bestowed upon us. And such is the weighty power and omnipotent arme of the most high, that it was impossible to pull us from out of the hands of his justice, whether he would or no. Wherefore then remain-

Redemption which in the Scripture is λύτρωσις sometimes, but most frequently ἀπολύτρωσις, is the delivery of any one from captivity or misery by the intervention λύτρου of a price or ransome: that this ransome or price of our deliverance was the blood of Christ, is evident: he cals it λύτρον, Matth. 20 28. and ἀντίλυτρον 1 Tim. 2. 6. Dr Owen of Redemption, l. 3. c. 5. It is taken, 1. Improperly for delivering out of danger, Gen. 48. 16. Deut. 7. 8. 2. Properly for setting free those who were slaves to others, Act. 26. 18. ed ed alone this way of buying us out of his hands, by laying down a ſufficient ranſome for us, and ſo did Jeſus, he laid down his life as a ranſome for many.

This price was of infinite value, we were redeemed by the bloud of God, by that perſon who was God.

One was made free among the Romans, Vi, precio, manumiſſione. Chriſt by force hath delivered us from ſin and Satan, Col. 2. 13, 14. paid the price to his Father, 1 Tim. 2. 6. a price every way equivalent to the debt, and hath manumitted us alſo from the juſtice of God.

The price which he paid to redeem us was no leſſe than that of his own moſt precious bloud, as Peter tels us, by which it came to paſſe that Juſtice being ſatisfied, the Lord God of Heaven willingly releaſed us from his curſe and wrath, and the puniſhment due to our ſins, Rom. 3. 25, 26. Indeed in regard of Satan and the fleſh we are to them in unjuſt captivity, as I may ſpeak, as was Iſrael in Egypt to Pharaoh. The Devil had by fraud, craft, ſubtilty, guile, made us his ſlaves, and by force kept us under his ſervitude, wherefore God dealeth not with him by way compoſition, but compulſion, drawing us out of his power in ſpight of his heart, Col. 1. 13. but with his Father he effecteth our deliverance another way, even by compounding and paying for our deliverance. You ſee why and how he is a Redeemer, and therefore this Title is often given him, The Lord thy Redeemer, and thy Redeemer the holy One of Iſrael.

Yet goodneſſe and free grace was manifeſted to us that were redeemed (though Chriſt paid a ſufficient price) becauſe God (the offended party) provided this Surety. To redeem ſignifies the fetching back of a thing by price or force. Chriſt is a Redeemer in both ſenſes. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Col. 2. 15. Redemptionis Nomen apud latinos propriè ſignificare, vel iteratam emptionem, vel ſimpliciter emptionem expoſito pretio & ſumpta emere, motius eſt quam ut probari debeat. Rivet. Diſp. 6.

One ſaith, There are four wayes of delivering a perſon out of captivity:

1. By a free diſmiſſion, 2 Chron. 28. 14, 15. 2 Chron. 36. two laſt verſes.
2. By way of flight or eſcape.
3. By commutation, Prov. 11. 8. Eſay 43. 3, 4.
4. By way of ranſom or redemption, as thoſe that are taken by the Turks and made gally-ſlaves, are redeemed by a ſumme of money, Mat. 20. 28. Acts 20. 28. 1 Cor. 6. 20. 1 Peter 1. 19.

Lawyers ſay, There are in civil Corporations three wayes of freedom, by Birth, by Service, by Redemption; by Birth, as S^t Paul was free of Rome; by Service, as Apprentices upon expiration of their years; by Redemption, as the Centurion with a great ſumme purchaſed his freedom. B. Halls Remaining works on Gal. 5. 1. See more there of the things from which Chriſt hath freed us.

Redemption implies three things:

Firſt, A captivity from whence we were redeemed; we were under ſin, John 8. 34. Titus 3. 3. Satan, Epheſ. 2. 2. 2 Tim. 2. 26.

Secondly, A price payed to ſatisfie Gods juſtice, Rom. 3. 5, 6. Heb. 2. 14.

Thirdly, The ſtate of liberty, which reſults to us from paying this price.

1. His obedience was properly his own, John 17. 19. Rom. 8. 9.
2. It was undue as to himſelf, pretium indebitum, he had not committed any ſin, Matth. 17. 26.
3. Becauſe he was a divine perſon there was an infinite value in all he did, Matth. 3. 17. & 13. 46.
4. The honour done to God by the death of Chriſt, was abundantly proportionable to the injury we had done to the juſtice of God.

All that is in God is offended by ſin, and all in ſin, yet two Attributes of his are eſpecially offended by it.

1. His Juſtice, that whereby he cannot but puniſh ſin where ever he finds it under the guilt of it.
2. His Holineſſe, whereby he cannot but hate ſin where ever he finds it in competition with him.

There are two things in ſin, the commanding and condemning power of it, Vi dominandi, & vi damnandi, Rom. 8. 2.

In

In Christs death there are two things:

1. The price or value of it.

2. The power and efficacy of it. Upon the merit is founded the efficacy of it. The price of Christs death takes away the condemning power of sin, and so Gods justice is satisfied, the power of Christs death takes away the commanding power of sin, and so his holinesse is appeased. Faith layes hold on the price of Christs death which takes away the condemning power of sin; by new obedience we partake of the virtue and efficacy of Christs death whereby the commanding power of sin is taken away.

Christ is a Saviour by his merit and power. He doth conquer for us by his merit, and in us by the efficacy of his Spirit.

Christs merit is necessary:

There is, 1. The impetration of this redemption, so we were delivered when Christ died. 2. The application of it, when we believe, Ephes. 1.17.

First, In regard of the difference of the enemies, God and the Law are our enemies by right, the Devil and the World out of malice. God could not be overcome, therefore he must be reconciled; the Law could not be disanulled, therefore it must be satisfied. In regard also of the Devil that fights against us as a tempter, so Christ was to overcome him by his power, and as an accuser, so Christ was to overcome him by his merit, *Rom.*8.34.

Secondly, Because of the different quality and respect in which Satan is an enemy.

1. He had a legal right as Gods executioner, *Ephes.*2.14.

2. He had an usurped power, John 2.32. the Lord made him an executioner, we made him a Prince; by the merit of Christ Satan is put out of office.

Secondly, Christ is a Saviour by power, and the efficacy of his Spirit, 1*Cor.*15.5.7. *Rom.*16.20. John 10.24.

1. It is bestowed upon us by vertue of Christs intercession, *Heb.*7.25. *Rom.*5.10. *Zech.*3.2.

2. It is sued out by prayer, *Rom.*1.27.

3. It is conveyed to us in the Ministry of the Word, *Psal.*8.2. *Isa.*53.1. *Rom.*1.16 2*Cor.*10.5.

4. This power is received and given by faith, 1 *Pet.*5.10.

Mediator vocatur 1 Tim.2. 5. Heb. 8.6. cap.9.15. cap. 12.24. ratione Personæ & Officij, est enim media, id est, secunda Persona inter Patrem & Spiritum sanctum. Est Mediator inter Deum & homines divinitus ab æterno constitutus. Gerhard. loc. commun. Mediator est, qui se medium interponit inter partes dissidentes, & alios aliis reconciliat. Sohnii Expos. August. confes.

But the third Title followeth, He is called a Mediator betwixt God and man, and a Mediator of the new Covenant. A Mediator is a person that laboureth to set at agreement two or more parties that be at variance, and therefore it is required that he be interessed into both parties, and have such a right in both, that in reason both should, and so farre as they are good and wise both will hearken and consent unto him. So Christ is a middle Person betwixt God and man, that he might fitly discharge the great work of making a peace betwixt God and man whom sinne had set at odds, and of reconciling the one to the other that were grown to be at enmity one with another. The first Covenant the Covenant of works was such as needed no Mediator, and therefore it was made without a Mediator by the Persons covenanting alone without any coming betwixt; for there was perfect amity betwixt them, and that Covenant gave Laws for the continuing and perfecting of that amity. For the Creator loved the creature as he needs must, because there was nothing in the creature that came not from his own work, and so must needs be pleasing to him; for it is impossible that the Creator should hate the creature so long as nothing is found in it, but that which he puts in him: and the creature also loved the Creator, perceiving in him nothing but love and favour, by which he had done much good for him already, and was willing to do more, and not willing to do him any evil except himself should pull it upon himself by sinning, which he had not yet done, and which he knew himself able to forbear doing. So this first Covenant needed no Mediator, the persons being perfectly united in good accord and love. But the second Covenant was to be made betwixt parties mortally offended, and exceedingly fallen out one with another. For God the Creator was justly become an enemy to man, that is, incensed against him, and fully resolved to punish him with great and heavy punishments, and man the creature was unjustly become an enemy to God the Judge, hating him, and muttering against him, because of the just punishment which he was to feel from him for his sins. Wherefore this Covenant must be made by a Mediator, a person that could and would as it were go between these two, offer to either reasonable conditions of agreement, and labour to win them to accept of these conditions, that so enmity might cease, and peace be setled between them. So did Christ, he came betwixt his Father and us, offered to his Father the condition of satisfying his justice, and to us the condition of being accepted into favour notwithstanding our sin, upon our conversion to him. The Lord most good is exceeding willing to imbrace the condition, yea he did offer it to Christ upon that condition, that his justice might be duly satisfied some other way without mans ruine, he would save him, only man stands off and is not willing to return to God again, and Christ hath more to do to perswade us to accept of favour on his terms, than to perswade him as it were to accept us on those terms: yet he doth perswade, win and draw all those to it to whom the benefit of this covenant redoundeth, therefore is he a Mediator of the New Covenant.

* God would have the work of our salvation effected by a Mediatour, 1. Because of the vast distance between, 1. Mans universal original pollution, and Gods infinite essential holinesse, Gen. 6. 5. Hab. 1. 13. 2. Mans universal continual guilt, Prov. 24. 16. & 15. 16. and Gods essential justice and jealousie against sin, Exod. 34. 7. Isa 33. 14. 3. Because of the Lords demand for satisfaction and mans utter inability to satisfie and obey, 2 Cor 3. 6. Iob 9. 2. 2. Because of the extraordinary suitableness and sweetness of this way, it sets forth all Gods Attributes, and satisfieth all mens scruples. Mediatorem Dei & hominum, medium inter Deum & homines non officio modo, sed etiam natura (quæ muneris & officii fundamentum est) decebat esse, & medium quidem non negatione (qui neq; Deus, neq; homo esset) à tali enim Mediatore satisfactio percipi posset, sed participatione, qui simul & Deus & homo, duas Naturas in una eademq; Persona esset. Thes. Theol. Salmur. part. 1. de Christo Mediatore. Vide Petav. Dog. Theol. Tom. 4. partem alteram de Incarnat. l. 12. c. 1, 2, 3, 4. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 8. 6. Sect. 23, 24. Christ was to be God-man, that he might lay a foundation of our union in his own Person.

Christ is the treasury of all that riches of grace which God in his eternal pleasure intended to bestow on his Elect, 1 John 5. 11. Ephes. 1. 22. Acts 3. 15. It was Gods great plot to make Christ Canalis gratiæ to all the reasonable creatures, to the creature fallen the channel of the grace of Reconciliation, to the Angels the channel of the grace of confirmation.

We should go to Christ for all grace, we should desire the Father to give grace by Christ the fountain of grace, Heb. 13. 21. and we should acknowledge him, and give him the honour of all the graces and spiritual comfort we partake of, Tit. 3. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 12.

Reasons, why God would have all deposited in the hand of a Mediator,

First, Man fallen could receive no good thing from God immediately, the change of the covenant brought in a change of the government, John 5. 22. All must come to us by vertue of a covenant; God dealt with man at first in a covenant-way, Adam and Christ were both heads of the Covenant, 1 Cor. 15. 47. God appointed them.

Secondly, Nothing can be conveyed to us without a payment in reference to the old debt, and a purchase in reference to the new benefit, only a Mediator could do this. There is more righteousnesse required to justifie man fallen than Adam had in innocency, or the Angels have in Heaven: that answered but the precept of the Law, yours must answer the curse; you are bound to the precept as a creature, to the curse as a transgressour, and there is more holinesse required to your sanctification, not only a conformity to God in his Law, but a destroying of the old Image. All the holinesse of the Angels could not mortifie one sinne.

Christ had an instrumental fitnesse for the Office of a Mediator, to answer all Gods ends, which were either,

I. Principal, which respect God,

First, The manifestation of his own excellencies to the creature,

1. His manifold Wisdom is declared in the Gospel.

2. His Love to take a humane Nature to an actual Union with the Godhead.

3. The Mercy of God was never before discovered.

4. His Iustice in bruising his own Son.

5. Sovereignty, for Christ to be his servant.

Secondly, The communication of his Goodnesse to the creature, the ground of communication is union; there is the fullest union betwixt God and Christ.

II. Lesse principal:

In reference to man, so God hath two ends, Reconciliation and Communion, Luke 2.14.

1. Reconciliation, 1 Tim. 2. 6. a price every way answerable to the wrong God hath sustained by sin.

2. Communion, Christ in his bosom the seat of love and secresie, by Christ we have a manuduction to God.

He was near to God whom he would accept, and near to us whom we may trust, he pleads with God for us, and treats with us for God, he was faithfull to him and mercifull to us, tender of his honour and our salvation.

There is a controversie between the Papists and us, An Christus sit Mediator secundum utramq; naturam? Bellarm. Tom. 1. de Christo Mediatore, c. 1, 3, 4. & 5, 6, 7, 8. Aquin. part 3. Qu. 26. Art. 2. say, Christ is Mediator only as man, not as God; they urge that Text 1 Tim. 2. 5. we say, Christ as God-man is Mediator; Christ cals himself the Son of man, is he not therefore the Son of God? In Christo solus Deus non est Mediator, nec solus homo, sed Deus homo, saith à Lapide in 1 Tim. 2. 5. The Godhead concurred with the manhood in all the acts of Mediatorship; and that place 1 Tim. 2. 9. proves, that Christ qui fuit homo, which was a man, is our Mediator; but not qua homo as a man.

Christ is sometimes called the Son of man, and sometimes the Sonne of God, because he is both in one Person.

See Master Perkins Tom. 1. Chap. 18. Of the Order of Causes of Salvation.

The Papists say that Saints are Mediators to God, see 1 Tim. 2. 5. There is one Mediator (say they) of Redemption, but of Intercession there are many. The Papists make the Saints Mediators of Satisfaction; Redemption is nothing else but the paiment of a price of Satisfaction. See John 14. 6. Ephesians 2. 18. & 3. 12. Why may not the Manichees so defend their two principles? Although it be said there is one God, they may elude it by saying, there is but one good God, and the Scriptures are to be understood of him, but there is another evil God. No man (saith Sadeel against the Papists) must expect integram salutem à Christo diviso.

Cesterus saith, Christ is Mediator excellentiori ratione, homines verò participatione. Has distinctiones Scriptura nescit, & diversos Mediatores nunquam nominat, imò contra unum esse asserit.

They say they acknowledge the Saints Mediators of Intercession onely to pray for us, but not Mediators of Redemption to pay for us. Bellarm. l. 1. de Indulg. c. 4. saith, that the Saints are in some sort our Redeemers.

At in unitate nihil distinguendum sciunt omnes. Chamier. Tom. 2. l. 8. c. 7. Omnis Mediator est medius, at nullus Angelus, nullus sanctus est medius inter Deum & homines. Qui pro omnibus interpellat, & pro quo nemo is unus utriusque Mediator. Id. ibid.

We are to understand that place 1 Tim. 2. 5. exclusively, one, and but one, as in the former part of the verse, There is but one God, one and but one. Vide Estium ad loc.

Ne dites pas, que nous y avons adiousté de mot de seul. Consultez le texte Grec, & la version Latine. Consultez les Dictionaires, Grecs, Latins, & François, & vous en apprendrez, que la mot, dont l'Apostre se sert, signifie un seul & qu'il faut tourner ces paroles & un seul Mediateur. De Croi. de verité de la Religion Reformee. Vide plura ibid. Vide Bodium in c. 6. Eph. v. 19, 20. p. 181.

You may as well say an Intercessour of mediation, as a Mediator of Intercession: for Intercessour and Mediator are both one. The Papists received this from the Gentiles, the Devils (their gods) which were reputed of the lower sort, were made as means to come unto the higher, whence they were called also Dii medioximi, that is, gods only for Interceſſion; as if Neptune would ſpeak to Jupiter, he made Mercury his means and Interceſſour. Mr Deering upon the 4th Chapter to the Hebrews, *verſ.*14,15,16.

is,

Interceſſion ſuppoſeth exaltation at the right hand of God, *Rom.*8.34. Heb. 10.11.12. This dignity is incommunicable to any creature.

Christ is alſo called a Surety of the New Covenant. Now a Surety[a] is a perſon that undertaketh ſome thing, therefore it is uſed of a perſon that undertaketh to ſee another mans debt ſatisfied, and it is applied to thoſe which preſent a child to be baptized, becauſe they undertake to do that for the child which is ſpecified in the charge, to uſe the means there mentioned of bringing them to believe and repent. I ſay a Surety undertaketh ſome things. He that is a Surety in caſe of debt[b] undertaketh the debt; he that is a Surety of any covenant undertaketh to ſee the covenant performed, and undertaketh to and for both parties; that one may not doubt of the other in regard of any inſufficiency or other hinderance. So Chriſt is a Surety in his Fathers behalf to us, that he ſhould undoubtedly pardon us if we turn, let us not be farther carefull about that, but only ſtrive to believe, and he will deſerve remiſſion of ſins, and do that for us which ſhall without fail procure his Father to accept and pardon us. Again he undertaketh for us too that we ſhall repent and turn to him, and he will cauſe us to come to him, and will make a ſufficient Atonement. He undertaketh, I ſay, that there ſhall be a ſufficient Atonement made, and that we ſhall turn to him, and for him that he ſhall accept the Atonement; ſo that all the labour and pains for the effecting of the agreement lieth upon Chriſt, and he hath done it all, God would not truſt us, for he knows that we cannot ſatisfie his juſtice, nor would ever turn to him. Chriſt ſaith well, I will cauſe them to turn. We would never truſt God through the conſcience of our ſins which knowing him to be angry doth bitterly accuſe, but Chriſt undertaketh, let us not fear he will pacifie him and free us, only let us turn. So you ſee the reaſon of this Title, a Surety of the new Covenant. For Chriſt could not be a Mediator by any other means but by being a Surety, ſeeing without him neither could God in juſtice accept us, nor would, nor could we yeeld him ſatisfaction, or turn to him.

Heb.7.22. Surety of a better Covenant, it is not ſo fitly rendred of a better Teſtament, becauſe properly a Teſtament neither uſeth to have, nor needeth to have a Surety, as a Covenant doth. The Greek word rendred Surety is very ſignificant, being derived, as ſome think from γυιον an hand, as it were ὁ γυιοις in hands, becauſe the Security, or Fledge is given in hand.

[a] A Surety is one that ſtands ingaged for another; Chriſt is therefore called our High-prieſt, who was to ſtand betwixt God and the people, and our Sacrifice; the beaſt died not for its own fault. [b] In a debt there are two things: 1. The principal, the debt of obedience; Chriſt might have paid the debt, though he had never entred into the Bond, Col. 2.15. 2. The acceſſory, the forfeiture, Nomine pœnæ, the curſe. Chriſt that he might be a Surety for us, not onely paid the debt, but entred his name into our Covenant; Chriſt himſelf was made under the Law as a Covenant of works, and by coming under it himſelf he aboliſhed it, Galat.4.4. He took away the curſe by being made a curſe for us. If we render διαθηκη a Covenant, he is a Surety; if a Teſtament, he is the Heir of it. See Biſh. Ushers Myſtery of the Incarnat. of Chriſt, pag.9,10,11. We owe perfect obedience to God by vertue of our Creation, performance of the Law is a debt, Gal.5.3. Chriſt was to perform for him and all his the duties we were bound to perform, he made paiment for our obedience by his active obedience, 2 Cor.5. and amends for our ſin by his paſſive obedience, his blood, Rom.5.9. Active obedience anſwered the precept, paſſive our tranſgreſſion of the prohibition.

It is a Queſtion between the Papiſts and us, An Chriſtus aliquid ſibi morte meruerit? Whether Chriſt merited any thing for himſelf, or for mankinde onely?

Mr Lawſon in his ſecond Book of the Body of Divinity, Chap.3. ſaith, He merited to himſelf,

1. A ſupream and univerſal power in Heaven and Earth.
2. Immortality.
3. A power to ſend down the holy Ghoſt to reveal the Goſpel. Vide Cl. Gataker *Miſcel.c.*37.

Bellarm.*de Chriſto l.*4.*c.*9. & 10. Thoſe Texts which the Papiſts alledge for proof, ſhew rather Ordinem than Meritum, Phil.2.8,9. Heb 2.9. Luke 24.46. Queries Spiritus ſanctus agit de fructibus incarnationis, eos omnes ad nos refert, Chamier.*Tom.*2.*l.*2.*c.*8. Vide Calv.*Inſtit.l.*2.*c.*17.*ſect.*6. & River.in Pſal.110.7. The Socinians from this of Chriſts meriting for himſelf, inferred, that his merit was not ſatisfactory.

The Papiſts ſay, Chriſt merited ſomething for himſelf, viz. Corporis gloriam & nominis exaltationem, the exaltation of the Name Jesus, wherein he was despised, that men should bow to it, and all the good things he was possest of after death.

The Scripture seems to oppose this, Esay 9.6. Zech. 9.9. John 17.19. 1 Cor. 1.30. He suffered for our sins, and rose again for our justification. He went to the Father to prepare a place for us, to intercede for us, and that we might sit together with him in heavenly places. The Surety quà Surety cannot do or suffer any thing for himself, but for those for whom he is a Surety. All that Christ did was for us, he was a Prophet and Priest for us. The humane nature when it is united to the Godhead is worthy of all the glory.

Bellarmine urgeth that place, Ephes. 2.8,9,10. His humiliation is not held to be the meritorious cause of his exaltation, but his exaltation is described as a following reward of his humiliation. By the name Jesus Christ is meant Jesus himself, as Estius confesseth, see Acts 3.16.

In the true meaning of the word, and not as the Papists mean merited, it is plain he did merit for himself. For properly mereri is no more than consequi, to obtain or procure, and in that sense the word is generally used in ancient Writers. Dr Heylins Summe of Christian Theol. Artic. 7. p. 268.

5. Now follows the Title Christ to be considered, the word signifies [c] Anointed, John 1.41. & 4.25. Quis nescit Christum ab unctione appellari? Aug. Anointing is pouring oyl upon a thing or person; this oyl was used to Kings, as Saul, David, Salomon, Jehu, Joash; and to Priests, as to the High-priest at the time of his admission to succeed in his Fathers room, and to all the Priests when they were first admitted unto their function for them and theirs; and it was also used to Prophets sometimes, and to holy things that were to be consecrated to God. Thus the Tabernacle and other instruments were anointed.

Aaron and his sons were anointed, and the High priests in succession ever after, but the inferiour Priests only at the first time. The High priest was anointed alwayes with sacred oyl, the confection of which the Lord himself appointed in the Law. One Prophet may seem to have been anointed, but there seems not to be any certain proof of anointing any Prophet. Whether the Kings had the holy oyl poured upon them or no, it is doubtfull, yet it seems rather it was, by 1 Kings 1.39. This outward Ceremony or Type expressed two things: 1. That God did of his good pleasure assigne and depute that person to that Office. 2. That God would certainly assist him with gifts fit for his place, if he were carefull to seek the same at Gods hands. Unctio antiquitus in V.T. oleo fiebat, quod quia secundum naturalem efficientiam tum fragrantia reddebat corpora tum agilia, accommodum erat duabus rebus naturalibus significandi, quarum una est, personæ ad munus aliquod divinum obeundum sanctificatio & consecratio, alterum adaptatio, seu donorum ad illud necessariorum collatio. Armin. Thes. Pub. decima quarta.

It served to set these things apart, to cause God to accept them for his own use, and so to design those persons to those Offices, assuring themselves and others, that God would accept and assist them in their places, that he did give them Authority, and would give them gifts fit for that place. Now therefore our Lord Jesus is called Christ, because he was anointed with the Spirit, The oyl of gladnesse above his fellows, as the Apostle speaketh, in which Title are comprehended three special offices of his, a Priest, Prophet and King.

Christ was a Prophet, Deut. 18. 18. Priest, Psalm 110.4. King, Psalm 2. 16. The Schoolmen note, that in Christ there is a three-fold grace, Gratia unionis, Gratia unctionis seu habitualis, Gratia capitis.

Christ had the wisdom of a Prophet, the holinesse of a Priest, and the power of a King. He was a King to take away our rebellion, a Prophet to take away our ignorance, a Priest to take away our guilt. Some were Priests and Prophets, so was Samuel: Some a Priest and a King, so was Melchisedech: Some a Prophet and a King, so was David: none but Christ was a Priest, a Prophet and a King, Trismegistus, a great King, a great Priest, and a great Prophet. A Priest for ever, Psalm 110.4. A Prophet for ever, Matth. 28.20. A King for ever, Daniel 2.44.

There

There is a difference between the anointing of the Kings, Priests and Prophets of the Old Testament, and the anointing of Christ:

1. In the efficient cause, they were anointed mediately by other Prophets and Priests, Christ immediately by God himself.

2. In respect of the matter, they were anointed with external oyl, he with internal, that is, invisible of the Spirit.

3. In respect of the end, they were anointed for an earthly and worldly Kingdom, he for an heavenly and eternal.

4. In respect of the effect, Christs anointing profits us, the anointing of the Spirit descends from him as the Head upon us his members, John 1. 16.

He was anointed,

1. Extensivè, so as King, Priest and Prophet.

2. Intensivè, others were but sprinkled, Psalm 133.

Now for his priestly function, it is the first in order of nature, though in time of executing it be not first. For God must be first reconciled unto the creature by the taking away of sinne, afore any good thing can be done to him, or for him.

There were some Ceremonies, which when they were over, the Priest was fully authorized to do his Office:

1. Oyl was poured on him, *Levit.*8.12. the spices which were in the oyl figured the graces of the Spirit, Psalm 133.2. 1 John 2.20. Christ was anointed with the Spirit, Acts 10.38. This related chiefly to his prophetical office.

2. Was sprinkled with bloud; Christ was not thus consecrated till his death, Luke 3.32. *Heb.*2.10.

He is called our Priest, Psalm 110.4. A great high-priest in the house of God, Heb.2. 17. & 3.1. A faithful high-priest, Heb.2.17. A high-priest of good things to come, Heb. 9.11. Our Advocate, 1 John 2.2. A Ransom, 1 Tim.2.6. The Lamb of God, John 1.29. The Lamb slain from the beginning of the World, Rev.13.8. A Propitiation, Rom.3.25. Our Peace, Eph.2.14.

The Kingly and Prophetical Office are both grounded on his Priestly Office; the end of this was to apply the fruit and benefit of all, though Christ entered upon all his three Offices at once.

This Priesthood must be considered in its properties and parts:

The properties of Christs Priesthood are these:

1. It is not a Typical but a Real Priesthood, in which not the shadows of things, which cannot take away sin are offered, but the thing which it self was the complement of all the shadows, so it differs from the Aaronical Priesthood, for it was but a type for the time being.

2. This is an eternal Priesthood not to be determined sooner than this whole world must determine: Christ is called a Priest for ever. See *Heb.*7.24. & 8.6. The vertue of his Priesthood began with the first sinner that was pardoned, and continues to the last, by him are all accepted that are accepted, and without him none were, nor can be accepted. The Fathers that lived before he was offered, enjoyed the benefit of his offering as well as we that live after, neither was the fruit any other, or lesse to them than to us, because that blood was reputed to God as shed from the beginning, and the Priesthood a Priesthood that hath no end in regard of the efficacy of the Sacrifice.

Christ as man first received Gratiam habitualem, which did perfect his humane nature in it self. These personal excellencies in Christ were Dona & virtutes, qualifying gifts for his office and sanctifying graces.

2. Gratiam capitis, as the Churches head, Iohn 1.14.

Not as if that of the Papists were true, it is therefore perpetual, because continued by the Priest still, who (they say) offers up the body of Christ in the Masse as a Sacrifice to God: but, 1. Because by his once offering he did fully accomplish that which was needfull for his Church, so that he needs not to be offered again. 2. Because the fruit is eternal, thy pardon shall be for ever, thy grace for ever: Christs priestly actions were transient, but the benefit endureth for ever. 3. He continually exerciseth his Intercession. 4. He admitteth of no successour, and this is one main reason why the Apostle maketh him a Priest for ever, because there is no Successour, as there was in Aarons Order; therefore to hold Priests, Sacrifices and Altars, is to make void the office of Christ, and to deny his Priesthood. The great relief the Jews had against sin committed was in the priestly Office. The High-priests great work was to make Atonement for the sins of the people, for reconciliation, *Lev.*16.14,21. *Heb.*2.18. when Christ died upon the crosse, he then offered up himself a Sacrifice, and made atonement to God the Father, all our sins were laid upon him. But Christ did all in a more transcendent and eminent way than any High-priest did before; the High-priest though he offered up a Sacrifice to God, yet himself was not made a Sacrifice.

3. It is a holy Prieſthood, *Heb.*7.26. & 9.14. It behoveth us to have an holy Prieſt ſeparate from ſinners; the High-prieſt offered for his own and the peoples ſins, but Chriſt was ſtricken for our iniquities. He was holy in his Nature, harmleſſe in his Life, undefiled in both. All the Sacrifices of the Law were to be without blemiſh, the Prieſts were to be without corporal blemiſhes, a type of Chriſts moral holineſſe, 2 *Cor.*5.ult.

4. It is an unchangeable Prieſthood, becauſe it was made not after the Law of a carnal Commandment, but according to the power of an indiſſoluble life. This Prieſthood receiveth not any alteration in regard of the perſon ſuſtaining it, or in regard of it ſelf, for as there is one Prieſthood ſo one Prieſt. The Levitical Prieſts died, and the Son ſucceeded the Father; ſo that though the Prieſthood continued, and was of long continuance, yet the Prieſt did not continue, but our Prieſt continues one as well as the Prieſthood, ſo it is an unchangeable Prieſthood, and therefore compared alſo to Melchiſedech, of whom we hear once for all and no more, a ſhadow of the unchangeableneſſe of the Prieſthood of Chriſt, who therefore is called of that order, for Melchiſedechs Prieſthood was never derived, but Chriſt was likened to it, and he reſembled Chriſt in it.

You have the properties of the Prieſthood, conſider its parts. The Acts to be done by the Prieſt are parts of the Prieſthood.

The parts of the Prieſthood of Chriſt are two:

The parts of Chriſts prieſtly function are two, Satisfaction and Interceſſion; the former whereof giveth contentment to Gods juſtice, the later ſoliciteth his mercy for the application of this benefit to the children of God in particular. Biſhop Uſher of Chriſts Incarnation. Some ſay, there were three things in the prieſtly Office, 1. Oſtenſio, a repreſentation of ones perſon,

1. To expiate or make propitiation for ſin, or to perform the work of our Redemption, and to apply it, for thus he doth expiate. He performeth it by two things, the offering of his own ſelf once for all to his Father, as in all the ſufferings of his life, ſo in the laſt and worſt of all in the garden, and on the tree, whereon he bare our ſins, and was made a curſe for us, according as it is written, Eſay 53.5. *Col.*1.12. His Perſon was the Prieſt God and man. The Sacrifice was the humanity, the Lamb of God that ſin-offering, treſpaſſe-offering, burnt-offering of a ſweet ſavour, acceptable unto God, and the Altar which conſecrated the Sacrifice, was the Godhead, by vertue of which merit was added to the ſufferings of the humanity, ſo he purged our ſins by himſelf, and made his ſoul, that is himſelf a Sacrifice for ſin. Not only to anſwer the Types of the Law, the Sacrifice of expiation and attonement, but ſin deſerved death, and the Law threatned it. And beſides, this offering of himſelf, he firſt took upon him the form of a ſervant, that is was made obedient to his Fathers will to keep the Law in all things as one of us ſhould have done, and that in our ſtead. He was made under the Law for us, and hath brought in eternal righteouſneſſe. For we muſt not alone ſatisfie God for our unrighteouſneſſe, but alſo perform perfect righteouſneſſe, elſe we could not be admitted into his favour; wherefore the Sacrifice of the Law, was firſt waſhed, and then the parts laid on the Altar in the burnt-offering. And though Chriſt conſidered as a creature, his humanity muſt needs be ſubject to his Father, yet in ſuch ſort and manner by being made under the Law given to Adam, as the Prince muſt be ſubject to his Father, but not in the quality of Groom or Squire, that were an abaſement to him, and more than could be required of him, but for ſome offence.

of ones perſon, *Exod.*28.12,29. The High-prieſt did bear the names of the children of Iſrael on his ſhoulders, to ſhew, that Chriſt repreſents you to his Father every day; and on his heart, to ſhew Chriſts tender affection to you, *Heb.*9.24. 1 John 2.21. 2. Oblatio, an offering of a Sacrifice; the Prieſts offered Sacrifices, Chriſt in a way of obedience voluntarily laid down his body and ſoul, which was equivalent to all the perſons in the world, Heb. 9.14. 3. Interceſſio, Heb.7.29. the Prieſts burned Incenſe. Thoſe things which God hath promiſed and Chriſt purchaſed, ſhall be beſtowed by the Interceſſion of Chriſt. When the Prieſt went into the holy place he ſprinkled it with bloud, Chriſts Interceſſion is his moſt gracious will fervently and unmovably deſiring, that all his members for the perpetual vertue of his Sacrifice may be accepted of the Father, *Rom.*8.34. Heb. 7.25. Vide Aquin. *part.*3. *Queſt.*22. *Art.*1,2,3,4,5,6. Alwayes when the Scripture ſpeaks of the redemption of Chriſt, it cals him God, Acts 20.28. becauſe therein the efficacy of his redemption lay; but when that ſpeaks of Chriſts interceſſion, it cals him Sonne, Heb,4.14. & 7.ult. becauſe Chriſts intereſt and favour with God was the great ground of his acceptance with him.

There

There is a charging of sin upon another:

1. By way of inherence, so sin could not be charged on Christ.
2. By imputation.
   1. By way of descent and traduction, so we are guilty of Adams sin, Rom. 5. 12,17,18,19. Natura transit cum onere; neither could sin be charged on Christ this way.
   2. By Covenant, by his Fathers ordination, and his voluntary susception, 1 Cor. 1.30. Phil. 2.7,8.

There are two things in sin:

1. Macula, the blot, this Christ took not on him, Heb. 9.14.
2. Reatus the guilt of sin, this may be considered two wayes:
   1. A worthinesse to be punished, this is only in the subject which hath committed sin.
   2. An actual subjection to punishment, though deserved by another, Christ did undergo punishment, but we deserved it.

Now this work of Christ whereby he offered himself to his Father,

First, Is perfect and exact obedience to the Law, as if he had been a son of Adam alone, not God and man. Gal 4.4,5. He was circumcised, to note his communion with the Church of the Jews, and his subjection to the whole Law, Galat. 5.3. Baptized, to note his communion with the Christian Church, and that he might fulfill all righteousnesse, Matth. 3.15. He was also subject to the moral Law.

A compleat Priest must have,
1. Fulnesse of righteousnesse, so had Christ habitual righteousnesse, active and passive righteousnesse. ult. therefore he was able to reconcile us unto God.
2. Fulnesse of interest in God, so had Christ, Matth. 3.
3. Fulnesse of compassion, must be a pitifull High-priest.
4. Fulnesse of merit in his Sacrifice.

1. In regard of the duties thereof, he was perfectly holy, Hebrews 7.26. & 9.14.
2. He was under the sufferings of the Law, Heb. 2.10. Though he were bound to obey for himself, yet this was part of his humiliation (because it was for our sakes) and so an ingredient to his merit and satisfaction, 2 Cor. 5.21.

His obedience was full and compleat in all things:

1. He sought the honour of God as his chief end, John 8.49,53.
2. Made the will of God his chief Rule.
3. The principle of his obedience was his love to God; John 14.31.
4. The manner of it, was
   1. Willing, John 4.24.
   2. Constant, Phil. 2.8.

Secondly, In suffering of his wrath and curse and just punishment, as if he had not fully kept, nay as if he had fully broken the Law. I say this offering did satisfie his Justice, and make as it were perfect recompence and amends for the sinnes of mankind. God was as much honoured, and his Law as much magnified in that it was so performed, and he so obeyed by this one Person so great and worthy, as if all men had perfectly obeyed that Law in their kind, and the Justice of God in hating sin, and perfection of his authority in binding to punishment those that would not obey, was as abundantly demonstrated in that so admirable a Person suffered for it, as if all mankind had suffered to all eternity.

The Law must be fulfill'd in the comminations and precepts of it. The obedience of Christ did in a far higher degree please God the Father, than the rebellion of Adam did displease him. For there the vassal rebelled, here the equal obeyed. B. Bilf. Full Redemption of mankind by the death of Christ. His death was an act of obedience, he died in obedience unto his Fathers will, or to the agreement between his Father and him, Matth. 26.54. John 10.18. & 17.4. Phil. 2.8. As there is a covenant of grace between God and us, so there was a covenant of Redemption between God and Christ. Non intercedit per humilem deprecationem, & ut vulgò loquuntur per modum suffragii; sed potius per modum jurisdictionis, atq; per efficacissimam perfectissimi sui meriti repræsentationem. Maresil Hydra Socin. expugnatâ l. 1. c. 17. Ioh. 17.24. Christ doth not in Heaven kneel upon his knees, utter words, or put up a supplication unto his Father for us, that is not agreeable to the glory to which he is exalted, but appearing in the sight of God for us, as a publick person, he willeth and desireth that the Father would accept his satisfaction in the behalf of all that are given unto him.

Socinus saith, The dgnity of the Person makes nothing to the value of the suffer-

ing. Grotius replies, Pœnam hanc inde fuisse æstimandam, quod is qui pœnam ferebat erat Deus, etsi tam non ferebat qua Deus, & citra Act.20.28. 1 Cor.2.8. The dignity of the whole Person, saith he, contributes much to this estimation, therefore it is emphatically called in Scripture, The blood of the Lord, 1 Cor.11.27. The blood of Christ, Heb.9.24. The blood of Jesus Christ the Sonne of God, 1 Joh. 1.7. Grot. de Satisf. Christ. c.8.

No meer man could make this satisfaction, because he only could do that which was due, Luke 17.10.

2. All that we can perform or suffer since the fall is but imperfect, that cannot merit grace which needs pardon, one single person of infinite dignity (who was worth all those he suffered for) otherwise his obedience had not been meritorious for the pardon of sin and procuring of eternal life.

Now after the making of this satisfaction follows the application of it. For the sin-offering was not alone killed, but also the bloud of it sprinkled upon the Offerer, and no man was esteemed purged from his sinne, till the bloud of the Sacrifice was sprinkled upon him. Therefore David saith, Wash me with hyssop, and I shall be cleaner than snow; and we are said to be chosen to life through the sprinkling of the bloud of Christ; that is to say, the giving of the vertue and merit of Christs death unto us, signified by that sprinkling. Now this application of the sufferings and obedience of our Saviour to us is done in time, and severally and particularly to and for each, when he pleaseth to bestow himself upon him, and it is inseparably and immediately joyned in time and nature with justifying faith, which at what time he worketh in us, at that time he maketh all he hath ours, and in present possession giveth us his flesh and bloud, that is to say, the merit of his Passion, and the work of our Redemption which in that flesh and bloud he accomplished.

This is the first part of his Priesthood, Redemption. The second is Intercession, whereby he pleadeth our cause in the presence of his Father; having done it already, in the day of his flesh he offered up prayers for us; and doing it also still, when sitting at Gods right hand he intercedeth for us, that is, presents himself with the merit of his life and obedience as ours, done in our behalf, and imputed unto us to take away the stain of our sins, and to cause the Lord to accept us, and our prayers and services, and passe by all our sins and offences.

Christ appeareth in Heaven for his people:

1. As an agent, a Lieger Embassadour, so Paræus interprets *Heb.*9.24. Christs agency in Heaven is a continual Intercession; which should it cease but for a moment, what should become of his people here upon Earth? Should Christ cease to appear in Heaven for us, (as he must do, if he should come and abide here upon earth a thousand years together; for he cannot in his Humane Nature appear both in Heaven and Earth at the same time) all that time Heaven must be without an Agent, an Intercessour.

2. As an Advocate, 1 John 2.1. appears for us.

3. As an Attourney, *Revel.*3.

4. As a Solicitour, M^r Brinsleys Christs Mediatorship.

There is a two-fold Intercession,

1. In us by the Spirit of grace, *Zech.*12.10. *Rom.*8.26,

2. For us,

1. Fraternal, as one Christian for another, James 5.16.

2. Ministerial, by the Officers of the Church for the people, 1 Sam. 12.23. Esay 37.4. Ioel 2.17.

3. Authoritative, when one in his own right pleads for those whom he represents, 1 *Tim.*2.5. 1 John 2.1,2.

Christs Intercession consists in these particulars:

1. Christ represents our persons to God the Father before the throne of grace, *Heb.*9.24. He appears as an Attorney for his Client, *Exod.*28.12,29. He tenders all

all his sufferings to God in our behalf. Christ prayes ex vi pretii, we ex vi promissi. He tenders to God all his promises, and the ancient Decrees and purposes, John 7.13.

2. He addes his own desires that they may be accomplished, John 17.24.

3. He makes answer to any thing which is objected against any of these: as the Devil is an accuser, so he is an Advocate, 1 John 1.2.

4. Christ doth this constantly and earnestly, Revel. 8.21.

5. He tenders also your desires, mixeth his Incense with your odours, and he tenders them as his own, as truely as he bears your sinnes he prayes your prayers.

Onely the Priest was to offer Incense. Exod. 30.7. 2 Chron. 26. 18. Luke 1.9,10.

Christs Intercession,

1. Began immediately upon the fall; he began to be Intercessour when he began to be a Priest, this was part of his Priestly Office, Revel. 13.8. Heb. 3.4. Before he came in the flesh he interceded vi pretii præstandi, since he ascended into Heaven, he intercedes vi pretii præstiti.

2. His Intercession was effectual in all ages of the world, ever since there was a golden Altar, and an Altar of Incense; one referred to Christs oblation, the other to his Intercession, Heb. 7.25. Rev. 8.2.

3. His Intercession is of as great extent as all Gods promises and Christs purchase, Lev. 16.12,13. John 16.24.

4. All the long prayers Christ hath made for the accomplishment of the promises and necessities of the Church, God hath heard, Zech. 1.12,13. & 3.23. John 1. 41. see 22.

Because, 1. Christ hath with God the Father one and the same will, John 10.30.

2. Because of the acceptation of his Person, Ephes. 1.6. Cant. 5.6.

3. They are all offered on the Altar of his Godhead; Heb. 9.14.

So Christs Priesthood hath two parts:

1. The work of our Redemption.

2. The applying of it,

By Intercession for us, and then by bestowing his bloud upon us to purge our consciences, and actually to justifie us, for these two go still together, that the whole work may be Christs.

The Effects of this Priestly Office,

1. Satisfaction, This is implied in all those places where Christ is said to lay down his life as a price for sin, and to become an Atonement for our iniquities. Justice is satisfied by declaring a due measure of hatred against sin, and a due respect of his honour who is wronged by it.

If God had pardoned sin without convenient satisfaction, it would have been,

1. A blemish to his Justice, to free a sinner from the breach of the Law, unlesse he might be satisfied for the breach of it, Rom. 3.5,6. Gen. 18.25.

2. To his Wisdom, to part with his Law lightly, 1 Cor. 1.24.

3. His Holinesse, if he had pardoned sinners meerly on their submission.

4. His Authority.

5. His Veracity, he stands so exactly on his truth, that Christ must come to suffer a shamefull death for us.

Secondly, Reconciliation with God; God is reconciled with us in Christ, 2 Cor. 5.18,19,20,21.

Reconciliation procured by Christ is Gods accepting, or owning the righteousnesse of Christ, as a Satisfaction for all the quarrel he had against man from the Law; one may be an enemy to the Lord notwithstanding this.

Reconciliation is a returning to grace and favour after some breach.

Reconciliation applied to a sinner is Gods receiving a believing sinner into favour for the righteousnesse of Christ, James 4.4. Ephes. 1.6.

Thirdly, Obtaining of Remission of sins.

Fourthly, Communication of his Spirit and Graces, By his stripes we are healed.

The Priestly Office of Jesus Christ is the greatest Magazine and Store-house of comfort and grace on this side Heaven to all Christians. Paul opens and presseth it on the Hebrews labouring with unbelief, the Priestly Office of Jesus Christ. Both the Kingly and Prophetical Offices of Jesus Christ are principiated in this, *Revel.*1. 16,18. See *vers.*13. Antichristianism is an invasion on the Priestly Office of Christ, the Masse (that sacrificium Sacrificium) is a derogation to the Sacrifice of Christ, their prayers to Saints to his Intercession, their satisfaction to his satisfaction. The Pope is styled Pontifex maximus, Christ did by one Sacrifice perfect for ever those that are sanctified.

This Office of Christ is set up out of meer love and compassion for the relief of distressed souls. Christs princely Office is for terrour, Psalm 2. there is a mixture of terrour in his prophetical Office, The light shined in darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

The Covenant of Grace is laid upon the satisfaction of Christ, *Heb.*9.14,15. He made full satisfaction to Divine Justice for all our sins, else the Lord might come on the Debtor if the Surety had not made full satisfaction to the Creditor, Ephes. 5.2. Christ did more fully satisfie God and Divine Justice than if all we had gone to hell, and been damned to all eternity; the debt was now paid all at once, not by a little weekly, the Divine Justice would have been satisfying, not satisfied by us.

We are not able to make any Atonement for sin, *Mic.*6.6,7. *Ps.*49.7,8. The Jews to this day believe, that God is atoned by Sacrifices; the Papists, that he is pacified by penance, and works of supererogation. But God now rejects all those things of his own appointment, *Heb.*10.3,4,5,6,7,8. and Christ is set forth as a propitiation for sin through faith in his blood.

The Arminians although in words for shew they professe the satisfaction of Christ, yet indeed they (no lesse than the Socinians) deny and overthrow the satisfaction of Christ, and the efficacy of his merit. They place not the nature of Christs satisfaction in that he on the Crosse sustained the person of the Elect (for this they deny) and so satisfied God the Father for them, as if they had satisfied him in their own person: But in that, that he got the Father a right and will of erecting into a new Covenant with men, which he might make with them upon any condition as well of works as faith. Also they deny that the end of the satisfaction or merit and death of Christ is the application of the reconciliation and remission of sins.

*Vedel.*de Deo Synagogæ l.2. cap.11. Vide plura ibid.

The word Sacrifice is taken,

1. Improperly, for any religious service offered to God, Psalm 110.17. & 51. 17. Hosea 14.2. 1 *Pet.*2.5. *Rom.*12.1. & 15.16. *Heb.*13.16. *Phil.*4.18.

2. Properly, for an oblation of a living creature to God in such a manner as he required. See several Chapters at beginning of Leviticus, *Exod.*29.38,39.

They were either,

1. Eucharistical, of thanksgiving for mercy.
2. Expiatory of sin, and to make atonement.

Sacrifices of the Old Testament were,

1. Living things.
2. Not living, but solid, as bread.
3. Not living, and liquid, as wine and oyl.

There was always Destructio rei oblatæ, if it was a living thing it was slain, answerable to which Christ is said to be a Lamb slain, Heb.9.22. if it were not living and solid it was bruised, so Christ was bruised for our iniquities; if it was not living, and liquid it was poured out, so Christ.

Some object against the equity of this, How could God punish an innocent person for the nocent?

Quid potuit cogitari convenientius, quam ut imago Patris increata, creatam repararet imaginem; & Filius naturalis Patri accerseret Filios adoptivos? Rivet. Disp.13 de Satisf. Christi. Vide Grot. de satisfactione Christi, cap.1

This was equal since all parties were agreed;

1. God the Father, *Matth.*3.17.

2. Christ

2. Christ, Heb. 10.7. There was the ordination of the Father, and free submission in Christ. It is no injury to require the debt of the Surety.

Again, Some object this, How could Christ being one Person expiate the offences of so many thousands?

Adam by vertue of his publick capacity could ruine all, Rom. 5. 15. to the end, therefore Christ might much more expiate the offences of many, because of the dignity of his person. And for this reason his sufferings, though but temporary, might compensate Justice for the eternal torments of sinners; sith his sufferings are not finite in their merit and efficacy, though discharged in a short time, Acts 20.28. God was more pleased with his sufferings than displeased with Adams sinne.

The Socinians make this the onely cause of Christs suffering to be an example to us, this is the lesse principal. They say, God may have that liberty which man hath, a man may forgive his neighbour offending without satisfaction, and so may God.

Mors peccati poena est, Rom. 5.12. & 6. 2. quam neminî infligit Deus, nisi aut peccatori, aut peccatoris Personam referenti. Rivet. Disput. 13. de satisfactione Christi. Ezr Pet. 2. 21. Inepte Sociniani colligunt Christum exemplarem fuisse servatorem esse, qui doctrinam annunciatam mortalibus non actionibus solum, sed & passionibus, & sanguinis sui effusione obsignaverit, adeóq; in utroq; genere exemplo præiverit. Quasi verò alii fines passionis, & pœnores quidem non inculcentur alibi, ob quos passus legitur, Rom. 3.25. Eph. 1.16. Col. 1.20. 1 Tim. 2.6. 1 Joh. 2. 2. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. part. 2. Dub. 33.

There was an hypothetical necessity of Christs satisfaction upon supposition of Gods Decree and revelation of it in the promise, Luke 24.25,26,46.

God could have pardoned sin without satisfaction, Quid omnipotente potentius? saith Austin. But this way of Christs suffering was expedient,

First, In reference to God:

1. That God might manifest,

1. His hatred of the corruptions of his Elect.

2. The truth of his threatnings, In the day that thou eatest thou shalt die the death.

3. The exactnesse of his Justice, both in punishing those that are out of Christ (when Christ himself suffered so much from his Father) and in pardoning his people, Rom. 3.25,26. give Christ unto us, but of Justice to pardon those that were in Christ.

4. His Mercy mixt with Justice to all men that are saved; now Justice is satisfied, and mercy magnified, that which is done by our Surety is counted as done by our own persons.

See Mr Burgesses 2d part of Justificat. Sect. 2. Serm. 11. whether God could have remitted sinne without satisfaction.

Secondly, In reference to Christ:

1. To declare the transcendency of his love, rather than we should be forsaken for ever, he would undergo for a while the losse of his Fathers love, Matth. 27.46. in his apprehension.

2. To shew the reality of his Incarnation, he had not only the excellency of our Nature, but all the common infirmities.

3. To shew his great condescention, he denied himself in all his glory for a time.

4. To declare the compleatnesse of his satisfaction, he had all manner of calamities in sense, and the losse of his Fathers love, the Divine Vision was suspended.

5. That he might by all this declare himself to be a perfect Mediator.

Thirdly, In reference to Satan:

That he might answer all his objections, he desired nothing more than the death of Christ, he had his desire, and his Kingdom was overthrown by it.

Fourthly, In reference to his Children;

That they might have encouragement to come to God by him, that they might have strong consolation; our remission is more honourable, to be forgiven on satisfaction, sets the person offended in the same state of Innocency that before: our happinesse is more sure, being by the bloud of the Son of God.

One saith, It is the nature of God to hate sin, but to punish it is from his will. God had been merciful if he had sav'd none, and just if he had punisht none. Object. Doctrina de satisfactione spoliat Deum omnipotentia, quia non potest liberè condonare peccatum, quod vilissimo cuique hominicidio conceditur. Resp. Nec homo potest liberè condonare ut judex, tametsi potest & debet ut conservus: Deus autem hic consideratur ut Judex & Dominus qui legem tulit à servis suis immutabiliter exequendam. Dr. Prid. Lect. 10. de Christi satisfactione. Ego unus sum inter alios qui Piscatoris tractatum & tanquam Theologum non modò in plurimis orthodoxum, & singulari eruditione textuali ferè omnia confirmantem suspicio: Cujus tamen illam de absoluta satisfactionis Christi necessitate sententiam comprobare nunquam potui. Twiss. contra Corvinum, cap. 1. sect. 7. See Dr Owen of Redemption, l. 2. c. 2. And Mr Gatak. Def. of Mr Wotton against Mr Walker, charge, p. 59, 60.

Christs death is not only to merit, but also to satisfie; for there is a difference between merit and satisfaction, merit properly respects the good to be obtained, satisfaction the evil that is to be removed. As a man merits a reward which is good, but satisfieth for that fault which is committed.

2. Merit properly respects the good of him that merited, or him for whom he merited; satisfaction respects the good of him for whom the satisfaction is made.

3. Three things make up satisfaction:

1. Ordination of the Judge,

2. Submission of the Surety.

3. Acceptation of the sinner.

Satisfaction is nothing but that quo alicui plenè satisfit. This the Scripture expresseth by Redemption, Expiation, Reconciliation.

Satisfactio nobis sit malum repellendum, meritum bonum acquirendum. Vide Petav. de Incarnat. l. 12. c. 9.

That is a poor shift of the Socinians, when we urge, That Christ died for us out of 1 Pet. 2. 21. & 3. 18 Rom. 5. 8. that is (say they) propter nos, or nostro bono for our benefit, not loco vel vice nostri in our room or stead. See Job. 11. 50.

Satisfactionis vocabulum in hoc negotio Scriptura non usurpavit, rem tamen ipsam docuit manifestissimè. Rivet. Disp. 13. de Satisf. Christi. The word satisfaction is not found in the Latine or English Bibles applied to the death of Christ: In the New Testament it is not at all, in the Old but twice, Numb. 35. 31, 32. But the thing it self intended by that word, is every where ascribed to the death of our Saviour, there being also other words in the original Languages, equivalent to that, whereby we expresse the thing in hand. It is a term borrowed from the Law, applied properly to things, thence translated unto persons, and it is a full compensation of the Creditor from the Debtor. Hence from things real it was, and is translated to things personal, Isa. 53. 12. The word Nasa argueth a taking of the punishment of sin from us, and translating it to himself, and so signifieth satisfaction, so doth ἀνταγειν used by Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 24. in the room thereof. Dr Owen of Redemption, lib. 3. cap. 7.

For a man to do or suffer ought for another, is as much as to do it in his stead. Christ died not only for our benefit, but in our stead as our Surety, Heb. 7. 22. Christ gave his life a ransom for many, Mat. 20. 28. 2. He died as a Sacrifice, Ephes. 5. 2. that died in stead of the worshipper, Job 33. 24. 3. He took our person, therefore was called the second Adam, Rom. 5. and burden, 1. Our guilt, 2 Cor. 5. 21. Our curse upon him, Gal. 5. 13. Vide Grot. de satisf. Christi, c. 9. Vide Camer. myroth. Evang. ad Heb 8. 4. Ex Utpiano constat apochas *appellari, quando eo cessat obligatio, quia pecunia vera ei soluta, acceptilatio si non soluta sit, sed perinde habeatur ac soluta. Of Christs Priesthood you have heard, now you shall hear of his Prophecy, a work common to Priesthood, for the same persons were to teach the people that were to offer up Sacrifice for them, although some did teach that might not offer up Sacrifices.

Heb. 3.3,4,5,6. The Prophets Office was to teach the people the things which pertained to their duty, that they might please God and attain his promises.

Now Christ is also the teacher of the Church which taught the will and whole counsel of God concerning our salvation, that Prophet whom Moses did foretell, and whom the people expected for this end in that time that he lived, as the words of the Samaritan woman shew. See Deut. 18.15. to 19. John 15.15. and 17.8.

Two things make a compleat Prophet, 1. A fulnesse of knowledg of all the secret counsel of God Prov. 8.23,30. Col. 2.3. 2. An ability to communicate this knowledg unto men, Isa. 30.4. He revealed those counsels himself when he was on earth, and reveals them by his Spirit now in heaven.

He received not his message from the mouth, but bosome of God. John 1.18. & 3.31, 35. John 6.46. & 8.38.

He was the principal author of prophesie, Angels and men are but instruments and servants to him, Gal. 4.6. 1 Pet. 1.11.

The Prophets had their power from his Spirit, Micah 3.8. 1 Peter 3.19.

2. He had a permanent and habitual gift of prophesie abiding in him, the Prophets had the Spirit come upon them by way of transient impression, and by intervals, 2 Kings 4.27.

3. He had it by immediate patefaction, 1 John 3.2. they had all from him, Eph. 3.10.

4. Other Prophets could speak only to the ear and outward man, not open the heart nor give an understanding, Luke 24.45. 1 John 5.20. 2 Cor. 4.7.

5. He spake in his name, and wrought miracles by his own authority, other Prophets taught by his name, and by his authority, 1 Cor. 5.4,5.

The testimonies given to Christ shew that he was a Prophet.

1. By God, Mat 3. ult. & 17.5.

2. By Friends, John 5.46. the multitude, Mat. 21.11.

3. His Enemies, Mat. 22.46. Devils, Luke 8.28,29.

4. The inanimate Creatures, the Sea and Winds calmed, the bread multiplyed.

The nature of his Doctrine was properly Prophetical.

1. In foretelling things to come, he foretold the treason of Judas, the deniall of Peter, his own Death, Luke 19.43,44.

2. In searching and discovering of mens hearts, Mat. 22.18. John 1.48. that else could never have been known.

3. In revealing new and supernaturall Doctrine, Gal. 1.3. 1 Corinth. 2.9,10.

His Doctrine was confirmed.

1. By his own internal sanctity, John 1.17.

2. By the sanctity of his life, John 7.16,17.

3. By his mighty Miracles, John 6.14. Luke 7.19. & 24.19.

The matter or parts of this prophetical Office was teaching or revealing the will of God: This teaching of Christ is double, Eternal and Internal, externally he taught,

1. By the Ministry of his Prophets in the times that went before his coming into the world, whom he raised up for that end, that they might reveal so much of his will as was necessary for them to know. Peter telleth us that he spake to the Spirits that were then in prison, and that the Gospel was preached to them that were dead, meaning his Prophets in former time, whom Christ by his Spirit stirred up for that end.

2. He taught himself in person when he had taken our flesh upon him for the space of three years and a half, or as some think of four years, going up and down and teaching the Doctrine of the Kingdom, saying, Repent and believe the Gospel, and confirming his Doctrine with miracles and signs of all sorts to the astonishment of all that heard the report of them, as the Story of the Gospel written by the four Evangelists doth plainly shew.

and

3. He taught by his Apostles, Evangelists and Prophets, men which he stirred up with extraordinary gifts and power to preach every where, sending them out first whilst himself lived, into all the Countrey of Judea, and then after into the whole world, and not only so, but moving some of them to write in Books, and leave to the Churches use those holy Scriptures which are the perfect rule of our Faith and Obedience, and do sufficiently, plainly and perfectly instruct the whole Church and each member of it to the saving knowledg of God and Christ, so that if there were never another Book extant in the world, yet if a man had their writings for all substantial points truely translated into a tongue understood by him, and had no other helps to make him understand the same, but his own reason and understanding, according to the true principles of it, by reading only and barely those writings, he should come, and that certainly and infallibly to the knowledg of all things necessary for his salvation. Neither is any thing requisite to the right understanding of the Scriptures in points of necessity to life and salvation, but alone the diligent perusing and meek receiving of the same.

Christ was a Prophet from the beginning.

First, By his Spirit, before the Incarnation, Isa. 55. 4. Mal. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. & 3. 19, 20. All the Prophets spoke and wrote by the Spirit of God, Heb. 1. 1, 2.

Secondly, After his Incarnation, he revealed the Counsels of God to his Apostles.

1. When he preacht to them, Matth. 5, 6, 7, Chapters.
2. When he sent them to the Jews, Matth. 10. 7.
3. When he forewarned of his sufferings, Matth. 16. 21. John 13. 14, 15, 16. resurrection, Acts 1. 3. ascension, John 6. 13.
4. In the Revelation, chap. 1, vers. 1. which is a prediction of the state of the Church to the end of the world.

And yet Christ performeth this outward teaching in a fourth degree by the Ministry of his servants from time to time, the Pastors and Teachers of all ages, whom he raiseth up and instructeth in the knowledg of his truth that they may instruct the people. And this is the outward teaching, the inward is noted where he saith, You shall be all taught of God, it is the work of his Spirit putting into the mind a light to conceive the things taught, and inclining it to hearken and consent to them, of which there are two degrees, the first fainter and lesser, breeding a kind of belief or opinion; the second is more deep and stable by which men are rooted and grounded in faith, and do firmly believe the known truth, and are guided and ruled by it.

The teaching of the Spirit, is First, Unerring.
Secondly, Authoritative.

Those shall be taught by his Spirit
1. Who are his Children.
2. Who beg the Spirit, Luke 11. 13.
3. Who follow the motions and impulses of the Spirit.
4. Who study the Word and practise it.
5. Who follow the directions of the Spirit concerning themselves.
6. Who vex not the Spirit by inattention, or other wayes.
7. Who are humble.

The properties of Christs Prophetical Office are two:

John 1. 18. 1. He is a great Prophet, as the people say, Luk. 7. 16. indeed the greatest of all the Prophets, that reveals all things, as the woman of Samaria could say, He shall shew us all things.

Heb. 3. 2. 2. He is a faithfull Prophet in all his house, as Moses also was faithfull, and his faithfullfaithfulneſſe ſtands in this, that he did acquaint his Church with the whole will of God without adding and diminiſhing, as Moſes did, and that he did as fully accompliſh all the things typified, as Moſes did declare and ſet them down; but it ſtands not in this, that he gave a particular direction for all external things about his worſhip and government, as Moſes did, for that we are ſure he hath not done in his Goſpel, neither indeed was to do.

The Pope oppoſeth Chriſt in his Prophetical Office, in making himſelf infallible, he brings in new Sacraments unknown to Chriſt and his Apoſtles, Chriſt is the onely abſolute Doctor of his Church, Matth. 23. 8. See Matth. 17. 5. Rev. 5. 7, 8. The Church of Rome hath added Traditions, Will-worſhip, humane Inventions to the Scripture.

Mahomet is extolled by many as the great Prophet of the world.

So you have the Prophetical Office of Chriſt, now follows the third, viz. He is a King, to which we may adde that of Lord, becauſe his Kingdom and Lordſhip ſignifie in a manner the ſame thing, both ſerving to expreſs the power and authority which he hath, and exerciſeth in and over his Church, Pſal. 72. per tot. Iſa. 9. 6. Micah. 5. 2. 1 Tim. 6. 14.

There is, ſay ſome, a two-fold Kingdom of God.
1. Regnum eſſentiale, which belongs to all the Perſons in the Trinity, and was before the fall.
2. Regnum vicarium, an œconomical Mediatory Kingdome committed to Chriſt.

Kingdom of God is taken,

1. For the ſtate of the Church ſince John the Baptiſt, Matth. 3. 2.

2. The Church of God, Col. 1. 13.

3. The inſtrumentall meanes by which Chriſt rules, the preaching of the Goſpel.

4. For the eternall glory which Chriſt will beſtow on his heereafter, 2 Tim. 4. 18.

5. For that principall and judiciall power which Chriſt exerciſeth toward his Church, Zach. 9. 9.

to Chriſt as Mediator, Joh. 5. 22. & 18. 36. Phil. 2. 6, 7. The Covenant was changed and made with Chriſt, therefore the Government is put into his hand. This Kingdom (ſay ſome) is threefold. 1. Regnum univerſale, a providential Kingdom, or Kingdom of power, ſo Chriſt is King over all creatures, Pſal. 8. 4. compared with Heb. 2. Chriſt is made Caput rerum omnium ad finem ſupernaturalem, Ephel. 4, 22. 2. Spiritual, Luke 17. 21. whereby God rules over men and Angels. 3. Regnum Dividicum, whereby God ſhall in a peculiar manner rule over the Jews, Dan. 7. 24. Hoſ. 3. latter end.

There is a three-fold Kingdom of Chriſt mentioned in the holy Scripture:

The firſt is his Kingdom of power or excellency, whereby he being God is the ſupream Lord of all things, Pſal. 24. 1.

2. The Kingdom of his grace, whereby he rules in the hearts of all his elect, ever ſince the world began, Pſalm 2. 6. Zech. 9. 9. Jer. 23. 5. Ezek. 37. 22. Luk. 11. 20. and 17. 21. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 1. 8. p. 76. 77.

3. Of glory, whereby he himſelf is now in endleſſe and perfect felicity, and of which happineſſe his Saints ſhall one day partake, Luk. 23. 42. & 12. 32. Luk. 13. 29. 1 Cor. 6. 9. 2 Pet. 2. 11. Crakanth. of the Popes Tempor. Monarc. cap. 2. See more there.

This Government is a right of immediate executing the ſoveraign authority of God over all creatures, in ordine ad ſalutem, in order to the ſalvation of his elect, Joh. 3. 34, 35. Chriſt was born a King, but he entred not into his Kingly Office till after his reſurrection, Pſal. 2. 6, 7. He was a Prieſt and Prophet on earth. Yet this is that which brings in the benefit of all the other Offices, and makes us partakers of all the good in Chriſt.

Of which the means are outwardly his Word and the Miniſtery thereof, and inwardly his holy Spirit worketh in and by the Word.

The parts of it are,

Firſt, Governing and guiding his Subjects in the wayes which he hath appointed them to walk in, and ſubduing the temptations of Satan, and the world, and luſts of the fleſh to them, and rewarding them at the laſt with eternal glory.

Secondly,

Secondly, Confounding and deſtroying all his enemies, and treading them under his feet.

The King, the Subjects, the duty, the reward are all Spiritual, 2 Cor. 10. 5, 6. It is a holy undefiled Kingdom, a peaceable Kingdom, Iſaiah 32. 18. Ezra 9. 6. John 16. 33. James 3. 18. a plentifull Kingdome, wherein all are Kings, 1 Peter 2. 9.

The properties of it are,

1. It is not a civil or earthly, but a ſpiritual Kingdom, John 18. 36. 1. Cor. 15. 47. Rom. 14. 1. which doth look to the Spirit, reacheth to the conſcience and ſpirituall things, it is not carnal nor of this world, nor looketh to the outward man aone. The King is ſpiritual, viz. the Lord from Heaven, the Subjects are ſpirituall, viz. the Church regenerate, the Law whereby the Church is governed is ſpiritual, viz. the Goſpel, the goods beſtowed upon the Church are ſpiritual, as remiſſion of ſinnes, the Spirit of grace, and the manner of government is ſpiritual.

2. Univerſal, Pſal. 103. 19. and that in four reſpects,

1. In reſpect of all ages and times, other Kings have the time of their riſe and fall, this dominion is eternal, it ſhall have no end.

2. In reſpect of all places, Rev. 5. 9. to the end. He rules in Heaven by his power, in the Church by his grace, in Hell by his juſtice.

3. In reſpect of all creatures, Rev. 5.

an immutable Kingdome, Heb. 12. 28. Dan. 2. 44. and 7. 14. Luke 1. 33. The Apoſtle uſeth the moſt extenſive expreſſions when he ſpeaks of the Dominion of Chriſt, Epheſ. 1. 21, 22. Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11. Rev. 5. 13.

That place 1 Cor. 15. 24. is underſtood by ſome of Chriſts outward viſible government in his Church, then ſhall all preaching and Church-adminiſtrations ceaſe.

4. In reſpect of all things and actions. For him hath God the Father made Lord and King, and he doth powerfully adminiſter his Church to the ſanctification, preſervation and ſalvation of thoſe which refuſe not to ſubmit. Chriſt doth one thing more than all Kings for their Subjects, for he maketh his Subjects, ſeeing all by nature are his enemies, but by his Word and Spirit he ſubdueth them to the obedience of his will, 1 Cor. 14. 25. that he may glorifie himſelf and his Father in their ſalvation.

3. Abſolute, Rev. 19. Chriſt is Lord Paramount, 1 Tim. 6. 14.

He is a King by a threefold right:

1. Of birth, Gal 4. 1.
2. Of donation, Pſal. 2. 8. Joh. 17. 2.
3. Conqueſt, Rev. 1. 18.

Chriſt as Mediator is the Churchs [a] head, 1 Cor. 11. 32. Epheſ. 4. 15. & 5. 28. Col. 1. 1. & 2. 18, 19. He is the head of all things, Epheſ. 1. 22. they are all ſubject to him, of Angels, Col. 2. 10. as they are members of the Church Triumphant, and are confirmed by him, of all men, 1 Cor. 11. 3. he hath ſuperiority over them, but in a ſpecial manner over his Church.

[b] The head is the higheſt part in a man, ſo he the higheſt in his Church, the head giveth ſenſe and moving unto all the body, ſo he quickneth the Church. As in a natural body all the members how remote ſoever from the head, have a real union and conjunction with it, which is the foundation of the influences from the head unto them, ſo every Chriſtian hath a union with Chriſt, and thereby communion and influence from him. 2. All the members are ſo joyned one with another by certain wayes of communication, that they all ſerve for the uſe of the whole; ſo in the Church of Chriſt, all his people have not only an union with Chriſt the head, but a conjunction one with another, and are uſefull to the good of the whole body, Rom. 12. 5. 1 Cor. 12. from verſ. 8 to the end, Eph. 4. from verſ. 12. to 17. They are all poſſeſſed with the ſame ſpirit, Iſa. 11. 11. that is the principal bond, the ſecondary bond is Chriſtian love, 1 Cor. 13. Eph. 4. 16. Col. 3. 14.

Hee is their head [b], Ratione Unionis, Ratione Regiminis, Ratione Influentiæ, 1. In reſpect of Union. 2. In reſpect of Guidance. 3. In reſpect of influence. The Government of the Church is upon his ſhoulders, Iſa. 9. 6. & 22. 21, 22. Matth. 28. 19, 20. Epheſ. 1. 20, 21. Pſal. 68. 18. He is the only head and King of his Church, the Government of the Church is part of his Kingly Office. He as Mediator hath the Government of the Church committed to him.

1. The Church Mystical, the number of all the Saints of God whether Militant or Triumphant. Psalm 2. 6. Luke 1. 33. The Spirit is the bond of a higher union to the Saints then Angels, Christ is to the Angels Caput dignitatis, to the Saints Caput unionis, He communicates to the Angels as servants, to the Saints as members.

2. The Church Political, particular Churches gathered with their Officers, as the seven Churches in Asia. Christ is the head of both.

The original and fountain of all Government is God the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost, he hath a primitive and absolute Soveraignty over all men.

1. As he gives them what being he will.
2. As he appoints them what end he will.
3. As he gives them what Law he will, this is Regnum essentiale, Thine is the Kingdome. Isaiah 33. 22. John 5.20,21, 22,23.

Secondly, All the Persons of the Trinity have committed or delegated this power into the hands of Christ as he is Mediator, both God and Man, Mat. 12. 18, 19. *Dan.*7.13,14.

Four things qualified Christ for this: He hath

1. A Spirit of wisedom and counsel, *Isa.*11.2,3,4.
2. Of courage also there, and *Isa.*31.4.
3. Of meekness and moderation.
4. Is faithful, Isa. 9.6.

Keys are Authoritatis symbolum, a token of power, authority and government, Rev. 1.18. and 3. 7. A metaphor taken from Stewards in houses who have the Keys given them. Christ performs all promises, executes all threatnings, and exerciseth all the Attributes, Col. 1. 15. Joh. 5. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 15.

Thirdly, Christ delegates this power (as he hath the government of the Church) three wayes:

1. To the Angels, they are principalities and powers.
2. To the Magistrates, By him Kings reign.
3. To Church-officers, *Eph.*4.11,12. These are to continue so long as his Mediatory Kingdom shall last.

It is fit that Christ and he alone should govern the Church.

First, Because the Church is his own, his own body and house, *Rom.*12.5. 1 Cor. 12.12. *Eph.*4.16. *Heb.*3.6.

It is his,

1. By purchase, He hath purchased to himself a peculiar people.
2. By Covenant, I entred into Covenant with thee, and thou becamest mine.
3. By Regeneration, They are one Spirit.

Secondly, The Church is his great Depositum, and Præmium.

1. The great pledg God hath committed to his trust, John 17. 2.
2. The great reward of all his services, *Eph.*1 21,22.
3. There is none qualified for the Churches government but he.

This Soveraignty of Christ as Mediator is two-fold:

First, In the spiritual Kingdom, by which he rules in the hearts of all, especially his Saints, *Luk.*17.21. *Rom.*14.17.

This consists in six things:

1. He sets up a throne in the souls of his people, that they look on him as a King, *Rev.*4.3.
2. As a spiritual King he gives Laws to the soul, Rom. 13.5.
3. He will punish their enemies, 1 John 3. 18.
4. He bestows both gifts and graces, Rev 4.5.
5. He rules in their hearts and wayes, Joh. 16. 14.
6. He hath the key of heaven and hell, *Rev.*11.17.

Secondly, He hath a Soveraignty committed to him as Mediator God-man, in the providential Kingdom, *Psal.*8.4,5. compared with Heb. 2.5. *Ephes.*1.21. Prov. 8.15,21,22.

2. All the great things in providence are ascribed to Christ Mediator; he brought the floud, *Gen.*6.3. compared with 1 *Pet.*3. 18,19. he destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, he gave the Law, *Heb.*16.26,27.

3. He shall accomplish all the prophecies, Rev. 19. 13. He shall judg the world,

Acts 17.30,31. therefore he rules it, else he could not proportion to men rewards and punishments, if he did not imploy them.

4. He shall give up his Kingdom to his Father, 1 Cor. 15.34. the Lord Jesus hath all this Soveraignty for the Saints sake, that they might have interest in it, Joh. 17.2. & 3.35.

We should take heed of doating on an earthly Christ, Kingdom, Inheritance, or Preferment by Christ; the Apostles expected earthly preferment; the Millenaries say, Christ shall destroy all Monarchies, and be Monarch alone, and his Saints shall be great Persons here.

Sane nihil in Veteris Testamenti scriptis usquam exstat, ex quo accuratius ac firmius demonstrari possit, Messiam iis temporibus Judæis datum fuisse, quo noster servator dulcissimus Jesus Christus, verus ille Messias ac Dei & hominum Mediator in Judæa visibiliter conversabatur, quam ex Prophetia Danielis c. 9. Cætera quidem omnia variis modis eludere, & ad suum Messiam, quem adhuc exspectant, applicare possunt: hoc vero unicum testimonium os ipsis obturat, ut planè conticescant & obmutescant. Wilhelmi Langi de annis Christi, l. 2. c. 1. Judæi summi hostes Dei sunt, quia Jesum Christum pro Messiâ & Deo non habent, sed eum rejiciunt cum totâ sacra-sanctâ Trinitate; & quia Christum acerbè oderunt, etiam infensissimi hostes sunt Christiani nominis, præ omnibus aliis Gentibus & sectis, quæ Religionem Christianam aversantur. Vedel. de Deo Syntag. l. 1. c. 2.

The Jews deny Christs Kingly Office, they say, he shall be an earthly King, and shall conquer all Nations, and bring them into the Land of Canaan, and there shall bless them with abundance of all things. The Papists speak of a carnal presence of Christ in the Sacrament.

James 4.12. Joh. 5.22,27. This Title was given to Christ, Ephes. 1.21. Col. 1.18. to list him above all powers, Rules and Dominions, ὁ κεφαλὴ with a demonstrative Article, he, and no other is the head.

The Pope hath invaded Christs Kingly Office by making laws which shall immediately bind the consciences of men. He saith he is Christs Vicar, and the Head of the Church. They say, there is a two-fold head of the Church, 1. Imperial, Principal, Invisible: so Christ. 2. Ministerial, Second, Visible: so the Pope: This is a meer contradiction. To be head argueth preheminence, to be ministerial argueth subjection and inferiority.

Most in the world oppose the Kingly Office of Christ, his Laws, Psal. 2.4. See Phil. 2.10. There are three Kingdoms contrary to the Kingdom of Christ, that of sin, Satan, and Antichrist.

It is impossible to do too much for Heaven, for this Kingdom, what a disproportion is there between all that we can do or suffer, and the glory of Heaven, Rom. 8.18. See Luke 10.42. & 13.24. 2 Pet. 3.11.

Directions to get a right to this Kingdom.

1. It must have your highest estimation, not only speculatively and notionally, but by a practicall judgment.

2. Your strongest resolution to do or suffer any thing rather than undergo the hazard of the loss of this Kingdom.

3. Your heartiest affections, the rational not passionate part.

4. Your faithfullest indeavours, Mat. 6.33.

See Dr Jackson on the Creed, l. 11. c. 6,7,8. Lord is taken three wayes: 1. Essentially, so God the Father. 2. Civilly, so men, Act 16.30. 3. Possessively, so a Master over his servant, the husband over his wife.

Christ is our Lord: This name is often given to Christ, Psal. 110.1. Mat. 22.44. John 13.13. Acts 2.36. 1 Cor. 2.8. & 8.5,6. The Apostle takes delight still to mention this Title The Lord, Col. 1.19. 1 Cor. 10.21. & 11.20. Jude v. 3. It is called The Table of the Lord, and the body and bread of the Lord, because we are so ready to forget Christs authourity, therefore he is very often called Lord in the New Testament Rev. 1.5. Phil. 2.10.

Christ is Lord:

1. As God, John 20.28.

2. As man, both in respect of the hypostaticall Union, and by the merit of his passion, by which he hath gained a dominion to himself over men redeemed by him, Luke 2.18.

3. From Gods Ordination, Acts 2.36. Phil. 2.9,10,11.

He

He is Lord by right,
1. Of Creation, John 1. 3.
2. Of Redemption, 1 Cor. 6. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 18.
3. Preservation and Government, Eph. 5. 23.

He is Lord two wayes:
1. In general, as over all Creatures, King of Nations, Jer. 10. 7.
2. In special, as head of his Church, King of Saints, Rev. 15. 3.

The King is Lord over all the Subjects, but in special manner over the Queen, by a double right, as King and Husband, Eph. 1. penult.

There are three priviledges of his Lordship.
1. He is Lord alone, he hath no co-partner, Eph. 4. 5.
2. Is Lord over all creatures inwardly and outwardly, the good to defend them, the wicked to offend them.
3. Is Lord for ever.

This Attribute when given to God the Father or Christ, usually signifieth his Soveraignty and Dominion, Thus saith the Lord God, that is, he that hath Soveraign power over you. When this Title is given to Christ in the New Testament as a distinction between God and the Lord, 1 Cor. 8. 6. Ephes. 4. 5. 6. Phil. 2. 11. it signifieth that Christ is he through whom all good from God is derived to us, and through whom all our services are offered to God, that he is our Mediator.

Christ exerciseth his Lordship in three relations.
1. Of a husband to his wife.
2. Of a Master to his servants.
3. Of a King to his subjects.

When this Lord of lords, Lord Paramount came into the world, Augustus Cæsar by a strict Edict commanded that no man should give or receive the Title of Lord.

Arguments to move us to accept of Christ as Lord.
1. Every one must be subject to one King or other, Christ or Satan, that which one studieth to please is his Lord.
2. Christ will be Lord whether we will or no, in respect of Supremacy and power to punish, this grant is, Phil. 2. 10. and accomplisht, Rom. 14. 10.
3. If Christ be not your Lord, he will not be your Saviour, Acts 5. 31. He can secure you against all other Lords, there is no Lord like him to reward you, Psal. 31. 19. Joh. 12. 26.

Will you deprive him of his purchase? 2 Pet. 2. 1.

To set up Christ as a Lord, is
First, To yield up our selves to his use in renouncing all sinne, Titus 2. 12. 1 Peter 1. 14.
Secondly, In actually dedicating our selves to him, 2 Chron. 30. 8.

This must be done,
1. With a sence of the Lords mercy, conscience will plead Gods interest on all occasions, 1 Cor. 6. 15. Rom. 6. 11.
2. By an unfained and diligent obedience, Luke 6. 46.
3. By a submission to his will, Mat. 21. 3.

We should pray, Let thy Kingdom come, labour for a true personal reign of Christ, that Christ and he only may be Lord of our souls, we should be glad to have him raign in our Families, publick Assemblies, his Truths, Ordinances and Government.

If we receive Christ into our hearts, we must receive him only and absolutely upon his own terms, and in all his Offices, and into every room of our hearts, and that for ever.

We become the servants of God four ways:
1. By an act of Election in God, Acts 9. 15.
2. By Purchase, 1 Cor. 6. 21. & 7. 23
3. By Conquest, Servus quasi servatus in bello, Luke 1. 74, 75.
4. By mutual Covenant, we at last choose God for our Lord and Master.

To be a servant hath two things in it:
First, Inward reverend affection.
Secondly, Ready outward subjection.

We must first do the work of God, Christ did his Fathers work; John 9. 41. Psal. 40. 7, 8.

Secondly, Do his work onely; we cannot serve two contrary Masters.

Chap. VI.

Of CHRISTS double ſtate of Humiliation and Exaltation.

Pſalm 110. ult. Luke 24. 26. He is called Enoſh, calamitous man, Pſalm 8. 5. the Apoſtle expounds it of him, Heb. 2. 5. See Pſal. 22. 6. and 69. 1. 2. Chriſt ſpeaks that there of himſelf (ſay ſome.) He did this as our Surety, as our Sacrifice, ſo he bare our ſinnes, Pſal. 40. 12. and 69. 5. compared with verſ. 9. and was liable to our debt, Gal. 4. 4. and 3. 13. Dan. 9. 26. there was a commutation of the perſon, not the debt, Iſa. 53. 6. He had a negative ignorance though not a privative in his underſtanding, Iſa. 7. 15. on this ground he is ſaid to grow in knowledge, Luke 2. 52. was troubled in Spirit, John 11. 33. His Spirit was ſpent after labour, his ſtrength weakned, Pſal. 22. 14. all the creatures were againſt him, the good Angels withdrew themſelves from him in the three hours of darkneſſe and approv'd of the judgement, the evil Angels ſet on him, John 14. 30. He was whipt and buffeted as a ſlave. The chief Magiſtrates in Church and State condemned him, the ſouldiers mocked and pierced him. God himſelf had a great hand in Chriſts ſufferings, Iſa. 53. 10. The ſame Greek word tranſlated Deliver and Betray is uſed of God, Rom. 8. 32. Jude v. 26. Mat. 16. 21, 23. The Prieſts, Mat. 27. 2. and Pilate. Mat. 27. 26. and of the people, Joh. 19. 11. Act. 3. 13. God ordained Chriſts death, Act. 2. 23. & 4. 27, 28. 1 Pet. 2. 20. Some ſay God foreknows but doth not by a certain and immutable Decree predetermine. The Apoſtle Act. 2. mentions his determinate counſel in the firſt place, and in Act. 4. his hand to note his concurring power, and his counſel to note his pre-ordaining will. 2. A great part of Chriſts ſufferings was immediately inflicted by God, Matth. 27. 46. Gal. 3. 13. 3. Chriſt aſcribes the cup to God, John 18. 11.

Hitherto of our Lords Natures and Offices, now of his acts by which in thoſe Natures he fulfilled thoſe Offices. They are all brought to a Dichotomy by our Lord himſelf, when he ſaith, Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered and to enter into his glory? and by the Apoſtle Saint Paul, ſaying, He humbled himſelf, and God hath greatly exalted him.

First then for his humiliation, it was of neceſſity for our Redemption, becauſe he that is to ſatisfie for ſin muſt bear puniſhment. The bearing of puniſhment, as being a ſuffering of ſome evill and undeſirable thing, cannot be but an abaſement.

This abaſement was two-fold:

1. In ſubmitting himſelf to obey the whole Law in our behalf in the form and quality of a ſervant, even as if he had been no other than a bare man, ſo that he was found in faſhion as a man, and made in the likeneſs of men, that is, was put to ſerve and obey as meer men are. To be ſubject to God, and obedient to the author of being, is no abaſement at all, but to be in ſuch ſort and degree ſubject, as if he were a meer ſonne of Adam, of no more excellency than a man, this was an abaſement. That the heir of ſome noble-man or great perſon be inferiour to his Father, and do whatſoever he ſhall imploy him in, ſutable to his quality and condition, is no abaſement; nay it is an honour to him, but if ſome ſlave whom the ſon did pleaſe to affect ſhould play the thief and runagate, and the ſon requeſting his fathers favour in his behalf, ſhould be anſwered, I am content to pardon him for your ſake ſonne, upon condition that you will be ſcullion in his room this ſeaven years, and hereupon ſhould ſerve his Father in that homely office of the Kitchin for the term appointed, it is now were a great abaſement for the ſonne. So for our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in his Humanity to be ſubject and ſerviceable to his heavenly Father in an obedience ſutable to his worth and dignity, had been no humiliation; but to be ſubject in the quality of a meer man, nay a ſinfull man, and be put to obey the Law, and ſuch a Law, and ſo to obey it as if he had been of no higher off-ſpring than the loins of his mother, this was a great abaſing. He ſubmitted himſelf to be under the authority of his mother, as another child, and to live as a Prentice to Joſephs Trade, as another child to go up to the Feaſts to be circumciſed,

That place Rom. 8. 4. is a convincing Scripture for the imputation of Chriſts active obedience.

to

to bear injuries, to pray with weeping tears for sins, but our sins, and so in the rest; Here was a great and chief part of his humiliation, so our Apostle witnesseth; God sent his Sonne made of a woman, made under the Law, that he might redeem them that were under the Law, and as by the disobedience of one many were made sinners; so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. Psal. 40. 6. He alludeth to the civil Ordinance, Exod. 21. 5, 6. both his ears were bored thorow, his obedience was double to that of others. Dr Hampton on Rom. 5. 19.

Gal 4. 435. Rom. 5. 19. He was obedient in the humane Nature alone, not in the divine. Dr Hampton.

But this obedience was not so great a Humiliation as was requisite, a more difficult burden was required at his hands and a labour more tedious, he must suffer also those evils of all kinds which we should have * suffered, as if the fore-mentioned Sonne of some noble Personage for the winning of his Fathers favour to a run-away servant, should not be put alone to serve an Apprentiship in the scullery, but also to be grievously whipped with rods, as the slave himself should have been for his offence.

* Amarissimam mortem dulcem, nitidam, candidam, acceptabilem reddit, dum audis Jesum Christum Filium Dei suo sanctissimo contactu omnes passiones, ipsam adeò mortem consecrasse ac sanctificasse, maledictionem benedixisse, ignominiam glorificasse, paupertatem ditasse, ita ut mors vita janua, maledictio benedictionis origo, ignominia gloria parens esse cogantur. Luther. loc. com. prima Class. cap. 6. We should look unto Christ whom we have pierced, and on all his sufferings as brought upon him by us, nothing will make sinne so hatefull nor Christ so dear, Vulnera Christi ratilantia sunt Biblia practica, these lead us to all duties of holinesse. The proper object of faith in justification is Christ crucified. The Angels love Christ, because of the excellency and glory of his person, but not as made sinne for them. Dignitas Personæ primò conducit ad acceptationem. Unde enim fit quod Persona Jesu Christi, in nostram omnium vicem admittitur, nisi quod Persona jam multò dignior pœnam luit, atque si omnes in mundo homines plecterentur? Secundò ad meritum. Tertiò ad compensationem. Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad inferos lib. 3. pag. 108.

The sufferings therefore of our Lord Jesus come to be considered of, which O that we could seriously consider. It were impossible for any man not to repent, not to believe, not to obey that would addresse himself to the frequent and serious meditation of these sufferings, if withall he were informed of the motive, end, and fruit of the same.

Now all of the things endured by Christ may be referred to those of his Infancy and Elder time.

First, To be conceived in the Womb, and carried there nine moneths, Luke 2. 6, 7, 40. to be born of a poor and mean Parent, void of all earthly honour and state, although she were the Heir of the greatest Family and noblest Blood in the world, and had as due right as was possible to a rich and honourable Kingdom. The Virgin Mary and Joseph both were of the famous Linage of David, he the next Heir male, she the next Heir female to the crown of Israel and Judah, but Usurpers had laid violent hands upon that Principality, and the whole Tribe of Judah, specially the linage of David was so farre depressed and obscured, that now the Heir to the Crown was unknown and neglected, and the family of such honour even raked up in the dunghill of meanness and contempt, glad to apply themselves to base and carnal occupations, as the Carpenter or the like. This was an abasement to Christ, that he was not born of Davids posterity all the while it was of esteem, note and honour in the world, but now that the Scepter was quite departed from the Tribe, now that it was even cast down to the dust, and no man of note or power in it; now must he be born of that Family, now must he take flesh of that Linage.

Et in nascendi forte, & in vivendi instituto, & in mortis genere nihil nisi humile & abjectum & sordidum infimumque spectavit & cogitavit. Quid Deo immortali minus conveniens aut decorum quam è Cœlo in terram descendere? Hoc parum. Imò in ventrem Virginis mortalis se insinuare, ibique naturam humanam mortalem, & omnibus hominis infirmitatibus obnoxiam assumere? Hoc ille fecit. Quid verò homini magis probrosum, contumeliosum, indignum, quam servili supplicio, quo & latrones tum puniri solebant, animam quasi criminosam per vim exhalare? Hanc illo etiam sustinere infima abjectionis & ignominiæ extrema notam voluit. Salmas. Epist. 2. ad Bartholinum de cruce.

Secondly, The manner of his birth also was very base and beggarly, for his Father and Mother coming to Bethlehem upon occasion of taxing (when there was a great concourse of people to that little Town) were so courtly entertained, that her

her time of Travel being come perhaps a little before she looked for it, she was thrust into an out-house, an odd corner, a poor stable, there to cry out and be delivered without any attendance or regard. What could be more ignoble and contemptuous? The Son of God was born in a stable and laid in a Manger, as if he had been worthy of no better esteem than a very vagrant. Thus was he born and in this simple fashion did he enter into the stage of the world, as if he had been a person of no esteem or reputation.

And thirdly, No sooner was he born, and the thing made known to the world, but that his life was sought for by the malice and craft of Herod, who had usurped that Kingdom which was due unto him. For he having notice that the King of Israel was born (as is the manner of Tyrants to seek the destruction of the right Inheritor) dissembled with the Wisemen, pretending that his purpose was to come and worship him, and learning by them what he could for that purpose, intended in very deed to have made him away, by which means he was compelled for the saving of his life to take a long and tedious journey down into Ægypt, to Question with great labour and wearinesse to himself as well as to his Parents.

Thus you have the sufferings of our Saviours Infancy; next consider his whole life, and what was it but a suffering of all misery, both in the whole course of it, and in the conclusion of all at his death?

For the course of his life it was private and publick. For his private life untill his thirty years he lived a Carpenter *. He that was sufficient to have governed all the Monarchies under the Sun, to have ruled the whole world, to have led mighty Armies, and to have read a Lecture of Wisdom to Angels and Archangels, he was servant to his Father, a Carpenter, and spent his time obscurely in a manual occupation, handling the Mallet and Chezil, and doing the work of a mean labourer, burying as it were all his Divine Excellencies under the thick and dark cloud of a poor Trade, and not shewing forth so much as a glympse of his heavenly glory, but that at one time at the age of twelve years he peeped a little out of the Cloud, when at a feast in Jerusalem he Disputed with Doctors, to the astonishment of all the hearers and beholders. He was cast down from all honour, and made to inherit contempt and baseness.

But come we to his publick life, where he was to take upon him a glorious function fit for himself, even to be the Minister of the Circumcision, a Prophet to the people Israel.

First, He entred into this function with a great toil and labour, for by and by after his Baptism and Calling to publick view, he was thrust forth into the wilderness there to be tempted of the Devil, not for a few hours or dayes, but for full fourty dayes together. There he did challenge all the powers of darkness, and hand to hand did enter the lists to fight a combate with all the Devils of hell. There was he singled forth, and they let loose to try the utmost of their mighty and subtil temptations, three principal ones are mentioned, but no question he stood not against so little as three thousand, for what would not Satan assay to do him mischief? What evils did he not by word or suggestion labour to draw him to? when he had him for so long a space of time at so great a disadvantage all alone in the wilderness and fasting, he would strain himself to the utmost of his wicked wit to have poysoned him with some taint of wickedness, that he might have killed the whole body of his Church in him the Head thereof, as he destroyed all mankind in the first Adam the common root of it. It is certain that our Lord was armed with power and wisdom to discover and resist his temptations, and knew he should, could and would be victorious, but no doubt the combate was troublesome and tedious, and filled his righteous soul with unspeakable dolour and anguish. Let a virtuous and honourable Matron be shut up so many dayes together in one room with a base and loathsome adulterer, there to suffer all his impure solicitations, will not her misery be so much the greater in sense by how much her self is more shamefac'd and honest, and more abhorrent from all such impurity? so it was with the soul of our blessed Saviour. That great and foul polluter of himself and mankind the Devil, had

Mark 6. 3.

* Baronius thinks he made yokes, alluding thereto, in that he professeth my yoke is easie, Matth. 11. 30. Dr. Prid. Introduct. for reading all sorts of Histories, cap. 7. page 51.

had liberty given him to try what ever he could do with all his crafty and abominable temptations to draw our Lord Jesus from his God, and to make him as all other men were, a sinner. The most valiant person in the world, armed with the best weapons for defence, and furnished with so much prowesse and skill, that he knew he should be conquerour and unwounded, would yet find it unspeakably troublesome to ward off the multitude of blows of ten thousand at once, assailing him with such fiery darts and poisoned weapons, that each of them had they but fastened to draw blood, would have been mortal unto him. Had any of Satans temptations fastened on the soul of Christ, he had been made a sinner, and so separated from the Union with the second Person, and so himself with all his members that depended upon him had perished eternally. Doubtlesse though he knew he should overcome, yet the bearing off, putting by, and resisting so many mighty blows and subtil thrusts, must needs be extreamly tedious and bitter unto him, by how much he was more perfectly holy, and did more detest all such manner of temptations.

Thus his sufferings from Satan were horrible, though in the issue harmlesse, yea and glorious, but now think what he bare in his whole life after.

Five things are most intollerable to the nature of man in passing of his life, Poverty, Reproach, Labour, Danger and Sorrows, he was laden with all these in all extremity.

First for Poverty, Though he were very rich (saith S^t Paul) yet he became poor for our sakes; he had been no slothful nor prodigal Person in his private life, but he was a servant to his father in law, and the calling was poor, so that he could get nothing but from hand to mouth, and therefore being to leave his trade, and become a Minister and Preacher of the Gospel, he had no house nor home of his own to dwel in, no stock nor revenues to live upon, but was fain to live of pure alms, and though he was no beggar [a], yet as if he had been a beggar, to maintain himself altogether by the kindnesse of others. [b] The Foxes have holes, the Fouls nests, but the Son of man hath not whereon to rest his head. We read of a bag he had, but it was not filled with the fruits of his own hand or stock, but with the gifts and alms of others. He had it, but he had it of alms: it was enough, but at other mens voluntary cost. What ingenuous spirit doth not feel it an abasement to be so maintained? You see his Poverty, he was of so low estate that indeed he had nothing at all, but what good people would bestow upon him. 2 Cor. 8. 9.

[a] Pope Nicolas the third and others maintain'd, that our Saviour Christ was a very beggar and lived here in the lowest degree of beggary that can be, which Pope John the 22. condemneth for an heresie. Master Gatakers Answer to Master Walkers Vindic. pag. 40, 41.

[b] Matth. 8. 20.

They mockt him in all his Offices.

1. Kingly, put a Souldiers Coat on him for a Robe, and gave him a Reed for a Scepter, *Mat.*27.29.

2. In his Prophetical Office, struck him, and then bad him prophecy who smote him.

3. In his Priestly Office, *Mat.*27.39,40.

Again, for Reproach, How insufferable a thing is that to worthy natures to be slandered, reviled, ill-spoken of, and laden with false accusations and calumniations? Doth it not seem unto us a heavier thing than death? Who is not so tender of his good name, that the least blemish and aspersion cast upon him, seemeth more smarting than the cutting of a sword? But our Saviour had all manner of disgraces cast upon him, not by mean, base, beggarly and despised companions; but by the Scribes, Pharisees, Elders, High-Priests and Rulers of the City, men of most fame and reputation, not for command and wealth alone, but also for learning and piety. These did seek to discredit him out of their repining envy, these vilified his person, depraved his best actions, and did cast the worst imputation they could upon him. They vilified our Saviours person by the baseneſse of his Parents, his kindred and profession, Is not this Josephs son, is not Mary his mother, and his brethren James and

Joses;

Joſes, Simon and Jude? Is not he the Carpenter? They gave it forth that he was a drunkard, a glutton, a rioter, a companion with the baſeſt fellows, even Publicans and ſinners. They depraved:

1. His Doctrine as heretical, croſſing Moſes his Law, and treaſonous, that he forbad to pay tribute unto Cæſar.

2. His miracles as magical, they reported that he did all thoſe miracles for which the people did ſo much honour him, not by the power and finger of God, but by the black Art of helliſh conjuration, even by the aid and working of Beelzebub the chief of Devils. Theſe ſaid he was a wicked and prophane fellow, a man that did not regard the Sabbath of the Lord. Theſe were bold to lay to his charge that horrible and ſacrilegious crime of blaſphemy, ſaying, Why doth this man blaſpheme? and for thy blaſphemy we ſeek to ſtone thee. Lo! to be traduced of men famous for knowledg and religion, and for honour and wealth, as a boon companion, as a wine bibber, a fellow for harlots, a prophane polluter of the Sabbath, an horrible blaſphemer of God; this was the bitter cup which our Lord Jeſus was fain to drink. Could he ſuffer greater and more intollerable ignominy? Nay at one time they were ſo audatious as to tell him to his face, Thou art mad and haſt a Devil?

Now conſider thirdly his Labour, his travel on foot, many a weary ſtep and long journey from Galilee to Jeruſalem, from Jeruſalem to Galilee, and from quarter to quarter, and Countrey to Countrey, ſometimes on foot with ſweat and toil, till he was even weary and tired again, glad to ſit down and reſt him, as once at the Well of Jacob: ſometimes by Sea in a Ship, when the furious winds conſpired againſt him, and raiſed ſuch a ſtorm, as if the Ship muſt have been ſwallowed up in the vaſt belly of the waves, and as if the Devil would have watched his opportunity to have drowned him ſleeping; for as for riding upon a beaſt, he never took that eaſe unto himſelf, except alone one time, and that the laſt of all that he went to Jeruſalem, and then poorly mounted upon the bare back of a ſilly fole of an Aſſe, that was never accuſtomed to the ſaddle before, with a jerkin or a coat or two caſt on him in ſtead of better furniture. A toilſom life indeed to do nothing elſe but go afoot from City to City, and ſometimes alſo to be ready to be preſt to dea h with the throng of a rude and unmannerly multitude. You have his Labours, now conſider

Fourthly, His Dangers. He lived in quietneſſe and ſafety enough during his Carpenters imployment, but when he came to be a Miniſter he was ſtill perſecuted. At Nazareth his own City where he was not born but bred up, the firſt Sermon (as I think) that ever he preached there, becauſe he was ſomewhat plain in telling them of their faults, they laid violent hands upon him, and would have broke his neck down a ſteep hill on which the Town was built. After as he grew more famous for wonders, ſo he was more hated and maligned by the Rulers, many times they conſpired to take and intrap him, ſent Officers to apprehend him, took up ſtones to daſh out his brains, and commanded that whoſoever knew where he was ſhould make it known that they might apprehend him, and that he which would confeſſe him to be the Chriſt ſhould be excommunicated, inſomuch that he was called A ſtone of offence, and a ſign to be ſpoken againſt; and he ſaith, The world hateth me, yea they have hated me without a cauſe; Inſomuch that he could not walk openly amongſt them, but was fain to hide himſelf after a ſort, and to flie for his life, for they were ſcarce ever without ſome or other device to take him and put him to death. You have heard of his Perils, let us ſpeak

Luke 4. 29.

Mark 3. 6, 7. John 8. 59.

Fifthly of his Sorrows, He was a man of Sorrows, full of grief and tears, for he was not a ſtone or a piece of iron that all theſe things did not touch him, but he was ſenſible of theſe evils, and felt the heat of his Fathers diſpleaſure againſt him for our ſins, for which he had undertaken to anſwer in all theſe things, and eſpecially the memorial of his laſt paſſion did wonderfully grieve and trouble him, Luke 12. 50. How am I ſtraitned or pained till it be accompliſhed? not with ſuch a grief as made him unwilling to come to it, but with ſuch as made him deſire that it were were once over. He often ſet his thoughts awork upon his laſt ſufferings, he foretold his Diſciples of it ſome four or five times, no queſtion but he conſidered of it himſelf many hundred times, and not one of them without a vehement working of ſorrow, as if one of us ſhould know that ſome two or three years hence he muſt be put to the rack, or burned at a ſtake, he could not but beſtow full many a heavy thought upon that hour; ſo did our Lord, without all controverſie, with many frequent requeſts, and humble, tearfull, mournfull Prayers, ſupplicating to God for aid and help againſt that hour, according as the many complaints and prayers made by David his Type in the Pſalms, do manifeſtly evince.

Now come we to the laſt ſcene of this Tragedy, his end: The concluſion of his life (juſt like a Tragedy) was moſt diſtreſſed and lamentable of all the other parts, whether you conſider the things he ſuffered from God immediately, or the things he endured before, in, and after his death.

The Pſalmiſt expreſſeth Chriſts trouble by roaring, Pſalm 22. 1. The Apoſtle Heb. 5. 7. by ſtrong crying and tears. All the four Evangeliſts record Chriſts Paſſion. Thoſe words λυπεῖσθαι, Matth. 26. 37. πάλιν ἄγωνιᾷ, Mark 14. 33. ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, are

The firſt and great work of his Paſſion was the agony and bloody ſweat, grief, aſtoniſhment and extream heavineſſe which he ſuſtained in the garden. He began to be heavy and greatly grieved, ſaith one Evangeliſt: and To be aſtoniſhed, ſaith another: and He was in an agony, ſaith the third; in ſo much that great drops of blood trickled from him to the ground. The two tormentingeſt paſſions that man doth wreſtle withal in this life, more inſufferable then any rack or diſeaſe of the body are ſorrow and fear, which if they be in the greateſt extremity that can be are the greateſt miſeries that can be. Now ſo they were in him, for the word ſaith, he complained thus, My ſoul is ſorrowfull round about even to death; ſo much as was enough to have killed him, not with the ſuddeneſſe of it, for that kils eaſily and quickly, but with the extream inwardneſs and weight of it, and his fear is called aſtoniſhment and amazement.

There is,

1. An amazement of wonder in regard of the ſtrangeneſſe of ſome accident beheld, as the people were amazed at Chriſts miracles and doctrine.

2. An amazement of horror, when a man ſtands agaſt and aſtoniſhed at the greatneſſe of ſome evil befalling him or like to befall him, and ſo was our Saviour taken with the higheſt degree of fear, even amazement, Mark 14. 33. It was not ſuch a fear as did drive him out of his wits, or take away from him the uſe of reaſon, but ſuch as did even ſurcharge his ſoul and ſo afflict him, (that as we uſe to ſay) he knew not what to do nor how to bear it, theſe two paſſions put him in an [a] agony, that is to ſay, an extraordinary great ſtrife or wreſtling. The infinite wrath of God due to him for our ſins, as much as if he had committed them (for the ſurety is as much liable to the paiment of the debt, as if he had in perſon borrowed the money himſelf for himſelf) did diſcover it ſelf to him in all extremity, procuring to him the extreameſt ſorrow that might be, becauſe he felt the tedioufneſſe of it for the preſent, and the extreameſt fear that might be, becauſe he feared the continuance of it for the future, not with a fear of reaſon that did doubt of the event of his ſufferings, but with a paſſion of fear, which the beholding of a terrible thing, ſo terrible as Gods infinite anger will ſtirre up in a creature, though he be never ſo ſure to eſcape it, and hence came that extream conflict which diſſolved his flesh and made him sweat [b] bloody drops, whilst his faith and obedience strove against his fear and sorrow to keep him from murmuring or impatient fits, from all repenting of his having undertaken the work, from all doubting or despairing of Gods love or unwillingnesse to go through with the work, but to hold his heart still in the highest pitch of obedience, which he shewed, saying, Matth. 26. 39. Not my will, that is, natural desire, not resolute purpose be fulfilled, but thine.

[a] An Agony is the perplexed fear of one who is entring into a great and grievous conflict, Timor quo corripitur is qui in certamen deſcendit. Ariſt. Irenæus ſaith the year of his age wherein he ſuffered, was about the fiftieth, which he vouchſafeth to be an Apoſtolical Tradition. The ground of his opinion was, Joh. 8. 57. The common received opinion is, That he ſuffered being thirty three compleat, and in the beginning of his thirty four. Scaliger added one year more, and placeth his paſſion in the beginning of his thirty five. Non timeretur ille qui poteſt nocere, niſi haberet quandam eminentiam poteſtatis, cui de facili reſiſti non poſſit: ea enim quæ in promptu habemus repellere, non timemus. In Chriſto fuit timor Dei: non quidem ſecundum quod reſpicit malum ſeparationis à Deo per culpam, neque etiam ſecundum quod reſpicit malum punitionis pro culpa, ſed ſecundum quod reſpicit ipſam Divinam eminentiam: prout ſcilicet anima Chriſti quodam affectu reverentiæ movebatur in Deum, à Spiritu ſancto ei⟨lla⟩. Aquin. part. 3. Quæſt. 16. Art. 6.

[b] That is not sound, that one drop of Christs blood was enough to redeem the world. Pope Clement the sixth first used that speech, That one drop of Christs blood was enough to save men, and the rest was laid up in the Treasure of the Church, Luke 22. 44. Divine justice would not let go the sinner without a ransome, nor the Redeemer without full satisfaction. I am loath to believe that either the Father was so prodigal of his Sonnes life, or that the Sonne was so careless of his own blood, that he would have poured out all, if one drop would have served the turn. Doctor Hampton on Rom. 10. 4. See Master Pinchins Meritorious price of Redempt. part 2. page 88, 89, 90. 91. It belongs to God to determine what those sufferings of Christ are which deserve salvation, more then one drop of Christs blood was shed in his circumcision; the Scripture refers our reconciliation still to Christs death, Rom. 5. 10. Ephes. 2. 16, Col. 1. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 24. Heb. 9. 26. died not in vain, Gal. 2. 21. The dignity of the person availed, 1. To support him under his torments. 2. To make his sufferings satisfactory. 3. To make them meritorious for many. But it was agreed between the Father and the Sonne that Christ should die, John 10. 18.

Hence the Schools distinguish of a double will in Christ: 1. His Divine will, so as God he desired the same thing with his Father. 2. Humane, and that is either Voluntas desiderij naturalis, the bent of nature to its own conveniency; or Voluntas desiderij rationalis & deliberati, his sanctified jugdment submitted the desires of humane nature to the will of God. Here is no repugnancy but a diversity of wills. Christ is to be considered under a different relation, in the first part of the prayer he speaks as man; in the second as Mediator, see Matth. 26. 42. Heb. 4 16. 2. If we consider Christ as man, there is no repugnancy of wils; we must distinguish between the innocent velleities of humane nature, and the resolutions of reason.

This prayer was conceived,

1. With submission, If it be possible, not my will.
2. Drawn forth upon convenient reason.

If it be objected, How could this stand with Christs holinesse, the Law requires a conformity in the first motions and the very inclinations of the heart?

It may be answered,

1. That Christs sufferings were rather appointed by Gods Decree then his Law.
2. Suppose Gods Decrees were a Law to Christ, as they were to him being a Mediator, yet positive Laws blot not out naturall affections: Though Abraham was commanded to sacrifice his sonne, yet he was to have a natural affection to save his life. Christ was indeed obliged to this, and it was a duty in him to declare
   1. His bitter sense of Gods wrath, Psal. 90 11.
   2. The reality of his humane nature, by abhorring what was destructive to it.
   3. To shew his esteem of Divine consolation.

Now Gods Justice was satisfied, now his Name was honoured with an obedience as honourable to him as all the service of all the men in the world could have been. Thus did our blessed Saviour suffer in the Garden from God alone.

Then follows from the Jews, his Apostles and friends, and his enemies, and the common people.

See Exod. 21. 32. Matth. 26. 15. His Apostles, one betraies him, sels him for ready money, and for a little too, the price of a slave, thirty silverlings, so many half crowns, in all three pound fifteen shillings. Lo the goodly price at which the Pharisees and this Judas valued him, O infinite indignity! The bravest sinne that ever was, was ventred in Heaven by an Angel; and the basest sin that ever was, was committed on earth by a Disciple. A Disciple, who had he been of an intire faith, had been even yet of an entire fame, and in our sacred Kalender enjoyed the place and Title of Saint Judas. Dr Holyday on 1 Cor. 2. 8.

Judas his Treason was a great part of Christs sufferings, as appears by the frequent prophesies of it, Psalm 41. 9. & 55. 12, 13, 14, 15. and by the Apostle, 1 Cor. 11. 23. But what did the other Disciples, Most of them left him and fled: The Shepherd was smitten and the flock was scattered; they afforded him no more assistance than a company of sheep would to him that tended them, if theeves come to murder him; but run one this way, another that, and left their Saviour all alone; in the same sort did all his friends that had received so many and great benefits from him by his miraculous cures of themselves or their friends, they all disappeared, not one would open his lips to defend and justifie him against the loud aspersions that were cast upon him; but one of his disciples among all the rest denies him; forswears, abjures him.

Now for his enemies the Pharisees, first they send their ministers and servants with the Traitor to take him, who coming to the place laid violent hands upon him, and binding his hands behinde him, like a thief they carry him away to them that had appointed them that service. Secondly, Themselves hire false and perjured wretches to bear witnesse against him of many things, and when that course would not take effect, at last upon his own most true, holy and constant confession, that he was (as indeed he was) the Son of God; in solemn manner, with pretended gravity and grief, and with rent garments, the High-priest stands up and condemns him of blasphemy and unto death, to which sentence each of the Elders gave his suffrage. Then the servants buffet him with their graceless hands, spit on him with their slovenly mouthes, and mock and jest at him with their petulant tongues, and thus they passe away the time abusing him all night, till in the morning early the High-priests (quickly up for a bad businesse) bring him to the Civil Governour, and there accuse him of the falsest crimes that might be, Sedition and Treason, as if he forbad to pay Tribute, moved the people, and sought to make himself a King; besides his blasphemy in counterfeiting (as they interpreted it) to be the Son of God.

They accuse him of blasphemy the highest sinne against the first Table, and sedition the highest sin against the second.

Now see what he suffers from the Gentiles and Jews both together. Pilate[c] to rid his hands of him sends him to Herod. Herod entertains him with mocks and taunts, and sends him away scoffingly arrayed in purple. Pilate dares not loose him, but to please the people and asswage their rage by a little yeelding, causeth him to be sorely scourged[d] with rods, according to the manner of the Romans, till his back

Levit. 8. 11. Isaiah calleth the torments preceding his death with an elegant word Caburah, Isa. 53. 5. and Peter μώλωπι, 1 Pet. 2. 24. Christs body was beat with scourges, Fœdum supplicium, as a Schoolman cals it, a pain so base as might not be inflicted on a Burgesse of Rome. He was whipt cruelly after the manner of the Romans, to move the people to compassion; by four, as is gathered by the parting of his robes into four parts, and those four all souldiers. A Spanish Postiller writes, that the Jews fearing Pilate would discharge him after stripes, gave money to the Officers to scourge him to death. Dr Clerk, Christ was twice whipt with rods: 1. Before the sentence of condemnation given, for that end that he might have been set free; and after condemnation, ex instituto capitali. He was whipt most grievously, for so Psal. 129. 3. shews. Mont. ac. Orig. Eccles. Tom. prior. part. post. In crowning him with thorns, the souldiers did not only wreath him a thick crown of thorns, to stick his head full of them, but after the putting it on, to fasten it, they did strike him on the head with their canes, as Matth. 27. and Mark 15. do plainly testifie. Une nouvelle sorte de couronne, qui n' est faite ni de metal, ni di pierreries, ni de fueilles, ni de fleurs, mais d' epines tant seulement, & encore, si nous voulons ajoûter foy à la plus saine partie des escrivains, faite de cette sorte d' epines blanches, qui ont coûtume d' estre les plus aigues. *Discours. was all gore bloud, and his skin and flesh torn with wounds and wails, and then clapping a crown of piercing thorns upon his head, he brings him forth in this fashion to be gazed upon by the people, who all shouting and hooting at him out of disdain, as accounting him undoubtedly a blasphemous Impostor, because pretending to be the Messiah, from whom they looked for the restitution of their earthly Kingdom; he was so farre from doing that, as now he could not (so they thought) deliver himself from the hands of men. Then Pilate sets him in balance with a seditious murderer, and they require the murderer to be saved, and him to be crucified; renouncing him, and denying him before Pilate, as not the lawfull King of the Jews, but a grand Impostor, and will have no nay, but with importunate clamours enforce the timerous Judge to condemn him. Now is sentence solemnly pronounced upon him, That forasmuch as he was a seditious person, a Traitor, and one that went about to usurp the Kingdom against the Royal dignity of Cæsars Imperial Majesty, therefore he should be taken by the Romane Officers, and led to a place without the City, where malefactors used according to the fashion of the Romans, with their basest slaves to be nailed to a Crosse, and so hang till they were dead. No sooner was the sentence passed, but that it began to be executed. The souldiers seize upon him, and having gotten him as a Dove among Kites, a Sheep among Lions, they sport themselves with mocking, deriding and abusing him by words and gestures of counterfeit honour, which are the greatest dishonours, thereby upbraiding him with folly that would needs make a King of himself.

Longer tortures others have endured, but never greater for the time, nor with like patience. Id. ibid.

To the place of crucifying they lead him bearing his own Crosse, till he being spent with watching, bleeding, wearinesse and grief, was no longer able to bear it; then they compelled another whom they met to bear one end of it after him. So being arrived at the dismall place of dead mens skuls, they offer him the potion of malefactors, wine mingled with myrrhe, as it is thought to intoxicate his brain, which he refusing, they stretch his hands and legs, till all his bones might be told, and so nailing one hand to one horn of the Crosse, the other to the other, and his feet to the stump at the bottom, they leave him hanging, and that also betwixt two thieves, with a scornfull superscription of his fault, *J. His soul [e] was filled with unspeakable grief in the sense of the curse of the Law which there he bare, and so vehement was his anguish that he cried out for thirst, when they gave him the cold comfort of a little vinegar and gall, with a scoff to make it relish the bitterer, Let us see if Elias will come. All pore wrath, Matth. 26. 38. The redemption of mankind is called The travel of his soul, Isa. 53. 10. Papists and Sotinians say, Christ suffered only in his body, that his soul sufferd but sympathetice and secondarily; but bodily sufferings could not make satisfaction for the sins of the soul: lusts fight against the soul, Isa 53. 7. where the greatest debt was there must be the chiefest satisfaction. Christ as our Surety must pay our whole debt; the whole man is bound to the Law, but principally the soul; sin is primarily against that: they sinned against their own souls, Num. 16. See Mic 6 9. The sufferings of the body will never make a man perfectly miserable: It is not pure darknesse till the inward man be dark. 2. The whole man was under the curse, Gal. 3. 13. The body is but one part of the man, therefore that could never pay the whole debt of the curse. 3. Christ took soul and body, and the infirmities of both, that in them both he might make a sacrifice, Isa. 53. 10. 4. Else many Martyrs suffered more than Christ, for they suffered greater bodily torments; some were cut in pieces, some sawn asunder, yet they suffered with rejoycing, because their spirits were filled with the consolations of God; but the Lord withdrew the ligh of his countenance from Christ. 5. Christs sufferings in soul began before his bodily suffe. ings, in the garden when he was in an agony. Some say, Christ was not filius iræ, because he was the Son of God, but filius sub ira, as a Surety Vide Grot. de satisf. Christ. c. 1. p. 11. & Sandford. *de descen. the people wagge their heads at him; the Pharisees they insult over him, with Oh thou that didst destroy the Temple. His poor mother, and some friends stood by and lamented him, till at the end of three full hours, he mightily crying did give up the ghost into his Fathers hands. So he died a most vile and shamefull death, a most hard and painfull, a most execrable and cursed death, the death of the Crosse.

[e] The great misery that Christ underwent was in his soul, when the Lord poured on him

The death of the Crosse was,

1. A shamefull [f] death, Heb. 12. 2. & 13. 13. Esay 53. 12. a filthy death, Alexander ab Alexandro so termeth it, Mors turpissima. Bernard. Therefore Julian called Christ the crucified or staked God. And the Jewes continue still in railing on Christ, and cursing him, and ignominiously call him Talui, him that was hanged, in which the Christians glory, Galat. 6. 14. They teach their children to curse Christ. The Turks mock us at this day with our crucified God. He died, In medio latronum tanquam latronum maximus. He was counted a malefactour by the wicked men, Matth. 26. 65. Good men lookt on him as an Impostor, Luke 24. 21. God lookt on him as a malefactor, Heb. 9. 28.

[f] It was usual with Pagans (as Chrysostom writes) to upbraid Christians with Tu adoras crucifixum. Heading, stoning or burning is not so odious among any people as hanging is, among us it is called in special reproach, A Dogs death, Abeat in malam crucem.

Tully [g] saith, Facinus est vincire civem Romanum, scelus verberare, quid dicam in crucem tollere? It is a great offence to bind a Citizen of Rome, a greater to beat him, the greatest to set him on the crosse.

[g] Orat. ad Verrem tertia.

2. It is a painfull death, He endured the crosse, Heb. 12. 2. Christs strong cries like womens in their travel, argued strong pain, Acts 2. 24. see Lam. 2. 24. Bruising hath pain, Gen. 3. 15. Esay 53. 10. He was nailed in the hands and feet the most sinewy and sensitive parts, Psalm 22. 16. There was an extension and distortion of his body; the crosse was a rack to him, and he was stretcht as upon the tentars. It was a slow and lingering death.

Mors confixorum in cruce est acerbissima; quia configuntur in locis nervosis & maximè sensibilibus, scilicet in manibus & pedibus, & ipsum pondus corporis pendentis continuè auget dolorem, & cum hoc etiam est doloris diuturnitas; quia non statim moriuntur, sicut hi qui gladio interficiuntur. Magnitudo doloris Christi potest considerari ex perceptibilitate patientis, & secundum animam & secundum corpus. Nam & secundum corpus erat optimè complexionatus, cum corpus ejus fuerit formatum miraculosè operatione Spiritus sancti: sicut & alia, quæ per miracula facta sunt, fuerint aliis potiora, & ideo in eo maximè viguit sensus tactus, ex cujus perceptione sequitur dolor. Anima etiam secundum vires interiores, efficacissimè apprehendit omnes causas tristitiæ. Aquin. part. 3. Quæst. 46. Artic 6. Vide Lactant. Div. Instit. lib. 4. pag 288, 289, 290. Quatuor causæ sunt cur Chaistus crucis mortem sustinere voluerit. Prima, Quia acerbissima, Secunda, Quia ignominiosissima. Tertia, Quia Gentilis non Judaica erat. Quarta, Quia significabatur eam fieri pro salute omnium credentium ubicunque illi terrarum essent, quod etiam repræsentabatur expansione manuum. Quo nimirum & Christus alluſit, Joh. 12. 32. Mors & crucifixio Christi in lege quoque adumbrata est, sacrificio ventilationis quæ sursum ac deorsum, dextrorsum ac sinestrorsum agitabatur. Paul. Fag. Annotat. in Deut. 21. 22. In ligno moritur Dominus, hoc est, mysterium peregit salutis, quoniam & lignum pernicies ac mortem attulerat. Genus est mortis non solum ignominiosum, sed durissimum, & prope intolerabile. Lod. Viv. de ver. Fid. Christ. l. 2. c. 15.

3. It was a cursed death, Gal. 3. 13. that is, yeelded himself to a cursed death for us; so the Fathers glosse it. It was a cursed death by the decree and appointment of God, Deut. 21. 23. Christs hanging on the Crosse seems to be prefigured by the Heave-offering, of which the Law makes mention: and the brazen Serpent, Numb. 21. 1. was a Type of Christ crucified, John 3. 14, 15. & 12. 32, 33. The reason was, That he might free us from the curse of the Law, being made a curse for us, Gal. 3. 13. The Prince of darknesse would not let so great an advantage passe without proving once more whether in this last hideous pang of death he might not prevail to have fastened some stain of sin upon the pure soul of that immaculate and now dying Lamb of God. He could not have fitly been said to have triumphed over them on the Crosse, if he had not properly grappled and fought with them there, wherefore assuredly the whole band of that hellish kingdom of darknesse was let loose upon our Saviour, he having at once the Creator and the creatures, men and Devils against him, and yet maintaining himself in perfect faith and patience, patience, might indeed make a full ſatisfaction to the Divine Juſtice for the miſerable diſobedience of man.

Crux Christi est crux peccati, crux Christi est corona & triumphus Christiani. 1 Cor. 2. 2. Gal. 6. 14.

Chriſt died for the Reprobate five wayes:

1. By way of proclamation, Remiſſion of ſins is proclaimed to thee if thou wilt believe, Luke 24.47. Acts 13.38. & 10. 43.

2. By way of obligation, thou art bound to believe that thy ſins may be forgiven thee in Chriſt, Mark 1.15. *Rom.*7.2.

3. By way of obſignation.

4. By way of general merit, John 3.16.

The Spirit is poured out:

1. In a way of gifts; eminent gifts are not beſtowed on all in the viſible Church.

2. In a way of grace, either common or ſpecial. The common is called grace, becauſe

1. It is given freely, *Heb.*6.4,5.

2. Becauſe to the elect it is an antecedent preparation to true grace; it is called common in regard of the cauſe, Gods patience, not his ſpecial love, and the object, the bad as well as good, but Gods ſpecial grace is meant, Acts 2. becauſe he promiſeth to give the Spirit ſo as to dwell in them and guide them. Beſides, if all have receiv'd grace to convert if they will, then free will and not free grace would have the honour of converſion. See *Jer.*31.3. 1 *Cor.*4.7.

2. This would aboliſh the neceſſity of regenerating grace, *Epheſ.*2.5.

The

The first object of faith is not to believe that Christ died for us, but that there is salvation in no other, Acts 4.12. To believe that Christ died for me is one of the heights of Religion, *Rom.*8.33. *Gal.*2.20. Faith is grounded on the Word, assurance on experience. A wicked man going on in sin is not bound to believe that Christ died for him. Adams disobedience is general and universal, not in power alone, but in act too, it maketh all sinners. The obedience of Christ hath a potential universality, and is sufficient to make all righteous, but actually it justifies the faithfull only. Dr Hampton on *Rom.*5.19.

They are grosely mistaken, that will make Jesus Christ to die for all, so as to make them salvables, if they will, and yet cannot say that either God hath given Christ to all, or given all to Christ; or that the Spirit of God will apply that redemption to all. There is an adequation or commensuration betwixt the three Persons in the Trinity, and their workings for the salvation of Saints, 1 Pet. 1. 2. Dr Hill on Ephes. 4. 15. See Mr Gillesp. Miscel. cap. 2.

Every man is bound upon pain of damnation to believe in Christ according to the first degree of faith, John 3.18. that is, by a true and lively assent to believe, That Jesus is the Saviour of all that truly believe in him, and having this faith thou art bound to believe that he is thy Saviour, that he died for thy sins, and rose again for thy justification; but every individual person is not bound to believe that Christ died for him, for then the greater part of men should be bound to believe untruths, so some answer it.

Others say, that all generally have the offer of Christ to whom the Gospel is preached, Acts 13.38,39. yet Christ died not alike for all, as the Arminians hold, but for the Elect more especially, so as not only to save them if they believe, but also that they may believe, and so be saved, John 17.2,6,9. Acts 13.48. *Phil.*1.29. Vide Davenant. Dissertat. de morte Christi. Mori pro aliquo, propriè est, morte sua aliquem à morte liberare, seu mori alicujus loco, ut ipse vivat, 2 Sam. 18.33. Now after his death follow two things more for his further humbling, viz. his burial, and his descending into hell.

For his burial, the Scripture is plain in it, *Mat.*27.59,60. Luke 23.53. and there are good reasons for it:

This was so clear, as that there was an order of Knighthood of the Sepulchre; so at this day the Turk maketh a great commodity for letting travellers to go in and see the Sepulchre Ester. A West-Indian King having been well wrought upon for his conversion to the Christian Religion, and having digested the former Articles, when he came to that, He was crucified, dead and buried, he had no longer patience, but said, If your God be dead and buried, leave me to my old god the Sun, for the Sun will not die.

1. To fulfill the Scripture, *Isa.*53.9.

2. To shew that he was truly dead; for none but those that are dead use to be buried, and Pilate would not grant that he should be buried, untill by diligent search he found that Christ was dead.

3. To bury sin, *Rom.*6.4.

4. That his resurrection might be the more evident, to which the manner of his burial belonged; for therefore was he laid in a new sepulchre, in which none yet ever lay, least they should say, that he rose again not by his own vertue, but by the touch of some other there buried, 2 Kings 13.21.

5. To sanctifie our burial, and sweeten the grave to us.

6. That he might conquer death in his strongest hold, Job 17.13.

It was an honour to be buried of so worthy a man, and with such store of ointment

Mark 15.46. John 19.39.

Isa. 53.8. He was taken from prison and from judgment. His prison was the grave, and he died under a judgement, that is, a sentence of condemnation. The Angel was sent as a publick Minister of justice to roll away the stone, and let the prisoner go, when the debt was paid.

ment, but to be put prisoner into the dungeon of death the grave, and to seem to be swallowed up of death by giving so farre way unto it, that it might also bear him as it were captive into its strongest hold, this was an abasement. Had our Saviour rose again so soon as the souldier had run him through the midriff with a spear; or so soon as Joseph had taken him down from the Crosse, and then shewed himself in glory in an instant, all his enemies would have been dismayed, and he should have put them to confusion; but in tarrying so long afore he rose, till he might be laid in a Tomb, as other dead men are, he even yeelded himself, as it were, for a space to the flouts of his enemies, this was to abase him yet lower than dying.

[k] Hunc Articulum Theologorum crucem non immeritò nuncupare possumus, adeo illos torquet & vexat. Kara Δόξαν vis ἅδου descendit ad inferos vel ad infernum. This is the only Article (say some) which proves the immortality of the soul. The Question amongst us is, Whether Christ descended locally in soul into the Hell of the damned, or virtually by the power of his God-head? Some are as unwilling to have Christ descend into Hell, as to go thither themselves, and in a dangerous Brachygraphy write the Creed so short, that without the commission of an Index expurgatorius, they quite leave out the Article of the descent. Dr Holy-day on 1 *Cor.*15.20.

Now for Christs descending into Hell, there is a deal of quarrelling about it[k], insomuch that one saith, It is a kind of descent into Hell to read the controversies about it. This Article is grounded on most evident words of Scripture, *Psal.*16.10. Acts 2.25. S^t Austin might justly say, Quis ergo nisi infidelis negaverit fuisse apud Inferos Christum? And all men agee in this (as *Bellarmine de Christo l.*4.*c.*6.hath well observed) that Christ some way descended into Hell; but the Question (saith he) is altogether about the exposition of this Article, for the whole difficulty lieth in the word Hell.

The word Scheol is taken four wayes in Scripture:

1. For the grave, Psalm 16.10.
2. For the place of the damned, Luke 16.23.
3. For the torments of Hell, 1 Samuel 2.6.
4. For extream humiliation or abasement, Esay 14.15.

[l] Tom. 2. *part.*1. M^r Perkins following Bobius on the Augustane Confession in this Article (as he doth much on the whole Creed) mentions four several expositions, but in stead of this last, he hath another, that Christ was held captive in the grave, and lay in bondage under death for the space of three dayes. *Altingius Problem. Theol. part.*1. *prob.*44. much magnifies this Interpretation, as true, pious and agreeable to the Creed, and approved of by great Divines, Calvin, Beza, Danæus, Ursin, Paræus, and by publick Confessions of the Church.

In like manner (saith[l] Altingius) to descend into Hell is taken four wayes:

1. To be buried, *Gen.*42.38.
2. To come into the place of the damned, Numb. 16.33.
3. To feel the torments of Hell, 1 Samuel 2.6.
4. Extreamly to be abased, *Matth.*11.23.

I shall rehearse four several expositions of this Article, and deliver my judgment at last.

First, Some interpret it of the inward sorrows of Christs soul, which were very great, as the Scripture testifieth, Mark 14.33,34. and as appears by Christs prayer thrice repeated to his Father, that the cup might passe from him, by his agony and bloudy sweat, Luke 22.24. by his words uttered upon the crosse; and lastly, by that testimony of the Apostle, *Heb.*5.7. The word Hell is often put Metaphorically for great and grievous troubles here suffered, Psalm 18.5. & 116.3. Psalm 86.13. Jonah 2.2. But this exposition can in no wise stand with the order and series of the Creed, for since there is mention made of Christs descent into Hell after his death and burial, it cannot be understood of that which happened before his death.

Vide Sandford de Descensu Christi ad Inferos.

They which expound this Article thus, give this reason thereof: The former words, Was crucified, dead and buried, do contain (say they) the outward sufferings of Christ.

Christ. Now because he suffered not only outwardly in body, but also inwardly in soul; therefore these words may be so interpreted. But this reason is invalid; for neither is it true, that by the first words only bodily torments are expressed, but those of the soul also are meant; for Christ was wounded for our transgressions, bore our iniquities, and made his soul an offering for sin. And by the words of David and Peter (whence this Article hath its foundation and original) it is most evident that these words ought to be understood of that which Christ suffered after death. For the word Hell is not to be taken otherwise in the Creed than in those places of Scripture whence the Creed is taken; but it is manifest to any one that is not altogether blind, that David and Peter speak of that which happened to Christ after his death.

Secondly, Others say, that Christ after his Passion upon the Crosse, did really and locally descend into the place of the damned.

Many of the Ancient Fathers, the Papists, some Lutherans and Protestants follow this Exposition. One Reverend Divine, now with God, held that Christ descended locally into Hell to suffer in his soul the miseries of the damned, and urged for his opinion Ephes. 4.9. where the Apostle (saith he) makes Christ descending into the lowest parts of the earth in such a kind of suffering in the local Hell, opposite to his ascending farre above all Heaven, as the highest degree of advancement and lowest degree of abasement that could befall a creature. Locus hic totalem Christi ad inferos descensum urgentissimè probare videtur. Defensio Fidei Doctoris Elis Artic. 3. Mr Nicholson on the Creed, Part. 2. Serm. 20. so interprets it. And Acts 2.24,31. to take soul (said he) there for the dead corpse is so hard a kind of phrase, that howsoever it must be yeelded to in some places where the circumstances of the place, and the thing spoken of compelleth, yet so to take it in a place where there is no such necessity, seemeth unreasonable. The literal Text therefore here (saith he) is agreeable to those Texts which speak of Christs sufferings, He made his soul a Sacrifice for sinne, which could not be so well done any way, as by giving it to suffer the fulnesse of Gods wrath in the place of extreamest torment, which might seem to be signified by burning the Sin-offering after it was killed *, to shew that not alone death was suffered by our Saviour, but also the torments of Hell; and the words of m David (saith he) Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, may very fitly import so much, when he speaks of it as of a strange thing that a soul should be in Hell, and not left there. And Peter, Act. 2.24. telling us, that God did loose the pains of death, might seem to import so much, seeing the pains of death may well be interpreted, those pains which follow after death, and in regard of which to those that know what death is, death is only painfull; otherwise from the pains of natural death, Christ was no more freed, neither were they more looosed from him than from every other man, seeing every man sees an end of his outward torments by dying. Paul also might mean this in mentioning of a cursed death, and saying, He did bear the curse for us. The greatest part of the curse of the Law is, To be cast into the place of the damned, and into their torments, though not into the sinfull things that accompany their torments. David as a figure of Christ, saith in one Psalm, Thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell. Now the lowest hell is not the grave, but the infernal pit, which is farre lower than the grave. This (saith the same worthy Divine) commends Gods Justice and Mercy, and Christs love, and shews the abominableness and vileness of our Vide Bellarm. de Christ. l. 4. c. 8. 12. Some hold that Christ went to the place of the damned, and there preached, and that as many as believed in him, and were converted, were thence delivered. Bellarm. de Christ. lib. 3. cap. 16. Some say he descended into hell, that there he might shew himself a conquerour, and might triumph over the Devil, as it were, in his own Kingdome. See Bish. Bilsons Redemption of Mankind. Doct. Prid. Serm. Montac. Orig. Eccles. Tom. prior part. posteriora, pag. 442, 443, 444.

But the descent into Hell which the Creed expresseth, and the Scripture intimates did belong to his humiliation, Phil. 2. 8. his triumphal descent would rather have been an exaltation. * The Paschal Lamb was to be not alone killed, but rosted after. m Psal. 16.10. Christus secundum animam post ejus (migrationem, verè & localiter detrusus est in carcerem infernalem; ut exterratio pro nobis factus, per inenarrabiles inferorum animæ suæ cruciatus, nostras animas liberavit ab æternis angoribus & cruciatibus inferni, immunes præstaret: Lavater. de Descensu, &c. Sandford. de Descensu Christi ad Infer. l. 4. Hoc idem censet & Latimerus noster in concione quadam quæ inter alias ejusdem extat. Some Papists say that Christ went not down to Hell, but to the upper skirts and brims of it, where the Fathers were flouting, to fetch them thence: but the Fathers were not there, but were saved by the same faith we are, Acts 15.11. Vide Sandford. de Descensu Christi ad Inferos, l. 2. p. 16. usque ad 36. & l. 4. p. 83, 84, &c. Gal. 3.13. Psal. 86.13. See Psal. 99.1,2.

sins, more than any thing else could do. All this notwithstanding, others hold, That Christs local descent into hell is an unwarrantable conceit, and contrary to the word of truth and sound reason. Vide Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad inferos, l. 3. p. 36, &c.

Going into prison was no part of the debt. Some of the Papists say, he went not locally to hell. Christ went not down locally to hell, quoad substantialem præsentiam, saith Aquinas. And though Bellarmine in his controversies urged his local descent, in his Book of Recognitions, he retracts it.

If Christ went to hell to endure those torments that we might not endure them, then he ought to have descended thither, both in soul and body, since both our bodies and souls must have suffered those torments but for Christ.

Neither in the Creed nor Scriptures, where mention is made of hell with relation to Christ, is the word gehenna used, which is always restrained to the hell of the damned; but ᾅδης, which word designs the state of the dead in general, and is used of all with no difference.

For that place Ephes. 4. 9. By the lower parts of the earth Gualter understands the earth in which men live, where Christ exercised his divine power. See 1 Tim. 3. 16. Others interpret it of the grave, which is called the heart of the earth, Matth. 12. 20. See my Annotat. Act. 2. 27. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, id est, me, frequens Hebraismus, non relinquet me vita fub regno mortis. Grotius. The soul is used by a Synecdoche often in the Psalmes (whence this place is taken) for me, Psal. 7. 2, 4. & 3. 2. & 11. 1. & 17. 3. See vers. 11. of this Chapter. By hell is signified the state of the dead, though they were godly and in joy. See Gen. 37. 35. Psalm 6. 5. The same is said twice in Acts 2. after the Peculiar manner, and the latter words expound the former. Christ suffered not the pains of hell in specie or kind, that is, either in kind or place; but some think that he suffered pains and punishments conformable and answerable to them in extremity, that only excepted which is sin, or consequent upon the inherence and eternity of the sin of such as are punished in hell. Dr. Field of the Church, l. 5. c. 17. So also Mr Perkins. Some say the torments of hell are, 1. Essential, the wrath of God upon the soul, and that Christ underwent this. 2. Accidental, as despair, blasphemy, these he suffered not. The suffering of Gods wrath includeth two things: 1. A privation in regard of sense of all the favour of God. 2. An enduring in regard of sense of all the anger of God. These two things did Christ endure. He lost the apprehension of Gods favour, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? 2. He suffered the full sense of the wrath of God. Whatsoever believers should have suffered for their sins, whether it be in the losse of the sense of Gods love, Rev. 19. 15. or in the sensible feeling of the wrath and divine displeasure of Almighty God; all that Christ suffered, so far as can be suffered without sin, Zech. 13. 7. Mr Hookers Gift of Glib on Tit. 2. 14. Therein eight things in hell pains which by no means Christs soul might suffer, Darknesse destruction, death, and fire of hell, remorse, rejection, malediction, and desperation of the damned. B. Bilsons Redemption of Mankind by the death and blood of Christ, p. 49, 50, 51, 52, 53. Vide Sanfordum de Descens. Christi ad Inferos, l. 3. p. 152. ad 170. Bilson saith the word ᾅδης by which St Luke Act. 2. expresseth Davids meaning, doth always note Hell in the New Testament, pag. 170, 171. But Sandford opposeth this, de Descensu Christi ad Inferos, pag 40, &c. See Mr Nicholsons Exposition of the Creed, part 2. Sermon 17. that Christ suffered hell torments.

In all the New Testament it occurres but once, Luke 16. 23. where necessarily it signifies the hell of the damned; and yet not there from the force and propriety of the word (for it is of larger extent) but from the circumstances which are there used. For as Bucer learnedly notes, the rich man is not simply said to be ἐν ᾅδῃ, that is, in inferno, sed in gehennâ, because in torments and in flame.

2. The Evangelists have professedly delivered to us the History of our Saviour even to his Ascension, neither yet have they made even the least mention of this his descent into hell, which they would never surely have omitted, if they had judged it a thing necessary to salvation. Moreover, blessed Luke in the Preface of his Gospel, tells Theophilus, That he having had perfect understanding of all things from the first, would write to him in order, that he might know the certainty of those things wherein he had been instructed, ad verbum, in which he had been catechized, but of descent, ne quid quidem, whence it appears that it was no part of the Catechism which Theophilus learnt and certainly knew.

3. Blessed Paul, 1 Cor. 15. 1, 2, 3, 4. where he rehearseth certain chief heads of the Gospel, which he had preached to the Corinthians, rehearseth the Death, Burial and Resurrection of Christ, but not this descent into hell, yet that was a fit place to have rehearsed it in, if he had preached any such thing. Therefore it is manifest enough that he preached it not, nor is it necessary to be known, he affirmeth to the Corinthians that which he preached would suffice them to salvation, if they were not wanting to themselves.

4. If

4. If Christ did goe into the place of the damned, then either in soul or in body, or in his God-head. But his God-head could not descend, because it is every where; and his body was in the grave till the third day; and as for his soul it went not to hell, but presently after his death it went to Paradise, that is, the third Heaven, a place of joy and happinesse, Luke 23. [n] 43. which words of Christ must be understood of his manhood, or soul; and not of his God-head.

[n] Nec valet ἀφαιρεθέντος Smalcii à priscis emendicatum. Ego dico tibi hodiè (ubi ponatur distinctio) & eris mecum in Paradiso, nempe post diem Judicii. Nam evertit hoc, 1. Lectio Syriaca. Ego dico tibi, quia hodiè eris mecum in Paradiso. Et 2 Hodiè, illud salvatoris respondet, quando latronis, &c. Dr Prid. Fascic. controvers. Theol. c. 4. de Eccles. Hæc elusio est (inquit Suarez) non interpretatio, cùm dicat Christus, petitionem latronis implendam esse, eo ipso die. Sandford. de Descens. Christ ad Inferos.

Some think by Paradise no certain place is designed, but that is Paradise where-ever Christ is, and whersoever God may be seen; because therefore the soul of the thief was to follow Christ, and to see God, it is said to be with him in Paradise.

Many modern Interpreters (saith Sandford de Descensu Christi ad Inferos, l. 3. p. 39) much favour this opinion, and cite Austin and Beda as Authors of it, Quam verè ipsi viderint. He saith he cannot approve this interpretation whosoever is the Author of it; for Christ spake of that Paradise where then he was not. But if Paradise be nothing but the place whence God was seen, when the thief hung on the Crosse he was in Paradise. Paradise is put often for Heaven in the New Testament, 2 Cor. 2. 4. Rev. 2. 7.

There is an analogy between the first and second Adam. The first Adam was cast out of Paradise the same day he sinned, therefore the second Adam did enter into Heaven the same day he made satisfaction.

Some say, that to descend into hell is a popular kind of speech which sprung from the opinion that was vulgarly conceived of the receptacle of the souls under the earth. As we use to say commonly, that the Sun is under a cloud, because it is a vulgar form of speech, and yet it is far enough from our meaning for all that, to imagine the cloud to be indeed higher than the Sun.

Thirdly, Some almost confound this Article with Christs burial, and make one sense of both, because those words Sheol, Hades, Infernus, often in Scripture note the grave.

Both many Ancient and Modern Divines have taken Christs descent into hell in that sense. This seems to some to be the reason wherefore the Nicene Creed mentions only Christs burial and no descent into hell; and Athanasius his Creed, his descending into hell without speaking a word of his burial. Neither Irenæus, Augustine, Tertullian nor Origen, when they recite the rule of faith, mention Christs descent into hell. Vide Rivet. Cathol. Orthod.

But this seems not so probable an interpretation,

1. Because He was buried goes next before these words, neither can these be added exegetically, because they are obscurer than the former.

2. It is not likely that in so succinct and short a Creed the same Article should be twice put, or the same thing twice said by changing the words. Vid. Chamier. contract. à Spanh Tom. 2. l. 5. c. 3. & Calv. Instit. l. 2. c. 16. Sect. 8, 9, 10. & Bellarm. de Christo, l. 4. c. 14.

Fourthly, Some interpret this Article of Christs descending into hell, by his going to the dead, and for a time (viz. even to the Resurrection) continuing in the state, and under the dominion of death; and this seems to be the most genuine exposition of all, for it keeps both the propriety of the words, and the distinction of the Articles, and it is drawn from Peters words; nor is this opinion urged with any great difficulty. Hell signifieth the state of the dead, the condition of those that are departed this life, common to good and bad, the being out of this Land of the living, when the soul and body are separated, and do no more walk upon the earth to be seen of men, and converse with them.

Of the Hebrew word Sheol, and the Greek ἅιδης. See my Hebrew and Greek Critica.

The Hebrew, Greek and Latine words for hell, both in the Scripture and other Authours are used for the state of the dead, Psalm 89.47,48. Psalm 40.3. Esay 38.18,19. 1 *Cor.*15.55. Peters words, Acts 2.24. sufficiently confirm this exposition. The whole state of the dead is called a descent, because although some of the dead ascend into Heaven, yet all which are buried descend into the earth, whence from the first condition of the descent of carkasses the whole other state of the dead is called a descent. To descend often in the Acts of the Apostles noteth not a descent from a higher place into a lower, but only a departure from one place into another. Sometimes it signifieth to passe from a lower place to a higher. See Jud. 11.37. & 15.11. So Juvenal,

——Præcordia pressit
Ille senis, tremulúmque caput descendere jussit
In Cœlum.

Infernus ab inferendo deducitur, eò quod mortui efferantur domo & humo inferantur. Sanfordus de Descensu Christi ad inferos, p. 68. Vide plura ibid. The Vulgar renders it Abire, Act.13.4. Venire, Act.18.5. & 27. 5. Devenire, Act. 9. 32 Supervenire, Act.11.27. & 27.10.

Mr Nicholson in his Exposition of the Creed, part 2. Serm. 20. much opposeth this Interpretation. He saith, three Rules are exactly to be observed in the exposition of these words:

1. Distinction of matter.
2. Consequence of order.
3. Propriety of words.

Now this Exposition is contrary to all three. For it is a superfluous, disorderly and ænigmatical iteration. Superfluous, for to die is to come under the common state and condition of the dead. 2. Disorderly, for 'twas no place to mention the power and dominion of death after his burial. 3. Ænigmatical, obscure and improper; for it can not be properly asserted that Christ was under the dominion of death. He saith, Christ did really descend in soul into the place of the damned, and that this sense is most literal, natural and agreeable to the words, no way liable to any Tautology, nor repugnant to the Analogy of faith, consorting with the plain words of Scripture, and testimonies of the ancient Fathers, and the most judicious Divines of later times.

Chap. VII.

Of CHRISTS Exaltation.

Quemadmodum victoris triumphus duplex esse solet, unus quidem in ipso campo, quo hostes prosternit, alter in civitate regia, quo de victoria ante parta, amplissimam gloriæ, affluentiæ, dominationisque mercedem capit: ita & Christus triumphavit dupliciter, primò quidem in ipsa cruce ubi hostes devicit, deinde verò in Resurrectione Ascensioneque: ubi hujusce victoriæ suæ luculentum fructum adeptus est. Sanfordus de Descensu Christi ad inferos, lib. 4.

Hitherto of Christs humiliation. The first of these kind of actions he did to fulfill his great Offices in his Person consisting of two Natures God-head and Man-hood.

I proceed to the second kind of actions needfull to the same purpose. For if Christ had not overcome his humiliation, but had been overcome of it, then had he not been a perfect Saviour, then had he not been the Son of God, nor the King of Israel, for a King, Lord and God must conquer. Now this Glorification is the Exaltation of Christ is that glorious or happy estate which Christ entered after he had wrought the work of our Redemption upon the Crosse. Master Perkins on the Creed. Philip. 2. 4. Hebrews 2.7. 1 Pet. 1. 11.

the raising of himself to a most high and honourable estate, for so it is said, He was to suffer, and to enter into his glory, that is, that glory which God had appointed for him, and he by submitting himself to such meanness for Gods honours sake, fully deserved for himself and all his members with him. Therefore the Apostle saith, God hath greatly exalted him; for this is the mighty one upon whom God hath laid strength, and he was to divide the spoil with the mighty, according to Isaiahs Prophecy. Now this Glorification of our Saviour (say some) hath three [a] degrees, Resurrection, Ascension, sitting at the right hand of the Father. Four degrees, say Estey and others, of which two are past, viz. his Resurrection and Ascension, one is present, viz. his sitting at Gods right hand, the last is to come, viz. his judging of all the world.

For his Resurrection, that is the first degree of his Glory; death had separated his soul from his body, and carried his body for a time prisoner unto the Sepulchre, but it was impossible he should be held of it, saith the Apostle; and therefore God having loosed the sorrows of death did raise him up again no more to return to corruption.

Of this Resurrection we have large proof in the Scriptures, both of the Old and New Testament, the Old Psalm 16.10. Isa. 53.10.

In the New each of the Evangelists insisteth upon the narration of it, and the Apostles in their Epistles do frequently mention and affirm it, and in their several Sermons declare and publish it unto all the people. See 1 Pet. 1.3. Rom. 10.9. 1 Cor. 15.4. Matth. 28.1. describes it thus, In the end of the Sabbath, that is, the Jewish Sabbath, which was Saturday, as it began towards the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalen, and the other Mary to see the Sepulchre, and behold there was a great earthquake: and Mark thus, Chap. 16.2. Early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the Sepulchre at the rising of the Sunne. And Luke thus, Chap. 24. 1. Now upon the first day of the weeke very early in the morning they came unto the Sepulchre bringing the spices which they had prepared. John thus, Chap. 26. 1. And the first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalen early when it was yet dark unto the Sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the Sepulchre. The women when it was very early upon our Lords day in the morning came out of the City, and by that time the Sunne was rising they came to the very Sepulchre and found Christ risen before: For so soon as the morning did peep, and the first day of the week began to shew it self, he reduced his soul unto his body, and raised it up, the Angel at the same time rolling away the stone, and astonishing the keepers, and before the women could come into the Sepulchre he was departed thence. So he was part of three nights and three dayes in the grave, and rose the third day according to that he had foretold. He died upon Friday about three of the clock, and was buried that even, and lay in the grave that part of Friday, taking the day for the natural day. All Saturday he lay in the grave the night and the day. The first day of the week in the morning he lay but a very short space, and in the very beginning of it rose, that it might appear he lay there not out of necessity, but because he thought it fit to stay so long there to make it appear that he was truly dead. The women came and sought him, but were inform'd by the Angels that he was risen, yet could not make

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 13.20 Sect. 164. The Resurrection of Christ is affirmed by the Creeds Apostolical, Nicene, Athanasian, by the confession of the Churches, as Mr Rogers shews in his English Creed.

It is not for nought that the Gospels every one of them are so large in the Demonstration of the truth of Christs Resurrection, by variety of circumstances, and variety of apparitions, and that the Acts are written in effect for no other end, as Chrysostome well observes (Hom. 1.) then to prove Christs Resurrection by his powerfull sending of the holy Ghost, by his powerfull endowing them with gifts, miracles, with gifts of more than man-like courage and fortitude, to preach stoutly the Gospel, notwithstanding all opposition, by the glorious successe likewise in their preaching; these are not the works of one that lieth in the power of death. Garbuts Demonstrat. of the Resurrection of Christ, pag. 7, 8. Sometimes Christ is said to raise himself, as John 10. 18. Sometimes his raising is ascribed to God the Father, Heb 13. 20. as it was an act of power, so he raised himself; as it was an act of authority, so he was raised by the Father. Rose] that is, his body rose, the Godhead could not, the soul did not. From the dead] that is, out of the grave. Estey.

the Apoſtles believe it. This Peter did preach Acts 2. this Paul preached, Acts 13. This Paul inculcateth 1 Cor. 15. and Peter in his Epiſtle alſo. It is ſo neceſſary a point of our Chriſtian Faith, that without it all our Faith is vain, and falleth to the ground David fore-told it in all the parts of it, as Peter interprets him, Acts 2. His ſoul was not left in hell, nor did his body ſee corruption, that is, putrifie at all. A man conſiſts of two parts, a ſoul and a body; there can be no Reſurrection after the ſeparating of theſe two, unleſſe the ſoul be re-united to the body again, and both lifted up out of the ſtate of death, therefore did the God-head to whom both ſoul and body were united, reſtore the ſoul to the body again, preſerving it from putrifaction, that it might be a fit dwelling place for the ſoul, and ſo having joyned them together, the body roſe and went abroad, and ſhew'd it ſelf to the Apoſtles, no longer a weak, feeble, mortal and corruptible body, but a glorious, impaſſible, incorruptible and moſt beautifull body; for it loſt all its imperfections in the grave. And this Reſurrection fell upon the third day after his death, as himſelf ſaid, John 2. 18. the third day he ſhould riſe. The day began as we ordinarily account, howſoever perhaps by ſpecial inſtitution the Sabbaths may be accounted to have begun otherwiſe, at the peep of the morning, when men begin to ſtirre about buſineſſe, then did Chriſt ſtirre alſo; he was to lie no longer than the firſt day of the week, becauſe he intended to challenge that day to himſelf to be the Lords-day, and the Chriſtian Sabbath, whence it came in proceſſe of time to have that name; before the third day he was not to riſe, that he might ſhew himſelf truly dead, and ſtay a ſufficient while under the arreſt of death for the accompliſhment of our ſatisfaction. Now this Reſurrection was performed by the power of his Deity; for all the while that he continued dead, his ſoul and body were both united to the God-head, as it were a ſword pulled out of the ſcabberd, which the man holdeth ſtill one in one hand, the other in the other, and ſo can eaſily put the ſame together again. For the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 1, 4. He was declared to be the Sonne of God with power according to the Spirit of ſanctification by the reſurrection of the dead, that is, by that his Reſurrection, which is virtually the Reſurrection of all, ſeeing by vertue thereof all his people riſe to glory. Therefore is he termed, The firſt fruits of them that die, 1 Cor. 5, 16. And the firſt begotten from the dead, Col. 1. 18. becauſe by vertue of his Reſurrection, the Saints riſe to glory, and enjoy from him the prerogative of overcoming death, as the firſt fruits ſanctifie the lump, and as the firſt-born hath the priviledge above all the children. In time ſome roſe before him, but in vertue none, for all that roſe did riſe by the efficacy and merit of him, and his riſing again.

Reſurrectio Chriſti fuit totius humanæ naturæ, quæ antea per mortem ceciderat. Reſpectu animæ fuit ab inferis, vel à ſtatu & Dominio mortis, cui anima, pronæ pars erat humanæ naturæ, fuit ſubjecta. Reſpectu corporis fuit à mortuis & ſepulchro. Ames. Medul. Theol. l. 1. c. 23.

It was the cuſtome of the primitive Chriſtians when they met one another, to utter theſe words, Chriſtus reſurrexit, Chriſt is riſen. Matth. 16. 21. & 20. 19. See Luke 24. 21. 1 Cor. 15. 4.

There be at this day who affirm, That Chriſts body is in the Sunne, an old hereſie of the Manichees, who affirmed, That Chriſt in his Aſcenſion left his body in the Sunne, taking their ground for it from Pſal. 19. 5. He ſet his tabernacle in the Sunne. That is a poor ſhift of the Polonians in their Catechiſme to avoid that Text, John 2. 19. for Chriſts raiſing himſelf from the dead, they ſay, Græca vox ἐγερῶ, quæ eſt reddita Latinè excitabo poteſt reddi erigam; Unde ſenſus erit, Chriſtum a Deo excitatum ex mortuis, ſuum corpus erexiſſe. Beza doth render it erigam, as the Vulgar excitabo, but the ſenſe is the ſame.

And this Reſurrection was neceſſary for divers purpoſes:

1. To make way for his farther Glorification, that he might reign as Lord of Lords, and King of Kings; for he could not have poſſeſſed fulneſſe of Glory had he been ſtill in the Sepulchre. The ſoul indeed might have been perfectly glorified, but whole Chriſt could not have been fully glorified, if the body had not riſen to partake of the glory of Heaven with the ſoul. Now ſeeing the body was helpfull to, and in the performance of the work of Redemption, ſuffering great abaſement, it was not equal that it ſhould be any longer deprived of the reward when once Juſtice was fully ſatisfied upon it.

It was neceſſary alſo to fulfill the Prophecies and Types that went before. Davids Prophecy Peter preſſeth, Thou wilt not ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption. The type of Jonah our Saviour telleth of, Matth. 12. 40. and both were to be accompliſhed.

Laſtly,

Lastly, It was necessary for the confirmation of our Faith, that we might be assured he was the Son of God, and had perfectly accomplished this great work he undertook, therefore Paul saith, *Rom.*4.25. That he rose again for our Justification; that is, to declare and prove that he had perfectly fulfilled all that was necessary to satisfie for our sins, and to procure for us, as the Apostle calleth it everlasting righteousnesse. When the Surety is apprehended for the Debtor, there is no getting out of the Creditors hand, till he have discharged the whole debt; therefore when the Surety gets out of prison and is at large, the debt is fully satisfied; so it is in this case, so that we could not have rested upon him as a full and perfect Saviour, if he had not risen, but now our faith doth evidently acknowledge him to be a perfect Saviour, and hath full assurance to ground upon, since in him salvation is to be had. And for the end and use of this Resurrection, it was to quicken our soul, first that we might rise to newnesse of life, as the Apostle St Peter saith, and strength to quicken our mortal bodies too, 1 *Pet.*4.5. that the Head being risen the members might rise with him.

The Philosophers scoffed at it, the Sadducees denied it, the Jews persecuted those which asserted it. See *Matth.*28.13. The Sadduce shall arise in that body in which he denied the resurrection of the body; and with his bodily eyes see the errour of his soul. Dr Holyday on 1 *Cor.*15.20.

The Resurrection of Christ should work on us so that we should live to him, 2 *Cor.*5.15. *Ephes.*1.19,20. and that four wayes.

From the knowledge of his Resurrection we should be assured

1. That the Lord will raise the Church or us out of our lowest afflictions, *Hos.*6.2. *Isa.*26.19. *Ezek.*37.14. and that should ingage us to improve all our power for him.

2. That Christ hath likewise power to raise up our soules to spirituall life as our first rising is by the life of Christ, as he recovered his life, so the increase of it is by the improvement of his Resurrection by Faith, *Phil.*3.10. *Rom.*6.4,5.

3. It assures us of the Resurrection of our bodies, *Rom.*8.11. 1 *Cor.*15. John 11.24.

4. Of an inheritance and glorious estate, 1 *Pet.*1.3,4.

Now you have the Doctrine of the Resurrection, as the Scriptures deliver the same.

The second Degree of Christs Glorification is his Ascension, which was a change of place, a transferring of his glorified body and soul into the upper Region of the world out of this lower room thereof. A body cannot be in more places than one, because it is circumscriptible, and our Saviours body though glorified, retaineth yet still the nature of a body, though it have laid aside all the natural imperfections of a body; and therefore our Saviours body could of it self move upward, because it was rid of that grosse weightinesse which doth always accompany a natural compound body. Now this Ascension of our Saviour is in Scripture often related, two of the Evangelists tell of it, and St Luke again in the Acts of the Apostles. St Mark hath it thus, Chap. 16.19. He was received up into Heaven. St Luke thus, *Chap.*24.51. He was parted from them, and caught up into Heaven. Again in Acts 1.9,10 11. While he spake thus he was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of their sight. Now this Ascension befell fourty dayes Christ is the fountain of our supernaturall life, John 14.19.

We should labour to know Christs Resurrection, not onely historically and dogmatically, but experimentally, Phil.3.19. See Col.3.1. Rom.6.4.

Christ ascended,

1. To prepare a place for us, John 14.4.

2. To send down the holy Ghost into the hearts of his servants,

4. To make

John 16.7. & 7.39. Ephes.4.8. 3. To triumph over Sinne, Death, Hell, the Devil, Ephes.4.8. Intercession for us, Rom.8.34. But the principall cause of his lifting up was the power of the Deity, Act. 2.33. & 5.31. Why was he taken up in a cloud? The Law was given in a cloud; there was a cloud in the Tabernacle and Temple, and to Christ was taken up in a cloud, to shew, that we should not be inquisitive into that which God would have kept secret. Aquinas saith, That as he was fourty hours in the grave to shew the truth of his Passion; so he ascended fourty dayes after his Resurrection, to shew the truth of his Resurrection. He ascended from the Mount of Olives, Act.1.12. near which he had his bitter Agony in the Garden, Luke 22.39. that thence he might also take the rise of his Exaltation. But that the print of his feet should be there seen to this day whence he ascended, we leave that to the Papists to believe if they be so sottish. See Lithgows nineteen yeares Travel, part. 6. pag. 283. And Doctor Heylins Summe of Christian Theology, Artic. 7. pag. 268.

after his Resurrection, Acts 1. 3. when he had conversed with them, and informed them of all things necessary for their Apostolical function, both that he might thus confer with them of all such necessary things, and that by often shewing himself he might give sufficient and undeniable proof of his Resurrection. And after this was done S. Luke telleth how an Angel spake to them about it, and told them of his returning again, and that the Heavens should contain him till the time appointed.

Thus did he fulfill the Prophecy that went before concerning this matter, for David had said long before, Psalm 68. 18. Thou hast ascended up on high, thou hast led captivity captive, thou hast given gifts unto men. This was also typed by the High-priests entring into the most holy place upon the atonement day after the Sacrifice of expiation offered, therefore Christ the true High-priest entered into the holy place not made with hands, even into very Heaven, there to appear before God for us, Heb. 6. 20. & 7. 26. & 8. 4. Enochs translation, Josephs exaltation after his imprisonment; Eliahs carrying up to Heaven in a fiery chariot, and Solomons crowning were also types of Christs Ascension. The cause of his ascending was, because the earth was no fit place for a person so glorious to abide in, for either he must shew forth this glory of his, and then men could not have endured to converse with him: or else he must not shew it forth, and then he had depriued himself of his deserved glory. Wherefore it was necessary that he should betake himself to a place and company capable of that glory, even into the highest Heavens, where he might enjoy and declare that infinite great glory which his Father was to bestow upon him for a reward of his sufferings. And this his Ascension was even a taking possession of that glorious estate for us, that we might be fully assured of his drawing us his members after him, that at last in due time we might be where he is to behold his glory; and therefore he told his Disciples, That he went to prepare a place for them, and that in the fit season he would return again to take them with him, that head and body might be both together. And in the mean space this his Ascension is become a means of drawing our hearts after him to a longing desire of being with him, that we might set our affections on things above where Christ our Head is. For seeing Christ our Lord did leave earth to go into Heaven, it is evident that earth is a far meaner place, and Heaven a far more excellent. Wherefore it is necessary for us to raise up our hearts to that which is the most happy place and state.

Now the third Degree of his Glorification follows, that is, His sitting down at the right hand of his Father, whereof many Scriptures also make mention, Heb. 10. 12. & 1. 3. & 12. 2. & 8. 1. Ephes. 1. 20. Now this is a figurative kind of speech, and denoteth the high advancement of his humanity next to the Divinity above all other creatures, both in respect of admirable gifts and boundlesse authority. For to be at Gods right hand signifieth a state of excellent glory, as he that is next the King in honour standeth or sitteth at his right hand, Gen. 48. 18. 1 Kings 2. 19. Psalm 45. 9. Matth. 20. 20, 21. This is called, A sitting at the right hand of the Majesty on high, it is the dwelling of the fulnesse of the God-head in him bodily, in that very body of Christ the God-head hath poured forth all sorts of excellencies, as much as a creature is possibly capable of, and he is actually invested with all power in Heaven and Earth. Christ hath a Name above all names farre above all Principalities, and Powers, and Thrones, and Dominions. Where he must abide, till he make all his enemies his footstool. Our Lord Jesus Christ is adorned with more abundance of Wisdome, Power, Goodnesse, Love, Joy, Mercy, Holinesse, and whatsoever qualities tend to make him in whom they are excellent, glorious and happy, than all the creatures of God laid together, so that all the heavenly Army worship and adore him, and cast themselves down at his feet, and are most ready to yeeld him absolute and perfect obedience, knowing him to be preferred by his Father to that Dignity. That so he might receive a most ample reward for that exceeding great abasement to the lower parts of the earth, to which he did voluntarily submit himself for his Fathers glory sake, and that he might become a fit Head and King to his Church, able to guide and rule them at all times, and to subdue all their and his enemies under him and them. *Dan.*2.44. & 7.14,27. Mark 14.62. *Rom.*8.3. *Ephes.*1.21,22.

The fitting of Christ at the right hand of the Father is the highest and supream degree of his Exaltation, wherein he hath received of the Father excellent Glory, Dignity, Power and Rule, and is actually made the Head of his Church, and Lord, and Ruler of all things both in Heaven and Earth.

Mr Paget in the second part of his Meditations of Death, Chapter 2d saith, From every state of Christ, from each Nature, from every Office, and from every act of each Office there is a ground of comfort for the strengthening of faith in the promises of God.

I should now speak of Christs judging the quick and dead at his second coming, which some Divines make the last Degree of his Glory; but there will be a fitter place to handle that elsewhere. I shall therefore in the next place draw some usefull Corollaries from the Glorification of our blessed Saviour.

FIRST, We must labour so seriously to contemplate this unutterable glory of our Head Christ Jesus, till we be translated into the same Image from glory to glory, endeavouring to shew forth the power of his Resurrection and Ascension in rising to newnesse of life, and in ascending up on high in our desires and affections. We must be raised up together with him, and with him sit together in heavenly places. If the Resurrection of Christ have not a powerfull impression on our souls, to make us rise out of the filthy grave and rotten Sepulchre of a wicked life to a holy and godly conversation: If his Ascension and sitting at his Fathers right hand, have not a like powerfull impression upon our souls to raise us up to all heavenlinesse of minde, making us in desire and will, even as it were to ascend after him, and sit there with him; the bare saying, that we believe these Articles, shall little avail to our happinesse. I beseech you therefore, let us all endeavour to make a practical use of these heavenly and supernatural truths which are revealed to us. Christ is risen, say to thy self, why do not I rise with him from all loosnesse, vanity, wickednesse, uncleannesse, injustice and abominable lusts? Christ is ascended and hath taken his place in Heaven, Why do not I cast off all earthly base affections, and lift up my soul and aspire to that high place? We say we love Christ, and that we are his members, let us shew our love to him, and union with him by being thus made conformable to his Resurrection and Ascension. Yea let us long for his appearance, and thirst after the great day, when he shall come to judge the quick and dead. What good wife would not often long for the coming of her absent husband, and for her going to partake with him in his state of glory? This world is a dung-hill, and all the things in it are baser, compared to that estate of Christ, than dirt and dung compared to gold. O let us shew that we know and believe these things by filling our souls with holy and heavenly desires and affections! Contemplate our Lord Jesus Christ rising out of the grave, contemplate his ascending up to his Father; contemplate him sitting at the right hand of his Father; contemplate him coming to Judgement, till these things have banished all love of sinne in thee, all earthlinesse of Spirit, and made thee in some measure like unto him in these things. If the Spirit of grace and glory rest upon us, it will thus glorifie us and raise us up. A Christian man is not glorious, because he hath obtained more outward preferment or wealth, but because he hath obtained a more effectual and working knowledge of Christ his Head, and is made more and more suitable to the spiritual glory of such a Mediatour. Hitherto should our chief desires and endeavours runne. What do we musing, tiring and tormenting our selves in studying earthly things, nay evil and sinfull things? Do these studies

If we have so much benefit by Christs acting and suffering for us on earth, by Christ humbled, what have we by Christ exalted John 16.7. He is present spiritually still with us here, and acts in Heaven also for us.

and cogitations accord with the heavenly Nature, which our blessed Saviour maketh them partakers of, that are ingrafted into him by Faith, and enlivened by the mighty work of his Spirit? In vain do we call our selves Christians, and look to be brought to that glorious estate, whereto he hath already assigned all true Christians, if we do not shew our selves thus in our measure for the present glorified with Christ.

Christ being possessed of glory and happinesse, it should much confirm our hope and expectation of glory, Job 19.25,26,27. John 1.18.

Reasons:

1. Because he is gone before as our Head, and to take possession for us, Heb. 6. 19,20.

2. It shews, That his work of Redemption prospers, and removes all objections. See 1 *Cor.*15.

3. He is a patern to us, his Death, Resurrection and Ascension the cause of ours, John 17.19. Because I live, you live also.

But secondly, Let this thought make us to loath our sinnes, and heartily to lament them when we consider of them, because they offend so great and wonderfull a Person that is so highly advanced over all, and withall so good and glorious, and one that hath done so much for us, and doth so particularly know and observe us and all our actions. That Lord of Lords, and King of Kings, that only blessed Potentate who inhabiteth eternity, who dwelleth in that light which is inaccessible, whom no creature saw nor can see. This eminent Person he seeth us at all times, in all places and companies; he is a witnesse of all our actions that shall be the Judge; he taketh particular and precise notice of our whole carriage. O shall we dare to offend his pure and glorious eyes with things so abominable to him, as those must needs be, for which himself was put to suffer such things as he did suffer before he entred into his glory! Do we not think that Christ hateth sinne with a most perfect hatred, and shall not we strive to conforme our selves to him, and to please him that is so incomparably much greater than all other creatures? Do but think what a one our Lord is, and how displeasing sinne is in his sight, and then it is not possible for us to love it, if we either love our selves or him. And it is a sure truth, that God will sanctifie these Meditations to such, as will exercise themselves therein, to beat down sinne in them, and to work an hatred of it in their souls. Oh that each of us could retire our selves often from the world, and put himself in mind of Christs glory, and say to himself, if I follow voluptuousnesse, and give my self to wantonnesse, drunkennesse, gaming, idlenesse, riot or unthriftinesse, these are the things that glorious Saviour of mankind abhorreth, and shall I dare to provoke him against me? We are carefull to shun those things which we know will offend great men in the world, not alone Kings and Princes, but men of inferiour rank, that are of place in the Countreys where we dwell, and shall we not avoid that which will displease him, whose greatnesse is so great that all height set in balance with his is meer meannesse, baseneſse and contemptiblenesse? Admonish thy self often of this point; beseech him that knows how loathsome sinne is to himself, to make it abominable to thee for his sake, and this will cause thee to loath it. The true knowledge of Christ, to conceive him to be so exceeding excellent as he is, will force any reasonable creature to study to please him, and to cast away far from him all that will provoke him, and that is all sinne and wickednesse, for that his soul hateth, and then is our leaving of sinne, and casting away evil deeds truly acceptable to him, when it hath its original in this knowledge of him, and love to him.

Thirdly, This glory of Christ following his sufferings must become a pillar to our Faith, and a sure Argument to make us trust perfectly upon him, and him alone. For is he not able to the utmost to save those which come unto God by him, hath he not made it more than manifest, that he hath fully satisfied his Fathers justice, and answered for our sins? He bare the sins of mankind even of the world, as the Scripture speaketh indefinitely, that no man should through unbelief exclude himself. I say, he bare all the sins of men upon his body on the Tree, there he undertook to offer up a perpetual Sacrifice, and to make an atonement to his Father for us.

Scripture

Now you see him no more in an Agony, no more crucified, no longer lying in the Grave, but entred into his Glory. O rest upon him, rest upon him, rest upon him perfectly! How many, how great soever those sinnes be that you have committed, for his entring into Glory maketh it manifest, that he hath satisfied for them all to the full, and if you renounce your selves, and all other merits, he can and will cause them all to be pardoned and blotted out of the Debt-book of his heavenly Father. If we can go to Christ for pardon of sinne, he is so glorified that his Intercession applying his Redemption to us, shall surely make us safe. To him therefore runne, on him cast thy self, on him relie for the plenary and certain remission of all thy sinnes, all aggravations of them notwithstanding; yea go to him and rest upon him for power against them all, and for strength to overcome them, and to vanquish all Satans temptations, and to make thee a perfect conquerour; for this glory hath he received as the Head of the Church for the use and benefit of his Church, and of all and each of those in his Church that shall seek to him, and believe in him. He will justifie, he will sanctifie, he will save. He can doe it perfectly, he will doe it certainly, onely so that we rest upon him for it, and seek to and call upon him for it. All that call upon the the Name the Lord shall be saved; that long and desire to be saved, and do trust in him, and cry to him to be saved from the guilt, power, punishment of their sinnes, shall be saved; for therefore hath he ascended, and is glorified that he might become a perfect Saviour to his Church. If he had not entred into Glory by sufferings, we should have had no benefit by his Glorification, but because he did in this manner conveigh himself to Glory, therefore is he become a Captain of our Salvation, as the Author to the Hebrews speaketh. Let us runne to him in all our fears, doubts, temptations, weaknesses; for doth not the Scripture tell, that he hath received gifts for men? even gifts to bestow upon men, not to keep to himself alone, but with a liberal hand to distribute unto men, yea even to the rebellious that God might dwell among them? Cleave to Christ, rest on him, stay upon him; he should lose the glory of his glory, the subordinate use of his glory, if he did not save them from whom he did both so suffer, and so enter into his glory.

He received a personal glory at his Ascension, his body is called a glorified body, Phil. 3.21. See Psal. 110. ult. Phil 2.8,9. 1 Pet. 1.11. Isa.53.ult.

Again, Let all the Saints learne to adore, admire, honour, love, serve, obey this glorious Person, this surpassing excellent Person, the Mediator God and Man, even the man whom God hath so exalted, let us see him by Faith, as they by sight see him in Heaven, that we may honour, praise, magnifie and exalt him as they doe, and obey him, submit our selves to him in our measure as they. Faith, Faith must be our guide, we see not Christ with this mortal eye, we must see him by the eye of Faith. I meane by a lively and full apprehension and perswasion of this his glorious being which the Scripture doth set forth before our eyes; and if we unfeignedly and undoubtedly believe that he is such an one, the great glory whereunto he is entred will

We should love Christ not amore concupiscentiæ, but amicitiæ, not for some good we hope to get by him, but for the good that is in him. Cant. 1.7.

and 5.16. Phil. 3.8. Meretricius amor est plus annulum amare quam Sponsum. August. Motives. 1. God loves him above all, Isa. 42.1. He loves his creatures with a common love, his Saints with a peculiar love, some of them above others, Christ above all. 2. Else we shall come under that dreadfull curse, 1 Corinth 16.22. 3. The greatest act of Gods love to you was in giving Christ. John 3.16. 4. All the excellencies of his benefits do flow from him, satisfaction was given to God in his sufferings, because of the excellency of his Person, Acts 20.28. and all his prayers are effectual, because of that also Heb. 7.25,26. 5. All your benefits which you have by Christ depend upon your interest in his Person, 1 John 5.12. 6. Christ loves your Persons, he loved you when enemies. We should love him with all kinds of love, of desire, complacency, benevolence, and wish the highest degree of it, above all things. Christ makes variety of applications to the souls of sinners. Cupit amari, saith one.

make us to glorifie him, highly to eſteem of him, devoutly to worſhip, to bow the knees of our ſoul alwayes, and of our body on fit ſeaſons to him, and to count it our happineſſe to be ſubject unto a Perſon ſo highly advanced by God. This is the whole work of thoſe immortal and bleſſed Spirits which are nigh unto him, becauſe their knowledge is more full and perfect too; but the more we informe our ſelves of the excellency of Chriſt, the more ſhall our ſouls ſtoop to him, and the more ſhall we eſteem it not our duty alone, but our felicity to be at his command. God is aſcended, our Lord Jeſus is aſcended with the joyfull voice of all Saints and Angels, which with a divine and heavenly muſick entertain him there, they ſing, All honour be unto the Lamb, let our ſouls ſing for ever; let us caſt our ſelves down before him, let us exalt his great and glorious Name, let our hearts, tongues and lives confeſſe to him, that he is the Lord of Glory to whom all Glory is to be given, that by glorifying him we may glorifie the Father that ſent him; for, He that honours not the Sonne, doth not neither honour the Father.

Chriſtians in the Goſpel ſhould look on Chriſt as aſcended.

Chriſt glorified hath not laid down any of his Offices:

Firſt, Becauſe certaine acts of Office are to be perſormed in Heaven, John 14.2.

Secondly, Chriſt hath not yet given up his Kingdome to his Father; 1 Cor. 15.24.

Thirdly, It appears by enumeration of the ſeveral acts that Chriſt performs as Mediator in Heaven in reference to each of his Offices:

I. To his Prophetical, ſo

1. He gives gifts to men, furniſheth them with abilities for the Churches ſervice, *Epheſ.*4.11,12.

2. He ſends them forth, and will uphold them, *Revel.*1.16. the Witneſſes ſhall propheſie till they have finiſht their Teſtimony.

3. He takes the meaſure of the truths taught, *Ezek.*40.3. his buſineſſe is to refine doctrines.

4. He concurs with his Meſſengers in their Miniſtry, 2 Cor. 5.12. & 31.2. *Iſa.*57.18, *Heb.*12.24,25.

5. When ungodly men prevail againſt any, the Lord raiſeth up others in their ſpirit and power.

II. To his Prieſtly Office, ſo

1. As a publick perſon he repreſents your perſons, Heb. 9.24. See *Exod.*28. 12,29. by this means you are made accepted, *Eph.*1.6. 2. You have a memorial, Pſalm 112.6. God is alwayes mindfull of you.

2. The High-prieſt was to ſprinkle the blood before the Mercy-ſeat, *Lev.*16. 15. Chriſt offers there the price of his own bloud, whereby you obtain Mercy, and have it continued, for the blood was carried into the holy place to abide alwayes before the Lord.

3. He hath taken poſſeſſion for you as your Prieſt; this gives actual right, as the price paid, a meritorious right.

4. He is careſull to receive your ſervices, *Lev.*1.1,2. to ſanctifie them, Exod. 28.3. *Rev.*8.3,4. and to offer them to his Father; the ſmoke of the incenſe comes up out of the Angels hand.

III. To his Kingly Office, *Mat.*28.18. Eph. 1.21,22.

1. In his preſent diſpenſations:

1. In protecting his people from danger, *Iſa.*4.5. *Mic.*5.5.

2. In preſerving his Truths and Ordinances, *Rev.*14.1,2.

3. By confounding his enemies.

2. In his preparations for the time to come:

1. He prepares Grace for his people, *Col.*3.3. 1 John 5.11.

2. Prepares Prayers for them, Luke 21.31,32.

3. Prepares Glory for them, 1 *Cor.*2.9. John 14.2.

Gods

Gods people should exercise Faith on Christ as glorified, and in Office in Heaven.

1. An act of perswasion, that he takes care of them still.
2. Of reliance for thy self and the Church, 1 John 2.2. Psalm 55.22.
3. Look upon none but Christ, Prov. 3.5.
4. Quiet thy soul in trouble, Psalm 127.2.
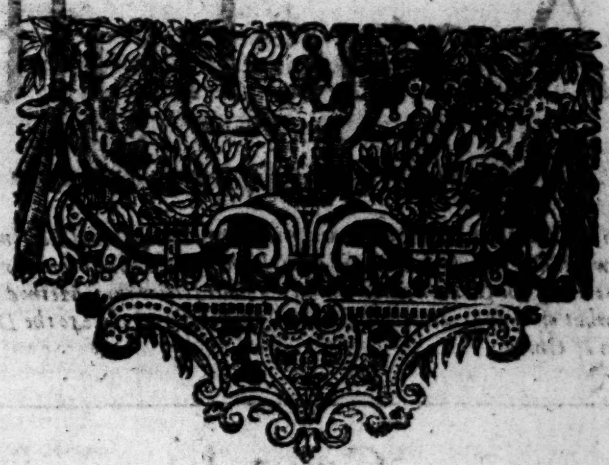
5. Triumph over dangers.

The End of the fifth Book.



THE

THE SIXTH BOOK. OF THE CHVRCH

The Spouse of CHRIST, And Antichrist

The great Enemy of CHRIST.

Having handled the Work of Redemption in the Nature and Person of it, I should now speak of the Application of it by the holy Ghost. But because many Divines do treat of the Church after Christ, I shall follow that Method, and likewise speak somewhat of that great Adversary of Christ before I come to the Doctrine of the Application of Christ.

CHAP. I.

Of the Church of CHRIST.

THe principal matter required of our parts in the Apostles Creed, is, to believe things concerning God and the Church. God is the first Object of our Faith, we must know and believe in him so far as he is revealed in his Natures, Properties and Works. Malè vivitur, si de Deo non benè creditur. August. de civit. Dei lib. 5. cap. 10. After Articles concerning the several Persons in the Trinity, followeth this, I believe the Catholick Church. This was added to the former (saith August. Enchirid. cap. 56.) upon special consideration. For the right order of a confession did require, that after after the Trinity the Church ſhould be mentioned, as the houſe after the owner, the Temple after God, and the City after the builder. And he cannot have God for his Father, which hath not the Church for his Mother.

1. The Act of Faith, in theſe words (tacitly implyed) I believe.
2. The Object of this Faith, the Church, deſcribed by two Properties, viz.
   1. Sanctity, in that it is called Holy.
   2. Univerſality, in that it is ſtiled Catholick.

Concerning the Act of this Faith [I believe] though it be not prefixed to the beginning of this Article, as neither to the reſt which follow it; yet it is to be underſtood; the former [I believe] which precedes the Article of the holy Ghoſt, communicating it ſelf to this and the ſubſequent, and that chiefly for two Reaſons:

The one to teach us, that the principal object of our Faith is God himſelf, conſidered in Unity of Eſſence, and Trinity of Perſons, and therefore to each of the Perſons, there is either a [Believe] prefixed, or the particle (in) ſet before, to ſhew that on them we are to build the certainty and aſſurance of our hope; but as for theſe Articles of the Church, The forgiveneſſe of ſins, The reſurrection of the body, and the like, they being creatures are but the ſecondary objects of our Faith, not to be truſted upon immediately in themſelves, and therefore have not a Credo, a [Believe] apart to themſelves, but prefixt to one of the Perſons, I believe in the holy Ghoſt.

Dr Chaloners Credo Eccleſiam Catholicam, Sect. 2.

The other, to ſet out and divide by this means unto every of the Perſons a ſpecial work, Creation to the Father, Redemption to the Son, Sanctification to the holy Ghoſt.

Queſtion is made, What the words are which are to be ſupplied in this Article, The holy Catholick Church, whether I believe, or I believe in? I believe, as is generally determined by the Orthodox.

The Papiſts ſay, we muſt believe in the Church, and the Rhemiſh Teſtament is for it upon 1 Tim. 3. after a ſort we are to believe in the Church, ſaith Bellarmine. Sciendum (inquit Auguſtinus, Serm. 131. de tempore) quod Eccleſiam credere, non in Eccleſiam credere debemus: quia Eccleſia non the Assembly. In the New Testament it is once taken for a disorderly and confused Assembly, Acts 19.32,39,40. But that one place excepted, it is ever taken for a multitude or society, with a disposition or relation to Religion. And so it notes,

1. The company of all the faithfull, *Matth.*16.18. *Ephes.*1.21,22. & 4.16.& 5.25,26. *Col.*1.18,24. *Ephes.*5.27,32. It is also taken indefinitely for every multitude and society of believers in Christ, Acts 2.47. *Gal.*1.13. 1 *Cor.*15.9. & 12.20. Acts 5.11. & 8.1.

That is a good description of a Church, Act 6.2. Multitude, that is the genus, or matter of it, the difference or form of Disciples. See Acts 11.26.

2. More particularly it signifieth any Assembly gathered together for the worship of God, Acts 9.31. & 14.23. 1 *Cor.*11.16.

The reasons why the first Translators of the Bible into English in these later times did avoid the name Church, and in stead thereof used Congregation, do seem to have been these two. The first, because Church or Kirk being derived from the Greek Κυριακὸν, doth more properly signifie the place of meeting, than the Congregation it self, which is meant by Ecclesia: and therefore the word Congregation thought to be the fitter translation. The second, because the Papists had abused the word Church, whether it were generally used, to signifie the Romish Church; or particularly, to import the Romish Clergy. For when the people understood, that by Church was meant the company of men professing the faith of Christ, the name Church is every where used, as the translation of Ecclesia. B. Down. Defence of his Serm. *l.*2 *c.*6.

The Independents both here and in New-England are both known by the name of Congregational men, so called from this their first principle, That the Scripture owns no visible Church, but one Congregation. Mr Pools Quo Warranto, Chap. 2.

Ecclesia Christi est cœtus hominum Evangelium Christi profitentium, in quo per Ministros ad hoc vocatos, Evangelii doctrina pure traditur, & Sacramenta ex Dei verbo administrantur. Beza Epist.24. Vide Bellarm. de Eccles. milit.cap.11. Ecclesia prout dicta est ab evocando, conventum & congionem evocatam denotat. Unde Christi Ecclesia cœtus est hominum è turba reliquorum mortalium evocatus ad vitam æternam.

The Church in its primary signification may be defined, A multitude or society of faithfull men called out of all mankinde corrupted, by the Ministry of the Word according to the good pleasure of God, united as living members to Christ their Head, and in him partaking of grace in this life, and glory in the life to come, to the praise of Gods wisdom, power, and riches of his mercy.

1. It is a multitude, 1 *Cor.*10.17. and that out of every Nation, Language, Tribe and People, *Apocal.*5.9.

2. It is a society of men, not of Angels, *Heb.*12.22. See *Eph.*3.10.

L' Empereur in his Theses saith, If the word Church be generally taken, it is certain that the Angels also belong to it; for the Church is the body of Christ, Ephes. 1.23. but Christ is the Head not only of men, but also of Angels, *Col.*2.10,18,19. They are our fellow-servants, Rev.19.10. and fellow-brethren, Job 1.6. by Christ, *Ephes.*3.15.

3. A society of the faithfull called effectually and savingly out of the world or mankinde corrupted, by the Gospel.

God hath a most tender care of his Church, *Isa.*27.2,3. which appears:

1. In all the dispensations of his providence, he still intends the salvation of his people. *Eph.*1.4. 2 *Thess.*2.13.

2. In all the commotions of the world God will preserve his Church from utter ruine, *Isa.*17.4,5. *Mat.*16.18. *Rev.*12.17.

3. In that he hath a tender sense of all its afflictions, *Zech.*2.10. and doth it good by all its afflictions, *Isa.*27.9.

4. In that he extricates the Church still out of all its streights.

5. In

5. In repairing its ruines, Amos 9.11.

6. In thinking nothing too great or dear to give for the Churches ſake, Iſa. 43. 3, 4. & 45.4. 1 Cor. 3.21.

Eccleſia ſignifying generally any Aſſembly, Company or Congregation of men whatſoever, Civil or Eccleſiaſtical, holy or prophane, is in all the places of the New Teſtament (excepting Acts 19.32,39,40.) appropriated to the companies of the faithfull.

It is a company of men called out of the world unto ſalvation by Chriſt, that is to ſay more briefly, the Church doth ſignifie a company of Chriſtians. B. Down. Defence of his Sermon. *lib.*2. *Chap.*1. See more there.

The Church is either Jewiſh or Chriſtian, the Chriſtian either Primitive or Succeſſive, and they again in reſpect of Manners are Pure or Impure, in reſpect of Worſhip, Sound or Idololatrical; in reſpect of Doctrine, Orthodox or Heretical; in reſpect of mutual Communion, Catholick or Schiſmatical.

There are divers and glorious Elogies of this Church viſible in the Scriptures. it is called, The City of God, Heb. 12. 22. The heavenly Jeruſalem, there alſo. Jeruſalem which is from above, Gal. 4.26. The houſe of God, the pillar and ground of truth, 1 Tim.3.15. Chriſts ſheepfold, John 10.16. The Spouſe of Chriſt. Cant.4.8. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 21.9. The body of Chriſt, Eph.1.22,23. Col. 1. 18.

Titulus iſte Domus Dei, Eccleſia Dei vivi, & ſi ea conjungere libet, Columna & ſtabilimentum veritatis, magnificentior eſſe videtur, quàm ut in Eccleſiam particularem competat. Haud ſanè Timotheus in Eccleſia univerſali viſibiliter converſari potuit. Theſ. Theol. Salmur. part. 3. Eccleſiam ſanctam Catholicam partiuntur, in militantem, triumphantem, & patientem. Quis unquam ante natos Jeſuitas audivit hanc Eccleſiæ partitionem in militantem, triumphantem, & patientem, militantem in terris, triumphantem in Cœlis, patientem in purgatorio? Scriptura duas tantum partes conſtituit, unam in Cœlis, alteram in terris: ſicut ex Apoſtoli verbis apparet, *Epheſ.*1.10. & 3.15. *Col.*1.20. Scripturæ, Patres, Scholaſtici, Tridentini proceres duas eſſe tantùm Eccleſiæ partes ſtatuunt. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. prælect.2.

The Church is the place of Gods reſidence, Matth. 18. 23. Matth. 11. 13. as the world is Satans territory, Epheſ. 6.12. the Seminary and ſuburbs of Heaven, *Col.*1.12. our happineſſe in Heaven conſiſts in the viſion and fruition of God, that is here begun, Pſalm 27.4. his Majeſty, Wiſdom, Grace, Holineſſe are there manifeſt. He is alſo enjoyed here, Pſalm 133. 3. Here we have the light of his countenance, pardon of ſinne, and ſanctification of the Spirit. It is the Ark of Noah, only preſerv'd in the floud, the Land of Goſhen.

Here we have,

1. The benefit of Gods Ordinances, of knowing God, of being built up in faith and love.

2. The advantages of providence, Pſalm 134.3.

3. Priviledges both for our ſelves and poſterity, communion with Saints, and a bleſſing for our poſterity.

It is a great miſery to be a ſtranger from the Commonwealth of Iſrael, the Church of God, *Eph.*2.12. To have no communion with his people. See *Pſ.*87.3,4. *Eze.*16.20.

The Church is Triumphant or Comprehenſorum, and Militant or Viatorum:

Firſt, Triumphant, viz. that part of men who having overcome the fleſh, the world and the Devil, now reigne with God and Chriſt gloriouſly in Heaven.

Secondly, Militant, viz. that part of men which yet conflict with thoſe adverſaries. That diſtinction relies on the words of the Apoſtle, *Epheſ.*3.15. The Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Triumphant Church, 2 *Tim.*4.6,7. *Heb.*12.23. *Revel.*7.9.

Hence their errour is refuted, who think, That the ſouls of the dead do ſleep even to the Reſurrection, or who think that the ſouls of the godly and faithfull till that time are excluded from the viſion of God and heavenly glory. See 2 Cor. 5.6,7,8. *Phil.*1.23. *Rev.*14.13. the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Militant Church, 1 *Tim.*6.12. That which is ſpoken to one is underſtood of all, Gal. 5.17. 1 *Pet.*2. 11. 1 John 5.4. *Epheſ.*6.11,12.

The Church is Militant either in deed or in ſhew onely and profeſſion, thoſe indeed belong to the Militant Church which are called according to purpoſe, viz. the truly faithfull and elect. Thoſe are the true Members of the body of Chriſt, who by faith are united to Chriſt, and ingraffed in him, who are partakers of the holy Ghoſt, who draw grace and ſpiritual life from Chriſt, Rom. 8. 9. Coloſ. 2. 19. Epheſ. 5. 25, 26, 27. but the wicked and hypocrites onely in name and profeſſion belong to the Church, for they have no true Communion with Chriſt, they no more belong to the myſtical body of Chriſt, than a woodden thigh or dry arme to the body of a natural man. For they want life, ſenſe and motion, and receive no influence from the Head, they are (as is commonly ſaid) in the Church, not of the Church, 1 John 2. 19. Hence aroſe the diſtinction of the Church into Viſible and [a] Inviſible. The Inviſible Church conſiſts only of thoſe who are endued with true faith and holineſſe, but theſe are known to God and Chriſt alone, 2 Tim. 2. 19. John 10. 14. therefore in reſpect of us, that Church (which alone truly and properly is the Church on earth) is called Inviſible.

[a] Diſtinctio iſta non generis ſunt in ſpecies, vel integri in ſua membra, qua res multiplicet, ſed tantum quoad diverſos modos eſſiatum. Dr Frid. Eccleſia viſibilis eſt propter homines qui ſunt membra & cives Eccleſiæ, qui nobiſcum agunt & degunt, quos aſpicimus, alloquimur & ſalutamus. Viſibilis eſt propter externa pietatis, quæ videntur ab omnibus in Eccleſia. Viſibilis eſt, quia notæ ſunt inſignes & conſpicuæ, quibus ab omni infidelium contubernio diſtinguitur, viz. verbi divini prædicatio ſyncera, rectus uſus Sacramentorum, fidelis & ſimplex in Chriſto obedientia. Humfr. Jeſuit. pars 2. de natura Eccleſ. Theſ. Theol. Salm. par. 3. Theſe two terms Viſible and Inviſible are not divers differences of the Church, as if they conſtituted two contradiſtinct or oppoſite Churches; for it is plain that they are for the moſt part ſubordinate and coincident. Pura puta diſtinctio eſt reſpectu duplicis illius quæ in ipſa conſideretur, formæ: & rem non variat, verum varias illius conſiderandæ modos innuit. To be Viſible and Inviſible, are denominations meerly accidental, no true differences of the Church. Eccleſia Catholica eſt objectum fidei, non ſenſus, ut verò invenitur in coetibus particularibus, duplicem ſortitur formam, internam & externam: Interna conſtat duplici unione, Chriſto, per fidem, fratribus per charitatem: Externa elucet in publica verbi profeſſione, & Sacramentorum participatione. A prima habet Eccleſia, ut ſit, à ſecunda ſolummodo ut ſit conſpicua. Dr Frid. Lect. 9. de viſibilitate Eccleſiæ.

The Church may be conſidered:

1. In regard of its internal conſtitution as joyned to Chriſt, ſo it is alwayes inviſible.

2. As to the external profeſſion of the truth.

1. The Church hath never been without ſome profeſſours of the truth.

2. Theſe did teſtifie for Chriſt.

3. Theſe in ſome ages in regard of a deluge of errours were ſo few and perſecuted, that there was not a conſpicuous face of a Church.

The Church is called viſible from mens profeſſion, and inviſible from the faith profeſſed. Mr Baxters 2d Diſputat. p. 192.

The Church is a ſociety of men, not as men (for ſo a number of Turks, or a neſt of Arians might be the body of Chriſt) but as believers: and therefore the Church, as the Church, cannot be ſeen, but believed. Bellarmine himſelf ſaith, Videmus cœtum hominum qui eſt Eccleſia, ſed quod ille cœtus ſit vera Chriſti Eccleſia, non videmus, ſed credimus; and what ſay we more?

Vide Dickſoni Therapeutica ſacra l. 1. c. 6. Sect. 17.

That is the viſible Church which conſiſts of men profeſſing the true Faith and Religion any way, whether in truth or counterfeitly and falſly, of good and evil, of elect and reprobate. This Church is mixt, whence it is compared to a great houſe, in which there are not onely veſſels of gold and ſilver, but alſo wood and clay, ſome for honour, ſome for reproach, 2 Tim. 2. 20. To a field, in which there are Tares as well as wheat, Matth. 13. to a net, in which fiſhes of all kind, good and bad are gathered. See Dr Featley againſt Fiſher about the viſibility of the Church. Jacksons Raging Tempeſt on Matth. 8. 23. p. 25. Dr Taylor on Revel. 12. p. 294. Mr Baxters Infants Church-membership, p. 176. Par on Rom. 11. verſ. 4. p 160, 161.

We muſt not expect to find a Church without exception, Revel. 2. 4. The Church of Epheſus ſeems to have the preheminence of all the Churches in the New Teſtament, ment, it was planted by Paul, watered by Timothy, and John had there his residence. Churches are made up of men, they are mixtures of flesh and spirit. We should not make this a pretence for all irregularities, the purer the communion is the fuller. On the other hand this gives us caution against hasty and groundlesse separation. How much evil is said of the Church of Corinth; and of those of Asia, and yet not a word of departing from them? Men shall find more comfort in a faithfull endeavouring to reform what is amisse, than by withdrawing.

We may distinguish a four-fold face of the Christian visible Church spoken of by Divines. The first fair, in the Apostles time, she was then a Virgin undefiled: The second spotted, in the succeeding age of Fathers and Hereticks, wherein traditions began to prevail; she was then a Wanton: The third deformed, when Popery overspread all; she was then a whore: The fourth reformed, since Luthers time. Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Principles, Aph. 6. Exercit. 2.

Again, The Church is either Particular, viz. a company of the faithfull which is contained in some particular place, 2 Cor. 1. 1. & 1 Cor. 16. 19. Col. 4. 15. Or Universal (Catholick) which consists of all that every where call upon the name of God, 1 Cor. 1. 2. The Apostle calls it, The general Assembly, Heb. 12. 23. It is General,

The Church is called Catholick, quia universaliter perfecta est, & in nullo claudicat, & per totum orbem diffusa est. Aug. de Gen. ad lit. c. 1. See Mr Hudsons Vindicat. c. 1. sect. 3. And Dr Hampton on 1 John 2. 19. and Mr Durham on Rev. 12. v. 15, & 18. Lect. 3.

1. In respect of time *, it had a being in all times and ages ever since the giving of the promise to our first parents in Paradise.

2. In respect of the Persons of men, it consists of all sorts and degrees of men, Acts 16. 34.

* This acception of the word Catholick can hardly be proved out of ancient Writers. Ecclesia Catholica vocatur, 1. Respectu Ecclesiæ veteris Testamenti. 2. Respectu particularium Ecclesiarum. 3. Respectu Catholicæ Fidei Gerhard. loc. communes.

3. In respect of place, because it hath been gathered from all parts of the earth, specially now in time of the New Testament, Revel. 5. 9.

4. In respect of Doctrine therein professed.

This name Catholick is not given to the Church in Scripture, but was imposed by men, yet consonant to the Scripture.

The Church was first entituled Catholick in opposition to the visible Church of the Jews, Act. 10. 15, 34. the full importance of this term Catholick is set down Revel. 5. 8, 9.

This word Catholick is not found in all the Bible, yet the sense being there it may be retained, the word is the same both in Latine and Greek, and signifies General. It is used, 1. Unproperly, and so it signifies as much as Orthodox, in which sense sometimes the Fathers use it, this is the Catholick Faith. 2. Properly, so it signifies universal, and so it is here taken. Putant multi Catholicam dictam Ecclesiam, ut distingueretur ab Judæorum Synagogis terræ Canaan limitibus circumscriptis: sed parum id verisimile fit, cum Apostolorum ætate non in Palæstina modo, sed etiam extra illam religione fuerint Judæi; quin plures, quàm in Palæstina. Eoque magis sit verisimile, Catholicæ nomen opponi cœpisse, ut Ecclesia quæ toto orbe obtineret, distingueretur à conventiculis hæreticorum & schismaticorum, quales Novatianorum, & postea Donatistarum. Vossius de tribus Symbolis.

The Donatists confine it to a corner in Africa, the Papists to the City of Rome. If any particular Church was called Catholick, it was in regard of purity of faith and doctrine, not in respect of primacy and amplitude of authority.

This Catholick Church is called Holy, 1 Cor. 14. 33. & Revel. 11. 2. because Christ the Head of it is holy, Heb. 7. 26. and he makes the Church partaker of

The Church is called Holy in three respects:

1. In respect of the Righteousnesse and Holinesse of Christ imputed, which may be termed Sanctitas imputata. 2. In respect of those degrees of sanctification, wherewith it is endowed in this life, which may be termed Sanctitas incœpta. 3. In respect of the Rule and Law by which it is directed to serve God in Holinesse and Righteousnesse, which therefore may be termed Sanctitas imperata. Dr Chaloners Credo Ecclesiam sanctam Catholicam, Part. 2. Sect. 1.

his holineſſe, John 17. 19. becauſe it is called with a holy calling, and is ſeparated from the world, 2 Tim. 1. 9. becauſe the holy Word of God is committed to it, Rom. 3. 2.

Sanctum propriè veteres appellavere Romani, quod ſanctione aliqua, id eſt, pœnæ conſtitutione, ab injuria, vel uſu promiſcuo munitum eſt atque defenſum. Ita ſanctæ leges, quæ impune violari nequeunt, eo quòd pœna ſit appoſita, quam propriè ſanctionem vocant, & legati jure gentium ſancti, quos violare non licet. Propriè tamen ſanctum dicitur, quod profano & polluto contrarium eſt, eſtque purum, & incorruptum. Petav. de Incarnat. l. 11. c. 5.

Object. But the Church doth not onely containe in it thoſe that are holy, but alſo Hypocrites and ſuch as are openly wicked, How therefore is it holy?

Anſw. Hypocrites and prophane perſons are but in name and outward profeſſion of the Church, indeed and in truth they are not, thoſe which are truly of the Church are holy, and therefore the Church is rightly called, and is holy.

Secondly, Although the viſible Church hath good mingled with evil, yea almoſt overwhelmed with their multitude, yet it is deſervedly denominated from the better part. As we call that a heap of corne where there is more chaffe than corn.

It is the priviledge as well as duty of Gods people to be holy, Deut. 26. 18. & 28. 9. it comes in by way of Promiſe, Reward, Priviledge, Rev. 20. 6.

The Reaſons of this are taken from the Cauſe, the Nature and Effects of Holineſſe.

Firſt, From the Cauſe of it, it flows from Union with God, John 17. 17, 21. 2 Pet. 1. 4. & 4. 14.

Secondly, The Nature of holineſſe conſiſts in a likeneſſe and conformity to God, Be ye holy as I am holy, Lev. 26. 44, 45.

There is a four-fold Holineſſe:

1. Of Dedication, ſo the veſſels of the Temple and Tabernacle were holy.

2. Of Exemplification, ſo the Law being the Epiſtle or exemplification of Gods will was holy, Rom. 7. 12.

3. By Profeſſion, as 1 Cor. 7. 14.

4. By Participation or Communion.

The people of God are holy all theſe wayes:

1. They are dedicated to God, Rom. 1. 1.

2. By Exemplification, They are the Epiſtle of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. By Profeſſion.

4. By Participation.

Thirdly, If we conſider the Effects of Holineſſe:

1. Upon our ſelves, it is the end of our Election, Epheſ. 1. 14. of our Vocation, 1 Theſſ. 4. 17. Redemption, Luke 1. 74.

2. Upon others, even the enemies of it, wicked men.

1. Affectation, the hypocrite affects it, that there are ſo many pretenders to it though but in ſhew, diſcovers the dignity of it.

2. That awfulneſſe which it ſtrikes in the hearts of wicked men. Saul ſtood in awe of Samuel, Herod of John Baptiſt, Mark 6. 20.

3. Envy, it works this in the worſt, 1 John 3. 17.

Queſt. Whether every one which ſincerely profeſſeth the belief of this Article of the holy Catholick Church be bound to believe, that he himſelf is a true lively member of the ſame Church.

Anſw. No, all men are not bound to believe that they are actual or real members of the Catholick Church, for none can truly believe thus much of himſelf, but he that hath made his Election ſure, and is certain that his name is written in the book of life.

A note, mark or character, is that whereby one thing may be known and differenced from another: That which is proper to a thing, and peculiarly found in it, may ſerve as a note or mark of diſtinction.

in

The marks of the Church are,

An entire profeſſion of the Goſpel and ſaving truth of God, the right uſe of the Sacraments, Holineſſe of converſation, the ſound preaching of the Word of life, fervent and pure calling upon Gods Name, ſubjection to their ſpiritual Guides, mutual communion in the Ordinances of Worſhip, Chriſtian Fellowſhip with all Saints and true viſible Churches of Jeſus Chriſt.

Ubicunque Dei verbum ſyncere prædicari atque audiri, ubi Sacramenta ex Chriſti inſtituto adminiſtrari videmus, illic alimus.

All theſe are proper to the Church, but not perpetually to be found in it, nor alike pure in all ages.

Symbola Eccleſiæ dignoſcendæ, verbi prædicationem, Sacramentorumque obſervationem poſuimus. Nam hæc nuſquam eſſe poſſunt quin fructificent, & Dei benedictione proſperentur. Non dico, ubicunque prædicatur verbum illic fructum mox exoriri: ſed nullibi recipi & ſtatam habere ſedem, niſi ut ſuam efficaciam proferat. Id. ibid. Si ſolus eſſem in toto orbe terrarum, qui retinerem verbum, ſolus eſſem Eccleſia, & rectè judicarem de reliquo toto mundo, quod non eſſet Eccleſia. Luther. loc. Commun. Claſſ. 1. c. 37. de Eccleſia.

Where all theſe notes are to be found purely, the Church is excellent, for degree pure and famous; where any of theſe are wanting or impure, the Church is ſo much defective or impure, though it may be pure in compariſon of others. But all theſe things be not of equal neceſſity to the being of a true Church. The profeſſion of the Word, and ſo the preaching of it in ſome ſenſe or other, is ſimply neceſſary, that whereſoever it is, it maketh the Church in which it is a Church.

The Primitive Church was as glorious in the ſight of God, when they ſerved him in holes and corners, in Cryptis, Sacellis, Conventiculis, Eccleſialis, as when his Worſhip was more ſplendidly performed in Baſilicis & Cyriacis, in goodly Churches and magnificent Cathedrals. B. Bramhall his Anſwer to Militiere his Epiſtle.

To them who demand, where our Church and Faith was before Luther? We anſwer, it was in the ſame place then wherein now it is. Our Church was in the preſent Romiſh Church obſcurely, indiſtinctly, confuſedly in it, not as an entire viſible Church diſtinct from it, nor as any natural or integral member of it; in it as good corn in a field of tares. Luther did not erect a new Church, but refine a corrupt Church; nor preach a new Faith or Doctrine never preacht before, but purge the old Faith once delivered to the Saints from all new inventions and errours. Rome hath departed from the Churches of God, we have not firſt and willingly ſeparated from the Church of Rome, it hath apoſtatized from the true Faith ſhe did once profeſſe.

Luthers holy pains, preaching and writing was not a Novation, but a Renovation; not a planting of a new Religion, but a renewing and replanting of the ancient Religion; not true and holy an Inſtitution, but a Reſtitution of the truth of God; not an Introduction, but Reduction of the Religion. Dr Taylor on Rom. 1. 18. Revel. 2. 3. Epiſtola Pauli ad Romanos eſt epiſtola Pauli in Romanos. Faius. Vide Polyd. virg. Hiſt. Ang. l. 6.

The Queſtion may fitly be retorted on themſelves, Where was your Church? Where was your Trent Doctrine, and Articles of the Roman Creed, received de fide before Luther?

Shew me that man, who before the Councel of Trent held all the points of your Faith, as they are now taught and received in your Church? Dr Featleys Caſe for the Spectacles, chap. 4. See more there. Biſhop Jewel in a Sermon at Pauls Croſſe made a publick challenge to all the Papiſts in the World, to produce but one clear and evident Teſtimony out of Scripture, or any Father, or other famous Writers within ſix hundred years after Chriſt, for any one of the many Articles which the Romaniſts at this day maintain againſt us, and upon good proof of any ſuch allegation, he promiſed to reconcile himſelf to Rome.

1. In regard of true Doctrine: What hereſies doth ſhe hold about the Scripture, about the Church, about Grace, Free-will, Juſtification?

2. In regard of Worſhip, which is the Apoſtaſie or falling away ſpoken of by Paul

Paul to Timothy, an admitting of Angel-worſhip.

3. In regard of Government or Diſcipline.

Her errours are now ſo fundamental that we are commanded to come out of her, and not to partake of her ſins; and we depart no farther from her than ſhe hath done from God.

Their Apoſtaſie * is incurable, in that they hold,

1. That their Church cannot erre, as Laodicea.

2. That there is no viſible Judge to correct errours but the Pope. Therefore the Reformed Churches in England, Scotland, France, Germany did juſtly ſeparate from the Church of Rome.

Papiſts call themſelves Catholicks, but falſly, being both heretical in Doctrine, and Idolatrous in worſhip; a Catholick is a right believer: all true believers in the world make but one Catholick Church. Lyford. Papiſts call themſelves Roman Catholicks. Catholick is univerſal, Roman particular, that is, of the whole world, this of one City. So the Roman Catholick is as much as to ſay, Particular univerſal, that is, not Catholick, Catholick. Downs Defence of former Anſwers againſt the Reply of N. N. See more there. The Church of Rome caſts off all Chriſtians and Churches from all hope of ſalvation who ſubject not themſelves to their way, therefore they are moſt ſchiſmatical.

If any man fall away from that Church, which is not Chriſt his Spouſe, he cannot be charged juſtly with Apoſtaſie.

Cauſa, non ſeceſſio, facit ſchiſmaticum. The cauſe (ſay the Canoniſts) not the ſeparation makes a ſchiſmatick. They who have given juſt and lawfull occaſion to others to ſeparate themſelves from their corruptions are the ſchiſmaticks, and not they that took the occaſion.

Nullus pudor eſt ad meliora tranſire. It is no ſhame to change for the better, we leſt not Bethel the houſe of God, untill it became Bethaven the houſe of iniquity. Dr Hampton on 1 John 2. 19. See more there. *Viretus hoc ſuaſit, & ſuadeo etiam ut ab illa Eccleſia non ſolum abſtineamus quæ hæreſibus & idololatria polluta eſt, & conventus habeamus, ubi poſſumus, in quibus duo aut tres congregentur in nomine Chriſti, ſi plures non poſſint. He is well no ſchiſmatick though in ſchiſm, that is willing to joyn in communion with the true Church, when it appears to be ſo to him, as he is no Heretick, though he holds heretical opinions, who holds them not obſtinately; that is (I ſuppoſe) with deſire to be informed, if he be in the wrong. My Lord Falklands Diſcourſe of Infallibility.

For the Papiſts ſeveral Marks of a Church, our Writers that oppoſe Bellarmine, do anſwer him ſo fully, and Dr Hampton ſo ſolidly in a Sermon of his on 1 John 2. 19. treateth of this Argument that I ſhall ſay nothing of it. See Dr Taylor on Rev. 12. p. 99. to 110.

Thoſe notes of Succeſſion, Continuance, Viſibility, Unity are not proper, agreeing only and alwayes to the Church, therefore they are not certain and infallible. Bellarmine de notis Eccleſiæ, cap. 3. maketh them in themſelves to be but probable.

The Church hath one Head, or root; it is animated by one Spirit; it is ruled by one Law, bound together by one Covenant, it hath one Baptiſm, one main end, one nature, one kind of food to live upon, one joynt deſire for the preſervation of the whole, one joynt ſenſe of the good, and hurt of its members. It is not one in age, ſtature, ſtrength, office, honour, uſefulneſſe, degree of glory.

It

It is a Queſtion, An Eccleſia viſibilis poſſit errare? Whether the viſible Church may erre? The Papiſts deny it, and urge *Mat.*18.17. & *Mat.*16.18. & 1 *Tim.*3.15. See the Rhemiſts on that place.

The Inviſible Church (which conſiſts only of the elect and true believers) cannot erre damnably, *Mat.*16.16.

The Viſible Church, whether virtual the Pope, or Repreſentative, a general Councel may erre damnably. See *Rev.*2. & 3. chap.

If particular men may erre, then alſo the Church which conſiſts of ſuch; but the firſt is true, 1 *Cor.*13.9. Pſalm 25.7. *Heb.*5.2. *Rom.*3.4.

Nos dicimus Eccleſiam hanc aut illam poſſe errare, ut Eccleſiam Corinthiorum, Galatarum, Epheſiorum, & reliquas hujuſmodi, nec errare modò, verumetiam obrui tandem erroribus, & deficere, quod ipſa experientia in multis demonſtravit. Dicimus autem veram Chriſti Eccleſiam Catholicam (quæ eſt electorum tantùm) errare non poſſe, ſi errores mortiferos & inſanabiles intelligamus, at in levioribus rebus poſſe errare, nempe quæ non ſimpliciter & abſolutè ad Eccleſiam neceſſariæ, quæque fundamentum non evertunt. Whitaker. controverſ. 2. de Eccleſia, Quæſt. 4. cap. 1. See Dr Reynolds Sermon on *Hoſ.*9.12.

Secondly, This is the difference between the Militant and Triumphant Church, that this is freed from ſin and errour, but that is not, for it prayeth continually, Forgive us our treſpaſſes.

The Church of Rome is incurable:

1. Becauſe ſhe holds ſhe cannot erre.
2. If ſhe ſhould, only her ſelf and the Pope muſt reform her.

CHAP. II.

Of Paſtours.

THe Officers of the Church were either,

1. Extraordinary and Temporary, Prophets, Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, *Epheſ.*4.11,12. 1 *Cor.*12.28.

2. Ordinary and perpetual, whom the Scripture cals Biſhops, Paſtours, Teachers, Elders, ſeveral expreſſions of one and the ſame Office. They are called Biſhops to note their inſpection into the Church, Paſtours to ſhew that they muſt feed the Church: Teachers, to ſhew how they feed them by Doctrine: Elders, to note their grave, decent, and reverend behaviour.

In the Old and New Teſtament, he is called, a man of God, he is called in the Old Teſtament alſo, a Servant of the Lord, a Seer, a Prophet, a Prieſt, a Watchman, and a Shepherd.

1 Tim.6.12. 2 Tim.3.17. Gen.20. 1 Sam.9.9. Ezek.3.1. Ezek. 34.2. 1 Pet.5.1. Luk. 12.24. 1 Cor.4.1. 1 Cor.11.10. Revel.1.20.

In the New Teſtament they are called Prophets, Miniſters of God; of the ſignification and ſeveral acceptions of which word, and of Paſtors, ſee Dr Collings his Vindiciæ Miniſterii Evangelici revindicatæ, c. 1. Paſtors, Teachers, Elders, Gods Stewards, 1 Cor.4.1. Gal.6.6. Tit.1.7. Overſeers, Acts 20.28. Gods * *Embaſſadours, Revel.*1.13. 2 *Cor.*5.20. Angels, Revel.1.20. Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, that men might regard them, and they be put in mind of their duty. Vide Halli Apol. pro Miniſterio Evangelico, cap. 2. What reproachfull names have been lately given them, as Prieſts in ſcorn, Preſ-byters, Dri-vines, Jack-Preſbyters, Black-coats, Pulpiteers?

* Legatus proprie is eſt, qui publice lectus, publice etiam miſſus, negotium publicum auctoritate peregre agit. Frederici de Marſelaer Legatus, lib. 1. Diſſertat. 2. Vide Diſſert. 3. De ejus Dignitate.

There are two uſes of the word Prieſt, whereof the one is an abuſe, the other is the right and proper uſe of the word, according to the native ſignification thereof. The abuſe is, when it is aſcribed to the Miniſters of the Goſpel, as it is the Engliſh of Sacerdos, which ſignifieth a ſacrificing Prieſt, and implieth a relation to Sacrifices. Thus the Papiſts abuſe the name, when they apply it to the Miniſters of their Goſpel, with relation to their Sacrifice of the Maſſe. The right uſe of the word is, when it is uſed as the Engliſh of Presbyter, and without any relation to ſacrifice. For Presbyter is the name which the Apoſtles and all antiquity gave to the Miniſters of the Goſpel, and the Engliſh of Presbyter is Prieſt, as Dr Raynolds doth confeſſe. Quid magis Eccleſiæ curandum, quam ut idoneus præſit Epiſcopus.

of

Baſil and Gregory (ſaith Ruffinus Hiſt. l. 2. c. 9.) ſpent thirteen years in ſearching forth the hidden ſenſe of Scripture barely, before they would make ſhew of their Profeſſion.

How frequently do we read of the diſtinction of Paſtors & flocks, we find rules for the qualification of Miniſters, 1 Tim. 3. Tit. 1. we find that the Primitive Church had their Paſtors and Teachers, we find that ſome had the charge of this work upon them, Act. 20. 28. Col. 4. 17. 1 Pet. 5. 2.

There is an Office of the Miniſtry inſtituted by Chriſt in the Churches of the New Teſtament.

The Lord hath expreſly inſtituted ſuch an Office, Acts 6. 4. Rom. 11. 3. Coloſ. 4. 17.

This was one of his royal gifts in the day of his inauguration, Epheſ. 4. 11, 12.

Their Appellations and Titles ſhew it alſo, 1 Tim. 6. 11. & 5. 3. Coloſ. 1. 7. Mat. 9. 38.

The ends of it were converſion and edification, Acts 26. 18. 1 Tim. 4. 2. Acts 16. 17. Titus 1. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 21. Theſe ends do ſtill continue.

Here an inſtituted Miniſtry is clearly proved. Mr Symmonds Chriſtian Plea for Scripture Ordinances. See more there. And Mr Gilleſp. Miſcel. c. 14. That the Miniſtry is a perpetual Ordinance of Chriſt. About the calling of a Miniſter and Ordination, ſee Mr Vines on 1 Pet. 2. 1. p. 11, to 23. Epheſ. 4. 11. He gave not only Apoſtolical, Evangelical, Paſtoral gifts, but Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, Paſtors, as a fruit of his Aſcenſion; Miniſters both ordinary and extraordinary. Theſe Miniſters are not for a time, but to continue, verſ. 13. till all come to the unity of the Faith. That is therefore a prodigious opinion, That there is no Miniſtry. There is not only an eſſential and integral ſtate of the Church, but Organical, Miniſters. Dr Hill. God hath deſigned Parſons to teach the people, charged them with the cure of ſouls, given them commiſſion to go into all the world, given them gifts accordingly, charged the people to attend and obey, hath provided them maintenance and ſupport, and ſeparated them to Reading, to Exhortation and Doctrine, from the affaires of this world, that they may attend to theſe by the care of the whole man. Doctor Taylors Divine Inſtitut. of the Office Miniſterial, Sect. 3. A true Church cannot be without a true Miniſtry, the Reformed Churches are true Churches. Sadeel. de legitima vocatione Miniſtrorum.

The Socinians ſay, Cum adhuc nova & inaudita eſſet Evangelii Doctrina, &c. The Apoſtles had a Call when the Goſpel was newly publiſhed; there needs not a Miniſtry now that the Goſpel is generally taught; and it is promiſed, We ſhall be all taught of God; if we ſhould look for a Miniſtry, where ſhall we find it? Our Miniſters (ſay they) were ordained by Biſhops, they by the Pope, therefore their Calling is Antichriſtian.

The Heathens had their Prieſts, Gen. 47. 22. 1 Sam. 6. 2, 3. Acts 14. 15. and ſo hath the Church had in all ages. Enoch was a Prophet, Noah a Preacher of righteouſneſſe, Abraham a Prophet, Numb. 10. 7. 2 Chron. 26. 6. The firſt-born of every Family before the Levites, Exod. 19. 22. Numb. 33. 12. The Evangelical Miniſtry began in John Baptiſt, continued in the Seventy Diſciples. The Church hath poſſeſt a Miniſtry for 1500 years.

Epheſ. 3. 11, 12. Matth. 28. 21. That there is ſuch an office.

That there is ſuch an Inſtitution of Chriſt, and this to continue till the worlds end, may be thus proved,

Firſt, There are ſome to whom the word of Reconciliation is committed, and not Judæi à nobis interrogati, ſi illis data eſſet facultas inſtaurandi Sanctuarij in Montemoria, ut antea, an victima immolaturi fuerim, reſpondebant fruſtra hoc fere, quia inquiebant, non eſt ſacerdotium hodiè in Iſrael. Joſ. Scalig. a Diatrib. de decim.

to others, 1 Cor. 5.18. Rom. 10.15. there is a peculiar Miſſion, men cannot preach as the Embaſſadours of Chriſt unleſſe ſent, John 20.21. Gal. 1.1.

Dr Seaman in his Vindication of the Reformed Churches from miſrepreſentation concerning Ordination, layes down four propoſitions, three of which he confirms by Scriptures, and the judgement of the Reformed Churches.

1. The Office of Miniſters is alwayes neceſſary in the Church of God, as an ordinary means of his Inſtitution to effect the ſalvation of the Elect.

2. Beſides the internal Call of God, and due qualification through the Spirit; an external mediate calling by men (in the ordinary ſtate of the Church) is neceſſary to put a man into the Office of a Miniſter, and to enable him for the work.

3. In calling to the Miniſtry, beſides Election, Ordination is to be uſed, where it may be had (Acts 6. 2. Chap. 13. 2. Chap. 14. 23. Titus 1. 5. 1 Tim. 5.22.) And beſides the uſual way of ordaining by Prayer, Faſting and Impoſition of hands; there is no other ſpoken of in any Confeſſion of the Reformed Churches.

4. The practice of thoſe in theſe dayes, who commonly preach, and receive maintenance for ſo doing, refuſing or neglecting to be ordained, is not to be juſtified by the Scripture, or by the Doctrine of, or approved example in any of the Reformed Churches; but forbidden in their Books of Diſcipline, and condemned by their Divines, as the opinion and practice of Anabaptiſts, Libertines, Arminians and Socinians.

Secondly, Becauſe a ſpecial Authority is committed to ſuch by vertue of their Office, they have the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, Iſa. 22.22. Matth. 16.19. There is a double power,

1. Supream which belongs to Chriſt only, Rev. 3.7.

2. Subordinate and delegated. Miniſters are the Embaſſadours of Chriſt, and ſo are to be received as Chriſt himſelf, We beſeech you in Chriſts ſtead; and He that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me.

Thirdly, There is a ſpecial trial that in order to ſuch an imploiment they are to undergo, 1 Tim. 3.10. there is a trial required to the exerciſe of the meaneſt Office, the Deacon. A trial of their ſanctity of life, ſoundneſſe of doctrine, fidelity and aptneſſe to teach.

Fourthly, The Lord hath appointed them a reward for the performance of ſuch an Office. He hath ordained, That thoſe which preach the Goſpel ſhould live of the Goſpel. See Acts 6.24. 1 Tim. 4.15.

Fifthly, They are to give a ſpecial account for the ſouls of all that are under their charge.

Secondly, This Office of the Miniſtry is alſo to continue till the end of the world:

1. From the Inſtitution of Chriſt appointing this Office, 1 Cor. 12.28. in the laſt and pureſt times, Revel. 21.14. the twelve foundations are the twelve Apoſtles. The Apoſtles took ſpecial order for the ſucceſſion of the Miniſtry, Acts 14. 23. 2 Tim. 2.2. Tit. 1.5. Acts 20.28. James 5.14. 1 Cor. 9.7,8.

2. From the promiſe made to it, which ſuppoſeth, that the ſubject of the power ſhall remain, Mat. 28. ult. See Jer. 3.15. & Iſa. 66.2.

3. The neceſſity of this Office is as great now as ever. The ends of it are two, The gathering and perfecting of the Saints, Epheſ. 4.11,12. So long as one Saint is to be converted, and one grace to be compleated, there needs a Miniſtry. Sins are to be reproved, falſe Doctrines to be confuted.

For that part of the Objection, That their Calling is Antichriſtian.

In theſe licentious dayes ſeveral truths in Pamphlets are called Antichriſtian, as I have ſhewed before.

The Papiſts ſay, We have no true Miniſtry, becauſe at the Reformation we received it not from Rome.

While there is a Church there will be a Miniſtry, 2 Chron. 17.9 & 35. 32. There is an inſtitution of Officers as well as Ordinances, Heb. 13.24. In Philippi there were brethren, Biſhops and Deacons, Rev. 4.14. Some now grant members, yet deny Officers.

The Brownists say, Our Ministers are not rightly called into their Offices, because we received it from Rome.

Not every thing ordained by Antichrist is forthwith to be rejected, but only that which he doth qua Antichristus, as he is Antichrist. But Bishops were before ever Antichrist appeared in the world.

Hilary against the Arians saith, Quisquis Christum, qualis ab Apostolis est praedicatus negavit, Antichristus est. Nominis Antichristi proprietas est, Christo esse contrarium.

The most judicious and best approved among us do hold, That as Baptism, so Ordination even in Rome is so farre forth valid, that upon separation from them, and joyning with us, there needs neither new Baptism, nor new Ordination. Dr Seamans Vindicat. of the Ordinat. of the Reformed Churches.

That Church, Ministry and Sacraments where Christs holy Spirit is graciously, effectually and savingly present, can no more be denied the name of a true Church, than that man can be denied the name of a true man, who eateth, drinketh, walketh, speaketh, reasoneth and performeth all the operations of sense, motion and understanding; we may feel in our selves the power and efficacy of our Ministry and Sacraments.

Brown the Father of the Brownists was the first of note that did separate himself from the Church of England, and said, that we had not a Church, he meant a true Church. But after he went into France, and being at Geneva, he saw the Sabbath much prophaned, and the Wafer-cake given in the Sacrament in stead of Bread; whereupon he began to think better of the Church of England, and returning home, he became Pastour of a Church in Northamptonshire, called Abchurch.

The Church of Rome was a true Church, the Reformed Churches separated from it becoming a false Church. Though Ministers were ordained in the most corrupt estate of the Church of Rome, yet if they forsake the corruptions of the Church of Rome they are true Ministers, as the Church of Rome it self, if it would cast off its corruptions, should be a true Church.

See Mr Hickmans Laudensium Apostasia, p. 15, 16.

It is a necessary act of a Ministers Call to be ordained by other Ministers, not necessarily a Bishop, the Reformed Churches beyond Seas used not that, but the Imposition of Presbyters: and in England no Bishop could ordain alone, but Presbyters besides him were to lay hands on the man ordained.

Of the Ministers Calling.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 5.2. Sect. 34, 35. and Mr Durhams 5th Lect. on Revel. 1.9. and Lecture 3. on Rev. 2.6,7.

Some say the inward Calling of a Minister is a work of Gods Spirit, inwardly inclining a man to imbrace this Function for the right ends, Gods glory and Mans salvation. See Acts 8.21. Simon Magus refused, his heart was not right or streight before God. Not sufficient inward gifts of mind, of knowledg, learning and vertue, is the inward Calling to the Ministry, because all these things may befall such an one as ought not to undertake the Ministry at all (as a King) but should sinne grievously against God, if he undertake that Function; yea all these may befall a woman who may not be a Minister, I permit not a woman to exercise authority, or to speak in the Church.

Of a Ministers Relation to a particular Congregation.

And Chap. 3. v. 7. to 14. Lect. 2. Of his Ministerial Qualifications. And Chap. 3. ver. 14. Lect. 3. concerning the Identity of Angel, Bishop and Presbyter. Chamier De La Vocation Des Ministres, well defends the calling of the Ministers in the Reformed Churches, against Cardinal Perron in three Books. Par. on Rom. 10.4. pag. 137. and Elton on Col. 4.17. p. 717. A Minister can have no good assurance that God ever called him, or will work with him, unlesse he can find that thing which moved him to enter into this calling, was an earnest desire to do good in it, 1 Tim. 3.1. Hildersam. Some say two things are required to his inward Calling, 1. Ability, sufficiency of gifts: No man is called by God to the Ministry that hath not either learning attained by study, or else Inspirations, Visions and special Revelations. 2. A sincere desire to imploy them in Gods service, to glorifie God in that work, 1 Tim. 3.1,2. Tit. 1. and save souls.

Some

Some ſay,

1. There muſt be a fitting of the perſon with due qualifications.

2. A working in him a ſincere deſire to honour God in that Function, 1 Tim. 3.1. 1 Cor. 16.5.

For the outward Calling, there is no particular manner or kind of Calling binding the conſcience to that and no other, becauſe bare example without a precept doth not bind. He hath the outward Calling to the Miniſtry, who is appointed to this by ſuch who are intruſted with this care. Paul left Titus in Crete to ordain Elders, that is, Miniſters.

Three things (ſay ſome) belong to the external Call, Exploration, Approbation, Separation.

1. Exploration or Examination, Acts 6.2,3. 1 Tim. 3.10. See 1 Tim. 5.21,22. & 2 Tim. 2.2.

2. Approbation, Col. 1.7. & 4.7.

3. Separation of them to the work, and ordaining them, Titus 1.15. Hereby,

1. They are warned of the importance of the work.

2. Prayer is made for a bleſſing, 2 Cor. 3.6,7.

3. A publick teſtimony is given to the Church of his fitneſſe for ſervice, Acts 13.2, 3.

Dr Arrowſmith on John 1.6. ſaith, Three things concur to a lawfull Calling,

1. Ability, 2 Tim. 2.2.

2. Inclination to that, above all other works, 1 Pet. 5.2.

3. Separation, Acts 13.2.

There is a double Calling neceſſary to a Diſpenſer of the Myſteries of Salvation, Inward and Outward. The Inward inableth them, the Outward authoriſeth them to diſcharge their ſacred Function. Where there are gifts, if God encline the heart of the party to enter into the Miniſtry, there is an inward Calling; yet this alone ſufficeth not without an outward Calling, either Ordinary or Extraordinary; we are not now to expect extraordinary Callings ſince miracles are ceaſed. The ordinary Calling is by the Impoſition of the hands * of the Presbytery, Jer. 14.14. & 27.15. Rom. 10.5. No other Ordination was heard of for fifteen hundred years, or at leaſt approved of. Dr Featleys Diſtinction of Clergy and Laity.

See Heb. 5.4. Rom. 10.22. 2 Tim. 2.2.

* This imports, 1. A deſignation of the perſon to the Office, Numb. 27.18 & 8.10,11. 2. An inveſting them with authority for that Office, Gen. 48.14,15. 3. An imploring of Gods bleſſing on them, Act. 14.26.

The Calling of men to the Miniſtry, is either

Immediate and Extraordinary, ſuch as the Prophets had in the Old Teſtament, and the Apoſtles had by Chriſt himſelf, Gal. 1.1. So in caſe of inevitable neceſſity, Chriſtians may take an extraordinary courſe among themſelves to ſet up one amongſt them, or in caſe of general Apoſtaſie. Mediate and Ordinary, ſuch as is now adayes of Paſtours, both are Divine; every Miniſter is as truly called, though not as immediately, as in the Primitive times, Matth. 9.38. Acts 20.28.

Vide Crocii Antiregel. par. 2. c. 2. Quæſt. 1. & Maſonum de Miniſterio Anglicano l. 1. c. 2,3,7. & l. 2. cap. 1. & lib. 5. cap. 14.

Munus Apoſtolicum, the Apoſtolical Function is ceaſed, becauſe the Apoſtolical gifts are ceaſed, ſpeaking by an infallible ſpirit, ſpeaking all languages, having care and rule of all Nations.

Ordinary Presbyters are appointed by the holy Ghoſt, Epheſ. 4.11. Paſtours who have an ordinary mediate Call, are made the gift of God; as well as the extraordinary Offices, they are both equally divine, but they differ in three things;

1. Thoſe which are immediately called have God only for the Author, as Paul ſaith, Called by God and not by men.

2. Thoſe which are immediately called, are for the moſt part endowed with a ſingular priviledge of not erring, and gifts of miracles, though ſometimes it be otherwiſe.

3. They are not tied to one particular Church, but are ſent to all indefinitely: an immediate Call is not now to be expected.

The Lord called his firſt Apoſtles by his own voice, and appointed them to call others, and to eſtabliſh an Order for the ſucceeding of others in that Office of the Miniſtry to the end of the world, *Matth.*28.21. and till the Saints be one perfect man, *Epheſ.*4.11,14. that they that ſhould ever after be called, might not expect a voice from Heaven to their ears, but might be called in Chriſts appointed way. Mr Baxters Quakers Catechiſm, *pag.*21. There he alleadgeth ſeven Signs of his Call.

The Nature of a Miniſters Call conſiſteth in two main things, Election and Ordination.

Some alledge that place, *Act.*14.23. for popular elections.

In the Reformed Churches of France and Geneva, the people give no voices in the Election of Miniſters, but are onely permitted if they have any cauſes of diſlike or exception, to make them known to the Paſtours and Guides of the Church, and the power of judging ſuch exceptions reſteth wholly in them. When one Morelius a phantaſtical companion ſought to bring the elections of Biſhops and Miniſters to be popular, and ſwayed by the moſt voices of the people, he was condemned by all the Synods in France, as Beza ſheweth, Epiſt. 83. Yet Chamier would have the people chooſe their Paſtour.

L' election du Paſteur par le peuple auquel il doit ſervir, eſt une des plus eſſentielles conditions de la vocation; des plus ſoignenſement pratiquees & par les Apoſtres, & long temps apres eux. Chamier. De la Vocation Des Miniſtres, lib. 3.

Some ſay, the original power is in the Church, Acts 1. & 14. the formal in the Miniſters; as to ſee is originally in the whole body, but formally in the eye.

Others ſay, The Miniſters originally receive their Church-offices, not from the people but Chriſt himſelf, who is the fountain, there being not the ſame reaſon of a natural and voluntary action.

Mr Hudſons Vindicat.c.6. Queſtio oriri poteſt, ſi Eccleſia particularis non habeat paſtores, nec Presbyteros, ut aliquo caſu interdum poteſt contingere, cum plebi hac poteſtas data non ſit, Paſtores ſibi eligendi & ordinandi, an neceſſario ad vicinarum Eccleſiarum Presbyterium recurrere debeat, ut per Impoſitionem manuum Presbyterij illius ipſa Paſtorem à ſe electum per illos ordinatum queat accipere! Nec dubium eſt ita fieri debere. In caſu tamen neceſſitatis, ſi nulla ſit hac in proximis, nec in longinquis partibus Eccleſia, ut ſi Chriſtiani aliquot in novum orbem delati, Paſtoribus deſtituantur, certum eſt poſſe eos ſibi Presbyterium cum paſtoribus conſtituere à quibus gubernentur & doctantur, verbum Dei & Sacramenta percipiant. Salmaſ.apparat.ad primatum Papa. Mr Hudſons Vindic of Qu.2. p.233. Ordinary Miniſters are Miniſters of the Church Catholick, though not Catholick Miniſters actually. If Miniſters be Miniſters only in their particular Congregations where they are fixed, and to which they are called by the Congregation, I marvel that our Brethren of the congregational way here in England are ſo deſirous to have itinerant Miniſters to be ſent into all parts of the Land, and ſhall be faſtened to no particular Congregation; yea, and alſo to have gifted men not ordained at all, to be ſuffered to preach publickly and conſtantly in Congregations. *Id.*Vindicat.chap.6.

There is a Queſtion, Whether the Church or the Miniſters be firſt, becauſe the Miniſters are the inſtrumental cauſe of the converſion of the Church, and the Church of the choice of their Miniſters, which is ſomething like the Philoſophers Queſtion, Whether the Egge or the Hen were firſt; for as the Egge comes of a Hen, ſo the Hen comes ot an Egge. And as that is reſolved by the conſideration of the creation, then God made the Hen firſt; ſo is this Queſtion by conſideration of the firſt inſtitution, and ſetting up of the Evangelical Catholick Church, then we find that Chriſt ſet up the Officers firſt to convert men to be believers, and they being converted to the faith of Chriſt are bound to ſubmit themſelves to Chriſts Miniſters in the Lord.

If a Miniſter of this or that Congregation be not a member of the Church Catholick viſible, then he is no Miniſter out of his own Congregation, and therefore cannot preach or adminiſter any Sacrament as a Miniſter out of his own congregation. Yea if any members of another congregation ſhould come and hear a Miniſter preach in his own congregation, he could not preach to them, nor they hear him as a Miniſter, but only as a gifted Brother.

They

They of the Separation, and if not all, yet ſure ſome Independents place the whole eſſentiality of a Miniſters calling in election, accounting Ordination to be no more but the ſolemnization of the calling. We ſay, Permiſſio poteſtativa, or the power and commiſſion given to a man by which he is made of no Miniſter to be a Miniſter, is not from the Church electing him, but from the lawfull ordaining him. Election doth but deſigne ſuch a perſon to the Miniſtry of ſuch a Church.

Vocationis eſſentia eſt in electione Eccleſiæ & acceptione electi. Amef. Medul. Theſ. l. 1. c. 39. Adjunctum conſequens & ipſius functionis conſummans eſt Ordinatio, quæ nihil aliud eſt, quam ſolennis quædam introductio Miniſtri jam electi in liberam executionem, unde factum eſt, ut χειροτονία & χειροθεσία apud veteres idem ſæpe ſonent. Amef. ibid. Mr Gilleſp. Miſcel. cap 2. See more there. Shew us one place for Ordination by the people, or calling to the Office of a Miniſter without it. Dr Seam. Vindicat. of the Ordinat. of the Reformed Churches.

In Scripture we find Election and Ordination frequently diſtinguiſhed, not only as diſtinct acts, but oft times in diſtinct hands, Deut. 1. 13. The people chooſe them who ſhall be Rulers, but Moſes makes them Rulers, Acts 6. 3. the people chooſe, the Apoſtles appoint the Deacons. The chooſing of a perſon to an Office, is not the authorizing of the perſon elected, but the deſignation of the perſon to be authorized.

Mr Gilleſp. Miſcel. c. 4. See more there, and chap. 3.

Ordination is to be diſtinguiſhed from Election, for the whole Church may chooſe but not ordain. Ordination is an Eccleſiaſtical act of Government, but Election is not ſo.

Some ſay, The Biſhop onely is to ordain, Heb. 7. 7. 1 Tim. 5. 22. Tit. 1. 5. Jerom ſaith, Excepta ordinatione, what is it that a Biſhop doth which a Presbyter may not do? or at leaſt no Ordination ſhould be without a Biſhop. Vide Petav. Diſſertat. Eccleſ. c. 3, 4.

Dr Main in the Vindication of his Sermon againſt Falſe Prophets, pag. 20. ſaith, If the practice of the Apoſtles in the Scripture in this point were not clear, yet the practice and opinion of the Church for fifteen hundred years, ought to prevail. The like ſaith Dr Gauden in his Eccleſ. Anglic. Suſpiria. lib. 4. cap. 9. See alſo Mr Moſſoms firſt Sermon on Matth. 28. 19. Dr Taylors Epiſcopacy aſſerted. But Biſhop Uſher (who held that Epiſcopus & Preſbyter, gradu tantùm differunt, non ordine) ſaith, That in places where Biſhops cannot be had, the Ordination by Presbyters ſtandeth valid. See Mr Hickmans Treatiſe, That ſinne hath not a Poſitive Being, pag. 33, 34. and Mr Baxters Diſputat. of Church-Government, Diſp. 2. ch. 5, 6, 7.

Others ſay, It may be done by Presbyters. It is in the Directory deſcribed to be an outward ſolemn ſetting apart of perſons for the Office of the Miniſtry in the Church by preaching Presbyters, Numb. 8. 10, 11, 14, 19, 22. Acts 6. 3, 5, 6.

1. The Biſhops ordained not as Biſhops, but as Presbyters.
2. They ordained with Presbyters, 1 Tim. 4. 4.

Ordination is the ſetting of men apart to the work of the Miniſtry, the commending of them with Faſting and Prayer to the grace of God, and the authorizing of them to perform things pertaining to God; which others neither may not Act.13.13. Dr Field of the Church, l.5. c.55. Examination is as requisite in the Calling of a Minister, as is Ordination, and doth not can do: wherein the ceremony of Imposition of hands is used,

1. To expresse the setting of them apart for sacred imploiment.

2. To let them know that the hand of God is with them in all that they do in his Name, and by his Authority, to guide, strengthen and protect them.

3. To note out the person upon whom the Church by her prayers desireth the blessings of Almighty God to be poured in more plentifull sort than upon others, as being to take charge of others.

as much belong to the power of the Church, as Ordination: yet experience shewes, that many godly and simple Christians are not able to performe this worke, considering the subtilty of many deceitfull and learned Hereticks which creep into Churches. Pagets Arrow against the Separat. of Brown, cap.5. pag.102.

Some say, that the Calling of a Minister is void, because they have it from Antichrist:

1. Whatsoever is from Rome is not Antichristian, the Scriptures themselves passed to us through the corrupt ages of the Church.

2. There were during the papal tyranny many witnesses for the truth.

3. Some wicked men may be Officers in the Church; the Scribes and Pharisees; Judas, Act.20.29,30. Matth.10.4,5. & 23.2. The Ordination of Judas was as valid as that of the other Apostles. Ministers receive their Ordination from Christ and his Apostles, that which was Antichristian is removed.

4. Three things concur to make a thing Antichristian, Heresie, Idolatry, Tyranny.

The Papists condemn our Ministry as null, because it was not derived by an uninterrupted succession from their Church:

1. They had not an uninterrupted succession in their own Churches: Pope hath been against Pope, and several Popes at one time.

2. The first Reformers had personal succession from their men, they added the Doctrinals.

3. The Lord did extraordinarily stir up instruments to purge the Church, and did wonderfully prosper their endeavours.

Imposition of hands is a sacred action of spiritual efficacy; indeed a Sacrament, not onely by the Doctrine of the Schoolmen and Papists, but also by the confession of Calvin Instit. lib.4. cap.14. though not such a Sacrament as Baptism and the Lords Supper; which are seals and pledges of our union and communion with Christ; yet in a more general sense, as a Sacrament is defined a visible sign of an invisible grace. B. Down. Defence of his Sermon l.3 c.4. See B. Ushers sense of that place, Heb.6.2. enlarged.

The Socinians acknowledge it is fit for Order and Decency to retain Ordination in the Church. Peradventure many of the Sectaries of this time will hardly acknowledge thus much.

The Papists Ordination faileth divers wayes:

1. In the end; for the Bishop bids them take power to offer up Christs body as a Sacrifice to God.

2. They want the Institution; for Christ hath appointed no Priests in his Church to sacrifice.

3. They fail in the outward form; for they have many foolish ceremonies added to their consecration.

* See Dr Halls Apol. against them, p.579. Mr Lyfords Apol. for our publick Min. and Infant-Bapt. Concl.2.

The *Brownists fail in the main, which is the Imposition of hands by the Presbytery.

Some think that the ceremony of laying on of hands may be omitted. Sometimes we must be tied to example in the least gesture, though not prescribed, and yet men presume to dispense in a circumstance expresly prescribed, Titus 1.5. Timothy was ordained by laying on of hands: and enjoyned to lay hands on others in their Ordination. 1 Tim. 5.22. Thus were the Deacons ordained, Acts 6.6. and thus were Paul and Barnabas set apart for the execution of their calling, Acts 13.3.

Ordina-

Ordination is taken,

1. First and most frequently for the rite of imposing hands, which is the last act whereby a Ministers calling is consummated.

2. For that act wherein and whereby Church Governours do in the name and stead of Christ set apart one to be a Minister, and by such separation make him one, with Prayer, Fasting, and either with or without Imposition of hands.

Dr Seamans Vindicat. of the Reformed Churches Ordination. He saith there, That the chief Instruments of Reformation have been raised out of the number of ordained Persons in all places.

Again, he saith there, When I consider how uniform and accurate the Apostles were in observing Imposition of hands, and of this Rite alone in the matter of Ordination, and that we have no instance or example of their ordaining otherwise: I judge it sinfull for any who desire the Office of a Minister to refuse it, and scandalous in any Church wilfully to throw it aside.

Their * Duty:

It is laid forth,

1. By Titles, as Watchmen, Ezek. 3.17. & 33.7. Labourers, Matth. 9.37. Light and Salt, Matth. 5.13,14. Shepherds, John 21.15, Good Scribes, Matth. 13. Stewards, 1 Cor. 4.1. Nurses, 1 Thess. 2.7.

Ministers must teach sound and true Doctrine, 1 Tim. 3.9. & 4.6,7.

They preach from the Lord,

1. When they deliver no Doctrine, but what is according to godlinesse.

2. When they deliver it demonstratively.

3. When they deliver wholesome Doctrine in a forme of sound and savoury words.

It was Dr Harris his observation, that the humble Preachers converted most souls, not the choisest Schollers, whilst unbroken.

They must preach,

1. Zealously, John 5.35.

2. Compassionately, Matth. 9.36. & 23.27.

3. Convincingly, Col. 2.2.

4. Feelingly, according to the nature of the Doctrine. The best way to speak to the heart is to speak from the heart, 2 Cor. 2.4.

5. Frequently, [b] In season and out of season, Luk. 21.37 Act. 5.42. not at Funerals, say some. See Beams of former Light, Ch. 5. Sect. 2. Though there may be an abuse of such Sermons sometimes, yet the use of them is not therefore to be condemned.

[b] Augustine and Chrysostome preached every day in the week and year at least once or twice without fail, Te heard yesterday, ye shall hear to morrow, is common in their Tractates and Homilies. As preaching muſt not be curious, ſo neither over-ſlight, conſiſting of raw, ſudden, indigeſted Meditations. Homilies were firſt allowed in the Church, not to uphold or maintain an ignorant Miniſtry, or to ſupply his defect that ſhould take pains but would not, much leſſe to ſhut out preaching, but to ſupply the caſual defect of preaching through the weakneſſe and infirmity of the Miniſter.

Reaſons. 1. Becauſe of the difficulty and importance of the calling: it is one of the moſt excellent means to make their other labours proſperous by procuring a bleſſing upon them from God.

2. This is the next way to provoke in his heart a holy, Chriſtian and ſpiritual love of them. Let any man accuſtom to pray to God fervently for any perſon, and it will increaſe an holy and heavenly affection to them, as much as any one thing in the world, graces grow and increaſe by exerciſe, prayer is an exerciſe of love and charity.

3. This is the beſt way to prevent diſcouragement in ones labours.

Chryſoſtome ſaith, The work of a Miniſter is more laborious than that of a Carpenter. The Honour and Dignity of this Function.

Although the Miniſtry above all Callings be moſt ſubject to the contempt and diſgrace of prophane men, yet the Function is a worthy and excellent work, and as God himſelf hath greatly honoured them, ſo can they not but be honoured of all thoſe, who are the children of God.

1. The ſubject of this Office is the ſouls of men, their far better and more worthy part, the ſpiritual, immortal and moſt heavenly part of man; other functions are converſant about the body or eſtate.

2. The proper end of this is to procure Gods greateſt glory in ſubduing ſouls to him, and in bringing men to the greateſt happineſſe whereof they are capable, even to grace here, and glory hereafter.

him. *Joſephus Antiq. Jud.l.*11. *c.*8. records, That Alexander the Great coming with his Army againſt Jeruſalem, the High prieſt did meet him arrayed with his ſacred and magnificent attire: Alexander diſmounted himſelf, and in the High-prieſt worſhipped God, who, as he ſaid, had in a dream appeared unto him in that habit. Vide Mont. *Appar.*6. *p.*224. The Miniſtry of the Goſpel is much more excellent and glorious than that of the Law, 2 Cor.3.7,8,9.

This is to eſtabliſh the ſpiritual Kingdom of grace in the hearts of men, to convert them to God, and make them heirs of everlaſting happineſſe.

At the laſt day ſhall Andrew come in with Achaia by him converted to the ſaving knowledge of the truth; John with Aſia; Thomas with India; Peter with the Jews; and Paul with the Gentiles. See 1 *Theſſ.*2.19.

A Miniſter is called a man of God, 1 Sam.9.5. 1 Tim.5.1. & 2.3,17. His chief buſineſſe is to deal with God, and to be his Meſſenger unto men, the man of his counſel, who was admitted to be familiarly with him, yea whose whole life was to be consecrated to a special attendance upon God and his special service of making his wayes known unto the sons of men.

They are called Messengers of the Lord of Hosts, Mal. 2. 7. Embassadours of Christ, 2 Cor. 5.10. Semel legatus semper honoratus. Angels of the Churches, Fathers of their people, 2 Cor. 5.19,20. We are commanded to receive them in the Lord, to hold them in reputation, to esteem them very highly for their works sake, to hold them worthy double honour, and to obey them.

Good men have loved faithfull Ministers, 2 Chron. 30. 22. & 31. 4. & 35. 2. Matth. 10.11. Acts 16.15.

Aquila and Priscilla preferred Pauls safety before their own. Obadiah hid the Prophets with the hazard of his life, 1 Kings 18. 4. See against the contempt of them as Ministers, 2 Chron. 36.16. Luke 10.16.

God hath provided:

1. For the countenancing of them, Matth. 10.16. Luke 10.16.
2. For their safety, Luke 21.17,18. Rev. 1.16.
3. For their continuance, Matth. 28. ult. Ephes. 4.
4. For their maintenance, Gal. 6.5.

Of their Maintenance.

See B. Down. on 1 Tim. 3. 1,2. pag. 73. almost to the end.

A sufficient maintenance is due to the Minister, Matth. 10. 41. 1 Cor. 9. 9, 14, 15, 16.

The stipend of Ministers must be sufficient, honourable and stable, but the quota pars is not determined.

The Devil laboured to suppresse the Gospel, Mendaciis & inopia Luther. Roberts Epist.

1 Tim. 5.17. Honour there, is maintenance, the Elder is the Minister. If they be worthy to receive, then it is not in the pleasure of man to pay as he list. If the maintenance must be honourable, then it must not be of benevolence: for that is commonly both scant and uncertain, which is a thing miserable not honourable, Tenuitatem beneficiorum sequitur ignorantia Sacerdotum.

to the Revenue of the Gospel. See more there. Some say they will preach and take no Tithes, 2 Cor. 11.12. Vide Aquin. 2a, 2æ. Quæst. 87. Art. 1. & 3. Et Goulart. ad Cyp. Epist. 66.

It is a great Question, An decimæ Ministris jure divino sint solvendæ?

The Schoolmen are generally for the negative, and so are many able Protestant Divines. Rivet. in Gen. 28. Exercit. 125. and in his Jesuita vapulans. Capel. in Thes. Theol. Salmur. Mr Cartw. against the Rhemists on Heb. 7. 4. and in his necessity of Discipline. Mr Dod, Bishop Carleton, Dr Prideaux, Dr Sclater, Dr Cor. Burgesse, Mr Whateley, and Sr Thomas Rives, and Dr Gauden in his Case of Ministers maintenance, and Eccles. Angl. Suspiria, l. 2. c. 28. were for the affirmative.

The Question (saith Mr Mede on Acts 5.3,4,5.) should not be, Whether Tithes are due to the Ministers of the Gospel, meaning as a duty of the people unto them, but rather, Whether they be not due unto God; for so is the style of the Scripture, All the tithes are mine; these I give to Levi, and not you. There are many other uses for the imploiment of Bona Sacra, if they be more than is competent for them and theirs.

We challenge not Tithes principally by vertue of the Mosaical Laws of tithing, but as due to God by reservation, from the beginning, as following Christs Priesthood, as the only certainty mentioned in Scripture, as also consecrated to God by consent of Churches, and Edicts of Princes; as agreeing with the use and practice of the Church in all times. But as for the Mosaical Law and mandate of God concerning Levi, we make it not the ground of our title to Tithes. Mr Nettles Answer to Mr Seldens Jewish part of the History of Tithes.

The

The Quakers object against them, that they are Hirelings, preach for money. The great aim of their preaching should be the glory of God and salvation of souls, yet they ought to be encouraged, Luke 10.7. *Gal.*6.6. 1 *Cor.*9.11.

Of Preaching.

It is in a setled state of things, the publick interpretation and application of Scripture by a Minister assigned to the Office to a Congregation assembled for that purpose. Dr Gouge on Heb. 2.3. defines it to be a clear Revelation of the mystery of salvation by a lawfull Minister.

See Mr Hildersham's two last Lectures on Psal.51. It is a giving of the sense of the Scripture, and a more large opening of points of Doctrine to men, joyned with Reproofs, Exhortations, Comforts, and a right applying it to the hearers. Praedicatio verbi est medium gratiæ divinitùs institutum quo res regni Dei publicè & explicantur & applicantur populo ad salutem & ædificationem. Boules de Pastore. Vide plura ibid.

Or it may be defined, A sound explicating of Gods word, with application of it in the way of Power and Office by him who is thereunto called.

1. An Explication of Gods Word, Nehem. 8. 8. The Levites when they read the Law of God, or gave the distinct sense and meaning of the words: So must the Minister, he is commanded to divide the Word aright. See Luke 24. 27, 32.

It was then the common practice of the Church, to read, expound and apply the Scriptures, as Ezra did. Maresius in his 3d Edition of his Collegium Theologicum hath added, Brevis methodus concionandi per Aphorismos digesta. And there is an ingenious piece by an excellent Divine and Preacher, styled, Officium Concionatoris. There is Doctrine, Reason and Use in all the Sermons and Epistles of the Apostles.

2. Sound or right Explication, for there is a depraving of the Scripture.

3. With Application; Reprove, Rebuke, Exhort with all long-suffering and Doctrine, see 1 *Cor.*14.3. 2 *Tim.*4.2.

4. By Office and Power in him that is called. So the general duty which lies on every Christian may be distinguished from the peculiar Office of a Minister; private Christians are to teach and admonish one another, there is an Exhortation Charitative, and Potestative which belongs to him that is called.

One saith, It is an Ordinance of Christ, whereby persons have received Gifts from Heaven, and are separated to that Office to make known the will of God for the perfecting of the Saints.

The efficient cause is,

1. Supream and principal, Jesus Christ.

2. Instrumental, persons which have received Gifts from Heaven, are called and set apart to the Ministry.

Secondly, The material cause of it, the Doctrine of Salvation.

Thirdly, The formal, making it known and applying it.

Fourthly, The final, for the perfecting of the Saints.

By the Word preached:

1. Light shines in unto men, Psalm 19.7. ad finem.

2. It helps the Saints to mortifie their corruption, Psalm 119.9.

3. By it we conquer the Devil, *Ephes.*6.

4. We overcome the World, Epistle of John.

5. It enableth us to performe the duties of our relations, Col. 3.16. to bear all crosses, *Rom.*5.4.

6. Fils us with consolation, and keeps us from being Apostates.

The Word is interpreted aright, by declaring

1. The Order.

2. The Summe or Scope.

3. The Sense of the words; which is done by framing a Rhetorical and Logical Analysis of the Text.

Preaching consists of these Ingredients:

1. Right understanding.

2. True dividing.

3. Faithfull interpreting.

4. Zealous uttering.

5. Powerfull applying.

Miniſters perſwade uſually from five Topicks:

1. The mercies of God, Rom 12.1.

2. From the free grace of God, by the freedome that ſinners ſhall receive through grace, the free grace of God. Me thought (ſaid Mr Dod concerning Mr Cartwright) whilſt I heard him the Doctrinal part of his Sermon, I was in Heaven, but when he came to Apply, I ſometime thought, that had I been in his place, I could have applied his point more cloſely.

3. By the faithfulneſſe of God to his promiſe.

4. By Gods all-ſufficiency to make good his word.

5. By the glory of God, the end of our being. See Mr Durham on 3d of the *Revel.v.*14. *p.*260.

It is not, I ſuppoſe, ſimply neceſſary one ſhould take a ſet Text; yet Chriſt himſelf took a Text Luke 4. and applied it.

Rainold. *de lib. Apoc. Tom.*1 0. prælect. 2.

Chriſt when he executed the Office of a Miniſter here on earth, and taught the people, ſometimes interpreted a place which he took out of the Scripture, as Luke 4. 17. out of Iſaiah, ſometime without any ſet Text he ſpoke thoſe things which were moſt apt for the edifying of the Church.

Doctor Donne on Matth. 5. None but Deacons preached ſtanding, when the Order and Diſcipline of the primitive Church was in force. Maſter Thorndike of the Laws of the Church, chap. 24.

For the moſt part Chriſt preached ſitting, as Matth. 5. 1. Matth. 26. 55. Luke 4. 16. *Joh.*8.2. ſo did others who came to great place and dignity in the Church ordinarily preach ſitting too, and therefore their Churches were called Cathedral, becauſe they preached ſitting in chairs.

The Apoſtles were wont more often to ſtand, as is manifeſt from Acts 13. and other places. Chriſt ſate to ſhew his great and eminent authority. The Apoſtles ſtood to ſhew their reſpect to Gods people, Rainold. de lib. Apoc.

Whether private perſons not in office may preach?

If they have a Calling, either it is Ordinary or Extraordinary; if Ordinary, then they are not only gifted, but tried and ſeparated to it, Titus 1.5.

That men though gifted without being called to the Miniſtry, and by Ordination ſet apart for it, ſhould take upon them the Office or ordinary exerciſe of preaching, ſeems repugnant to thoſe Scriptures, *Jer.*23.21. *Rom.*10.15. *Heb.*5.4. 1 *Tim.*5. 22. Acts 13. 2.

Chriſt therefore frequently urgeth this, That he was ſent from his Father. Puniſhments have been inflicted on thoſe that have medled beyond their Call, as Uzza, Uzziah, Saul, 1 Sam. 13. 13. & 2. 6, 7. 2 Chron. 26. 16.

It were a great diſreputation to Religion, that all great and publick things, and every artifice or profitable ſcience ſhould in all the Societies of men be diſtinguiſhed by profeſſors, artiſts, and proper Miniſters; and onely Religion ſhould lye in common, apt to be bruiſed by the hard hand of Mechanicks, and ſullied by the ruder touch of undiſcerning and undiſtinguiſhed perſons. For

For the first place he means those that are by Office Prophets and Ministers or Deacons, they must preach, not those that have abilities only, for then it will follow those that have ability may baptize and rule too. The word Gift is used in Scripture for the Office it self, or gifted calling, Eph. 4.8,11. Two things are required to a calling, Gifts and Authority, Joh. 20.21,22.

Private fraternal teaching is a duty every man owes to another, Col. 3. 16. Private and domestick teaching is the duty of Governours of Families, Gen. 18. 19. Prov. 31. 1. but publick Ecclesiastical teaching is not to be undertaken without a solemne call and approbation, 1 Tim. 4. 15. See Doctor Collinges his Vindicia Ministerij Evangelici Revindicata. If men would be more carefull to performe those duties God requires of them to themselves and families, there would not be such an itch in them after this. Nullam certè talem consuetudinem habuit primitiva Ecclesia, nullam præsens Presbyterianorum, nullam Ecclesia Independentes in novâ Anglia militantes, saltem si Johanni Nortono, viro apprimè docto fides. D. Hickman. Concio de hæres. orig.

1 Cor. 12. 7. But the manifestation of the Spirit, is given to every man to profit withall. Private men will not want occasion to exercise their gifts in their families, learned men have published excellent Books for the good of the Church; Gifts must be used orderly.

For 1 Cor. 14. some think Paul speaks in that place, not of ordinary preaching, but of prophesying by the Spirit, that is, by Revelation.

Others say, they did this in way of preparing themselves for the Ministery.

Mr Cotton tels us, these were not ordinary, private men, but such as had extraordinary Gifts, the Gift of Tongues, and the like liberty of Preaching is not allowed them that want the like Gifts. See 1 Cor. 12. 28, 29, 30. See Deodat. in loc. Mr Cottons Keys of the Kingd.

That place Acts 8. 4. may receive answer from my Annotations on Acts 11.20. a like place.

They were men furnished with extraordinary Gifts, being Auditors of the Apostles at Jerusalem, and probably directed by them, Acts 21. 28. Then there were no setled Christian Churches.

Some learned Divines, though they hold none may enter into the Ministery without a peculiar Call, yet do say, that a private man sufficiently gifted (if he have the approbation of the Church) may teach publickly, they build it on that place 1 Cor. 14. where when the believers did meet together, they are allowed to prophesie. Mr Lyford in his Apology for our publick Ministery and Infant-Baptism, Conclus. 2. pag. 27, 28. proves by three Reasons, that the prophesying 1 Cor. 14. was extraordinary, and not a standing ordinary Gift in the Church, and others are of his judgment, as Mr Norton in his Answer to Apollonius, cap. 11. & vers. 30. of this Chapter proves as much.

In Ecclesia primitiva fuit exercitium quoddam prophetici cum à concionibus distinctum, 1 Cor. 14. 31, 32. Ad hoc exercitium habendum admittebantur non tantum ministri, sed & ex fratribus primarij, vel maximè approbati, pro donis illis, quæ habuerant sibi collata. Ames. lib. 4. de conse. cap. 26.

The Socinians further object;

1. Christ committed the keys to the Church, Matth. 18. 17, 18. To preach the Gospel is part of the power of the keys, therefore every one of the Church may preach.

We may not argue from a collective body to every member. We must distinguish also between the primitive seat of power and the actual administration of it.

2. They object that place, Matth. 23. 8, 10. Christ forbiddeth his Disciples to be called Rabbi Master, therefore none should take the title of Teachers.

None ought to assume dominion over the faith of others, 2 Cor. 1. 24. but the title Rabbi or Teacher was given to John the Baptist, John 3. 26.

3. A solemn confession of the truth belongs to all believers, Phil. 2. 11. therefore preaching confession is necessary to salvation, Mat. 10. 32. Rom. 10. 9, 10. so is not preaching.

4. Some urge, 2 Chron. 17. 7. He sent to his Princes, to teach in the Cities of Judah. By their power and authority, aiding the Levites which were sent also, with with them. Quòd principes populum docuisse dicuntur, intelligendam est, quòd testati sunt placere Regi ut docentes audiant, non enim usurparunt sibi functionem alienam. Ideo autem sacerdotibus & Levitis adjungit viros politicos, ut major esset eorum authoritas. Lavaterus in loc.

The Scriptures lay down these Rules,

First, No man must preach except he be sent, take any Office upon him unless he be called and approved; a Gospel-order is to be preserved; the Deacon, the meanest order is to be approved, Acts 6. 3. 1 Tim. 3. 10. A man is not to call himself, nor to be a Judg of his own sufficiency.

Christ assumed none of his Offices without a Call, a solemn mission and separation thereunto, John 10. 36. Apostles and Disciples were sent, Matth. 28. 19. Luke 9. 20. 1 Tim. 2. 7. & 2. 10. 1 John 20. 21. the Apostles likewise themselves took the like care, 2 Tim. 2. 2. Titus 1. 5.

Secondly, People are admonished to take heed what they hear, Mark 4. 24. and whom they hear.

Thirdly, Some will undertake to be teachers, though they be never so ignorant of the things they teach, 1 Tim. 1. 7.

Fourthly, Under this pretence false Prophets go forth into the world to corrupt the truths of God, and poison the souls of men, 2 Cor. 11. 3.

Ministers must preach often, especially on the Sabbath.

See Mr Wards Coal from the Altar.

Our Saviour preacht every Sabbath-day, Luke 4. 21. So did Paul, Act. 17. 2. See 2 Tim. 4. 2. The Fathers preacht twice every Lords day, and almost every week-day.

Paul bids the Minister preach in season and out of season; the Sabbath by reason of the publick meeting is a season of preaching, it is requisite therefore for him to preach every Sabbath.

Again, Christs custom was to go into the Synagogue every Sabbath-day, and so the Apostles.

Most of the Writings of Cyprian, Athanasius, Basil, Nazianzen, Chrysostom, Ambrose, Cyril, Austine, Leo, Gregory, were nothing else but Sermons preacht unto the people, 1 Cor. 15 ult. In the consecration of Bishops a Bible is put into their hands, and these words used, Accipe Evangelium, vade, pradica populo tibi commisso.

3. The sanctifying of the Sabbath must be done in the best manner that may be, both by Minister and people; the Minister must be helpful to the people in the sanctifying of it, he may then preach if he will give himself to reading and study, as he is cammanded.

4. His duty is to labour in the Word and Doctrine, that is, to take great pains in it, therefore he must preach Sabbath after Sabbath.

5. Every one is required to be plentifull in the work of the Lord, therefore the Minister in his special work of preaching must be plentifull, and this he is not unless he preach at least every Sabbath, and if his strength will serve him twice, both morning and evening.

Ministers must in their preaching denounce Gods wrath against sinners, 1 Sam. 12. 25. How comminatory are our Saviours words, O generation of vipers, how can you escape the condemnation of hell? And, Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites: And, Woe unto the world, because of offences: And, Woe be unto you that are rich, and that laugh; There shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. Paul is sharp, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. For such things sake the wrath of God comes upon the children of disobedience. Tribulation and anguish shall be upon every soul that doth evil. Moses discharges many vollies of curses upon those which break the Law of the Lord.

The Ministers words must be like goads to prick men to the heart, and when they are soundest asleep, they must be like Cocks that cry loudest in the deadest time of the night. King James said well of a Reverend Prelate of this Land, Me thinks this man preacheth of Death, as if Death were at my back. Master Fenner on 1 John 2. 6.

Reasons.

1. Because there is in every man an old man to be beaten down, the threats of the Word are a necessary instrument for working in a man a hatred of sinne.

2. There

2. There remaineth in the beſt of Gods ſervants much preſumption, whereby they are apt to embolden themſelves in ſinning; the Law muſt make way for the Goſpel, the threats of the Word are a moſt needfull means of humiliation. This is the moſt fruitfull and profitable teaching. It is good for the impenitent to make him repent, and for the penitent to make him repent more, if they wiſely limit the threats they utter.

There is a Frierly kind of preaching to preſs reſemblances and ſimilitudes too far, and a Jeſuitical * preaching to declaim much againſt Hereticks, and urge ſome things of Morality. But the beſt preaching is to convince men of their miſery by ſin, and to ſhew them the way to avoid it.

* Et hæc nimirum expedita concionandi methodus Jeſuitica, quam mihi etiam Spiræ & Wormatiæ, & Moguntiæ aliquando obſervaſſe viſus ſum: alta voce, ſed frivolis rationibus, contra hæreticos clamitare, & moralia in quibus Chriſtum Jeſum, & fidem juſtificantem omnium bonorum operum fontem ſemper deſideres identidem ſuis inculcare, quæ ipſa tamen melius forſan ex Seneca & Plutarcho, quam ex concionibus illorum didiceris. Sculter. de curriculo vitæ, pag. 18.

Plain preaching is moſt profitable for a mixt Auditory.

He is the beſt Scholar that can teach Chriſt plainlieſt: and for my part if I would ſet my ſelf to be idle, I would chooſe that kind of preaching which is counted ſo laborious. Dr Taylor on Titus 9.

Paul (ſaith he there) being the greateſt Schollar of all the Apoſtles, was the moſt fearfull to make the leaſt ſhew of it.

Doctor Preſton being asked, Why he preacht ſo plainly, and dilated ſo much in his Sermons: anſwered, He was a Fiſherman: Now Fiſhermen, ſaid he, if they ſhould wind up the Net, and ſo caſt it into the Sea, they ſhould catch nothing, but when they ſpread the Net then they catch the Fiſh; I ſpread my Net (ſaid he) becauſe I would catch the fiſh, that is, I preach ſo plainly and dilate ſo much in my Sermons, that I may win ſouls to Chriſt.

Miniſters muſt preach in the evidence and demonſtration, not ſo much of Art or Nature, as of the Spirit and Grace. Many turn ſound preaching into a ſound of preaching, tickling mens ears like a tinkling cymbal.

He that means to gain a ſoul, muſt not make his Sermon an oſtentation of his eloquence, but the Law of his own life. Doctor Remonſt.

King James * reſembled the unprofitable pomp of ſuch ſelf-ſeeking diſcourſe, ſtuft with a vain-glorious variety of humane allegations, to the red and blew flowers that peſter the corn when it ſtands in the field, where they are more noiſom to the growing crop, then beautifull to the beholding eyes.

Jeremy Taylor on Matthew 10. 16. * In the Preface to his

There is a kind of fine, neat, dainty preaching, conſiſting in well-ſounding words, and of ſtrains of humane wit and learning, to ſet out the skill and art of the ſpeaker, and make the hearer applaud and commend him; which a man may well doubt, whether ever God will bleſs to the winning of ſouls. Theſe ſelf-preaching men that make preaching little elſe but an oſtentation of wit and reading, do put the ſword of the Spirit into a velvet ſcabbard that it cannot prick and wound the heart.

The word of God ſeems to be moſt conveniently applied by handling it after the manner of Doctrine and Uſe; this courſe is of all other the fitteſt for the memory of ſpeaker and hearer, for the capacity of the ſimple, and for the profitable making uſe of all learning and reading. It giveth leaſt ſcope to wander from the Text, and holdeth a man moſt cloſely to the revealed will of God. It hath the clear example of Chriſt, who Luke 4. having read his Text, firſt interpreted it, then obſerved the points of Doctrine, ſaying, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears. Then he began to apply it by way of reproof, which he illuſtrated with fit examples out of Scripture, and ſo would have proceeded, but his hearers moved with rage interrupted him.

All Doctrines will not yield all theſe Uſes, but ſome one, ſome another, wherefore thoſe muſt be taken that are fitteſt for time, place or matter.

The preaching of all Doctrines is to end in Uſe and Application. When Chriſt had laid down all the ſpeculative conſiderations about the day of Judgment, he bids them make uſe of it, Matth. 24. 42. Exhortation is ſo neceſſary that all the miniſterial work is called by this name, Acts 2. 40. & 13. 15. See 1 Tim. 4. 13. & 6. 2. In all the Epiſtles after the doctrinal part followeth the hortatory, Titus 1. 9. See John 4. 9. We have divers examples of ſuch as applied the word particularly to the hearers, 1 Kings 18. 18. Hoſ. 5. 1. Mal. 2. 1. Luke 3. 19. This preaching is enjoyned to Miniſters under the Goſpel, Iſaiah 58. 1. Titus 2. 5. God doth work moſt mightily with ſuch preaching, John 4. 18, 19. Acts 2. 36, 37.

CHAP.

Chap. III.

Of Eccleſiaſticall Juriſdiction and Governement.

THat there is an Eccleſiaſtical Government diſtinct from the Civil, it is apparent, ſeeing the Church and State are diſtinct, their Governments muſt be alſo diſtinct. Yea the Church may be not only diſtinct but ſeparate from the State, neither the ſupream nor ſubordinate powers being incorporate in the Church, but meer aliens from it, and perhaps enemies to it.

God hath eſtabliſhed two diſtinct powers on earth, * the one of the Keys comitted to the Church, the other of the Sword committed to the Civil Magiſtrate. That of the Keys is ordained to work on the inward man, having immediate relation to the remitting or retaining of ſins. That of the Sword is appointed to work upon the outward man, yielding protection to the obedient, and inflicting external puniſhment upon the rebellious and diſobedient.

Some call it the power of the Keys, others Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline, others Church-government.

It is an act of power and authority, 2 Cor. 10. 8. & 13. 10. but whether poteſtas forenſis, of juriſdiction, or muneris, of office, is a queſtion.

That there is a Church-power appeareth plainly by Chriſts giving them the Keys, Matth. 16. 18, 19. Ubi voce Clavium Regni Cœlorum, deſignatur poteſtas miniſterio Eccleſiaſtico divinitus conceſſa in admittendis hominibus in regnum Dei & excludendis è regno Dei; frequens enim eſt Scripturæ nomenclatione Clavium denotare poteſtatem & auctoritatem in adminiſtrando munere Concredito, Eſa. 22. 22. Luc. 11. 52. Apoc. 9. 1, 2. & 3, 7. Brochm. De Diſciplina Eccleſ. Sect. 1. Vide ejus Quæſt. 7. And alſo in the titles of Shepherds, Governours, Rulers and Guides, Heb. 13. 7, 17. 1 Cor. 12. 28. God hath ſet in the Church, the other things there reckoned are all peculiar to the Church.

Junius lib. 4. Eccleſiaſtici cap. 4. ſhews well the agreement and difference alſo between Political and Eccleſiaſtical adminiſtration.

See Mr Gilleſpies Aarons Rod bloſſoming, lib. 1. cap. 1, 2, 3. and his Miſc. c. 19. And the London Miniſters Jus Divinum of Church-Governement. * Biſhop Uſhers Speech in the Caſtle-chamber at Dublin concerning the Oath of Supremacy. The Keys are an Enſign of power and authority in ſome Corporations, as in others the Mace and Sword.

There is a two-fold Miniſterial power, 1. Poteſtas ordinis, which conſiſts meerly in preaching the Word and adminiſtring the Sacraments. 2. Juriſdictionis, whereby they govern in the Church, by binding the Impenitent, and loſing the Penitent.

Mr Udall told them in the days of Queen Elizabeth, that if they would not ſet up the Diſcipline of Chriſt in the Church, Chriſt would ſet it up himſelf in a way that would make their hearts to ake. Diſcipline is uſed ſometimes largely, ſo as it extendeth to all Rule and Order, appointed or left for the right managing of the things of God, or ſtrictly for the Cenſures of the Church. So there may be a true Church without Diſcipline. The Helvetians and thoſe of Switzerland have no ſuſpenſion at all, but what offences other Churches ſuſpend for the Civil Magiſtrate puniſheth other way. See Maſter Thorndikes Principles of Chriſtian Truth, chap. 11, 17, 18. 20. And Maſter Coleman on Jud 11. 20. againſt Excommunication and Ruling Elders. Quæ ipſam ſubſtantiam attingunt, juberi à ſolo Deo debuerunt; adeoque ei quicquam adjicere vel detrahere neſas arbitremur. Verum externa gubernationis formam & ordinari poſſe ab Eccleſia, & pro varietate locorum, temporum ac perſonarum mutari interdum neceſſario oportuiſſe, Chriſti Eccleſia nunc ex quibuſlibet populis Cœtunte, exiſtimo nobis in Confeſſo eſſe. Gerſ. Buc. Diſſertat. de Gubernat. Eccleſ.

The Object of this ſpiritual power are religious things in a religious conſideration, but it is not an abſolute ſupream power.

The Papiſts turn all Eccleſiaſtical power into a meer civill and worldly power.

The Miniſterial power manifeſts it ſelf:

1. In doctrinal deciſions of matters of faith.
2. In making wholſome Eccleſiaſtical Laws.
3. In executing Church-cenſures.

But though they have power of declaring Gods will concerning matters of faith and worſhip to the people, yet they cannot make any new Article of Faith, nor propound any thing as neceſſary to be believed to ſalvation.

Excommunication ſtands,

1. In a plain convincing them of the guilt of ſinne, and the wrath of God, under which they lie.

2. In diſcovering Gods pardoning mercy to a humbled ſinner, and in admoniſhing them, 1 Theſſ. 5. 14. 2 Theſſ. 3. 15.

3. In withdrawing from their ſociety, if they continue wicked, 1 Corinth. 5. 7, 13.

Vide Spanhem. Epiſt. ad Buchanan q. 2. Maſter Bals Trial of the ground of Separation. See Mr Cawdries Review of Mr Hookers Survey, c. 11. Vide Brochm. De Diſcip. Eccl. Sect. 5. & Quæſt. 10.

It is a great Queſtion, Penes quos ſit poteſtas Eccleſiaſtica? Who are the ſubject of this Eccleſiaſtical power?

The Community of the faithfull (much leſſe two or three ſeparated from the world, and gathered together into the name of Chriſt by a Covenant) are not the proper and immediate ſubject of power Eccleſiaſtical, Matth. 28. 19, 20. Joh. 20. 21, 22. & 21. 15, 16. were ſpoken to ſpecial perſons, not the whole community. The Apoſtle Acts 20. 28. ſpeaks unto the Presbyters of Epheſus, and ſaith, That they were appointed Overſeers by the holy Ghoſt, that they might govern the Church of God. Mr Rutherford ſaith, The Keys were given for the Church, but not to the Church. See Mr Thorndikes 3d Book of the Laws of the Church, chap. 31. toward the end.

Mr Lawſon ſhews that the power of the Keyes is not primarily in the Pope, nor in the Civil Sovereign, nor in the Prelate, nor in the Presbyter, nor in both joyntly, but in the whole Church. His Politica Sacra & civilis, cap. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. Excommunicationem & Scriptura Sacra præceptis exemplisque docet, & ſancti Patres uno ore Confirmarunt. Junij Eccleſiaſtici l. 3. c. 2. Plerique Cypriani. libri ejus ſunt argumenti. Auguſtini Epiſtola & libri hoc argumento pleni ſunt, & in eo totus ferè liber de fide & operibus conſumitur. Omnia Patrum Sanctorum Scripta his documentis Circumſtaunt, Id. ibid.

Jerome placeth the firſt foundation of Excommunication in that moſt ſevere puniſhment of God, in which he caſt Adam for his ſinne out of Paradiſe.

Mr Norton * urgeth Acts 14. 23. to prove the power to be in the fraternity, it is ſaid there, That Presbyters were ordained by Paul and Barnabas in every Church. They were ordained in the Churches, but not by them. He urgeth alſo Act. 6. that proves nothing but that the Election of Officers doth ſome way belong to the people, but that their Authority depends on the people cannot be thence collected.

* Adverſus Appollon. c. 4. Jus excommunicandi ante Papiſticam illam tyrannidem unquam penes unam fuiſſe comperitur, ſed penes Presbyterium, & quidem non excluſo penitus populo. Bern. Epiſt.

Mr Norton, Chap. 5. of that Book, ſaith, Quod exercetur nomine Chriſti, recipitur immediatè à Chriſto. At officium Rectorum exercetur nomine Chriſti, 2 Cor. 5. 20. Here he not only grants but alſo proves Rectores Eccleſiæ eſſe immediatum ſubjectum poteſtatis, againſt which he aſſerted and argued in his fourth Chapter. And after in the ſame fifth Chapter he ſaith, Multitudo non committit poteſtatem Eccleſiæ Rectoribus, tantum deſignat perſonas, therefore it is not the firſt and immediate ſubject of eccleſiaſticall power, which he endeavoured to prove chap. 4.

Excommunication is the greateſt and laſt cenſure of the Church, Judicium maximum & tremendum. See Mat. 16. 18. Mat. 19. & 18. 1 Cor. 5.

This

This Ordinance is usefull:

1. To the whole Church, hereby the honour and beauty of the Church of Christ is preserved from the defilement and scandal which such an offence would bring upon it, otherwise the evil example would infect, 1 Cor. 5. 4. this was typified by the Leper whom God would have shut up in his Tent, least the rest of the Congregation should be infected.

2. Gods people are hereby made more watchfull.

3. It is usefull to the offender himself, for the saving of his soul is the end of it, 1 Cor. 5. 3. and that he may not commit the like fault again, 1 Tim. 1. 20. The power of Excommunication Formaliter & executive is proper to the company or assembly of Governours and Rulers in the Church derived from Christ, to be exercised as Christ shall go before them, but with notice to, and due regard had of the whole society.

Certainly, the Church of England is not the Church of England but in name, till the power of Excommunication be restored unto it, which there was not, nor ever can be sufficient cause to take from any Church. Mr Thorndikes Due way of Composing the Differences on Foot, He saith after there, That the being of a Church consisteth in the power of Excommunication.

It is a Question, An Episcopus præsit Presbytero jure divino?

A Bishop is a man chosen out among the Ministers to have chief Authority in the Ordaining of Ministers in a certain Circuit, and overseeing them with their flocks.

Superintendentis vox, *pro eo qui Presbyteris præest, non est proximi seculi inventum, sed jam olim sic Episcopum interpretatus est B. Hieronymus Epistola ad Evagrium. Untill our Biſhops receive their Right, though we are glad to have our King, we may rationally fear we ſhall not hold him. Id. ibid.

Some urge this for the lawfulneſſe of their Office by Gods Word.

By proportion of the chief Prieſts under the Law, and of the Apoſtles under the Goſpel. The high-Prieſt was ſet over the other Prieſts, and they over the Levites, Numb. 3. & 4. Chapter. The twelve Apoſtles were more eminent then the ſeventy Diſciples, and not only exceeded in excellency of Gifts, but in amplitude of Authority and power. Now (ſay they) it is the conſtant Doctrine of all the Fathers, that the Biſhops ſucceeded the Apoſtles in the ordinary Governement of the Church, as alſo the Presbyters ſucceeded the Seventy Diſciples. Epiſc. Dav. Determinat. 42. Jerom ſaith, The order of Biſhops came in by meer cuſtome of the Church, to avoid Schiſms which aroſe for want of Heads, but how can that be when it was practiſed at Alexandria by Mark the Evangeliſt? Chriſts meaning is not Luke 22. 25, 26. to make an equality among Miniſters, but to ſet a difference between Kings and the Miniſters of the Word, that none ſhould invade the right of Princes under the pretence of their Miniſtery. Doctor Hampton on that place. See more there.

Jeroms authority in this cauſe ought to be of greateſt weight, becauſe he is the only man almoſt among the Fathers, whom the Diſciplinarians can alleadge againſt the ſuperiority of Biſhops. Bp Down. Defence of his Sermon, l. 3. c. 2.

The Superiority of Biſhops over other Miniſters, I place in three things: ſingularity of preeminence during life, the power of Ordination, and the power of Juriſdiction: All which I ground on Titus 1. 5. Bp Down. Defence of his Sermon, l. 3. c. 3.

Although the power of Ordination was held in the Primitive Church to be ſo peculiar to Biſhops, as that ordinarily and regularly the Ordination was not thought lawfull, which was not done by a Biſhop: Yet it doth not follow, but that extraordinarily, and in caſe of neceſſity, Presbyters might Ordain. Howbeit, I muſt confeſs, I am not able to alleadge any approved examples thereof. Id. ibid.

The true original of the ſuperiority of Biſhops, Metropolitans, and Patriarches in their Circuites was the pattern of Civil Governement in the Romane Empire, divided into certain Precincts, which the Church did follow. Id. l. 4. c. 5.

Our Engliſh Tranſlators did not keep the word Presbyter, as the Latines did, which in ſhort time would have been as familiar to an Engliſh ear (in the Eccleſiaſticall notion of it) as thoſe of Biſhop or Deacon, being both of them Greek of the ſame original, whereas the word Elder being of ambiguous ſenſe, hath given occaſion to the factiouſneſs of the troublers of Iſrael, to grub up by the roots thoſe goodly Cedars of the Church the Biſhops, and plant their ſtinking Elders in the place thereof. Dr Heylins Obſervator Reſcued, chap. 5. See more there, Why Mr Selden was no friend to Biſhops. Vide Petav. De Eccleſiaſt. Hierarchia, lib. 1. cap. 2.

Epiſcopos, Diœceſanos, & Metropolitanos, non oppugnamus, quatenus dicuntur ſolius ordinis cauſa olim Eccleſiæ arbitrio Conſtituti. Nec enim præterit nos, quam multa ſint à Patribus de Epiſcoporum ac Metropolitarum ſedibus Conſtituta cum zelo nequaquam contemnendo, tum legibus certis ſingulorum auctoritate definita. Sed tamen quum iſta, & humanæ tantùm ſanctionis fuerint, certum ordinem in Eccleſia præſcribentis; & deſierint primò quidem in Oligarchiam, deinde in abominandam illam Tyrannidem, quæ ab his initijs exorta, præterquam quod rectum Eccleſiæ ſtatum ſubverterit, hodie etiam ejus inſtaurationi, in papatu moram afferat; acquieſcimus in Apoſtolorum ordine ac praxi. We

We confeſs, ſaith Biſhop Davenant, Determinat. 42. that according to Chriſts appointment all the Apoſtles were equall in degree and power, but we deny that that parity among the Miniſters of the Goſpel is here or any where eſtabliſhed, which they maintain who oppoſe the Epiſcopal Dignity. For notwithſtanding this command of Chriſt, the twelve Apoſtles were ſuperiour in Dignity and greater in Power than the twelve Diſciples, and the chief Paſtours were appointed by the Apoſtles in the Church of Epheſus and Crete, which had power of juriſdiction over the Presbyters of thoſe Churches.

Lay-Presbyteries and parity of Miniſters the two pillars of the new Diſcipline. Biſhop Down. defence of his Sermon, lib. 3. chap. 3.

The Apoſtle had no ſuperiority over the Diſciples either of Ordination or Juriſdiction.

2. The Queſtion is concerning Officers of the ſame kind, and the inſtance is of Officers of different kinds, amongſt whom there may be ſuperiority and inferiority, as there is amongſt us between Presbyters and Deacons. The Apoſtles were ſuperiour to Evangeliſts and Paſtors, but one Apoſtle had not ſuperiority over another, or one Evangeliſt over another. Smectymn. Anſwer to an Humble Remonſtrance. Sect. 13. Learned Divines both Proteſtants and Papiſts hold, That Biſhops and Presbyters differ rather in execution of ſome acts of their order appropriated to Biſhops only, than in their eſſential order. A Biſhop hath an eminency of degree in the ſame order, but his Eccleſiaſtical order is the ſame with the Presbyters or Prieſts. Dr Featly in a conference with Everard a Popiſh Prieſt.

1 Tim. 5. 22. Titus 1. 5.

Though there be more dignity in a Biſhop, there is more neceſſity of a Presbyter; that is, of one to officiate in Preaching the Word, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, (whereof there is continuall uſe) than of a Biſhop to Ordain, (if none could do it but a Biſhop) which is required but ſometimes; and though a Biſhop performe the ſame acts, yet he doth them not as a Biſhop, but as a Presbyter. There can be conceived but three forms of Governement, Epiſcopal moſt conformable to Monarchy, Presbyterial to Ariſtocracy, and Independent as they term it, to Democracy. It is a Queſtion, An Eccleſia regimen ſit Monarchicum aut Ariſtocraticum? Whether the Governement of the Church be Monarchical or Ariſtocratical? The Governement of the Church in reſpect of its Head, Chriſt, is a Monarchy; in reſpect of the Paſtours that governe in common, and with like authority amongſt themſelves, it is an Ariſtocracy, or the rule of the beſt men, in reſpect that the people are not ſecluded, but have their intereſt in Church-matters, it is a Democracy or popular eſtate. Cartw. Reply in Defence of the Admonit. p. 35. Of Councels or Synods.

The name of Synod doth in his primary and large acception agree to every Aſſembly, ſo doth the name of Councel to every Aſſembly of conſultation. The former being derived from συνοδεύειν is all one with cœtus, and imports the Aſſembly of any multitude which meeteth and cometh together. The later being derived of Cilia * (whence alſo Supercilium) imports the common or joynt intending or bending their eyes both of body and mind to the inveſtigation of truth in that matter, which is propoſed in the Aſſembly. But both theſe words being now drawn from thoſe their large and primitive ſignifications, are by Eccleſiaſtical Writers and uſe of ſpeech reſtrained and appropriated to thoſe Aſſemblies of eccleſiaſtical perſons wherein they come together to conſult of ſuch matters as concern either the Faith or Diſcipline of the Church. Doctor Crakanth. Vigilius Dormitans, cap. 19.

A Synod is an eccleſiaſtical meeting conſiſting of fit perſons called by the Churches, and ſent as their meſſengers, to diſcover and determine of doubtfull caſes, either in Doctrine or Practice according to the truth. Hookers Survey of Church-Diſcipline, *par.*4.*c.*3.

The firſt Councels have more Authority, the latter more Reaſon. The firſt are more venerable; the latter more inquiſitive and ſeeing. Doctor Taylors Liberty of Propheſying, *Sect.*6th. They were wont in ſuch Aſſemblies firſt of all to produce and eminently to place in the midſt before them the holy Scriptures.

A Councel is a free publick eccleſiaſtical meeting, eſpecially of Biſhops and alſo of other Doctors lawfully deputed by divers Churches, for the examining of eccleſiaſtical cauſes, according to the Scriptures, and thoſe according to the Power given by common ſuffrages, without favour of parties to be determined, in matters of Faith by Cannons, in caſes of practice, by Preſidents, in Diſcipline, by Decrees and Conſtitutions. Dr Prid. Synopſis of Councels, ch. 1.

Synods are either Heretical, Conciliabula, or Orthodox, Concilia, as Binius and Andradius diſtinguiſh.

Councels are either,
- Firſt, General.
- Secondly, Particular.
  1. National.
  2. Provincial.
  3. Dioceſane.

If Councels had been ſimply neceſſary, Chriſt or his Apoſtles at leaſt would ſomewhere have commanded them to be celebrated: which yet we read no where done by them. Beſides the Church and Faith remained ſafe for three hundred years without a general Councel from the time of the Apoſtles even to the Synod of Nice. For this is the difference between a Church and Commonwealth, that a Commonwealth ſtands in need of humane Councel, and cannot ſtand without it, but the Church is governed and preſerved by God, and though a Councel conduce to its external State, yet the life and ſociety of the Church doth not conſiſt in it.

A Councel which repreſents the Univerſal Church, as it is compounded of particular Churches, is called Univerſal or Oecumenical. The Councel which repreſents a particular Church (as it conſiſts in one Aſſembly) is called a Presbytery or Eccleſiaſtical Senate. When it repreſents a particular Church, as it is conſtituted out of the conſociation of many Aſſemblies, it is called either a National Councel, if Embaſſadours come from all Provinces into which the Nation is diſperſed to that Eccleſiaſtical meeting, or a Provincial Councel if the Churches ſend only from one Province Deputies to the ſame Aſſembly.

The moſt famous, lawfull, and Oecumenical Councels were thoſe four:

Sic priſcas illas Synodos, ut Nicenam, Conſtantinopolitanam, Epheſinam primam, Chalcedonenſem ac ſimiles, quæ confutandis erroribus habitæ ſunt, libenter amplectimur, reverentiamque ut ſacro ſanctas, quantum attinet ad fidei dogmata: nihil enim continent quàm puram & nativam Scripturæ interpretationem, quam ſancti Patres ſpirituali prudentia, ad frangendos religionis hoſtes qui tunc emerſerant, accommodarunt Calv. Inſtit. lib. 4. cap. 9. Sect. 8. Concilium univerſale cum non ex una gente, ſed ex toto orbe Chriſtiano Epiſcopi ac Presbyteri propter maximas cauſas publica authoritate congregantur, ut olim à pijs Imperatoribus ſæpè, ad quæ ex ſingulis ferè Provinciis Africæ, Aſiæ, Europæ aliqui convenerunt. Hæ vocantur σύνοδοι ἀικουμενικοι, vel quia ex omni parte orbis ad eas convenitur, vel quia ut quidam volunt, ab Imperatore congregabantur, qui olim totius orbis Chriſtiani Imperium habuit. Whitakerus de Concil. Quæſt. 4. c. 2.

The firſt Nicene Councel called by the Emperour Conſtantine the Great againſt Arius, who denied the Deity of Chriſt.

The firſt Conſtantinopolitan Councel called by the Emperour Theodoſius the elder againſt Macedonius who denied the Deity of the holy Ghoſt.

The firſt Epheſine Councel called by the Emperor Theodoſius the younger againſt Neſtorius, who held that there were two Perſons in Chriſt.

Fourthly, The Chalcedonian called by the Emperour Martian againſt Eutyches, who held that the one Nature in Chriſt conſiſted of the Divine and Humane.

These Councels were celebrated within five hundred years after Chriſts birth.

That famous Councel of Nice was the firſt and beſt generall Aſſembly after the Apoſtles time that was ſummoned in the Chriſtian world, it had in it 318 Biſhops, Totius orbis terrarum lumina, Dr Featleys Caſe for the Spectacles. In this Councel the Emperour burnt all the accuſations which the Biſhops brought againſt each other as unworthy to be ſeen. Dr Prid. of Councels, c. 4.

Councels there have been called Ancient, becauſe leſſe Modern; and General, becauſe leſſe Particular: for the firſt was not till more then three hundred years after Chriſt, nor to the largeſt appears it, that ever any were ſummoned beyond the bounds of the ancient Roman Empire, though Chriſtianity were much far extended. Rainold. par. 2. Apoc.

That

That a Synod be general and lawfull, three things are necessarily and essentially required.

1. The first which concerns the generality of it, is, That the Calling and Summons to the Councel be general and Oecumenical. Quod omnes tangit ab omnibus approbari debet. The lawfulness of Synods consists partly, in their orderly Assembling by lawful authority, and partly in their orderly Government and proceedings when they are assembled. Crakanth. Vigil. Derwit. c. 19.

The nature of Synods is all one, when they be Provincial, National or Oecumenical, and they only differ as greater or lesser. Their power is not meerly consultatory and swasive, but authoritative, and to be submitted unto by those for whom their delegation is, so far as their acts are according to the Word of God. In Synodo est authoritatis apex, totius Ecclesiæ unitas, ordinis firmamentum. Leyd. professi. de Concil. A few private men, yea one man or woman may counsel, advise or perswade. Mr Hudsons Vindicat. c. 7.

It is a Question between us and the Papists, Cujus sit congregare Concilia? Who hath the power of calling a Councel?

The Papists generally say the Pope. Vide Bellarm. de Concil. lib. 1. cap. 12, 13. We the Emperour and other Christian Princes. The four first general Councels were called by four Emperours, as was before mentioned. The Pope of Rome out of his own Province hath no right nor authority of calling a Councel.

The true cause (saith Dr Ames) why general Councels were called by the authority of the Emperour, was because the Emperour alone, not the Pope, had universal power.

See Crakanth. of the six General Councel, c. 19.

It is a Question between us and the Papists, Quinam sunt ad Concilium convocandi? Who are to be called to a Councel?

The Papists hold only the Clergy may be of the Councel, and of the Clergy only Bishops as Judges.

Men that are famous for wisdom, holiness of life, and experience of things, men that are inflamed with a zeal to God, and to the salvation of men, with the love of the truth and peace.

From Acts 15. 6. & 23. it is manifest that not onely the Apostles, but also the Elders, and the people likewise, and the whole Church were present, and had their voyces in this Councel. See Acts 16. 4. That famous Paphnutius was a Layman.

A general Councel represents the Universal, therefore there ought to be present there some of all kinds and orders of men.

An Concilia possint errare? Whether general Councels may erre?

That is very high, which Dr Taylor hath Sect. 5th of the Liberty of Prophesying. If a General Councel have determined a Question, or expounded Scripture, we may no more disbelieve the Decree, than the Spirit of God himself who speaks in them.

Every Assembly which consists of members subject to errour may be seduced: But General Councels are Assemblies consisting of members subject to errour, for all men are so, Rom. 3 4.

Secondly, If the determination of General Councels were infallible, all Christians were necessarily bound to stand unto them, and to submit to their authority.

Thirdly, If General Councels may contradict the one the other, they may certainly erre. The General Councel held at Lateran under Leo the tenth contradicteth the Councel of Constance in the point of the Councels superiority above the Pope.

Fourthly, That which hath befallen some General Councels may befall any

The Rhemiſts bring Joh. 16. 13. & Luk. 1. 3. Some urge Matth. 18. 20. for this purpoſe. None amongſt them is like to Luke, nay all of them gathered together are not like him, he was an extraordinary inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt, John 16. 13. ſpeaks not of the Church, but of the Apoſtles, but if it be applicable to the Church, yet it belongs only to the Spouſe of Chriſt, not that ſhe doth not ſometimes erre alſo even in Doctrine, but not deadly, ſhe ſhall not erre in things which are neceſſary to ſalvation. See Cameron. Myroth. in loc.

If from this promiſe an infallibility of judging might be gathered, it would agree not only to Biſhops gathered together, but ſevered, neither only to the Pope of Rome, as the Jeſuites would have it; but alſo to the Succeſſours of the reſt of the Apoſtles, ſaith Bp Davenant. That place Mat. 18. 20. means any particular Aſſembly of the Saints. Vide Calv. in loc.

Acts 15. 22. is alſo brought. This Councel conſiſted of Apoſtles which had an extraordinary aſſiſtance and illumination of Gods Spirit, there is not the like authority of other Councels. Panormitan the great Popiſh Canoniſt and Lawyer ſaith, Plus credendum eſt ſimplici Laico Scripturam proferenti, quam toti ſimul Concilio.

There is another great controverſie, not ſo much (as Whitaker hath well obſerved) between us and the Papiſts, as between the Papiſts themſelves, An Concilia ſint ſupra Papam? Whether Councels be above the Pope?

Many amongſt them, and thoſe of great note prefer a General Councel before the Pope, but others a Pope before the Councel.

If Peter himſelf (ſaith Whitaker in the place before quoted) be ſent to the Church, as to a certain ſuperiour judgement and tribunal, and be commanded to bring the faults and offences of others to it, then it follows that the Church is greater and ſuperiour to Peter, or any other in authority. The Aſſumption (ſaith he) relies on expreſs words of Scripture, The conſequence of the major is evident from the confeſſion of the Adverſaries. For they ſay, That a Church is repreſented in a Councel.

Gerſon indignum & monſtruoſum ratus, ut concilium ab uno vinci cuntum atq; dignitatem obtinat, conſiſtque eo quod regant utrum Papa major ſit an Eccleſia, perinde facere ac ſi quærant utrum pars major ſit totum. Hieron. Jeſuit. par. 2. pag. 302. Homines mutant mores. Nos defendimus (ſaith Bellarm. de concil. auth. c. 17. in principio) ſummum Pontificem ſimpliciter & abſolutè eſſe ſupra concilium generale: ita ut nullum ſupra ſe Judicium agnoſcat. Vide 4, 13, 14, 15, 16. Of which opinion alſo are Stapleton and Gregory de Valentia.

Secondly, The Univerſal Church is called the mother of all the faithfull, and Chriſtians, Gal. 4. 26. The Pope is the Churches ſonne if he be faithfull, But the ſonne is not above his mother, only God and his Word is above the Church of God.

Pius Secundus whenas before he preferred General Councels before the Pope, now being Pope, he did decree, That no man ſhould appeal from the high Biſhop of Rome to any General Councel.

The Councel of Conſtance (in which were Biſhops, Arch-biſhops, Cardinals) did hold it neceſſary for the Pope to ſubmit himſelf unto a Councel. Bp Mort Appeal, l. 4. c. 2. Sect. 8.

The Councel alſo of Baſil condemneth the advancing of a Pope above the Authority of a Councel for a pernicious hereſie. Veritas eſt Catholica fidei, ſacrum generale generale Concilium ſupra Papam & alium quemvis poteſtatem habere. Concil. Baſil. Concluſ. 1.

Whether a combination of many Churches under the Government of Claſſes and Synods be to be approved of? Or whether every Church hath an independent power?

So Spanheme in his Epiſtle to Buchanan propounds the Queſtion, and ſaith, That as there were particular Synagogues in all Cities, ſo they did appeal to a higher Tribunal erected at Jeruſalem, Deut. 17. 8. 2 Chron. 19. 8, 11. Pſal. 122. 4, 5. and that hereby the power and authority of particular Churches is not deſtroyed, but rather preſerved and ſtrengthned, ſince every particular Church appears in a Synodical Aſſembly, and there hath his ſuffrage; neither doth the power of particular Churches more ceaſe herein (ſaith he) than the power of Cities, when there is a Parliament called, and each City ſending its delegates to it, and from it proceed obligatory and deciſive decrees. Spanheme concludes, Miror viris piis non diſplicere vel ſolum independentiis * Eccleſiæ nomen, quod à modeſtiâ Chriſtiana mihi per quam alienum videtur. See Amyrant Du Gouvernement de l' Engliſe en Preface, and in the Book.

* The word in its fair and inoffenſive ſenſe imports thus much, every particular congregation rightly conſtituted and compleated, hath ſufficiency in it ſelf to exercile all the Ordinances of Chriſt. Maſter Hookers Survey of Church-Diſcipline, part 2. chap. 3. See Maſter Cotſamies Epiſtle to the Reader before Maſter Hudſons Vindication, That all Church-power is not ſolely and particularly in an Independent Congregation.

A ground and pattern of a Synod is laid down Acts 15. & 16. which is acknowledged to be a Synod and warrant for it by Mr Cotton of the Keys, chap. 6. and is called an Oecumenical Councel by Chamier. in Poſtrat. Tom. 2. lib. 10 cap. 8. Sect. 2. and Whitak. controverſ. Quæſt. 6. and generally by our Proteſtant Divines, and is abundantly proved by the London Miniſtres in their Jus Divinum, part 2. chap. 14, & 15.

We have one inſtance of excommunicating in the Church of Corinth, and one here of a Synod, why ſhould not this be as ſufficient as the other?

Yet ſome take away all Juriſdiction and judicial power from Synods. Quod non eſt Eccleſia, non poteſt exercere Juriſdictionem Eccleſiaſticam, ſaith Norton Reſponſ. ad Apol. cap. 10.

But that may be thus anſwed, That which is not a Church may exerciſe eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, not formally but eminently; as the Parliament contains in it eminently the juriſdiction of every inferiour Court. Beſides that Propoſition may be denied, if by the Church the whole multitude of the faithfull be underſtood, for Eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction is not in the whole multitude, but in the Presbytery.

A non-communion he allows, but what if another Church ſhall nothing regard that puniſhment of non-communion, or non-communion that alſo? However, that puniſhment is no greater than what may be inflicted by any private perſon For every one may, and alſo if there be juſt cauſe, ought to deny his Communion to another, 2 Theſ. 3. 9, 14.

How one ſiſter Church by its ſingle power can non-communion another, that is of equal power with it, I know not, for it is a cenſure and no leſſe than a virtual Excommunication. Maſter Hudſons Vindicat. cap. 7.

of ANTICHRIST.

Antichriſt may ſignifie either in ſtead of Chriſt, or contrary to Chriſt.

That the particle ἀντὶ in Greek ſignifieth both contrarietatem & vicem, is ſufficiently proved by many of our learned Writers, ſo that Antichriſt from the force of the word is ſuch an one who in the place and name of Chriſt doth oppoſe Chriſt.

Antichriſtum ipſa nominis originatione ſignificare aliquem Chriſto oppoſitum ſciunt veteres. Sed nominatur tamen & aliàs generaliter alias progn. Nonnunquam

It means any one that is an enemy to Chriſt, either open and profeſſed, as the Jews, Turks, Infidels (in which ſenſe the word is not uſed in the Scripture) or elſe covert, profeſſing themſelves Chriſtians, and under the name and profeſſion of Chriſt, oppugning Chriſt and his truth. About the Election of Popes, Hierom Bignon a learned Frenchman, hath written a pithy Treatiſe in French, which is tranſlated into Engliſh.

How elegantly and lively doth Mr Foxe in his Meditat. on the 3d Chap. of the Rev. decipher the Popes pride.

Primum in Templo Dei, è ſublimi prætò cathedra non ſedentem, ſed præſidentem, non unius urbis Epiſcopum, ſed totius orbis pontificem maximum & œcumenicum, diademate non uno, ſed triplici, inſtar numinis, imo ſupra numen, redimitum gemmis, auro, argento, non dicò ad Chriſti exemplum, ſed ad Tarquinianam ſuperbiam conveſtitum, oſcula beatorum pedum à ſummis, ab infimis, a regibus, a Monarchis excipientem, imo pede ipſo etiam cervices calcantem imperatorias, jura ac leges imponentem Eccleſiis, regnis ac populis, nutu denique cuncta formantem ac reformantem.

It is a Queſtion between us and the Papiſts, An Petrus primatum Romæ exercuerit? Whether Peter exerciſed a primacy at Rome?

There is a primacy, 1. Of order and degree. 2. Of authority and juriſdiction; the firſt with S. Hierom, Proteſtants will eaſily aſcribe unto S. Peter, but not the other. Bp. Mont. Appeal l. 2. c. 17. Sect. 2.

Thoſe

Thoſe words Mat. 16.18. Luk. 22.23. & Joh. 21.15. were not meant or intended to Peter alone, but to the reſt of the Diſciples with him. See Mr Thorndike of the Laws of the Church. ch. 18.

For the firſt place, the Rock and Keys ſignifie the ſame thing, but the Keys and all the power thereof was given to all alike, to all the Apoſtles, viz. remitting and retaining, Matth. 18.18. John 20.21. is given to them all, what Matth. 18. was promiſed.

Cyprian, Jerom, Theophylact, Anſelm, Auguſtine, Cyril, Hilary expound the Rock either of Chriſt himſelf, or the faith and confeſſion which Peter held.

That Luke 22. 23. was ſpoken to Peter in regard of the ſinne whereunto he fell ſhortly after, yet it containeth nothing which our Saviour meant not to the reſt, he prayed for them all, that their faith ſhould not fail, John 17. 11, 15, 17, 20. and their very Office of Apoſtleſhip bound them to ſtrengthen their Brethren, Mat. 28. 19.

The third Text John 21.15. belongeth likewiſe to all the Apoſtles; to feed is to preach the Goſpel, ſee Epheſ. 4. 11. Sheep and Lambs are the people, and not the Apoſtles properly. Dr White.

Mat. 10. 2. If Peter were the firſt, then he had the primacy. For although the reaſon be not ſo plain in Engliſh, becauſe we have not ſo fit a word derived from our Engliſh (Firſt) as primatus primacy from primus in Latine, yet he that is firſt hath the firſtſhip (if I may ſo ſpeak) that is to ſay, the primacy. This is ſuch a primacy as a fore-man of the Queſt is wont to have in Juries; not a primacy of power, as over inferiours: but a primacy of order, as amongſt equals. Dr Rainolds againſt Hart c. 5. p. 174, 175.

The Pope of Rome neither ſucceeds Peter in Office, not in Doctrine, nor in Life. Not in Office, becauſe Peter was a Preacher of the Goſpel, the Pope puts that off from himſelf to others. An Pontifex Romanus ſit Antichriſtus? Whether the Pope of Rome be Antichriſt?

Papa

Papa or Papas among the Greeks ſignifieth a Father, and is the appellative that little children beginning to ſpeak are wont to give to their Parents, and in like ſort among the Latines, noteth a Father or Grand-father, hence the Chriſtians in ancient times did uſe to call their ſpiritual Fathers and Biſhops Papes or Popes. So that the name of Pape or Pope was common to all Biſhops. Jerom Writing to Auguſtin calleth him Pope, and writeth to the moſt honourable Pope, who yet was Biſhop of little Hippo only, therefore that name of Pope doth no way prove every one that is ſo called to be Univerſal Biſhop. We ſtand not upon this word Pope, it is but Father, it was given to Paſtours, to thoſe that were worthy Paſtours, aſcribed to Fathers in Epiſtles and ſuperſcriptions, as to Auguſtine a poor Biſhop, and to Paulinus a poor Deacon. A name of reverence now grown odious. Dr Fentons Treatiſe againſt reconciliat. to the Church of Rome.

Anciently for to abridge the Title of Pater patriæ, the Romans wrote Papa, as in like ſort ſome have abridged the Title of the Pope by the ſame Syllables. But the gloſſary of the Clementins, ſpeaking of the Title of the Pope of Rome in Latine ſaith, That this word according to its original, ſignifies the Father of Fathers. But the original of this word is from Syracuſe, where they called venerable men Pappas, which the Latines took from them, but ſince one of the (p) is taken away, and, (s) in the end, and now it is Papa.

I will not conclude it as an Article of Faith, that the Pope is Antichriſt. I am not of his mind that ſaid, It was as clear that the Pope was Antichriſt as that Chriſt was the Meſſiah.

Learned Chamier ſaith, Quicunque homo omnes capit notas Antichriſti quas Scriptura delineavit, is eſt Antichriſtus: At Epiſcopus Oecumenicus capit eas omnes notas. He to whom all the notes given (by the Scripture) of Antichriſt, joyntly agree, he is Antichriſt: But to the Pope all the notes given of Antichriſt joyntly agree.

Others go this way alſo, they ſay, It is not enough to prove that Chriſt was the Meſſiah, becauſe he was born at Bethlehem, but becauſe what ever was ſpoken of the Meſſiah agrees to him; ſo likewiſe it is not enough to prove the Pope to be Antichriſt, becauſe one of the notes given about Antichriſt belongs to him, but becauſe all.

But I ſuppoſe that thoſe two main circumſtances of the time and place of Antichriſt agreeing to the Pope, it is a weighty argument to prove that the Pope is Antichriſt: 1. The place, the ſeat of Antichriſt is deſcribed, Rev. 17. ult. which is Rome, and and the time when he that letteth was taken away, which was the Emperor. In these two things the ancient Fathers agree.

Antichrist as God, sitteth in the Temple of God, shewing himself that he is God, 2 Thess. 2. 4. that is, he shall rule and tyrannize over the Church of God, making himself Head of the Church. Nero was cruel against believers, but he sate not in the Church. To sit here is to take and exercise judiciary authority in the Church of God. Vide Grotium in Luc. 20. See Mat. 19. 28. The Popes authority is called Sancta sedes. The Apostasie of Antichrist is described 2 Thess. 2. 3. there shall be an ecclesiastical falling away from the true worship of God to idolatry, 1 Tim. 4. 1. This Apostasie doth imply their former imbracing of the truth, their faith was formerly known to all the world, as now their heresie and idolatry is, therefore in this respect no Heathen Emperour, nor the Turk can be Antichrist. He shall not only apostatize, but shall seduce many, and make them drunk with that deadly poison. See Mr. Medes Apostasie of the later times.

The Miracles of Antichrist are set forth 2 Thess. 2. 9, 11. their end is to confirm a false Doctrine. In Transubstantiation their is miracle upon miracle. The Priest if he please can turn all the wine in the Town into Christs blood. How often have the people seen blood in the bread?

The Vices of Antichrist might also be urged:

Popes in our daies are praised for their goodnesse, when they surpass not the wickednesse of other men. Guicch. Hist. lib. 16. Pius Quintus Pontifex sanctus dicere solebat. 1. His pride, he shall exalt himself above all that is called God, that is, Princes: so the Pope. He takes the titles of Universal Bishop, Head of the Church, and Vicar of Christ. Bellarmine is not ashamed to apply that in Isaiah to the Pope, Behold I lay in Sion a foundation stone, Isa. 28. 16.

2. His cruelty, the Whore is said to be drunk with the bloud of the Saints: So the Pope. And Rev. 13. it was given him to kill whoever would not adore the image of the Beast.

Adde to this the opinion of the Reformed Churches generally, of Bishop Jewel, Bishop Usher, of Whitaker, Downam, Perkins, Fox, Abbot, Brightman, Rainolds, Powel, and Dr Sclater on 2 Thess. with divers others.

Thuanus speaking with Isaac Casaubone of the Popes being Antichrist, said, Profectò apparet Antichristus aut Antichristo simillimus. See B. Usher on 17, & 18. of Rev. and B. Bedel on Rev. 18. 4. and Dr Bernard Confirmat.

It

It is a Question between us and the Papists, An Antichristus sit singularis homo? Whether Antichrist be one person?

Bellarmine saith he is.

The Pope is one person, not in number and nature, as one certain and singular man, one at once by Law and Institution, though successively so many as have enjoyed the Papacy. The Papists when they say, that the Pope hath been the Head of the Church, and Vicar of Christ this 1500 years, do not mean any one Pope, but the whole rabble of them since the year 607. So Antichrist is one person, not at once ordinarily, but continued in a succession of many. When we say the Pope, the Emperour, the King, the Priest, the Minister, the Eye, the Hand, we mean not one particular, but the whole kind.

Cùm Papam dicimus esse Antichristum, non ita intelligimus quemvis unum de Antichristorum turba, Antichristulum, sed magnum illum, & insignem Antichristum, qui non modo adversatur Christo, sed ut æmulum etiam se ei opponit, utcunq; se interim Vicarium Christi mentiatur. Papam verò cùm dicimus, non hunc aut illum volumus, puta Paulum quintum, vel Clementem octavum: sed ipsam pontificum Romanorum seriem, à Bonifacio usque tertio & deinceps. Downam Diat. de Antich. l. 1. c. 1.

It cannot be an individual man, in that it is said, 2 Thess. 2. the Mystery of Antichrist did then begin to work, and yet it should hold till the very coming of Christ, or here is the man that lived so long?

It is a Question, Whether there was a Woman-Pope, called Pope Joan? Blondel hath written against it.

Inseritur etiam Pontificum positus est Joannes VIII. cum hoc lemmate, Fœmina de Anglia. Bertii Tab. Geog. contracta in Sicna.

In Sienna one of the fairest Churches in Italy were the pictures of all the Popes from Peter, and there was Pope Joan, till Baronius caused her picture to be taken down. Salmasius said, That he saw in Anastasius Bibliothecarius (who lived at that time) the life of Pope Joan. Martin Prierius sent it to Busæus to print, and Quispiel who sees himself so proved, that there was no Pope Joan, yet never quotes Anastasius against it. Some desire that Salmasius had answered Blondel, as he once intended. Maresius hath answered him.

Baronius saw this Tract, saith he saw it.

It is a Question, An Papa sit Christi Vicarius? Whether the Pope be Christs Vicar?

Christus cum patria legatione & Vicariis sit in salutem humanum genus, nemini filio legatum Vicarium assignavit, nullum item sui regiminis ministerium. Cornet. præfat. in Matth. 16. 18.

Innocent the third saith, I am the Bridegroom, because I have a Noble, a Rich, a Gracious Spouse, viz. the Church of Rome, which is the Mother of all believers. Mr Sanders in his 2d part of his Key for Catholicks, ch. 5. hath fifteen Arguments to prove the Visible Christship, or Sovereignty of the Pope. See M. Antonius de Dominis de Republica Ecclesiastica l. 2. c. 6.

The Archbishop of Spalato Antonius de Dominis, l. 1. de Republica Ecclesiastica c. 1. shews, That Christ still is Head of the Church, and hath no successours.

It is a Question, An Papa præsit aliis Episcopis? Whether the Pope be above all other Bishops?

So on the one side, an universal Bishop with the whole world for his jurisdiction is a proud pretence, and too vast for Humanity to grasp; so, on the other side, Patriarchal Bishops too is a poor and mean Design, and not only retrives the Italian Episcopelli, so scorned at Trent, but worse. Mr Sanderson on Tit. 1, 5.

Carolus V. Galliarum Rex sapientis cognomen sortitus, circa Ann. 1364. curavit librum edi sub titulo Somnium Viridarii, in quo Pontifici superioritatem super Episcopos jure Divino competere, negatur. Impressus est Parisiis ante Lutheri tempora. Gerh. Confess. Cathol. l. 2. Specul. Artic. 3. c. 5. Vide M. Anton. de Dom. de Repub. Eccles. l. 2. c. 8. num. 11, 12.

The Title of Universal Bishop of the Church, which Bellarmine calleth notable and proper to the Bishop of Rome, S. Gregory sometime Bishop of Rome did renounce in himself, and detest in all others, calling it a title of novelty, errour, impiety, blasphemy, pronouncing any one that shall presume to challenge it, to be the fore-runner of Antichrist. Bish. Morton's Appeal, l. 1. c. 29. The

The Universal Bishop of the Church necessarily betokens an absolute monarchical Jurisdiction of some one over all other Bishops of the Church, but Bishop of the Universal Church signifies the care and study any Bishop hath for the universal good of the Church, as 2 Cor. 11. 28. so the King of Spain is styled, The most Catholick King, or King of the Catholick Church, not Universal King and Sovereign over all other Kings in the Church.

There is another Question, An Papa possit conferre Bullas & Indulgentias? Whether the Pope can confer Buls and Indulgences?

This word Bulla was called παρὰ τὴν βουλὴν, id est, à consilio, of Councel. Anciently a golden Bull or ornament, round and hollow within, was usually fastened about the necks or brests of young children, and semblably to all their pictures, signifying thereby, that their tender unbridled age ought to be governed by the grave counsel, and good advice, of more maturity in years. And from hence the Bishops of Rome borrowed the name for their leaden Seals; upon one part of which the name of the Pope is to be read: on the other, the head of S^t Paul on the right side of the Crosse, and of S^t Peter on the left are to be seen. Weevers Funeral Monuments, p. 74.

Their own learned Authors plainly confesse, That there is not found any one expresse testimony for proof hereof, either in Scriptures, or in the writings of ancient Fathers.

2. That there was no use of Indulgences in the primitive Church: but that afterwards the fear of Purgatory hatched Indulgences. B. Mort. Appeal, l. 1. c. 2. Sect. 20. See also c. 15. Sect. 6.

3. That the first who extended Indulgences unto Purgatory, was Pope Boniface the 8th, more than a thousand years after Christ.

Guiccardine in his History of Italy, lib. 13. tels us, that Pope Leo granted Indulgences without respect of time or place, and that his Ministers did set to sale upon a game at Tables power to redeem souls out of Purgatory.

Luther began his opposition unto Rome in reprehending their Article of * Indulgences. * Bellarm. l. 1. de Indul. c. 1. Vide Estium ad 2 Cor. 2. 11 Dr Featleys Strictura in Lyndo-mastigem, ch. concerning Indulgen.

He would have set down at the first, if the matter of Indulgences had been granted, but God led him on to declare against the whole Doctrine of Popery.

The Indulgences whereof we read in the ancient Fathers, were mitigations of some Censures of the Church before inflicted on the living for their amendment. These now granted by the Pope are relaxations from satisfactory pains in Purgatory flames after this life.

It is a Question, An Papa possit leges condere quæ obligent Conscientias? Whether the Pope can make Laws to bind the conscience?

Conscience is said to be bound, when it is charged by him who hath power and Authority over it to performe its duty, to bear witnesse to all our actions unto God, and according to the quality of them to accuse or excuse us, Rom. 2. 15. God is the only binder of conscience, James 4. 12. he is greater than the conscience, Rom. 13. 5. affirms only that conscience is bound, but determines not that mans Laws bind it.

Bellarmine saith, Mens Laws bind, Non minus quam Lex divina. We deny not rem, but only differ from them in modo, they bind not immediately, but mediately, not primarily, but secondarily, not in them, and of their own power, but in the force and vertue of divine Law. Downs Subject to the higher powers on Rom. 13. 5.

They say, If the Pope determine vice to be vertue, they are bound to believe it, yea Tolet saith, a man should merit of God in so believing.

There are these Questions,

An Papa sit supra Reges? Whether the Pope be above Kings? An possit Reges excommunicare? Whether he can excommunicate Kings? Vide Polyd. Virg. lib. 4. Invent. c. 13. p.

Bellarmine ſaith, the Pope hath power in temporal things indirectly only, but his Book ſhould have been burned for it.

There is another Queſtion, An Papæ ſolius ſit ſtatuere de controverſiis fidei? Whether it belongs to the Pope alone to determine controverſies of faith?

We deny not but a Judge and a Law might well ſtand together, but we deny that there is any ſuch Judge of Gods appointment. Had he intended any ſuch Judge he would have named him, leſt otherwiſe (as now it is) our Judge of controverſies ſhould be our greateſt controverſie. Chillingworth part. 1. *cap.*2 Sect 10. pag. 57.

B. Bedell in his Examination of Wadeſworths Motives, Chap. 3. ſaith, It muſt firſt be ſhewed, that God hath appointed ſuch a Judge in his Church. Let that appear out of ſome paſſage of holy Scripture.

It is a Queſtion, An Papa poſſit remittere peccata? Whether the Pope can pardon ſins?

Trecelius affirmed, That if a man had lien with our Lady the mother of Chriſt, and and had gotten her with child, yet the Popes pardon was able to set him free. The Phariſee ſaid true, though he miſapplied it, Luke 5.21. Who can forgive ſins but God alone?

There is another Queſtion, An Papa poſſit errare? Whether the Pope may erre?

The Pope (ſay they) as a private perſon or Doctor may erre, but not as the Vicar of Chriſt, and the Succeſſour of Peter in the Chair, yea judging from the Chair he may erre in Queſtions of Fact, but not in Queſtions of Faith; nay he may erre in diſcuſſing Queſtions of Faith, in reſpect of the premiſſes, not in reſpect of the concluſions. E Cathedra docens (hoc eſt, ex tripode oracula fundens) nullo modo errare poteſt. Summus Pontifex (ſaith Bellarmine de Rom. Pont. lib. 4. cap. 3.) cum totam Eccleſiam docet, in his quæ ad fidem pertinent, nullo caſu errare poteſt. See our Rhemiſts on Luke 22.31. The High-prieſt of the Old Teſtament (ſaith Bellarmine de Pontifice l. 4. c. 3.) had on his Breſt-plate, Doctrine and Truth according to the Vulgar verſion, therefore the High-prieſt of the New Teſtament the Pope, when he teacheth the whole Church in theſe things which belong to faith, cannot erre in any caſe: How well that argumentation proceeds from the High-prieſt of the Old Teſtament to the High-prieſt of the New, let the learned judge. Neſcio cur non poſſit dici, quòd Gregorius Papa, cum homo fuerit & non Deus, potuerit errare. Durand. *l. 4. diſtinct. I will conclude all about the Pope with that witty Story. A Pope before he came to this dignity, uſed out of his auſterity a net in ſtead of a bed, and now ſeeing the world to wonder at the change which he had made of his net-bed into a fether-bed, he anſwered, That he had caught his fiſh.

Of the Jeſuites and Monks.

Of the Jeſuites.

Jeſus is the proper name of Chriſt from which none are denominated, but thoſe who have brought in a blaſphemous Sect, and oppoſe Chriſt under the name of Jeſus. They call themſelves Jeſuitæ, or Societas Jeſu, or Domini de Societate Jeſu.

See Sr Thomas Ryues his poor Vicars plea, p. 31, 32.

They ſeverely command in their Rules, that none ſhould communicate their rules to any ſtranger, nor relate any thing concerning them in word or writing to others. For they teach and command nothing but humane traditions, ſuperſtitions, hypocriſies, Idolatries and works of their own will-worſhip.

The Pope in divers Bulls cals them Beloved Sonnes, in which Title they much glory.

The Jeſuites (above all other Regulars) make to the Pope a vow of preſent and abſolute obedience, to do whatſoever he ſhall command them, to go whitherſoever he ſhall ſend them, to Turks, Infidels, Hereticks, without excuſe, denial or delay.

This order alſo being for the Popes defence, he hath confirmed it with thirty ſeven priviledges above the other orders of the Monks.

In my Preface to my Saints Encouragement, and the first Chapter, I have spoken of the Cruelty of the Papists and Jesuites. Beckman in his Orations saith, From the time that the Sect of the Jesuites arose even to the year 1580. that is, in little more than thirty years, nine hundred thousand Christians were killed in the Low-Countreys, France, England, Italy, Spain, and amongst them there were two hundred thirty five Barons, a hundred fourty eight Earles, and thirty nine Princes.

Gaspar Heywood the great Epigrammatists son, the first Jesuite that ever set foot of late in England.

They do not so much stand upon their devotion, and therefore saith Ignatius Loyola in his Constitutions, that they should make no matter if other Orders did exceed them in zeal.

Jesuitæ sunt omnium ordinum præter suum maximi contemptores. Chamier. They are contemners of all Orders but their own.

There have been but two of that Order Cardinals, Bellarmine and Tolet.

The Jesuites say, It is a great miracle that Ignatius Loyola an illiterate souldier could institute such a Society, as the world never saw before. They think their Society miraculous, because in sixty years they were dispersed through all the coasts of the world.

Oratio Antonini Arnaldi turned out of French into Latin by Junius

Their principal vow is, Per omnia & in omnibus, to obey their General (as they call him) and Superiour, and this is always a Spaniard. Loyola who was the first General amongst them was a Spaniard. Leynes the second also a Spaniard. Everard the third of the Low-countreys, heretofore subject to the Spaniard. Borgia the fourth General was also a Spaniard. Aqua viva the fifth General of that Order a Neapolitan.

They pray daily for the King of Spain, and their great designe is to make him Monarch of all the Christian world; it is their usual speech, Unus Deus, unus Papa, & Rex unus Christianitatis, magnus Rex Catholicus & Universalis. One God, one Pope, and one King of Christians, the great Catholick and Universal King.

Ad excogitandum acutissimi, ad audiendum impudentissimi, Ad efficiendum acerrimi, saith Arnaldus in that excellent Oration against the Jesuites.

*On Ps. 9. 16. Ij in bonis subditis, imo ne in subditis quidem sunt numerandi, qui pertendunt se à jugo secularis potestatis adeò liberos, ut leges principum vim coactivam in eos non obtineant; quinimo si contigerit eos in leges civiles peccare, asserunt se non posse à civili magistratu puniri, imò ne trahi quidem ad tribunal ejus. They have more leiſure to learn than other ſorts of Friers, what time the others ſpend at high Maſſes, and at their Canonical hours, theſe beſtow upon their books: they being exempted from thoſe duties by their Order. To this is added the exact method of their teaching, which is indeed ſo excellent, that the Proteſtants themſelves in ſome places ſend their ſons to their Schools, upon deſire to have them prove exquiſite in thoſe Arts they teach. Dr Heylins Survey of the State of France, lib. 3. cap. 4.

The Monks.

Many voluntarily, and of themſelves, made liberal diſtribution of all they had; left their means and their friends, and betook themſelves to deſerts and ſolitary places, wholly giving themſelves over to meditation, to prayer, to faſting, to all ſeverity and rigidneſſe of life. When this cuſtome was in its primitive purity, there was no one thing more behoveſull to the Church. It was the Seminary and Nurſery of the Fathers, and of all the famous ornaments of the Church. Mr Hales his Sermon on Mat. 26. 75.

They are ſo called, becauſe they choſe a ſolitary life, who purpoſed to live in this way.

Monaſterium, a place containing men living alone; and Cœnobium, a place containing men living in common, ſignifie the ſame.

Eremita, pro ſolitario, atque ſeorſum deſertis locis vitam degente. Quales è Chriſtianis primò genuit neceſſitas fugæ, propter perſecutiones gentilium. At ſi gregatim viverent, vocati Cœnobitæ: qui primò monaſteria ſua locis ab urbe remotis, poſtea etiam in urbibus, habuere. Voſſius de vitiis Serm. l. 3 c. 11.

It was held convenient, that ſuch who had dwelt deſolate in deſerts, ſhould be gathered together to live under one roof. Monks had all things in common; Friars had all their ſubſiſtence from others charity.

O Monachi, veſtri ſtomachi ſunt amphora Bacchi:
Vos eſtis (Deus eſt teſtis) teterrima peſtis.
Non audet Stygius Pluto tentare quod audent,
Effrænis Monachus plenaq; fraudis anus. Æneas Sylvius.

They and Nuns which are in Monaſteries are by the Papiſts called Religious, as if they only were ſo: None are farther from Religion, they labour to patch up a righteouſneſſe of their own, and what they do, they do by their own ſtrength; Chriſt is uſeleſſe to them.

There was no man among the Papiſts though an Emperour, that died, but he deſired to be buried in a Monks Coul, as hoping to be ſaved thereby.

They compare it to Baptiſm, and ſay, That a Monk newly entred into his Profeſſion, is abſolved from all his ſins formerly committed, and if he die preſently he ſhall certainly go to Heaven.

They attribute perfection unto that ſtate, becauſe of the vow of poverty, grounded (as they ſay) upon that ſaying of Chriſt unto the young man, Matth. 19. 21. which if it be applied unto us, doth not require alwayes an actual, but an habitual relinquiſhing of worldly wealth, ſignifying a Chriſtian reſolution in every one which ſhall hope for life, to be prepared alwayes rather to loſe all worldly wealth, than to forſake the profeſſion of Chriſt. Bellarmine[a] to dignifie the state monastical, entitles the Apostles the first Monks in Christianity, but their Bishop Espencæus in Tim. disliketh the Orders of begging Monks, as repugnant to the example of the Apostles; for the Apostle, 2 Thessal. 3. 10. pronounceth all such disordered, who will begge and not work.

An high commendation to their Church, when men must be Sainted with them, if they will do no mischief, though they make themselves useless to the rest of the world. To live to our selves, though never so spiritually, is farre unlike the life of a Christian. M^r Baxters Crucifying of the world, Sect. 2.

There is a double kind of monastical poverty, one consisting in the renouncing of the Dominion, Possession and Property of their goods; yet in a community enjoying the use of them; as the common sorts of Monks. The second is a forsaking of the property, and of all use of riches, these are called the Mendicants or begging Friars. B. Mort. Appeal.

Montan, Humphrius, Aquinas and Scotus were Monks.

Bellarmine brags that Luther, Bucer, Pellicane, Munster, Musculus, Oecolampadius, Martyr, and others were Monks; but this makes no more for the Papists, than it doth for the Manichees, that Augustine (who after was a great enemy to them) was first himself a Manichee. Amisi Monachum, *inveni Christianum: confer nunc utrumque. Bellarmine and Maldonate triumph in John the Baptist. Joannem Baptistam Monachorum, & Eremitarum Principem fuisse, scribunt ferè omnes Patres, saith Bellarmine[b], they prove by his Diet, Garments, by the place where he was, the Wilderneſse, that he was a Monk.

[b] Lib. 2. de Monachis, c. 5.

Vide Bezæ Hom. 7 in Hist. Passionis Christi.

Locusts was the usual meat of the Inhabitants in the East, his Garments and Diet were mystical, he came not eating or drinking. There were Towns in that Wilderneſse, 2 Chron. 6. 7, 8. Isa. 42. 11. John 1. 28. We grant Johns austere life, but here was an extraordinary Call, and it is one thing by the Call of God to live a poor life for the discharging of his Office, and another thing voluntarily to do so.

The famous Armachanus wrote seven Books De pauperie salvatoris, yet proves that he was not a beggar.

They say, Christ had not where to lay his head; so that he had nothing but by begging. This is false. For although Christ had nothing, yet he did not beg, but those that were devout did give him something. Judas had a bag wherein the treasure was gathered. Christ did eat and drink, and frequent publick places.

He wrote also Contra fratres mendicantes, and should have been canonized, but for the Friers. Vide M. Anton. de Dom. de Rep. Eccles. l. 2. c. 12

The Eremetical life is contrary to the nature of man when it was uncorrupt, for whom it was not judged good to be alone, Gen. 2. Eccles. 4. 9. as this solitary life is an enemy to mankind; so is it to the Communion of Saints in the Church of God, Matth. 5. 15. The example of the primitive Church is against it, Acts 2. 44. the uncleanest and most hatefull birds cover desolate places. Cartw. on Mat. 3. 1.

They may rather be called Fratres manducantes, than mendicantes, we use proverbially those speeches, Tun-bellied Monk, an Abbots-face, as fat as an Abbot, an Abby-lubber.

About

About one time out of the bottomleſſe pit of Hell, there iſſued two frogs with lying ſpirits to ſeduce the world, viz. Francis in Italy, and Dominick in Spain. Francis was ignorance it ſelf, and yet by his follies he gat himſelf a great fame and reputation of holineſſe, and drew after him many diſciples. Colynet of the Civil Wars of France.

The Sect of Minorite Friars (otherwiſe called Cordeliers or Franciſcans) is held to be the perfecteſt of all the reſt, as being the only Sect that is canonized and regiſtred in the ſixth Book of the Decretals or Clementines. The World of Wonders, Chap. 37.

The mother of Dominick the Monk (ſaith their Martyrology) before he was yet born, dreamed that ſhe was delivered of a whelp with a fire-brand in his mouth, with which he ſet the whole world on fire, and their learned Doctours have interpreted this dream, that Dominick ſhould be that Dog that ſhould vomit out a fire which ſhould conſume the Hereticks. He was a great perſecutor of the Waldenſes and their Doctrine.

Dr Featleys Caſe for the Spectacles, chap. 8. From that time forward the Monks of this Order have been alwayes imploied in the inquiſition.

In the Lives of the Saints, another reaſon is given of this revelation, viz. that by his Doctrine, and the Friers of his Order all the world was illuminated, and received light. His name (ſaith he) alſo ſhewed that he ſhould be wholly our Lords. From the day of his birth (as he goes on) he was alwayes his, never committing any mortal ſin.

The Order of Benedict hath been ſo fruitfull, that they ſay of it, That all the new Orders, which in later times have broken out, are but little ſprings or drops, and that Order the Ocean, which hath ſent out fifty two Popes, two hundred Cardinals, ſixteen hundred Arch-biſhops, four thouſand Biſhops, and five thouſand Saints approved by the Church, yet if they be compared to the Jeſuites, or to the weak and unperfect types of them, the Franciſcans, it is no great matter that they have done. Dr Donnes Ignatius his Conclave.

A rich Merchant in Paris in meriment told the Friers of St Francis, that they wore a Rope about their bodies, but St Francis ſhould once have been hanged, but was redeemed by the Pope on this condition, that all his life after he ſhould wear a Rope, but they in earneſt got judgment againſt him that he ſhould be hanged for it. Dr Taylors Romiſh Fornace.

The Monks and Friers are no where mentioned in Scripture, unleſſe Apoc. 9. 3. Locuſts iſſued out of the bottomleſſe pit, they by their ſmoaky Traditions obſcure the light of the Goſpel.

The Pope hath for his Collaterals ſeventy Cardinals, that is, ſix Biſhop Cardinals, fifty Prieſt Cardinals, and fourteen Deacon Cardinals: This number being determined by a Bull of Pope Sixtus Quintus, they are all of them together called the Sacred Colledge of Cardinals. Relation of the Court of Rome.

This was done in imitation of the Seventy two Diſciples, though there be not now preciſely that number.

Corollaries from the Church and Antichriſt.

First, From the Church.

Phil. 2.20,21. Next to the Title of God, Chriſt values that Title of being head of the Church. Rom. 4.13.

Chriſts great intereſt here below is the Church, it is his Hephzibah, his delight is in her; it is as Shew-bread continually before him; the people of God are his Segullah, his peculiar treaſure, his jewels, Mal. 3. 17. all the reſt of the world being but as lumber in compariſon, for them the world ſtands: The Church is the fulneſſe of Chriſt, Epheſ. 1. 22. The great bleſſings are out of Sion.

It is the Suburbs of Heaven, Heaven is the viſion of God; God is ſeen in the Church, Pſalm 27. 4. Here is ſanctification of the Spirit, the graces of the Covenant; here we have communion with the Saints, Col. 2. 18.

The intereſt of Chriſt extends to all Churches, where a people love the Lord Jeſus in ſincerity. The Donatiſts would include the Church in their parts of Africk, the Papiſts ſay, they only are the Church. Chriſts intereſt is not limited to any forms, 2 Cor. 11. 28.

None are true members of the inviſible Church of Chriſt, but onely thoſe which have the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt in them, really holy, and united to Chriſt the Head.

There is a great controverſie about qualification of Church-members, therefore Apollonius and Spanhemius have begun their Diſpute with this Queſtion.

Some ſay, The members of every particular Church are obliged at their firſt admiſſion to ſhew to the whole Congregation convincing ſigns of their Regeneration and true Grace.

Some urge, that the Scripture in the deſcription of a godly man reſts not in the negative, Rom. 8. 1. and that a bare profeſſion is not enough, or to ſay, I know no evil by him, or that he is not ſcandalous, they urge 1 Theſſ. 1. 1. & 2 Theſſ. 1. 1. they ſay the Church is not onely termed holy from the better part, but the particular members are commended for holineſſe, 2 Theſſ. 1. 3. Phil. 1. 7. We are ſtrict (ſay they) in taking a wife or ſervant, enquire after them, and are not ſatisfied that we hear no ill; ſo a judgement of ſeverity is to be uſed in admitting

Church-

Church-members, and because we may be deceived therein, the more care is to be used.

Others say, If they be willing to give up their names to Christ, it is enough, because the Church is a School, there they are admitted, Non quia docti, but ut fiant docti, not because they are learned, but because they are willing to learn.

Would you have Church-members real Saints, crosse to the Texts, the Floor and Drag-net, or such as by the exactest scrutiny that can be made, we may judge to be Saints really? I desire your Texts for this. Dr. Ames saith, Falsum est internas virtutes à nobis requiri, ut aliquis sit in Ecclesia quoad visibilem ejus statum. Bellarm. Enerv. Tom. 2. l. 2. c. 1. Sect. 5. Mr Firmine last Book, pag. 82, 83.

The Apostles at the first gathering of the Church of the New Testament never required any more than the profession of the faith of Christ in fundamentals, and that they were willing for the time to come to walk in Gospel-rules. John Baptist received Publicans and sinners, souldiers, Scribes, Pharisees, when they confessed their sins, and desired to be admitted into the faith of him whom John preached. See Acts 2. 41, 47. Vide Calvin ad Mat. 3. The Apostles could not at that time go by this rule, upon the hearing of a Sermon a thousand perhaps profest to be satisfied in that Doctrine, and that they would live and die in it.

Many an one that may have real grace, yet out of bashfulnesse, and because he hath but weak parts, may not be able to evidence it to others, and others (who have greater gifts) may carry it away when they are not inwardly wrought upon.

I suppose therefore, those are to be received into Church-communion which professe the faith of Christ, and subject to the rules of the Gospel, if they be freed from damnable errors and scandalous conversation. I am verily perswaded, that were the union and communion of the people of God rightly known, there is no Saint in any part of the world, but where ever he comes might demand upon the profession of his faith, and his voluntary subjection to the Gospel, his right in the Ordinances, hear the Word with them, pray with them, receive the Sacrament with them. Mr Martial on Rom. 12. 4, 5. See more there. Master Hildersam on John 4. 22. We know what we worship, and Master Ball's Trial of the Church-way.

Some conceive the gathering of Churches out of Churches to be unwarrantable, and think it is confusion, 1 Cor. 14. 33. Where is there (say they) any warrant from Moses and the Prophets, or from Christ and his Apostles for any such thing, though yet in their times many Church-members were as ignorant and prophane as now?

To be a member of the Church of Christ is a great priviledge, the communion of Saints is the only good fellowship.

Conformity is the ground of Communion. The Saints have a communion with all the three Persons in Trinity, the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost, 1 John 1. 3. 2 Cor. 3. ult. None can have communion with the Father and the Spirit, but by Christ, John 14. 6. nor with Christ, but by the Father, John 6. 44. and by the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 13. The Father by the Spirit of bondage brings us to Christ as a Mediator, and Christ as Mediator by the Spirit of adoption brings us to the Father, as the fountain of grace. Therefore in conversion, initial grace is ascribed to the Father, John 15. Jude vers. 1. They shall have a fuller communion in Heaven, 2 Cor. 5. 4. Phil. 1. 3. See Dr Owens Treatise of Communion with God the Father, Son and holy Ghost.

There is a Communion also of Saints in Heaven, Heb. 12. 23. The communion of the Saints on earth is a priviledge, as well as communion with God and Christ, Col. 2. 8. that which every joynt supplies. Acts 2. 42. Spiritual communion is rank'd with three other Ordinances. See Psalm 16. 3. Prov. 27. 17. Hæc communio est inter Deum & hominem, inter sanctos Angelos & homines electos, inter sanctos homines in Cœlis, & sanctos homines in terris, seu inter Ecclesiam triumphantem & militantem, denique inter omnes cives Ecclesiæ militantis. Alsted. Theol. Cas. c. 8. See Dike on Philemon. Our Communion is with the Saints as with Christ the Head in two things, we receive the same Spirit, and walk in the same way. Eph. 4. 4, 1 Cor. 12. 12. Communio sanctorum in eo est sita, quod singuli electi capiti suo per fidem sunt insiti, caterisque corporis illius membris arctissimè per Spiritum uniti. Alsted. Theol. cas.

First, In the communion of their Graces; what Graces they have, they have not only for their salvation, but in trust for the good of the body; the members of the body should be helpfull to one another.

Secondly, In the use of Gods Ordinances, this was the beauty of the primitive times, Acts 2. 42. there was no such separation then.

Thirdly, In the performance of all mutual Offices of love, Serve one another in love.

Our Union with Christ is the ground of this Communion.

As all men are one in the first Adam, so all the Saints are one in the second Adam.

This Union is wrought on Gods part outwardly by the Word, and inwardly by the Spirit: On mans part, Outwardly by our profession, Inwardly by faith, Rom. 11. 20. By communion of Saints is meant their common partaking in Christ their Head, and all his Benefits, and their mutual interest one into another.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 11. 25. Sect. 138. Advantages of communion of Saints, and dammages of company with wicked ones. To hold communion with men that are sinners, without having communion with their sinne, is the only sociable spirit. To extend communion where the Rule commands, and to deny communion where the Rule forbids, qualifieth us to live with God and man. Mr Nortons life of Mr Cotton.

If a man hold fast the simplicity of Christ in Doctrine, Worship, Life; though not admitted into your fellowship, yet they will be in your communion through Christ, whether you will or no. Mr Vines on 2 Cor. 11. 3.

Secondly, From Antichrist.

That the Popish Doctrine tends to the extream dishonour of Gods Word, I have shewed in my first Book of the Scriptures.

Secondly, It tends to the extream dishonour of Christ,

1. In making other Intercessours.
2. In making each man his own Saviour by his own works.
3. In feigning a Purgatory.

Thirdly, It tends to the damnation of mens souls.

1. In drawing them to put confidence in their own works.
2. In making them content with lip-labour in stead of prayer.
3. In mocking them with counterfeit confession.
4. In teaching them to commit Idolatry.
5. In teaching them the doctrine of venial sinnes, and that these may be pardoned without either confession or contrition.

There is a double way of advancing Antichrist:

1. In way of Worship and Superstition: Some conceive that course is taken where there is so much cringing and bowing toward the Altar.

2. By publishing and maintaining the Doctrines of Popery, the most refined Doctrines, conditional Decrees, Free-will, Auxilium sufficiens omnibus ad salutem, media scientia in God, and Universal Redemption in Christs intention, final Apostasie. These are the Jesuites Doctrines, Arminius had it from them.

Christians that have cast off Popery should be so far from returning again to Babylon, that they should pray for the destruction and utter ruine of that man of sin, and with confidence expect the accomplishment of the Prophecies in that kind.

The Papists make the Pope a god in divers particulars: 1. In that they make the Scriptures subject to him, in that no man is bound to believe the Scriptures, unles he determine that they be so. 2. In that they make him able to dispense with the oaths and vows, which no Scripture dispenseth with all. 3. In that they make his Decrees to bind the conscience with the same necessity that the Scripture doth. 4. In that they give to him the Keys of Purgatory.

THE

THE SEVENTH BOOK. OF OUR VNION And Communion WITH CHRIST, AND Our Spiritual Benefits by him, and some special Graces.

Chap. I.

Of our Union with Christ.

Having handled the work of Redemption in the Nature and Person of it.

Now I shall speak of the Application of it by the holy Ghost.

The holy Ghost is,

1. A witnesse, to reveal Gods heart to us, 1 Cor. 2. 11. and ours to our selves, Acts 5. 3.

2. A guide, John 16. 13. Acts 20. 28.

3. The quickner of our graces, Phil. 2. 12, 13.

4. Is Vinculum Christianæ communionis.
5. The pledge and earnest of our great hopes, 2 *Cor.*5.6.

That is a special part of Gods providence, whereby those things which Jesus Christ hath purchased are by the operation of the holy Ghost made effectual to all those for whom they were appointed.

Four things are considerable in it:

1. The foundation of it.
2. The efficient cause or worker of it.
3. The persons who shall be made partakers of it.
4. The parts of this work:
   1. Union and conjunction with Christ.
   2. Communion with him.

The ground work of it lies in three things:

1. The donation of God the Father, John 6.39. All that my Father hath given me shall come to me.
2. The intendment of Christ in all the work he wrought, John 17.19. For their sakes do I sanctifie my self, that is, separate my self to the work I undertook.
3. The Fathers accepting it done for them as heartily, as if they had done it in their own persons, 2 *Cor.*5.19.

1. The efficient cause,
1. Principal is,
1. Remote, yet primary God the Father, he implants us into Christ, John 15.1.
2. Proximate the holy Ghost, Rom. 8.9.
2. Instrumental Faith.

2. The efficient cause of it the holy Ghost, that is, the third Person in the Trinity, who is equal to the Father and the Sonne. The making of man was in some respect appropriated to the Father, redeeming him to the Sonne, the making it effectual, and applying it, was the work of the holy Ghost, 14, 15, and 16, Chapters of John. I will send the holy Ghost, The Comforter, he shall lead you into all truth, convince you of sin, righteousnesse and judgements. There is no one branch of our partaking of Christ, but what is totally ascribed to the holy Ghost. The sending of the Gospel is by the holy Ghost, they are the gifts and graces of the holy Ghost, Faith, Union with Christ, and communion with him in all his Offices are from the holy Ghost, the Spirit teacheth, governeth, comforteth.

Because no inferiour person could effect it, *Ephes.*1.19,20.

2. The Material cause, Christ and believers, 1 *Cor.*5.17. 3. The formal cause of it is the intimate conjunction between Christ and believers. 4. The final is communion, 1 *Cor.*1.30. Mr Rainer in his Answer to Colvius Sect.22. distinguisheth of a sevenfold union with Christ, and proves them by seven Arguments, that union is after Faith. The Spirit of the Father, 1. Reveals Christ in the promise to an elect soul truly humbled, and so prepared for him, John 6.40. 2. Gives a touch to the special faculties of the soul, the understanding, will and affections, this is called drawing, *Cant.*1.4. 3. The soul being thus touched, actually moves to Christ, the understanding prizeth him, the will makes choice of him, the affections, desire, love, hope, and delight in him, this is called coming to Christ, and being joyned to him. 4. A relation passeth then between Christ and a believer, the soul chooseth Christ for its Head and Husband, and Christ it for his Spouse. 5. Christ sends down his Spirit to be the indissoluble bond of union between him and the soul.

Thirdly, The persons to whom this work of application belongs, or who shall be made partakers of Christ, but the Decree of Election and Reprobation have been handled already. There are a certain number whom God hath appointed to come to life by Christ, the Spirit of God will make the means effectual to all his.

Fourthly, The parts of this work:

1. Union and conjunction with Christ.
2. Communion with him, 1 John 5.12.

I shall first speak of our Union with Christ:

Christ is said to dwell and abide in us, and we are said to be Christs, to be partakers of Christ, to be cloathed with Christ, and abide in him, 2 Cor. 12.2. Colos. 1.2. 1 Thess.4.16. John 17.21, 1 John 3.

The Spirit of God sets it out in five similitudes:

1. Of food, made one with the body, John 6.5,6.
2. Of Head and Members, *Ephes.*1.22,23. Rom. 12.5. called incorporation.
3. Of the foundation and building, Ephes. 2.20,21,22. 1 Pet. 2.4,5,6. then called edification.

4. Of

4. Of the ſtock and branches, John 15. 4, 5, 6, 7. called inſition or implantation.

5. Of the Husband and Wife, Epheſ. 5. 31, 32. 1 Cor. 6. 17. called deſponſation and marriage.

We muſt be one with Chriſt as we were one with the firſt Adam (ſay ſome) two wayes:

1. Naturally, as we bore his Image.

2. Voluntarily, as we conſented to his Covenant; ſo with the ſecond Adam.

1. Naturally, by receiving of his Spirit.

2. Voluntarily, conſenting to his Covenant; Though it is not eaſie to conceive, how we can be ſaid to have conſented to his Covenant, but as being in him, and ſo his conſent did include ours.

The Union begins on Chriſts part, he layes hold on me by his Spirit, Rom. 8. 9. Phil. 3. 12. Gal. 4. 5, 6. 1 John 4. 13. This Spirit works a principle of faith in us, that layes hold on Chriſt, and accepts him for our Head and Husband for ever, John 1. 12. Epheſ. 3. 17.

He will take Chriſt:

1. With all his Offices, for a Lord as well as a Saviour.

2. With all his Graces.

3. With all his Inconveniences, Chriſt with poverty, with diſgrace, with the ſtake.

By faith we have an union with Chriſt as the Head of the Church, and through Chriſt the Mediator with God as the Head of Chriſt, John 17. 22. Chriſt is in us by his Spirit, Non eſſentialiter ſed effectivè, ſay the Schools, we are in Chriſt by faith, Non ſubſtantialiter, ſed applicativè, ſay they alſo.

There is a three-fold Union between Chriſt and a believer:

1. Myſtical, with Chriſt as a Head, the fruit of that is intimacy.

2. Moral, with Chriſt as a patern or example.

3. Judicial, with Chriſt as a Surety, whereby we are concerned in every act of Chriſts mediation, the fruit of this is intereſt.

This Union between Chriſt and us is wrought by the Spirit, Epheſ. 4. 4. He unites God and us, and us one with another. He works it by the Miniſtry of the Word, 1 Cor. 1. 9. John 6. 44, 45. and a religious uſe of the Seals, 1 Cor. 12. 13. Rom. 6. 3, 5. 1 Cor. 10. 16.

Some make our Union with Chriſt to be onely a relative Union, others an eſſential perſonal Union, as if we were Godded with God, and Chriſted with Chriſt.

I [a] would not be too bold with thoſe expreſſions of Nazianzen, becauſe I ſee they are abuſed, χεσσονιεν, δυσμενιν.

First, There is more than a relative Union, as that place, 1 Cor. 6. [b] 17. forcibly proves. 2. Theſe Reaſons.

1. This Union is ſet forth by ſimilitudes, which ſhew a real Union, John 15. 2. 1 Cor. 12. Head and Body, Rom. 12. 9. & 6. 5.

2. Becauſe our Union with Chriſt is compared to the Myſtery of the Trinity, and is like to the Union of the Perſons in the Divine Nature, John 6. 57. & 14. 20. & 17. 21, 22, 23. We are one not in the ſame kind or degree of Union, nor in ſo high and glorious a manner.

3. Becauſe it is not a Union founded only in terms of Scripture, but really wrought by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 12. 13.

4. Becauſe there are real effectual comforts and graces derived to us from hence, Rom. 6. 4. Phil. 3. 10.

The Fathers hyperboles this way, followed by Luther, gave occaſion to this.

[a] Dr Hill on Epheſ. 4. 15.

[b] That is, partaker of one and the ſame Spirit, and ſo united by the Spirit.

There is a union between Chriſt and his people,

1. In reference to impuration, ſo that what Chriſt did is accounted theirs. 2. In reference to inſpiration, they have the Spirit dwelling in them. 3. In reference to compaſſion. 4. In reference to vindication, what injury is done to them is looked on as done to him.

Secondly, It is not an eſſential Union:

1. Becauſe the Union is myſtical not perſonal; the two Natures in Chriſt are are essentially united, because they are made one Person, it is a Union of Persons, our persons are united to Christ, yet not a personal Union, we make not one person, but one body with Christ, and not one body natural but mystical, 1 *Cor.*6.17.

2. Those that mingle and confound the Persons, make the mystical Union higher than the personal, the personal Union did not confound the Natures, make the man God.

Object. The whole Church is called Christ, 1 *Cor.*12.12. and we are made partakers of the Divine Nature.

Answ. We must not apply that to Union which is proper to Communion, Communion is the common union of all the members with Christ. It is folly to apply that to one part which is proper to the whole body, Head and Members is Christ mystical, the parts are of the body, but not the body. There is a great deal of difference between the Divine Nature, as it was in Christ, and as it is in us, Colos. 2.6. compared with that of 2 Pet. 1.4. He had the fulnesse of the God-head, we are onely partakers of the Divine Nature; the God-head dwels in him personally, in us spiritually, 1 John 4.16. there is a likenesse wrought in us to the Divine Nature.

Some say, The actions of the Saints are of infinite value, as the obedience of Christss humane Nature because of the hypostatical Union, and that they are so one with Christ, that they can sinne no more than Christ can sinne. But that is unsound.

This Union between Christ and us, is

First, Real, Though he be in Heaven, we on Earth, because the same Spirit that dwels in him dwels in us; it is not onely notional nor moral, as betwixt friends.

Not imaginary Ephes. 5.30. We read of Christs being in us, and our being in him, 1 Cor.1.13. Col.1.27. Rom 8.10. of Christs dwelling in us, and our dwelling in him, 1 John 3.24. of Christs abiding in us, John 15.17. and our abiding in him. Christs living in us, and we in him, *Gal.*2.20.

Secondly, Mutual, I am my Beloveds, and my Beloved is mine: and total, whole Christ, God and man is ours, and the whole man soul and body must be his, Psalm 45.10. therefore we are said To eat his flesh, drink his blood.

Thirdly, Spiritual, Christs Spirit is communicated to us, and abides in us.

Fourthly, Operative, where Christ dwels by his Spirit he casts out Satan, and takes possession of the soul, and furnisheth it with his graces, repairs his Image in us, communicates his life to us, gives us strength to bear crosses.

Fifthly, Intimate, John 17.21. Cant. 8.12. it was not enough to say, My vineyard, but my vineyard which is mine.

Sixthly, Strong and inseparable. Death dissolves marriage, not this Union, Rom. 8.34, 35, 36, 37, 38. It brings us nearer Christ, by vertue of this mystical Union with Christ the dead bodies of the Saints are raised up at the last day.

This Union with Christ is one of the deep things of God, one of the great mysteries of the Gospel, John 14.20 Ephes. 5.30, 32. Our Saviour in his preaching began with the Doctrine of Repentance, Matth. 4.17. then went to that of Sanctification in general in the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of Matthew; then he proceeds to the Doctrine of Faith, sixth, seventh and eighth chapters of John; and lastly, to his Union with the Saints, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of John.

There are three mystical Unions not to be understood by a creature:

1. The Mystery of the Trinity, wherein three distinct Persons make but one God, *Deut.*6.4.

2. Wherein two distinct Natures make one particular Person, so there is one Christ, 1 *Cor.*8.6.

Nostra & ipsius unio non unat in unum substantias nec miscet personas, sed confoederat mentes & consociat voluntates. Cyprian de Cœna Domini.

3. When

3. When two distinct Natures and persons are united by one Spirit; so there is one Church, Cant. 6.8.

Our mystical Union with Christ, and the hypostatical or personal Union of the two Natures in Christ differ,

1. The personal Union is a Union of Natures, ours is only of persons, John 1.14. 1 Tim. 3.16. that is done by the assumption or taking of the humane Nature into the Person of the Sonne, Heb. 2.16. this by communication of the Spirit, and faith to the soul of a believer, he remaining the same person that he was before.

2. The hypostatical Union is immediate, the mystical mediate, by vertue of that Union of the humane and divine Nature in Christ.

3. It hath another predication, the person assuming this Nature, is called, and is truly God, Acts 20. 28. though the God-head be not the man-hood, nor the man-hood the God-head. This mystical Union leaves the same predication after as before, men are still men, though united to Christ. Therefore the same fulnesse of the God-head dwels not in every Saint, as in Christ.

How to know whether I am united to Christ.

I have then received the Spirit of Christ, 1 John 3.24. Rom. 8.26. He walks in the Spirit, lives by the Spirit, is led by the Spirit.

I may know that I am one with Christ also by my faith, Ephes. 3. 17.

Two Rules to know that:

Christ is then: First, A Spirit of Mortification, he

1. Helps thee to subdue thy darling sins, 1 John 3.8.

2. Helps thee to overcome thy secret Spiritual sins; the power of natural conscience may keep under grosse sins, but what power have you to subdue contempt of God, impenitency, hardnesse of heart, pride, envy?

I may know I have that by two principal effects of it,

1. It purifieth the heart, Acts 15. 9. not onely the wayes and outward man. 2. It is an operative vertue, Gal. 5.6. sets all graces a work. From our Union with Christ flows, 1. Spiritual life. 2. Spiritual acting. 3. Spiritual growth. 4. Spiritual duty, John 15.5. Col. 2.19. Ephes. 4.15,16.

Secondly, Christ is also a Spirit of Sanctification, 1 Peter 1.2.

1. In renewing the inward man, That which is of the Spirit is Spirit.

2. In transforming the outward man:

1. He is willingly ignorant of no truth.

2. He lets it break forth into practice.

3. Layes out whatever is dear to him for Christ, as Nehemiah, Esther.

Benefits which flow from our Union with Christ:

1. Reconciliation, God looks not upon us as enemies, Luke 2. 14.

2. Union with the holy Trinity, God the Father, Christ dwels in God, and God in him, 1 Thess. 1. 1, 2. The Spirit is said to abide in them, and they in him.

3. He hath an interest in all Christs relations, John 17. I go to my Father and your Father, my God and your God; this gives boldnesse and accesse to the throne of Grace, and in all his purchases, 1 Cor. 3.22,23.

4. The promises come to be yours by your union with Christ, 2 Cor. 1.20. they are made with Christ, and with you in him: he is Primus foederatus, say some; yet others say, Christ is Mediator of the covenant, but not a party with whom the covenant is made, I will forgive their iniquities, &c. This they say is not made with Christ who knew no sin. Besides they urge that it is expresly said, I will make a new Covenant with the house of Israel, &c. All spiritual priviledges, 1 John 5. 12. This is the ground of all imputation of righteousnesse.

5. We are presented to the Father through Christ, he not only presents your services, but persons, Exod. 12.29. Heb. 7.24,28. Eph. 1.6. Phil. 3.9.

The end or intendment of this Union:

1. To be the highest exaltation to his people that their persons are capable of, the Angels are not so united to Christ as the Saints; they are his servants, not his members.

2. That

Omnis communio fundatur in unione.

2. That this might be the foundation of all communion betwixt Christ and the soul; he is the Head we the members, by vertue of the hands union with the head are all living operations.

He is the foundation, we the building, He the stock, we the branches; He the Husband, we the Spouse; by vertue of this conjunction he looks for duties from us, there is a living in him, a bearing fruit in him; and we for priviledges from him, we partake with him in his Righteousnesse, Victories, Graces, Inheritance.

Directions to preserve our Union or Conjunction with Christ:

He is united to us by the indwelling of his Spirit, 1 Cor. 12.13. 1 John 3.24. & 4.13. and by faith, John 1.12.

1. Do not grieve Gods Spirit, Ephes. 4.22. Delicatum est Spiritus sanctus. Tertul. If he counsel, rebell not.

2. Maintain thy faith, believe strongly against all doubts and apprehensions of thy own unworthinesse, the Spirit comes by faith, Galat. 3. and it is kept by it; faith is the bond of union on our part, as the Spirit on Gods.

Christ will do nothing unless we be united to him, whatever he doth he doth as a head, a root, John 15.4. As by the personal union he merited all things for us, so by this union of Persons he dispenseth all to us.

We should labour, 1. To get into Christ. 2. To grow up into him. That consists, 1. In being emptied more and more of our own righteousnesse, and going to Christ for acceptation of our persons. 2. In going to him for strength in duty, and acceptation of our services. 3. In doing all for Christ and his glory. 4. In going to Christ for a rule in all our actions. 5. In doing all out of a principle of love to Christ, 2 Cor. 5.14. 6. In making Christ the reward of our services, to serve Christ for Christ.

3. Use the Ordinances, Job 22.21. in every duty and act of worship look to enjoy God. Get some excitements to grace, resolutions of obedience, displeasure against sin; use a holy boldnesse in thy addresse to God, Heb. 10.9. Ephes. 3.12. we come not to a tribunal of Justice as malefactors, but as friends and favourites to a throne of grace, Job 22.26. Use

1. Prayer, Psalm 86.11.

2. Attend on the Gospel, read it, meditate on it daily.

3. The Sacraments, make use of thy Baptisme, we were baptized into Christ, and frequently use the Lords-Supper. We should praise God when he meets with us in duties, and repent his withdrawing himself, Lam. 3.44.

4. We should be one with all believers, because we are one with Christ. Christ seldom speaks of his peoples union with him, but he speaks of their conjunction one with another, and seldom presseth them to brotherly love, but from this union with Christ, 1 Cor. 12. per tot. & 1 Joh. Ephes. 4.

We should study this Mystery of our Union with Christ, 2 Cor. 13.5.

1. Because it is a great mystery.

2. Because without knowing the explicite acts of faith we cannot be sure we are united to Christ, by faith we abide in Christ, as by it we were ingrafted into him, John 15.4.

3. There are other great things depend upon the knowledge of our Union:

1. Then we may go to Christ daily for justification, when we are troubled with the guilt of sinne.

2. For our sanctification, when corruption ariseth, John 14.19. Gal. 2.20.

3. For perseverance and perfection in grace and comfort. There is no sound argument whereby one can prove that he is in the state of salvation, unlesse it prove him to be in Christ.

Chap. II.

Of Effectual Vocation.

Our Union with Christ by the Spirit is wrought in our Effectuall Calling.

This is the first work which God works upon the soul, it is Temporalis Electio, 1 John 5. 19. it is the act of God the Father, Joh. 6. 44, 45. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Ephes. 1. 17, 19. He hath called us with an holy Calling.

It is the act of Gods free grace and almighty power, whereby souls are gathered out of the world into the kingdom of Christ to be made one with him, and holy and happy by him.

Est translatio hominis ex statu peccati & miseriæ, in statum justitiæ & beatitudinis. Rollocus De vocatione efficaci, c. 24.

See Mr Pembles Vindiciæ Gratiæ, pag. 42, 43.

Vocatio alta & secreta. Aug. Efficax vocatio, Rom. 8. 30. Solenne vobis est profiteri facultatem credendi & resipiscendi ex mera Dei gratia dari. Sic olim Epicurus verbis Deos posuit, re sustulit. Sed & Pelagius post Ecclesiæ censuras, professus est Dei gratiam ; quo artificio propemodum imposuerat Augustino, adeò ut ipse Augustinus professus sit se gravisum esse quod dogmata ejus aut recta essent, aut correcta. Quibus tamen diligenter expensis ut cæteri omittam hac ab eo ita disserta esse, tantum, ut frangeret invidiam, affectionesq; declinaret. Nam sola suasione & hortatione gratiam Dei circumscripsit. Twis. contra Corvin. c. 9. Sect. 7. Vide plura ibid.

It is an act

1. Of Gods free grace, called according to Gods free purpose, Rom. 8. 28. See 30, 31, verses.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 3. 1. Sect. 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, 20. Isaiah 53. 1. Trahit Deus & volentes. Præbet vires efficacissimas voluntati.

2. Of his almighty power, a moral perswasion will not doit, Ephes. 1. 19. Joh. 6. 44. This grace works powerfully, therefore God is said to draw, yet sweetly and secretly, therefore men is said to come. This power of God is put forth on the understanding by inlightning it, Jer. 31. 33. Joh. 6. 45. it apprehends the guilt of sin, the horror of Gods wrath, sweetness of Communion with him. 2. On the will, effectually inclining it, Jer. 31. 33. Psal. 110. 3. to embrace and follow those glorious objects the understanding represents.

The Arminians say, Effectual Calling is nothing but holding out an object, and using arguments. Those are special places against them,

3. Whereby souls are gathered out of the world into the kingdom of Christ.

All mankind are brought into two ranks, either they are men of the world, or called out of it, Joh. 15. 19. The Elect themselves while they are in their natural condition are men of the world, Ephes. 3. 5. Fiunt non nascuntur Christiani. Col. 1. 13.

4. The end of Vocation is to be made one with Christ, John 16. 44. and holy and happy by him, 2 Pet. 1. 3. 1 Thes. 4. Rom. 8. 30. Regeneration (saith Dr Twisse) is to be preferred before salvation, the one a translation from the state of nature into the state of grace, the other is only a translation from the state of grace into the state of glory. By the one we are made the sons of God, by the other we only obtain the inheritance of the sons of God.

First, The Causes of Vocation:

1. The principal efficient cause is the holy Ghost; man is not the author of his own conversion, 1 Thes. 5. 24.

2. Instrumental, the Ministry of the Word.

Secondly, The Subjects or Persons on whom it is wrought, all the elect, John 10. Other sheep have I that shall hear my voyce.

Thirdly, The manner how this Vocation is wrought.

The Spirit of God works after such a mighty manner, that it is irresistible (though the word be grounded on Acts 7. 51. yet some dislike it) but the Lord brings them not in violently against their wils, he takes away prevailing obstinacy. He never made any creature too hard for himself. He cals them once for all. There is more in it than a moral swasion, Joh. 6. 44. a real efficacy. God circumciseth our hearts, quickens us, raiseth us from the dead, gives a new heart, Rom. 8. 14. Gal. 5. 16. The manner of the Spirits leading is sweet and powerfull, so powerfull as we cannot choose but go, so sweet as we delight in going.

There are four several acts of the Spirits leading.

1. He doth shew us the way, Esay 30. 21.

2. He moves and excites the soul by arguments, to walk in that way, in that place also of Esay.

3. He brings the soule into the way, this is called drawing, Cant. 1. 4. John 6. 44.

4. It inableth the soul to go in that way, cooperates as well as assists.

The grace of conversion is a matter of promise, Ezek. 36. 26. Jer. 31. 33. & 32. 39, 40. What the grace of God doth promise, the power of God is ingaged to effect, Gods mighty power is exerted on the will of man in his Effectual Calling, Psal. 110. 3. Col. 2. 12. 2 Thess. 1. 11, 12. Augustine cals it vocatio qua fit credens, Jer. 24. 7.

Vocationis partes duæ sunt: oblatio Christi, & ejusdem perceptio. Joh. 1. 12. Ames. Medul. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 26. Vocatio externa nihil aliud est præter suasionem aut hortationem ad credendum nomine Dei mandatis ut credamus modo salvi esse velimus. Vocatio interna est ipsum fidei sive conversionis nostræ ad Deum effectio. Twis. contra Corvin. cap. 4. Sect. 1. Vide plura ibid.

Fourthly, The parts of this work of Vocation wherein it stands, In two things,

1. The Lord makes a gracious offer of Christ to the soul.

2. The soul accepts of Christ when and as he is tendred.

Christ is offered in the Gospel,

First, Externally, Matth. 20. 16. This is a Declaration or Publication of the great goodnesse of God to a poor lost sinner, willing to be reconciled to him in Christ.

It stands in four particulars:

1. God hath sent his Son Christ, who by his own obedience hath paid a sufficient ransom for the most miserable wretches.

2. God is willing to make this good to all poor sinners, who will take him on the terms he is offered.

3. The terms on which Christ is offered in the Gospel are most free, and nothing required but only freely to receive him.

4. Because the humble and broken sinner is most ready to be discouraged, there-

This distinction of calling into outward and inward, is opposed by Master Plaifere in his Apollo Evangelium, cap. 7. We should try whether God hath called us not onely with an external call by way of proposal and command, but by an internal influence of his Spirit, he hath then conveyed a quickning principle into us, then the soul will be enabled to give up it self to God, to choose him for its portion.

fore

fore he declares that those which are vilest in their own eyes are most welcome to him.

Secondly, Internally, Rom. 8. 30. which is the work only of the Spirit of God, Act. 10. 44.

We should constantly study this great mystery of Religion, our Regeneration or Effectual Calling, Gal. 6. 3, 4.

1. Because men are at first passive in this work, John 3. 8. and the manner of carrying it on is more imperceptible, Mark 4. 26, 30.

2. Because it is in some sense a standing work, Matth. 18. 3.

3. Because there are many false and counterfeit works, and a mistake here is most dangerous.

4. We can not make a happy progresse in Christianity, till this be first secured.

5. There are two vital acts of regeneration, by which we are to try our selves.

1. Self-emptinesse or self-denial, we must see our selves lost creatures, and insufficient to any good.

2. There must be a constant living upon Christ for all spiritual good, righteousnesse and life, Gal. 2. 20.

6. Many benefits will accrue to us by studying this mystery.

First, It will usher in assurance. Faith is the having of grace wrought in the soul, assurance is the sight of it, 1 Cor. 2. 12.

Secondly, It will keep our evidence clear, this general and fundamental work will more comfort than any particular acting.

Thirdly, By this means we come to give God the glory of his own grace, which is the principal thing he aimes at, Eph. 1. 6.

Marks of an effectual Calling:

First, God breaks the heart by some preparatory conviction to make the soul fit to receive the grace of God, the proper Call is by the Gospel, 1 Thess. 2. 14. but the previous work of the Law is conviction of sin, and the evil of it, Hos. 2. 14. Gal. 3. 1. See John 16. 8. This conviction hath not the like effects in all, in some anxiousnes, in others horror, all see themselves in a wretched condition, worthy of condemnation, Rom. 3. 19. & 7. 9. Gal. 3. 22. and that they have no righteousnes in themselves, Gal. 2. 19.

Spiritual motion is more sensible in some, some can tell the Sermon which first moved them, the first truth that toucht their consciences, the trouble they felt, as Paul Acts 22. he was first struck to the ground, after he was left in darknesse, did not eat nor drink three daies together. In others the work is carried on more insensibly, they can not tell the time or means of their conversion, but find their hearts set against every sinne, have chosen God for their portion, 2 Tim. 1. 5. and 3. 15. See Mark 4. 26, 27, 28. The substance of the work is the same in all, to be willing to leave sin; but for the means, this is done severall wayes, Some may be wrought on in Childhood, and so not be able to discern the work of grace in their own souls.

The second note may be taken from the instrument or means of conversion, 2 Thess. 2. 14. most usually it is by the Word preacht, though it may not work alway in the time of hearing, Cant. 5. 3, 6. Mat. 26. 8. Joh. 10. 3.

Thirdly, When the heart is over-powred and prevailed with to obey the Call, when we answer his Call, John 20. 16. Gods Call is the offer of grace, our answer is the receiving of it, John 12. 3. Jer. 22. the direct answer to a Call is the consent and full purpose of heart to take Christ upon his own terms.

Fourthly, The disposition of the soul in making this return, and in answering this Call of God, godly sorrow, Jer. 31. 18. holy wonders, 1 Pet. 2. 9. free resolution and confidence, come what will come, they will obey God, Luke 5. 5.

Fifthly, The fruits and effects of a Call, it infers a change from the former state in heart, the whole heart; it now finds comfort and satisfaction in God, and hates sin, Hos. 4. 8. Eph. 4. 18.

I know there is little difference between effectuall Calling, Conversion, and Regeneration. See Master Baxter of Conversion, chap. 1. Sect. 3d. Yet because some of our Divines handle the worke of Grace under the notion of Conversion and Effectuall Calling too, I shall speak of conversion in the next place.

Chap. III.

Of Conversion and Free-will.

I. Of Conversion,

Some describe it to be a turning from all sin as sin, and to all righteousnesse for the love of righteousnesse. Vide Dicksoni Therapeutica Sacra, l. 1. c. 3. De Regeneratione.

Conversion is stiled by the Schools, actualis electio. See Mr Baxters Profitable Treatise of Conversion.

Conversion is a coming back again to God, from whom one departed by sin, Hos. 14. 1.

It is a turning,

1. From the creature to God, Psalm 73. 25.
2. From sinne to holinesse, 1 Peter 1. 4, 5, 6.
3. From self to Christ, John 14. 6. Heb. 7. 25.

Turning is a word borrowed from Travellers, who being out of the way get into it again by turning, that is, by leaving the way in which they did walk, and taking another different way from it, contrary to it, if one have gone the quite contrary way.

In conversion God works a double change.

First, Relative, in our state, from the state of wrath into the state of grace and reconciliation in justification, and adoption, whereby of bastards we are made sonnes.

Secondly, Real, of the person, in sanctification, God conveys his own nature, not by communication of essence, but by his grace.

He works morally, perswading, Gen. 9. 27. Hosea 2. 15.

2. Really, there is an almighty power.

The Devil draws many to hell,

1. By mistakes of counterfet graces for true.
2. By delaies.

There is,

First, Habitual Coversion, the first infusion of life and habits of grace, conversion from a state of sin, Acts 3. 19. This is Gods work, Ezek. 11. 19. give them an heart of flesh, not offer and prepare it, but give it. See Ezek. 26. 26, 27. man by nature is born in sin, Psal. 51. 5. greedy after it, Job 16. 15. Conversion is stiled enlightning the mind, Eph. 1. 18. opening the heart, Acts 15. 16. a resurrection, creation, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

Secondly, Actual, the souls beginning to act from that life and those habits, a conversion from some particular gross acts of sinne, Luke 22. 32. It is so called because of the great breach grosse sins make on ones justification, 1. Puts a damp on all his graces, Psalm 51. 10. 2. There is a suspension of all the comforts of grace, verse 12. so that one may be said quodammodo excidere, in respect of the use and comfort, Isa. 63. 10, 17.

After conversion God still concurs,

1. To direct us, Psal. 73. 24.
2. To quicken and excite us, Psalm 119. 7.
3. To corroborate that we have received, Heb. 13. 16. 1 Peter 5. 10.

4. To

4. To protect and defend us against the assaults of the Devil. He is with us in every act, from the beginning to the end, to inable us to will and to do, Rom. 7. 18.

God keeps grace in his own hand,

1. To indeer himself to a gracious soul, Rom. 5. 3, 4.

2. To ingage us to a constant dependance on God, and communion with him, Heb. 4. 16.

3. To keep us humble. Because we have all by gift, 1 Cor. 4. 12. and we have it from hand to mouth, Psalm 59. 11. and are made sensible of the mutability of our own natures, 2 Chron. 32. 32.

4. For honour of the Lords grace, Luke 19. 16. Gal. 2. 20.

Mans aversion from God by sin, and conversion to God by grace, is the summe of all Divinity.

Conversion to God is necessarily required to happinesse, Isaiah 55. 7. Jer. 3. 12. James 5. ult.

A sinner departs from God two wayes:

1. As the chief good.

2. As the utmost end, therefore conversion is a change of those two, when one makes God his chiefest good, and his glory his utmost end.

A man in turning to God, Esay 44. 22. & 55. 7. Jer. 3. 10. & 4. 1. & 18. 11. Joel 2. 12. See Acts 20. 21.

First, Makes God the chief good:

1. If he make him the chief object of his contemplation, Psalm 139. 17. Where our treasure is there will our heart's be also.

2. If he choose him as his portion, Josua 24. 22. Psalm 119. 57.

3. If he desire all things else in subordination to him, Prov. 30. 8. sine summo bono nil bonum.

4. Judgeth of all times or persons according as they have this good or are service able for it.

5. Fears sin above all things, it will separate between God and him.

Secondly, He makes Gods glory his chiefest end; this is Gods end, Prov. 16. He makes God the utmost end of his being, Rom. 14. 8. and acting, 1 Cor. 10. 31. Rom. 11. 30. From him] as the first cause, To him] as the last end. God is our chiefest good, therefore must be our utmost end. See Psalm 73. 25, 26. It is the first Question in the Assemblies Catechism, What ought to be the chiefest and highest end of every man in this life?

Finis specificat in practicis. Quod forma est in naturalibus finis est in moralibus. Finis ultimus perficit tam agentem quam actionem.

The Properties and Qualities which ought to be found in true Conversion.

It must be

1. Present and seasonable, Jer. 18. 11. Now they were carried away awhile after into Babylon, Psal. 119. 60. See Matth. 3. 7. While it is called to day, Psalm 95. 7. Heb. 4. 7. call upon the Lord while he is near, and seek him while he may be found. The present time is the only time of converting, not the future; now at this instant time God offers mercy, exhorts, cals, To day if you will hear his voice harden not your hearts, the future time is uncertain, we cannot assure our selves of another hour. We have many examples daily of the falshood of late repentance. The longer we defer it, the more difficult it will be, as a sore without a plaister is more hardly healed. This delay of turning to God crosseth the end of our creation, Eccl. 12. 1. and redemption, Luke 1. 75. God made us to serve him not only to save us, and God redeemed us to be holy. Quare non hunc Domine, quare non hac hora si aliquando, Augustine. And after he being converted, said, Nimis sero te amavi Domine. If we turne now at this instant, God will turne to us, Zach. 1. 3, 4.

2. Universal or General; we must turn from all sin without exception or reservation of any, and chiefly from our own sins. Grace is called Light, Leaven. The Law of God forbiddeth all sin, God hateth all sin, Christ died for all sin, the conscience condemneth all sin, and in our Covenant with God we renounced all sin: Cast away all your transgressions, hate every false way.

Entire, there must be all the parts of conversion, one as well as another.

3. It

3. It must be hearty, sincere, unfeigned; with the whole heart, God complains of some that turned unto him feignedly. Agrippas judgement was convinced, the judgement, will and affections must be all changed.

4. Constant, persevering to the end, a continuing still more and more to convert, a daily renewing these acts, and reforming our faults, we must cleave to the Lord with full purpose of heart.

The order and manner of this work, how and in what measure it is wrought in the Saints.

We may consider the sweetness and power of grace in this work. 1. The sweetnesse of grace, Ezek. 16. 6. 2. The power of Gods grace, John 7. 44. when you had such a corrupt nature, and could not think a good thought, that God should then change you.

First, The Doctrine of the Gospel is propounded and made known in both the parts of it, viz. that which concerns mans misery in himself, and the perfect and only remedy in Christ to all penitent sinners.

Some are wrought on in their infancy, as Mr Bruen, see his life put forth by Master Hinde, chap. 1. see chap. 5. how he was reclaimed from Popery by that place, 1 Tim. 4. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. applied to him by his Companion Mr John Brierwood.

Special Grace is not given to sinners as sinners, but in the ordinary course there are preparatory works, Mat. 9. 13. & 11. 28. Acts 2. 37.

2. These preparations may be referred to the law-work, the sight and sense of our sins, our lost condition without Christ, Rom. 7. 9. the Gospel-work, a general illumination with some hope.

3. These preparations may be occasioned by afflictions, 2 Cor. 6. 37. or some scandalous fall, Psalm 36. 2. by conviction of the word, Rom. 7. 9.

4. Whatever is the occasion, the Spirit of God is the chief author, Rom 11. 20. In saving gifts, there is a method and order, desire stirs up waiting, that confidence, and after that follows a fuller manifestation of God.

Secondly, The soul is enlightned and inabled to assent unto this Doctrine, Esay 42. 6, 7. Acts 26. 28. Christ is the light of the world.

Thirdly, It is yet further stirred up to consider of this Doctrine so believed, and to give heed to it, as Lydias minde was wrought upon when Paul preacht.

Fourthly, It begins to apply that Doctrine to it self so far as to be affected with the sense of its misery, but so as there is wrought also a hope of getting out of this misery, and a perswasion that he shall be accepted, and hereupon follows conversion. For he that sees himself in an ill state, and sees also a certain way out of it, being perswaded that he may by such and such means escape and avoid, will undoubtedly apply himself to seek his own good, and the Spirit of God by working this perswasion converts the soul. We may plainly see this order in Davids renewing of his conversion after his sin, and in the hearers of Peters Sermon, Acts 2. where first they heard and marked Peter, then were pricked in heart, then asked, What they must do to be saved? and being instructed by Peter to convert, did so, and were saved.

There must be,

1. Some sorrow and trouble of heart by reason of sin, as a preparatory disposition or necessary condition. The Antinomians say nothing must be preacht but pure grace. That Gospel which comes wholly without law is to be suspected as unsound. We are not converted without a sense of sin.

2. The infusing of spiritual life, termed gratia praveniens & conversio passiva, by the Schools.

3. The actuating of this principle called in the Schools, gratia subsequens & conversio activa.

Spanheim (in his Commentaire Historique De La Vie & de la mort de vicomte de Dhona,) relates the conversion of the Duke of Bovillon to the reformed Religion. Being brought up in the Romish Religion till he was twenty two years old, he was desirous to go hear a Sermon at Montauban, that he might scoffe at the Minister, ſter, his religion, and thoſe which profeſſed it. But at the hearing of that Sermon, he perceived ſo mighty a change in himſelf, that he could not but eſteem that which he had deſpiſed, and taſte that which he had deteſted before. He confeſſed that the Word pierced ſo far into his ſpirit, that he thought himſelf bound to conſider that Religion more narrowly. And having taken pains to ſearch it to the bottom, he at laſt yielded and gave God the glory by a free and publick profeſſion of his truth. This being told by the Duke himſelf to Vicount de Dhona, he upon this occaſion obſerves in his Memoires, Qu' il eſt bon d' aller au lieu où Dieu parle, encore que ſouvent on n'y alle que pour y voir quelque nouveauté, That it is good to go to the place where God ſpeaks, although that often one goes but to ſee ſome novelty.

Maſter Thomas White (in his Treatiſe of The Power of Godlineſſe, p. 411.) hath a like ſtory, of a Miller in Leiceſterſhire, ſitting in an Alehoſe on a Sabbath-Day, with one of his Companions, ſaid to him, I hear that bawling Hooker (meaning Maſter Thomas Hooker, that precious ſervant of Chriſt which died in Newengland) is come to Town, let us go and hear him, we ſhall have excellent ſport, and accordingly they went on purpoſe to jeer him; but it pleaſed God the Sermon ſo wrought upon him, that being pricked to the heart, he went to Maſter Hooker, intreating him to tell him, what he might do to be ſaved? and afterwards went with him to New-England.

Marks or Signs of Converſion:

1. Such a one hath had experience of the diſcovery of ſin as the greateſt evil, and of miſery to himſelf by ſin, Sin revived and I died.

2. The Lord hath wrought in him a glorious diſcovery of Chriſt, and an inſtinct after union with him, which is faith, Phil. 3.10.

3. He is brought under the guidance and power of the Spirit, John 3.6. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Mat. 11. 5. Goſpellized, brought under the power of it, hath a ſpiritual bent in his ſoul, a new principle, new ends, 2 Cor. 5.17. He ſees things with another eye. He hath a new law planted within him which will make all duties eaſie and ſweet to him, Jer. 31.33.

4. He is made like to God, every Saint is a living Image of God. He will love perſons the more he ſeeth of God in them, and Ordinances the more pure they are.

5. Where there is life there will be growth, 1 Pet. 2.3. they will grow up as willows, as calves of the ſtall, Mal. 4.

True Converſion differs from falſe:

1. In the efficient cauſe, for firſt the true ſpring comes from the Spirit of God by means of faith in the Goſpel, ſtirring up a deſire of Gods favour, and freedome from ſin for attaining that favour: the falſe from a natural deſire of ones welfare, that he may eſcape the puniſhment of ſin.

2. In the formal, or manner of doing, true Converſion is a willing and deliberate act of choice, falſe a forcible act done out of compulſion.

3. Final, the true ſeeks to pleaſe God, the falſe to eaſe it ſelf.

Motives to, and means of Converſion:

By Motives, I mean certain conſiderations and arguments that in all reaſon ſhould prevail to make men reſolve upon the work.

By Means, ſome things tending to enable men the better to do it, when they have reſolved upon it.

1. Motives to Converſion:

They may be taken a poſſibili, à commodo, ab incommodo, from every place, Heaven, Earth, and Hell.

From Heaven, look to God, his Angels and Saints.

From Earth, look to your ſelves, the godly and ungodly, nay the beaſts.

From Hell, look to the Devils and damned ghoſts.

From Heaven:

Firſt, Look to God, the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt.

Is it not a moſt deſirable thing to turn to him, ſeeing he is ſo rightful a Lord, ſo great

God muſt be exalted as the higheſt good and utmoſt end.

Live in the Spirit, walk in the Spirit.

Luke 15. God the Father, 1. Requesteth and commandeth conversion, and saith, He doth delight in it. 2. He giveth us time and leisure to convert, and doth not cut us off. 3. He vouchsafeth us means to convert, the light of nature, the Doctrine of the Word. 4. He will afford help to us in converting. 5. He will accept us, and therefore gave Christ that converts might be saved. Secondly, His holy Attributes make him a fit person to turn to, 1. He is just and cannot abide sinne. 2. Mighty and can punish sinne. 3. Gracious to pardon sinne.

great a Prince, and so gracious a Father, so willing to accept us, and hath given us means, time and commandments, and encouraged us with promises of acceptance, and threatned us if we do not, and complains that they have not turned to him who smote them. God hath sent his Son into the world that converts might be graciously received.

Secondly, Christ himself is a weighty argument of conversion, for if we refuse to turn, then we do what in us lies to frustrate his death, and to make him shed his bloud in vain, seeing it is intended for the benefit only of such as turn. In Christ you may see the hatefullness of sin from which you are to turn, and the graciousness of God to whom.

Thirdly, The holy Ghost striveth to bring you to this turning in his Ordinances, Gen. 6. 3. and will you not suffer him to prevail?

Secondly, The blessed Angels will rejoyce at the conversion of a sinner. All the Saints in Heaven have given you examples of converting, and are now glad of their pains bestowed that way.

Secondly, Look to the Earth, and there to your selves first, consider

1. That you are out of the way, Psalm 14. & 53. & 119 ult. and know that you are so.

2. That you have bound your selves by Covenant to convert when you were baptized, and as often as you came to the Supper.

3. You have and do daily make profession of converting.

4. You can by no means save your selves out of the hands of Gods justice, if you do not submit and convert to him.

Secondly, The Duty it self is,

1. Most reasonable and equal, because the wayes are evil from which, and good to which we are wished to turn.

2. Most needful, without it we cannot escape the greatest misery.

3. Most profitable, Turn and live; by continuing in our evill wayes we may get a little perishing profit, vanishing pleasure and bewitching credit; by turning from them we shall gain pardon of sins past, peace and joy of soul for the present, and eternal life hereafter. When the sinner turneth, I will blot out all his sins out of my remembrance.

4. Likely to succeed if we set to it in earnest, Prov. 1. 24. Let us labour to grieve for our sins by a serious applying of the threats of God, humbly confesse them, and resolve by Gods help to leave them, You will not come to me that you may have life.

Let thy dislike of that which is but an image of obstinacy in the creatures, make thee ashamed to be obstinate thy self.

Secondly, Look to the godly in the world, They pray for it, they will further it, rejoyce in our conversion, they will love and esteem us when converted. To the ungodly, by this means we may perhaps win them, or shall leave them without excuse. Yea look to other creatures, in the bad we hate incorrigibleness in evil, we dislike the creatures which have gotten an evil quality and will not leave it. We like and praise obedience in the good.

Thirdly, Look upon Hell:

1. On the Devil, he seeks to hinder thy conversion, will be vexed at it, he is most loathsome, because obstinate in evil. The Devils worst property is, that he is now so hardened in evil, that there is no possibility of change in him: Wilt thou be like the Devil in that which is the worst thing in him? Besides thou abusest and neglectest grace offered, and so doth not he.

2. The damned Ghosts, who because they did not convert are damned, and blame themselves for not turning when they had time, and now it is too late.

2. Means of Converſion.

First, Take notice of your own ſtrayings and unconvertedneſs, and your peril thereby.

Secondly, Acknowledg your utter inability to convert your ſelves, and therefore cry earneſtly to God to convert you, as the Church doth, Turn me and I ſhall be turned. Turn preſently, and begin with that ſin which hath moſt drawn thee away from God.

As the Prodigal ſaith, I will go to my Father.

3. Remove Hinderances:

1. Outward, 1. Ill company. 2. The occaſions of ſin; Salomon adviſeth the young man not to come near the corner of the Harlots houſe, and the drunkard not to look on the Wine.

2. Inward, 1. Love of earthly things: 2. Preſumptuous and deſpairful fancies: 3. Hardneſs of heart and wilfulneſs in ſinning.

A beſotted affection to earthly pleaſures, and an eager proſecution of earthly profits. Vide Auguſtini confeſſ. l. 8. c. 5. & 7. What hindred his converſion, and the means of it, c. 12.

4. Uſe all Helps and Furtherances:

1. Outward, good company, attend on all Gods Ordinances, hearing, reading, Pſalm 19. conference.

2. Inward, Cheriſh and practiſe good motions, ponder on the Law and Goſpel, think often and ſeriouſly on thoſe quatuor noviſſima, Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell.

Thoſe that are converted ſhould,

1. Have their hearts inlarged to praiſe God, Pſalm 103. 1, 2, 3. It is a greater change from corruption to grace, then from grace to glory.

2. Repell Satans temptations.

3. Labour to grow in grace.

There is ſomewhat in a converted man which may be called ſtrength.

Familiſts ſay, it is Chriſt himſelf that worketh in us, we do not repent but Chriſt in us, 1 John 3. 9. grace is a created gift, Pſalm 51. 12. it is called the new creature, hidden man, it may increaſe. The fruits of the ſpirit are diſtinguiſhed from the ſpirit it ſelf.

Of Free-will.

Unregenerate men may,

1. Abſtain from acts of ſin.

2. May put themſelves under powerfull means.

3. May ſee the equity of what God requires of them.

4. May apply what is generally ſpoken to themſelves, and thereby ſeriouſly conſider their ſtate and wayes.

5. May ſue out general promiſes, I will take away the heart of ſtone, and give you a heart of fleſh.

The word it ſelf is Terminus Eccleſiaſticus, not Biblicus, not a Scripture-term, but ſuch a one as godly men in the Church took up for more convenient expreſſion, as they have done the name Trinity and Sacrament.

To render Liberum arbitrium into Engliſh is not proper, for arbitrari and arbitri- ans is an act of the understanding, but use hath applied it to the will.

A mixed power of understanding and will, saith Mr Perkins. It can be onely in an intelligent nature, as Bellarmine proves, lib. 3. de Grat. & Lib. Arb. c. 15. and the understanding though it be not formally free, yet it is radically, and the liberty of the will ariseth from the indifferency of the judgment. The liberty of the will properly consists in choosing that which the understanding judgeth best. Radix libertatis constituta est in libero rationis judicio. Aquin.

There is in the will a double freedom:

1. Natural, a power that a man hath to choose or refuse as it seemeth good to himself, and this is so annexed to, or dependant on his reasonableness, that they cannot be separated, and this he hath not nor could loose by corruption.

2. Sanctified, an inclination to use the former liberty well by choosing that he ought to choose, and this he hath lost, when now he will choose and refuse what he ought not.

Or thus,

Free-will may be considered either in the essence and being of it as it is an immediate faculty of the soul, and the same with the will: we have this free-will, for Adam by his fall hath no more lost this then he hath lost his very nature; it is therefore a great calumny of the Papists, when they say, that we deny free-will, and make man no better than a beast, for take free-will thus, as it is a natural power in a man, so it remaineth still.

The free-will of man after the fall is not so corrupted, that it is not capable of the grace of Regeneration. Tolle liberum arbitrium, non erit quod salvetur; tolli gratiam non erit unde salvetur. Bern.

There is a threefold power,

1. Activa, an ability to concur to the operation of the Spirit in a mans self: so those that are for free-will, Agimus nos, sed acti, volumus, sed ipse facit ut velimus.

2. Passiva, able to receive, man in conversion is meerly passive to grace, but hath in him a principle of resistance.

3. Obedientialis, as in the unreasonable creature.

Secondly, Free-will may be considered in its operation and working about some objects, then we distinguish about the objects which it may will: For Non controvertitur, an homo ratione utens sit liberi arbitrij, quatenus liberum arbitrium in genere intelligitur: Ergo non quæritur an sit in homine talis facultas, quam liberum arbitrium appellant, cùm propter ambiguitatem hujusmodi disputandum sit an ita appellari debeant, vel ferendum potius dici quàm liberum: Verum quoniam eadem facultas servitus & libertas tribui potest diversa consideratione; cum agitur de natura liberi arbitrij in se, non de variis ejusdem objectorum variorum rationibus, non existimamus rejiciendum esse liberi arbitrij receptam appellationem, usi in Scriptura totidem verbis non reperiantur. Rivet. Cath. Orth. Tract. 4. Quæst. 2. Vide Quæst. 3. A man dead cannot enliven himself: Lazarus being dead is an instance of mans natural condition, not the man half wounded. When we deny that a natural man hath any free-will unto good, by a natural man we understand one that is without Christ and destitute of his renewing grace, by free-will, a thing that is in our own power to do, and by good, a Theological not a Philosophical good, Bonum vere Spirituale & salutare, a spiritual good and tending to salvation. An unregenerate man is a stranger from the life of God, Ephes. 4. 18. Dead in sins, Ephes. 2. 1, 5. and so no more able to lead a holy life acceptable to God, than a dead man is to perform the actions of him which is alive. Br Ushers Answer to the Jesuites charge. Difficillima certè & fere inexplicabilis est visa doctissimis Patribus & Scholasticis quæstio de conciliatione Prædestinationis seu Prædefinitionis, providentiæ & operationis divinæ, cum libertate arbitrij, cùm in bonis tum in malis operibus. Strangius De voluntate & Actionibus Dei lib. 4. cap. 13.

First, They are either such as belong to our animal life, as to walk, eat, shut or open our eyes, and here we have the exercise of free-will.

Secondly, Our outward civil conversation and obedience to the Laws required by a Magistrate, here again we have free-will.

Thirdly, They are holy actions, and they again are either

1. Externally holy, which concern the outward exercise of Religion, as to come to Church, to hear and read, and here still a man hath free-will. Or,

2. Internally and spiritually, as to know God, to believe in him and love him, and so we must distinguish the states of men. Man in the state of innocency had an excellent power and strength of free-will to serve God and love him, but in the ſtate of corruption, though his liberty not only in the nature, but uſe of it remaineth about natural, civil and external religious actions; yet for internal and ſpiritual actions, he hath wholly loſt his free-will, John 15. 5. Mat. 7. 18. John 8. 36. therefore Auguſtine lib. 2. contra Julianum, de Spiritu & litera cap. 30. & alibi ſæpe, cals it Servum arbitrium. And Luther called it not a free but enthralled and enſlaved will to ſin, and wrote a Book De ſervo Arbitrio, Homo libero arbitrio malè utens, & ſe perdidit & ipſum. Auguſt. ad Laurent. Cum per lapſum à nobis ſublatum eſſe liberum arbitrium dixerunt Orthodoxi, nihil contra veritatem aut ſermonis proprietatem protulerunt, nec immerito pro nomine liberi arbitrij ſervum arbitrium ſubſtituerunt, idque ex phraſi ipſius Scripturæ, Joh. 8. 34. Rom. 6. 6, 13, 16, 17, 19, 20. & 7. 14. & 2 Pet. 2. 19. Strangius de voluntate & Actionibus Dei, l. 3. c. 14. The appellation therefore ſervi arbitrijs was not firſt invented and uſed by Luther, as ſome ſay, ſince it is confirmed by ſuch manifeſt teſtimonies both of Scripture and Auſten.

Thirdly, Man in his eſtate of Renovation hath again ſome power and free-will, being firſt freed by the grace of God from the power of ſinne, John 8. 13. Voluntas in tatum eſt libera in quantum eſt libertata, Auguſt. in Joh. Tract. 53. yet this freedom is not perfect, but wonderfully oppoſed and hindred, Gal. 5. 17.

The free-will muſt be as the underſtanding and will are, ſaith Chamier, but that the underſtanding and will are both corrupted in a natural man. Vide Chamier. contractum per Spanhem. Tom. 3. l. 4. c. 3. & 4.

See Dr Field of the Church, lib. 3. cap. 15.

There are ſeveral kinds of freedom or liberty:

1. From compulſion, when no external principle can compel to work, but there muſt be an inward inclination to work, from ſuch coaction, not only men but beaſts are free.

2. From obligation or debt to another; and ſo no creature can be free, becauſe all that we have is Gods.

3. From ſin, when the fleſh is ſubdued ſo that the Spirit can and doth prevail over it.

4. From miſery, which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of Rom. 8.

Eſt in Deo optimo maxima, eſt in bonis Angelis, eſt in Damonibus omnibus liberum arbitrium Arbitrij libertas à coactione in omnibus omnino eſt quibus voluntas eſt. Nullius voluntas cogi poteſt. Si cogitur non voluntas eſt, ſed noluntas. Eſt quoque in his omnibus libertas contradictionis, ut hoc velle poſſint aut non velle: Etſi libertas contrarietatis, ut liberè velint vel bonum vel malum, nec in Deo ſit, nec in Angelis confirmatis in gratia, nec in animabus beatis. Nam hi omnes ſic liberè volunt bonum, ut malum nec volint, nec jam velle poſſint. Dæmones quoque & homines non renati, quamdiu renati non ſunt, ita liberè malum volunt, ut bonum nec velint, nec in eo ſtatu velle poſſint. Crakanth. Defenſ. Eccleſ. Anglic. contra Archiepiſc. Spalat. cap. 35.

5. From neceſſity, when the Agent is determined from an inward principle of nature to one object, as the fire to burn. Immutability and liberty may ſtand together, as God doth moſt freely will the creation of the world, yet unchangeably, the Angels and Saints in Heaven are ſo confirmed in good, that what they will they will unchangeably but freely. Every man naturally cannot but ſin, yet he ſins freely in regard of freedom from coaction and natural neceſſity, though not in regard of freedom from immutability, and as for the other liberties from obedience, ſin, and miſery, he is obedient to God, and under ſin and miſery. The will hath no freedom to ſpiritual things.

The Papiſts though they ſay that the grace of God is requiſite, yet as a partial cauſe, and that we are workers with the grace of God in our converſion, as appears by their ſimilitudes of two men carrying a great burden, and the man half wounded.

The Pelagians ſay, God goes along with him that prepares himſelf for converſion, and that this is the reaſon why ſome are converted, and ſome not. Vide Bellarm. de Gratia & libero arbitrio, lib. 5. cap. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, &c. & lib. 6. cap. 10, 11, 12, 13. Petav. Tom. 3. Theol. dogm. De Opificio ſex dierum, l. 3. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. & l. 4. c. 1. &c. l. 5. c. 1. &c. Their wicked Maxime is, A Deo habemus, quod hominis ſumus, à nobis ipſis autem, quod juſti ſumus. The will of man doth never attain grace by its own liberty, but the will of man attaineth liberty by grace. Doctor Arrowſmith on John 1. 13. See more there.

Against which opinion these arguments may be alleadged:

Mihi hac sententia altius animo insedit, excidisse Christo qui voluntati humanæ & viribus liberi arbitrij vel minimum in negotio salutis tribuunt, qui Spiritui Dei solas suadendi partes reliquunt nec aliter eum in suis quam in hypocritis agere contendunt. Cameron. de gratia & libero arbitrio. See Mr Pemb. Vindic. gratiæ. pag. 133, 134, &c.

1. The slavery and servitude of our wils to any thing that is good, those who are so defiled that they are nothing but flesh, they cannot possibly have any power to what is good, but so are all by nature, Gen. 6.5. John 3.6. Rom. 8.6. To will is of nature, to will ill is of corrupted nature, but to will well is of sanctified nature. Bernard.

2. Those which can do nothing but sin, have no freedom to what is good, every unregenerate man doth nothing but sin, Matth. 7 17. An evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth evil; Without faith it is impossible to please God, To the unclean all things are defiled. A man by nature non potest non peccare etiam damnabiliter. Pet. Lombard.

3. A man cannot turn himself to God, John 6. 44. 1 Cor. 12. 3. therefore nature hath no power to dispose and prepare it self for grace, nor can there be merits of congruity or condignity.

4. Regeneration and conversion is attributed only to God, as Ezek. 36 26. Jer. 32. 39. See Ezek. 11. 19. Eph. 2. 10. & 1. 19. a stone cannot soften it self, no more can our nature. See Deut. 29. 4.

5. A man hath not the least thing to glory in 1 Cor. 1. that place 1 Cor. 4 7. moved Augustine much, but if I had power of my own to do that which is good, or to receive grace when it is offered, then I might glory in my own strength.

6. Conversion and power to do good is prayed for, Turn us O Lord, therefore not in our own power, it were vain to pray to God, to convert or change me if I will, if I have this of my own, what need I go and pray for it, or pray for others conversion? they might convert themselves, Psalm 80. 3.

All men naturally minde the outward act more then the inward frame of the heart, Rom. 2 15. the work of the Law, avoid grosse acts of sinne and perform outward duties, they seek not to order the frame of their spirits, and to avoid lusts as well as sinnes. 2. The reason and aim upon which they do any thing is not spiritual. Their aim is according to their principles, which are but carnal, civil or legal at the best, to satisfie natural conscience, Mic. 6. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 5. The power of nature is more seen in things moral than religious: the Heathens were famous for temperance, justice, but brutish in worship.

Before Pelagius his time the Fathers spake too liberally of mans free-will, Nondum nato Pelagio securius loquebantur Patres. August. Epist. 103. which after upon his heresie they reformed, and by Scripture abundantly confuted the Pelagians, and especially * Augustine, Jerome, Prosper, Fulgentius, Hilary, and others.

Vincentius Lyrinens. adversus hæreses commonitor, l. 1. c. 34.

The first presumptuous advancer of free-will contrary to the Doctrine anciently received in the Church, is by Vincentius Lyrinensis noted to be Pelagius the heretick.

In the ancient Church there were two sorts of hereticks concerning the point of free-will. The Manichees denied a natural liberty of the will: the Pelagian hereticks affirmed the will to be so free, that they left no place for Gods grace, and both were condemned by the Catholick Church. The Manichees denied free-will in sin, and in the committing of evil. The Pelagians affirmed a power and ableness of free-will for the performance of righteousnesse and doing of good.

Dr Abbot against Bishop in his answer to the Epistle to the King. St Strangius de Voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum.

In the meaning wherein the Manichees denied free-will, we affirm and teach it, and in that meaning did St Augustine write his books of free-will purposely against the Manichees; we deny free-will onely in that meaning wherein first the Pelagians and since the Papists have affirmed it, in which meaning St Augustine notably wrote against it. Id. ibid.

The

The summe of the Controversie is, Whether the grace which first moveth and exciteth the will unto good motions, doth work the consent alone, or whether the will have in it self any power freely to consent and resist every such motion. The Romanists plead for the power of mans will, but Protestants for the efficacy of Gods grace. Bp Mortons Appeal, l. 2. c. 10. Sect. 5.

If the Question be moved, Whether free-will may resist grace? It is apparent naturally in the unregenerate it may resist, according to that Acts 7. 51. But if the Question be moved of them that are called according to Gods purpose, Whether they resist the grace of their calling, then removing the humour of contention the truth will easily appear. The Question is, Whether nature in this case doth resist the Omnipotent Power of God? Deo volenti salvum facere, nullum resistit hominis arbitrium. Bp Carl. against Mountague, c. 3. Aug. de corrept. & gratia c. 14.

There is a twofold resistance of the will, say the Schoolmen.

1. Connata, born with it, there is possibility to sin in the best creatures, as creatures.

2. Actualis, The Spirit of God by an Almighty Power overcomes this, Psalm 110. 3. See Rom. 9. 18.

The Arminians have revived the old Pelagian heresie, they say they magnifie Gods free grace *, as it was free grace for God to give Christ to be a Saviour, and to send the Gospel to a place, but then ask them about Gratia discriminans, why Simon Peter receives the Gospel rather than Simon Magus, they say God determines no mans will, but because Peter receives it, and the other rejects it, it ariseth wholly from his determining himself, then Christ should do no more in his own and Fathers intention for a sav'd than a damned person. No man hath power to receive Christ when he is offered unless it be given him from above.

* Ubi eminus de gratia loquuntur speciosa adhibent elogia; ubi vero cominus ac punctim de gratia ipsius conflictu agitur, nervos ipsos succidunt, & vim gratiæ illricem tollunt. D. Ward. in Phil. 2. 12. Vide plura ibid. Revera nulla gratia nunc est sufficiens, quæ non est etiam efficax: quicquid contra statuant Pontificij. Strangius de voluntate & Actionibus Dei Circa peccatum lib. 11. cap. 7.

Object. Why then doth the Lord exhort us to receive him, or complain of us, and threaten damnation if we receive him not?

Answ. The Lord useth these reproofs and exhortations as a means to work upon them whom he purposeth to save.

2. To shew that some work is to be done on our part, though not by our own streng h, it must be done à nobis, though not ex nobis.

So the Papists argue from Gods commands; God would not command us to do good works, if we had not power to do them. When our Saviour saith, Make the tree good, and then the fruit will be good; He doth not imply that it is in our power to do so, but only sheweth what our duty and obligation is. See Rom. 7. 15. Gal. 5. 17. Precepts to duty are no measure of strength. 2. To the elect they conveigh grace, Jer. 31. 18.

God gave the Law for these ends:

1. To shew man his duty, the obligation that lies on him, I may put my debter in mind of his debt though he be turned bankrupt.

2. To shew him his disability.

3. To shew him the misery he should be in if God would urge this debt on him to discharge it himself.

4. To shew the riches of his grace in providing a means to satisfie his justice, and also the exceeding love of Christ in fulfilling the Law for him.

Object. The Arminians say, How can the will be free, when it is determined? How can omnipotent grace and free-will stand together? and some talk of a Libertas contrarietatis, when one can will good or evil. This is a great controversie as between the Jesuites and Dominicans, so between Us and the Arminians.

Answ. The freedom of the will doth not consist in this, that it is free and indifferent to choose either good or evil: For so God and the good Angels should not be free, seeing they cannot will any thing but that which is good. There is no true liberty Gratia non aufert libertatem arbitrij licet a vera & physica liberty but unto that which is good, becauſe it is a perfection, to be able to ſin is an imperfection, 2 Cor. 3. 11. Ubi non eſt Spiritus Domini non eſt libertas arbitrij. Auguſt. A power to ſtand or fall was not a part of Adams liberty, his power to fall came from his mutability not liberty. Strangius De voluntate & Actionibus Dei Circa peccatum, lib. 11. cap. 4. diſtinguiſheth of a twofold determination of the will, one internal, in which the will determines it ſelf in a formally vital and immanent action; another external, by which God determines it in an efficacious and tranſeunt action. See more there, and Chapters 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, &c.

operatione determinet arbitrium, ſed potius libertatem illi ad bonum reſtituit & confirmat. Dicimus enim determinari voluntatem ad benè agendum liberè. Twiſ. contra Corvinum cap. 4. Sect. 1. *Arbitrium igitur voluntatis tunc eſt verè liberum, cum vitiis peccatiſque non ſervit. Facienti quod in ſe eſt, Deus faciet quod in ſe Pelag. Arminians ſay, That they can repent, that they can be converted, it is from God, but that they do believe, that they do repent, that they are converted, is from the liberty of their own wils.

It is a Queſtion, An facienti totum quod in ſe eſt ex naturæ viribus, dentur infalliliter auxilia ad ſalutem ſupernaturalia? Whether God will give ſupernatural grace to him that uſeth well his natural abilities?

Let any man uſe the power that God gives him, and he ſhall have more. There is not ſuch an infallibilis nexus, that God hath bound himſelf in the uſe of our natural abilities to adde ſupernatural graces. Mr Fenner on Ezek. 18. 31, 32.

A man in his natural condition can do nothing but what is offenſive to God.

No man ever yet by the right uſe of naturals obtained Evangelical grace, that is a vain power which is never reduced into act.

See John 6. 44, 45. 1 Cor. 4. 7. Semen naturæ non conſurgit in fructum gratiæ. Auguſt. Si in opere converſionis Deus operatur tantum poſſe convertere, & ſola voluntas det ipſum velle convertere, tum in operanda converſione & ſalute, potiores partes erunt voluntatis, quam gratia: hominis, quam Dei: ſiquidem potiores partes ejus ſunt qui dat operari, quam ejus, qui ſolum dat poſſe operari; cum operari ſit actus atque adeo prior & perfectior potentia, & operatio ſit complementum & perfectio operantis. D. Ward. in Phil. 2. 12. *Si ex rerum naturalium uſu concedenda eſt gratia Evangelica, certè ex non recto naturalium uſu privandi erunt homines gratia Evangelica. The Arminians ſay, God will give ſaving grace to him that improveth common grace. He is not bound to it neither by the merit of Chriſt, nor by any promiſe of his own, Titus 3. 5. but a holy ardency in the uſe of the means, argues ſome ſecret impreſſion of grace upon the heart, Gen. 32. 26. Cant. 3. 4.

Every man is bound to improve the power he hath to the utmoſt, Luke 7. 36. Acts 13. 46.

2. De facto, none doth his utmoſt in the improving of his power, Jude 10.

3. When we do our utmoſt, we can not ſay God is a debter to us, Luke 17. 10.

4. The main thing that is required of us, is an acknowledgment of Gods Soveraignty.

1. Before the action, we ſhould do the duty, and refer the event to him.

2. After the duty is done, we ſhould look on him as free, and not ingaged, Rom. 9. 18.

All that we will and do in the Spiritual life is of the Lord, Phil. 2. 12, 13.

Firſt, He did not only give us the faculty of willing and doing.

Secondly, Neither doth he only concur as a general cauſe, Acts 17. 28. God gives the ſeeing eye and hearing ear, not only the natural faculty, but gracious exerciſe, he not only helps the will but heals it, Eph. 2 2.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, He doth not only give us a power to will if we please, but works efficaciously so that the effect follows, Ezekiel 36. 26, 27. if this were all the grace given us, that men might be converted if they will, Then

1. Christ died at a uncertainty, Rom. 8. 30. John 6. 37.

2. Man would be the principal cause of his own conversion, and free-will have the casting voice; the act is more perfect than the power.

3. Then a man would difference himself, 1 Cor. 4. 7.

4. Our first converting and willing is not onely given to us; but our willing and working when converted. God first works per modum habitus permanentis, after per modum auxilij transeuntis.

5. In the same actions unless God continue his assistance, we fail and wax faint, there may be willingness without doing, Rom. 7. 18. we need renewd strength every moment.

6. This to will and do must be continued during the whole course of our spiritual life, Hebrews 12. 2.

We have need of the Spirit,

1. To direct us, and shew us our way, Esay 30. 21. Psalm 73. 24.

2. To excite and quicken us.

3. To strengthen us, Ephesians 3. 6. 1 Peter 5. 10.

4. Because we are continually assaulted.

It is a Question, An naturæ viribus possit aliqua vera tentatio superari? Whether a man by strength of nature be able to conquer corruption or resist temptation? Vide Bellarm. de gratia & libero arbitrio, lib. 5. cap. 7.

Before Conversion we cannot resist sin as sin, but exchange one sin with another. We cannot discern good from evil, sin is connatural to us, Jeremiah 8. 6. No more are we able to resist temptation without grace. All temptations are to draw us to the enjoyment of some temporal good, or to the declining some temporal evil by leaving God. Till a man be perswaded that God promiseth a greater good, and threatneth a greater evil than the world can do, he cannot resist such temptations, we are saved by faith, and stand by faith. We had need all to pray, Lord lead us not into temptation, and keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins. See Ephes. 6. 10.

Some speak of reconciling Free-will with Gods Decree, Grace and sin.

Others of the Concord of it, and Gods Prescience and Providence.

Tully thought Prescience and Free-will could not stand together, and therefore that he might assert the freedom of mans will, he denied the Prescience of future things, Atque ita dum vult facere liberos, facit sacrilegos. Aug. de civitate Dei, l. 5. c. 9.

Chap. IV.

Of Saving Faith.

Faith in the New Testament is taken,

1. For the Doctrine of Faith, Jude vers. 3. Such are sound in the faith, that are Orthodox. This is the Catholick faith.

2. For the habit or grace of faith, whereby we receive Christ and accept him for our Saviour, so it is often used in the Scripture.

See Mr Jenkyn on the third verse of the Epistle of Jude, of the several acceptions of Faith.

Faith

Faith in its general nature is any assent unto some truth upon the * authority of him that speaks it, and the general nature of divine faith is to assent to the truth, because God sayes it, to the whole truth of God.

Faith makes a man firmly to assent to what ever God hath revealed, Credere est cum assensu cogitare, say the Schools. Yet there may be a degree of doubting and hesitancy where there is the best faith, but this proceeds from the remaining principle of unbelief.

* Fidem Ebræi Emunah veritatem, à communi objecto, commodè appellarunt, quod enim verum est, id credendum. Græcis est πίστις à πείθομαι persuadeor, latinis fides à fido, quia in genere qualitas ea est qua quis fidit, cùm activè sumitur; ut passivè, ob quam alicui fides adhibeatur. Hic de fide activè sumpta quæstio est: nec de humana, pro assensu quo sibi mutuo homines fidem adhibent, sed de ea quam deferimus Deo, revelanti nobis veritatem alicujus rei, cui firmiter assentimur propter asseverationem ipsius, quæ propterea divina vocatur ab objecto, veritate nempè divinitus patefacta. Rivet. Disp. 10. de fide justif.

Our assent and persuasion of the truth in matters of Religion, may be either humane meerly because of custom, education, and the authority of the Church: or divine, being enclined and moved thereunto, because of divine authority. Many Protestants have no more than a humane faith. It is the Religion of their Fathers and of the place where they live.

There is also a common assent in ordinary professors, and the Devils themselves to divine truths, which is a meer rational assent, and a saving assent in a godly man, this silenceth carnal reason, 2 Cor. 10.4. See Rom. 4.18,19,20.

In the grace of Faith there are three things:

1. An act of the understanding, an assent to the truths of Christ, that he is such a one in respect of his Natures, Offices, Works, as the Scripture reveals him, John 6.40.

2. An act of the will, consenting that Christ should do for me what the Lord sent him to do for poor sinners. To choose the Lord Jesus as the onely means of salvation, and so to cleave to him: This is the formal difference between faith and love. Faith closeth with Christ as a relative good; love closeth with him as an absolute good.

3. A fiducial affiance and dependance on him, Psalm 55.22. Ephes 1.12.

I take it as a certain and weighty truth, that saving faith is in the will as well as in the understanding; and so do the stream of Protestants; though yet I highly honour Chamero, and the French Divines of his mind, that think otherwise. M^r Baxter of Saving Faith against M^r Barlow.

Rivet. Grot. Dissert. Dialys. Sect. 3. The Socinians by faith in Christ understand nothing but an acknowledgment of the veracity of the sayings, and the promises of Christ which ought to be given them not because Christ is true God with the Father, but because God after his death, raised him from the dead, which he also fore-told before, and for this reason he was worthy to be believed in what he commanded or promised. This is their Doctrine of justifying faith and justification, as if Christ had come into the world and suffered such things for no other cause, but that he might perswade us that an eternal reward is propounded to the obedient, that being allured with the hope of reward we might obey him.

* De Justificat. l. 1. c. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Bellarmine * saith, Justifying faith is not so much knowledge as assent, and it is not a confidence of Gods mercy, but an assent to all things which are contained in the word of God.

Faith is more than a bare assent to the truth, there is in it a fiducial acquiescence and a resting upon Jehovah, as it is expressed in the Hebrew; he rolled himself upon God, as a man being weary of a burden casts himself, and that upon something that sustains him, Prov. 3.5. Esay 10.20. & 28.16. & 50.10.

Faith is such a sense of our utter necessity, and of Christs all-sufficient excellency, as makes us willing to welcome him into our hearts, and to use him to all the ends God hath appointed him, especially for our alone righteousness and acceptance with God, Phil. 3.8,9.

First, A sense to distinguish it from speculative knowledge and bare assent.

Secondly, Of our utter necessity by reason of sin, and the curse of God due to us, us, Rom. 7.9. and of the all-sufficiency of Christ, 2 Tim. 1.12.

Thirdly, As makes us willing to welcome Christ into our hearts, John 1.12. Acts 8.37.

Fourthly, To make use of him for all the ends for which God hath appointed him, Acts 5.31.

Fifthly, Chiefly as our alone righteousnesse, and the ground of our acceptance with God, Rom. 3.25.

The chief act of the soul in true faith, wherein the essence of it mainly consists, is a resting and relying upon Christ, and him alone for the obtaining of favour and eternal life. In respect of this property faith is oft called a believing in or on Christ, and his Name, John 3.16,18,36. John 6.1. & 5.10. a trusting in Christ, Ephes. 1.12. a resting upon God, 2 Chro. 14.11. a resting upon his promise, 2 Chro. 32.8. a relying upon God, 2 Chro. 16.8. a cleaving and sticking close unto him, Acts 11.23. Mr Hildersam on Psalm 51.6. Lect. 83.

The faith of the Devils hath more of the understanding in it; the faith of Christians more of the will: the Devils in their faith have better discourse, the Christians better affections: they in their faith better arguments, we more charity. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar. part 2. Sect. 10.

There is in Faith:

First, An act of acceptation, one is willing to receive Christ on his own terms, John 1.12. The soul beholds Christs excellency, and prefers him above all,

1. Before sin, Rom. 7.4. 1 Cor. 6.17.
2. Before all temporal and earthly blessings, Phil. 3.8.
3. Above a mans self, makes him willing to be saved by his righteousnesse, Phil. 3.9.

Secondly, Of resignation; it gives up the whole man unto Christ, 2 Cor. 8.5.

We must, 1. Give up our whole selves.

2. Solemnly and seriously, Deut. 5.27,28,29.
3. With a mind to remain for ever his.
4. Not only to be saved, but to serve him.

Resignation is the souls consent to take Christ above all other things, Hosea 3.3. and to be subject to him in all things, Ephes. 5.24.

First, The soul is content to be divorced from all other things besides Christ Luke 14.33.

Secondly, Is content to take the Person of Christ for a Head and Husband 1 Cor. 11.3.

Thirdly, It makes a man content to have all his happinesse in Christ, Lam. 3.24,

1. All its righteousnesse, Phil. 3.9.
2. All its strength, Esay 45.14.
3. Takes Christ for its compleat satisfaction.

The proper object of justifying faith (saith Dr[b] Ames) is not some axiome, viz. God is favourable to me, or my sins are pardoned; but Ens incomplexum, as they speak, viz. Christ, or the mercy of God in Christ, and so the proper act of justifying faith is incumbere, or acquiescere Christo.

[b] Rescript. ad respons. Grevinch. c. 10.

Not barely the promises but the Person of Christ is the object of faith; we are not to rest in the promises alone, but to close with Christ in those promises, Acts 6.31. The Saints take comfort in Christ, and prize his Person above all his benefits.

Ut mea non placent nisi mecum, sic tua non satiant nisi tecum. Bern.

The promises are Objectum quo, Christ Objectum quod, that which faith ultimately closeth with, and is terminated in. Whole Christ is the object of faith, John 14.1. See Act. 20.21.

First, Because that is the greatest gift in which God shews most love, John 4.10.

Secondly, He is the Person in whom all good things are deposited, Cant. 4.10. 1 John 5.10.

Thirdly, The great thing the soul fals in love with, is the Person of Christ, Can. 5. Phil. 1.23.

The Spirit perſwades the ſoul to cloſe with the Perſon of Chriſt, Eſay 55. 3.

Firſt, By propounding thoſe invitations which Chriſt himſelf makes to the ſoul to come to him, Matth. 11. 28. John 6. 37. & 7. 37.

Secondly, By a conſtant and fixed repreſentation of the Perſon of Chriſt to the eye of the ſoul, as he that is the great fountain of life and righteouſneſſe, Gal. 1. 16. Eſay 20. 7.

Thirdly, By leaving a conſtant ſenſe and impreſſion upon the ſoul, that grace and righteouſneſſe is to be found no where elſe.

Fourthly, By acquainting the ſoul with the great intendment of the Father to ſave men by his Sonne and union with him, John 17. 7. compared with verſ. 2.

Gods word is the objectum adæquatum of our faith; but we are juſtified and ſaved by believing in Chriſt, therefore in the Scripture juſtifying faith is ordinarily called faith in Chriſt. Act. 20. 12, 21. & 26. 18. Gal. 3. 26. and ſometimes the faith of Chriſt, Rom. 3. 22. Gal. 2. 16, 20. & 3. 22. Phil. 3. 9. and ſometimes his knowledge. B. Downh. of Juſtification. l. 6. c. 4. See alſo c. 6. The proper object of juſtifying faith is God in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 19. or the promiſe of Gods mercy to us in Chriſt Jeſus. This faith is therefore expreſſed to be faith in Chriſts name, Act. 2. 16. Faith in his bloud, Rom. 3. 25. Abbot againſt Biſhop. Fidei objectum primarium omnes divinæ veritates revelatæ. 2. Mediatum, Chriſtus ut Mediator. 3. Ultimatum, ens complexum, inquiunt Scholaſtici.

It is a great Diſpute among Divines, What is the proper object of ſaving faith? Some ſay the Evangelical promiſe which holds out Chriſt, others Chriſt himſelf; in a ſtrict ſenſe only Chriſt himſelf as Mediator is the object of ſaving faith, John 7. 37. No propoſition nor promiſe ſaves me, only Chriſt.

The common object of faith is every revealed truth, but of juſtifying faith, as it juſtifies, that is, in the act of Juſtification, Reconciliation in Chriſt, with a certain confidence.

There is Fides quæ, faith which ſaves the ſoul, this cloſeth with every divine revelation, promiſe, threatning, ſtory; fides qua, as it ſaves me, cloſeth only with Chriſt. Faith which ſaves the ſoul hath for its object the whole word of God, but as it ſaves the ſoul it cloſeth only with Chriſt, and him crucified, Iſa. 45. 22. Heb. 9. 14.

We muſt apply our ſelves to Chriſt crucified, and conſider his ſufferings and death, Rom 3. 25. and his intention in ſhedding his bloud, viz. to pacifie God and ſatisfie his juſtice, and procure redemption, Matth. 20. 28. & 26. 28. and conſider alſo the ſpecial benefits purchaſed by his death, remiſſion of ſins, Acts 13. 38. the favour of God, and eternal life.

Faith in general is the going forth of the ſoul to Chriſt for ſalvation. It ſuppoſeth a man utterly loſt and undone in himſelf, and going to Chriſt for a remedy, John 6. 35.

There is nothing in Scripture but it hath relation to Chriſt; the types and old Sacrifices were ſhadows of him; the Moral Law is preparative for Chriſt, yea there is ſomething of him in every ſtory and miracle.

It is the command of God that men ſhould believe on Jeſus Chriſt, John 6. 29. becauſe it pleaſeth him, and he requireth it, Rom. 16. 26. It is called the obedience of faith, that ſhews a command, 1 John 3. 23.

The Goſpel,

1. Reveals Chriſt.
2. Offers Chriſt.
3. Promiſeth Chriſt and ſpiritual bleſſings with him.

In reference to which there are three acts of Faith,

1. It ſees Chriſt in his fulneſſe, Cant. 6. Heb. 7. 25.
2. Receives him, cloſeth with him, and imbraceth him, Cant. 3. 4.
3. Applies and appropriates him.

The ends of Faith:

1. It goes to Chriſt for happineſſe.
2. For the perpetuity of it.

Reaſons why we muſt believe on Chriſt:

Firſt, Becauſe the Covenant of works was violated, and all happineſſe thereby forfeited forfeited, and man left in a miserable condition, Rom. 8. 3.

Secondly, Because now all good is laid up in Christ, which is only communicated to us by believing, 1 John 4. 9.

Thirdly, Because unbelief is a great sin, John 3. 19.

None are exempted from this Commandment, therefore it is delivered in the singular number, Rom. 10. 9.

Faith is an instinct after union with Christ, John 5. 12. He lives in me by faith, John 11. 26. Gal. 2. 20. This receives Christ, John 1. 11. it is the condition of the Covenant, and so the qualification of them which shall have interest in Christ and his benefits, John 3. 16. Acts 8. 37. & 16. 31. Faith carries the consent of the whole man, 2 Chron. 30. 8. Quid est credere nisi consentire?

He that would receive Christ, must

1. Know that Christ is designed by God, and tendred as a Saviour to him in the Gospel.

2. Must consider the reality and fulnesse of the promise, and give consent to this proffer; this is the very act of faith.

3. None can thus receive Christ, but those whose hearts the Lord hath opened to close with Christ, John 6. 36, 37. Acts 16.

1. Man fell by self-exalting, and ariseth in a self-abasing, which is by believing.

2. Faith is the only way to dissolve the plots of the Devil, we fell by believing the Devil rather than God, and rise by renouncing him, and by believing in the grace of God in Christ.

What is the act the soul doth when it believes?

There are three acts of faith, Notitia, Assensus, Fiducia.

Mr Hildersam [c] saith, The essence and being of justifying faith consisteth in four acts of the soul, whereof the former two are acts of the understanding, the other two of the will.

[c] On Psalm 51. 6. Lect. 83.

First, I must know Christ aright, and that which the Gospel revealeth to us concerning him.

Knowledge and assent respects the promise, affiance the person of Christ, John 17. 20.

Secondly, The assent of the mind to this, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Heb. 11. 13.

Thirdly, The consent of the will, John 1. 12.

Fourthly, A resting and relying upon Christ and him alone for the favour of God and eternal life.

Knowledge comes three wayes:

1. By sense.

2. Reason, as that the part is lesse than the whole.

3. From testimony which is faith, and relies wholly on witnesse; faith is weak when it relates to humane testimony, yet there is no such knowledge as that of faith when it relates to the testimony of God, that is more sure than sense or reason. God is so wise as he cannot be deceived himself, and so good as he will not deceive others.

One must know the God-head of Christ, and the all-sufficiency of his satisfaction, so much of Christ without which he cannot close with him as a Saviour, Rom. 10. 14.

God is veritas summa, prima; all created truth depends on needs be most the truth of God the first increated truth, he being the rule of truth that which he reveals must true, Tit. 1. 2. 1 John 5. 10. Faith relies on Gods infinite wisdom, Esay 40. 28. Omnipotency, Holinesse, Ps. 89. 35.

Knowledge and faith are ordinarily all one in Scripture, and joyned together as things inseparable, Esay 53. 11. John 10. 38. John 6. 69. John 17. 3, 8. 1 John 3. 2, 4. & 5. 13, 19. A believer is set forth by the terms of an enlightned man and wise man, Ephes. 1. 18, 19. I know whom I have believed. Bellarmine saith, Faith is better defined by ignorance than knowledge, Fides melius per ignorantiam quam per notitiam definitur: It captivates reason unto the word of God; that is, carnal and rebellious reason, but the true light of reason is increased and augmented by it.

Knowledge and belief are often joyned. Job 19. 25. John 17. 8. 2 Cor. 5. 2 Tim. 1. 12.

1. Cleer of what Christ hath revealed in his Word, 2 Tim. 1. 12.

2. Distinct, of the nature of God, of Christs Offices, the tenour of the Covenant, Prov. 24. 13, 14.

3. Reforming, though one have much knowledge, yet if the heart be not subdued by it, it little profiteth, 1 John 2. 4, 5.

The lowest act of faith is an assent, a yeelding in thy soul to the word of God, an agreement to the truth of it, Exod. 14. 31. Some say the resolution of an humbled sinner to cast himself on Christ, is the lowest degree of faith, which is discovered by desires, pursuit, and rejoycing in future hope.

2. Assent, a receiving Gods testimony concerning his Sonne, John 3. 33. They believed God and the Prophets, that is they gave assent and credit to it, because of the authority of God who is most true and cannot deceive; not for humane motives.

This assent is

First, Firm, therefore called the riches of assurance of understanding, Col. 2. 2. and so opposite to doubting, Rom. 8. 38, 2 Tim. 1. 12.

Secondly, Absolute and illimited, believes precepts, promises and threats.

Some expressions of Scripture seem to lay much upon assent, as 1 John 4. 2. & 5. 1. 1 Cor. 12 3. Mat. 16. 17. The truths of God at first suffering under so many prejudices, the Gospel was a novel Doctrine, contrary to the ordinary and received principles of reason, persecuted in the world, no friend to natural and carnal affections, and therefore apt to be suspected. Assent now is nothing so much as it was then.

It is a Question among Divines, What is the subject of faith? By the heart a man believeth, Act. 8. 37. See 12, 13. there faith is seated where the acts of it are exercised, therefore the whole soul is the subject of it, but chiefly the will. It is seated both in the understanding and the will, because it is a voluntary assent. To believe is an act of the understanding as it is an assent, of the will as it is voluntary. his suitableneſſe to me, aſſents to the truth of it, and conſents to the goodneſſe of it, and makes choice of him for its portion. Faith is the conſent of the whole ſoul to receive and accept of Chriſt, as God the Father hath offered him in the Goſpel.

4. A reſting and relying upon Chriſt alone for grace and ſalvation, Pſalm 23. 1, 2, 6. Pſalm 27. 1. Job 19. 25, 27. Rom. 8. 31. The ſoul leans on Chriſt as a feeble man on a ſtaff, 2 Chron. 16. 7, 8. Prov. 3. 5. Pſalm 22. 8. What the Old Teſtament cals truſting, the New cals believing.

This confidence of ſpecial mercy is the form and eſſence of faith, without which faith is not faith, nor juſtifies the ſinner. The Papiſts and Arminians cannot endure this, that faith ſhould be ſuch a ſpecial confidence of the remiſſion of ſins. They ſay, it is a confidence that God may remit, and a good hope that he will; or it is a conditional confidence that God will remit, if we ſhall be conſtant in piety to the end of our life.

Fiducia eſt particularis quidem & applicativus aſſenſus, pro objecto habens primò Evangelicas promiſſiones. Secundò, Internum teſtimonium ſancti Spiritus: Nam per fiduciam & aſſentimur Doctrinæ Evangelii, & teſtimonio Spiritus Dei, unà teſtantis cum noſtro Spiritu, nos eſſe filios Dei; atq; ita nobis ipſis applicamus Evangelicas promiſſiones certò ſtatuentes & judicantes nos eſſe filios Dei, & proinde illas promiſſiones non ſolùm aliis credentibus, ſed nobis etiam in particulari eſſe factas. Baron. Philoſ. Theol. Ancil. exercit. 3. Art. 19.

The Doctrine of Faith is in three things:

1. There is a neceſſity of relying on Chriſt alone.

2. There is an all-ſufficiency of ability in him being God and man to be an High-prieſt, to make interceſſion for us.

3. Of his willingneſſe that we ſhould have pardon, grace, comfort and ſalvation by him.

There are Promiſes,

1. Of Free-grace, that God will juſtifie the ungodly and pardon ſinne for his own Names ſake.

2. Of Grace, that God will give Faith, Repentance, Love and a new heart.

3. Unto Grace, that if we believe and repent we ſhall be ſaved. Theſe promiſes are all we have to build our faith on for our eternal ſalvation.

The promiſes are, 1. The overflowing of Gods love, Eſay 42. 9. He might have done us good, and given us no promiſes, love concealed is not ſo comfortable.

2. They ſhew us how far God is to be truſted, they are purpoſes declared, Pſ. 28.

3. They are ſo many bils and bonds, Pſalm 119. 49.

4. The pawn of the thing promiſed, Pſalm 115. 10. Heb. 13. 7.

They ſerve to draw in thoſe that are without, therefore the promiſe is often annext to the invitation and call, Eſay 55. 1, 2, 3. Matth. 11. 28. Revel. 3. 20. and to ſupport thoſe that are come in.

Conditional promiſes are of excellent uſe to awaken the preſumptuous ſinner, and to rouze up the lazy Chriſtian; Abſolute promiſes, to raiſe up the dejected Chriſtian.

In all recumbency it is not enough to regard the ſtrength of the act and rightneſſe of the object; carnal men will ſay, I place my hope in Jeſus Chriſt for ſalvation, Micah 3. 11. But there are other circumſtances to be obſerved:

Firſt, The method and order of this recumbency, the reſolution of an humbled ſinner to caſt himſelf upon Chriſt; the main end and uſe of faith is to comfort thoſe that are caſt down. Faith is expreſt by taking hold of Chriſt or the Covenant, Eſay 56. 4. by ſtaying our ſelves upon, or leaning upon God, which ſuppoſeth a ſenſe of miſery.

Secondly, The warrant and ground of it, we muſt go to work conſiderately, underſtand what we do, 2 Tim 1. 12. Pſalm 119. 49. natural conſcience may pretend fairly to truſt in Chriſt, but have no ground for it, Jer. 7. 4.

Thirdly, The effects and fruits, it cannot ſtand with a purpoſe to ſin, John 13. 10. Heb. 10. 22.

We are ſaid to be juſtified by faith, to live by it, to be ſaved by it, to have it imputed unto us for righteouſneſſe: all which is to be underſtood not principally, immediately,

Mr Gataker against Salmaſh, Shadows without ſubſtance, p. 56

mediately, meritoriouſly in regard of any worth or dignity of it, or efficaciouſly in regard of any power or efficacy in it ſelf, but mediately, ſubſerviently, organically, as it is a means to apprehend Chriſt his ſatisfaction and ſufferings, by the price and merit whereof we are juſtified and ſaved, and ſtand as righteous in Gods ſight, and as it hath a ſpecial reſpect and relation thereunto.

This is,

1. For Gods honour, 1 Cor. 1. 29.

2. For our ſecurity, Rom. 4. 16.

It was equal for God to require faith as a condition, if we conſider

1. What is implied in faith, an acknowledgement of our ſinne and miſery, brokenneſſe of heart, Matth. 9. 13. This was required in the Sacrifices, Pſalm 51. 17.

2. What is expreſt in it, an owning of Chriſt, and depending on the ſufficiency of his ſatisfaction; ſo in the Sacrifices they were to own Chriſt, Levit. 1. 4. we muſt receive Chriſt, John 1. 12.

3. The immediate fruit of faith, holineſſe of converſation, Pſalm 50. 5. He ſtipulated that he would be for the Lords glory and uſe.

There are divers degrees of faith; Little faith, Matth. 8. 26. Great faith, Mat. 15. 28. Full aſſurance of faith, Rom. 4. 21.

First, There is ſome unbelief in all the ſervants of God, becauſe there is not in any man in this world a perfection of faith; faith is mixt with unbelief.

The truth of any thing doth not depend on the greatneſſe, but quality of it, a child though never ſo weak hath the true nature of a man, one drop of water is true water.

Secondly, Many have a true faith, yet a very weak faith. Chriſt will not break the bruiſed reed; Chriſt chides his Diſciples for their weak faith, and Peter, Matth. 13. O you of little faith: And how is it that you have not faith? Luke 4. See John 4. and Matth. 9. Moſes, David, Abraham, Iſaac were ſubject to great weakneſſe of faith.

2. If faith be weak it will bring forth weak effects, little comfort, yet Chriſt will have regard to it.

Reaſons. 1. Senſe and reaſon do in many things contradict the concluſions of faith, to beleeve in the mercy of God when we have ſo much ſin.

2. The knowledge of God in the beſt of Gods people (which is the pillar and foundation of their faith) is but imperfect.

3. Satan above all things moſt oppoſeth the faith of Gods Saints, becauſe he knows that in this their very ſtrength lies, Eph. 6. 14. 1 Tim. 6. 12. and they reſiſt him by their faith, 1 Pet. 5. 9. 1 John 5. 4.

In two things the weakneſſe of faith moſt diſcovers it ſelf:

First, In thinking that we ſhall not find the good things which God promiſeth to give.

Secondly, That we ſhall not be delivered from the evil things which he hath undertaken to deliver us from. Faith in Gods threats muſt be confirmed as a principal means of beating back ſinfull temptations, faith in Gods promiſes muſt be confirmed as a principal means of keeping us in comfort and obedience.

All holy exerciſes ſerve to ſtrengthen faith, eſpecially two,

1. Prayer with the Apoſtles to the Lord to increaſe our faith, and to fill us with joy and peace through beleeving.

2. Meditations ſpecially directed to that end, of the Omnipotency of God, his perfect truth, and his accompliſhment of his Word formerly to our ſelves and others.

There is a two-fold ſtate of faith, a ſtate of Adherence, and a ſtate of Aſſurance.

That faith is not aſſurance, ſee Mr Downs Treat. of the true nature and definit. of juſtif. faith, p. 5. to 8.

First, A ſtate of Adherence, Affiance and Recumbence, the act of the ſoul accepting Chriſt, and giving it ſelf to him, Eſay 50. 10. Luke 18. 13.

There is a great peace in a faith of Adherence, Heb. 4. 3.

1. In reſpect of the guilt of ſinne, it ſhews the Lord Jeſus as a Sacrifice for ſinne.

2. In reference to God, I have heard (ſaith ſuch an one) that the Lord

is

is a God pardoning iniquity, transgression and sinne; there is tranquillity when one casts his sinne on Christ, and ventures his soul on the free-grace of God, Esay 50. 10.

Secondly, Of Assurance, 1 John 4. 16. when one hath obtained the witnesse and sealing of the Spirit.

And Mr Barlow, that true grace lies not so much in the degree, as in the nature of it, pag. 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410. Some Divines have defined faith to be a full perswasion of the heart grounded on the promises of God. Their zeal to maintain the certainty and evidence of faith against Popish doubtings led them to give this definition of faith. Reasons why this is not a truth: 1. Those are blessed, Mat. 5. 3, 4, 6. which have not this. 2. A believer may fall into a state of desertion, Esay 50. 10. in Christs sufferings there was subtractio visionis not dissolutio unionis. Dr Spanstow of the Promises.

1. One may have the faith of adherence (roll his soul on Christ, and be willing to accept him) that hath not the faith of evidence, as Heman, Psalm 88. The fearing of God and obeying his voice cannot be without faith, yet he may walk in darknes, as in that place of Isaiah before quoted.

2. The soul which hath the faith of adherence, and wants that of evidence, is in a justified condition, many things have a real being that have no visible appearing to us. If one could not be justified but by faith of assurance, then if one lose his assurance he loseth his justification.

3. When faith of adherence hath attain'd to faith of assurance, yet many times the assurance is lost, Psalm 32. beg. Psalm 51. 12. Christ on the Crosse had faith of adherence, My God, my God, not clearnesse of evidence.

In a state of adherence the motive which acts the soul is obedience to God (Isa. 50. 10.) in a state of assurance a sense of the love of God, 1 Cor. 5. 12.

4. When the soul hath lost the faith of evidence, it cannot lose the faith of adherence, the fire may be so smothered in ashes that there is no light, yet it always hath heat if there be fire, Job 15. 30. Psalm 44. 17.

5. The faith of adherence alwayes abiding and bringing the soul to Heaven, that soul (though it want assurance) is bound to praise God, if thou wouldst be more thankfull for the faith of adherence, the Lord would bring in strong consolation.

6. Faith of adherence will certainly end in faith of evidence, if thy soul have chosen Christ, and thou wait for him, thou shalt at last meet with him.

2. In a state of adherence one doth all to obtain mercy, but in a state of assurance from thankfulnesse, because one hath obtained mercy. 3. In a state of adherence the motive is to obtain grace and communion with God therein; of assurance further and constant communion, Job. 14. 21. 1 Joh. 4. 16. 4. In a state of adherence one doth perform the commands of God as a duty, in assurance as a privilege; Jacob prayed, and as a Prince prevailed.

Faith layeth hold on the promise as being true, affiance or hope expects the thing promised as being good. Dr Downh. of Justif. l. 6. c. 4.

We believe things past, present and to come: but hope for things to come onely. We beleeve both promises and threatnings, both rewards and punishments, in the order set by God: but hope onely for things desirable. Robinsons Ess. Observ. 10.

The end and great priviledge of faith is to bring us to everlasting life, Heb. 11. 6. 1 Peter 1. 9. John 20. 31.

Reasons. 1. By faith we are made Sons, Children, 1 John 3. 2. and so may expect a childs portion.

Faith makes us sons:

1. In a juridical sense, John 1 12.

2. In a moral and real sense, 1 Peter 1. 3.

Secondly, These are the terms of the eternal Covenant between God and Christ, John 3. 16. & 6. 40. Heb. 9. 15.

Thirdly, It is the mother of obedience; the way to be made happy is to be made holy.

Fourthly, Faith begins the life which is perfected in glory, 1 John 5. 12. it anticipates Heaven, Rom. 5. 2. & 8. 11.

The life of faith comes neerest the life of Heaven, to see all in the promise. It is

1. The

1. The life of a Saint, Hab. 2.5.
2. The moſt noble and excellent life, 2 Cor. 4. 18.
3. A moſt ſweet and pleaſant life.
4. A moſt ſatisfying life. See Mr Gray his Myſtery of Faith, opened in four Sermons.

We ſhould act faith in order to everlaſting life:

Firſt, Accept Chriſt in the offers of the Goſpel, Acts 16 32. Mark 16.16. Col. 1.21.

Secondly, Beleeve the great promiſes of Heaven, Heb. 11.6. Conſider

1. The riches of Gods mercy, he will give like himſelf, an infinite and eternal reward, 2 Cor. 4.17.

2. The ſufficient merits of Chriſt, Rom. 8.32.

Thirdly, Get your own title confirmed, 1 Tim. 6.20.

Fourthly, Often renew your hope by ſerious and diſtinct thoughts, Heb. 11.1. Col. 3.1. Phil. 3.20.

Fifthly, Earneſtly deſire and long after a full accompliſhment, Rom. 8.23.

The Word preached is the moſt powerfull, but not the only ordinary means to beget faith, as Mr Dyke proves in a Treatiſe concerning the force and efficacy of reading.

Faith is wrought by the Word, Rom. 10.14.15,17. Eph. 1.13. Acts 2.41,47. & 15. 7. 1 Pet. 1.23. but beſides the outward preaching there muſt be the Spirit within, Intimus magiſter, as Auguſtine cals him.

The Word is but a moral cauſe or inſtrument, whereby the Spirit worketh not neceſſarily but at pleaſure, 1 Cor. 3.5. Faith is called the gift of God, Eph. 2.8. Phil. 1.29. The work of God, John 6.29. See John 6.44. Eph. 1.19,20. The Word can do nothing without the Spirit, the Spirit can work without means, as in children and thoſe that cannot hear.

The Word preached, Acts 10. 44. & 13. 48. The Manna came with the Dew, unbelief came by hearing; God would beat Satan by his own weapon, ſinne entred by the ear. 2. God doth this to humble us, that we may not aſcribe any thing to our ſelves, we are beholding to others for what we hear. Gilleſp. Aarons Rod Bloſſoming, lib. 3. cap. 14.

God convinceth a man of his ſin and miſery, and need of mercy, John 16.9,10,11. Rom. 3.20. and then ſhews him that there is mercy and ſalvation to be had in Chriſt, that he is a mighty Saviour, able to free him from all evil, and that he is tendred to him in the Goſpel, Eſay 55.1,2. Mat. 11.28. John 6.37. John 7.37. Acts 3.26, 38,39. diſcovers the infinite love of Chriſt, his excellencies and the benefits we ſhall enjoy by him.

The Anabaptiſts ſay, That faith is given not by means of the Word, but by illumination and immediate working of the Spirit.

The Arminians ſay, That preaching of the Word is able to beget faith in a man, and to turn him unto God without the inward working and teaching of the holy Ghoſt, uſually the Word and Spirit go together, 2 Cor. 6.1. The preaching of the Goſpel is called the Rod of his power, Pſalm 110.2. Some pretend above others to magnifie the Spirit, and to be all for the Spirit, yet vilifie the Word which is the means whereby to obtain the Spirit: Cornelius and they that were with him received the Spirit by the Word, Acts 10.44. 1 Theſſ. 5.19,20. Gal. 3.2. The Miniſtry of the Goſpel is called the miniſtration of the Spirit. Manaſſeh his converſion, 2 Chron. 33.11,12. was wrought by means of affliction ſetting home upon his conſcience that word of God mentioned in the verſe immediately preceding. Affliction doth not convert without the Word either going before or accompanying it, Pſalm 94.12,36. Job 9.10,11.

Faith is an excellent grace, 2 Peter 1.1. It is a fruit of the Spirit, Gal. 5.22. The gift of God, the work of God by an excellency, John 6.29. an effect of Gods almighty power, Epheſ. 1.19. A ſigne of Gods electing love, Acts 13.48. called the Faith of Gods elect, Titus 1.1. Juſtifying, ſaving faith.

Firſt, It is the only condition of the Covenant of grace and life, Believe and thou ſhalt be ſaved.

Secondly,

Secondly, The grace that matcheth us to Christ, Ephes. 3. 17. Christ is the great remedium, and faith the great medium.

Thirdly, It brings us to near relation with God, John 1. 12.

Fourthly, It is the instrument of Justification, Rom. 3. 22, 25, 26, 28. & Rom. 5. 1. by it the righteousnesse of Christ is imputed, Rom. 4. 3, 4, 5, 16, 22, 24. and our sins discharged, Acts 13. 38.

Fifthly, It is the grace which pleadeth with God, and challengeth him of his word, Gen. 32. 12. in which thou hast caused me to trust, and gives God in Christ all the glory in the great work of salvation by a Mediator.

Christ hath revealed in the Gospel, that accepting him for a Saviour to believe in, is an acceptable service.

2. God rejects all works which are not accompanied with faith, Heb. 11. 6. 3. This is the great command in the Gospel; this is the will of him that sent me, that you believe in him. 4. The Lord hath made great promises to faith, and admired it in the woman of Canaan, the Centurion. 5. It was Christs great designe to work faith, John 20. two last verses. As this grace honours God most, Rom. 4. 20. so God honours it most. All actions of all vertues regularly performed flow from faith. See Heb. 11. per tot. Therefore the Schoolmen say, Faith is not onely it self a vertue, but mater, radix, auriga omnium virtutum.

1. Faith quickens the soul, Gal. 2. 20.

2. Sanctifies it, Acts 15. 9. by it we conquer sin, Rom. 8. 17. & 15. 1. the Devil, Eph. 6. 16. the world, 1 John 5. 4.

3. By it we obtain what ever good we stand in need of, and God hath promised, Be it unto thee according to thy faith.

4. It carries away the good of all Ordinances, in the Supper, by it we have communion with God: The Word profited not, because not mixed with faith.

5. It comforts in all troubles, Hab. 2. 4. in desertions, when God hides his face, Esay 8. 15. Job 13. 15.

By faith we stand, by faith we live, by faith we walk, by faith we die, by faith we are saved.

Faith is an infused not an acquired habit.

Grevinchovius saith, That habitual faith is begot in us by frequent acts of faith proceeding from the special grace of God, as by often acts of justice and liberality the acts of justice and liberality are produced in us.

This opinion of his is not only contrary to the Doctrine of the Schoolmen and Modern Divines both Papists and Protestants, which with unanimous consent call Theological Vertues infused habits, but also is subject to divers inconveniencies; that place Heb. 11. 6. must needs be understood of the habit of faith; for if it be to be understood of the act of faith, it will follow that the regenerate when they sleep, and do not actually beleeve, do displease God, and are not in a state of grace.

Vide Ames. in Rescript. ad Grevinchov. cap. 10.

That faith is the gift of God, the Apostle teacheth, Ephes. 2. 8. Phil. 1. 29. & 2. 13. See John 6. 44. To come to Christ is to believe in Christ, witnesse Christ himself, vers. 35.

Arminiani interrogati an credant fidem esse donum Dei, rotundo ore pronuntiant, & plenis buccis intonant se credere Deum dare fidem. Sed homines vafri hac verba non accipiunt eo sensu quem sonant. Nam eorum mens est, Deum dare omnibus vires credendi, si velint, & per Deum non stare quin credant: At censent Deum non dare id credere, ipsumque actum credendi; ne vis inferatur libero arbitrio. Cui impuro dogmati opponimus verba illa Apostoli Phil. 1. 29. & Cap. 2. 13. Quibus verbis ipse actus credendi designatur non vero vires credendi. Molinæus contra Amyraldum.

Whether actual or habitual faith be in Infants?

Some call it efficacious faith, some a principle, others an inclination. Some dislike the word habit, that is more proper to faith grown and ripe, the word seed or principle is better, 1 John 4. 9.

Some think the Question about Infants believing is unnecessary and curious, and that they must be left to the free grace of God, Mark 16. 16. Such places do not onely concern grown persons. The Lord promiseth grace to Infants, Esay 44. 3. and glory, Matth. 19. 14. & 18. 6. compared with Mark 9. 36. See 1 Cor. 7. 14.

Per fidem in Infantibus intelligimus principium sive semen fidei: non hil-bitum fidei aut actualem fidem: quæ infantes habere non possunt, quia gratia præsupponit naturam: in infantibus autem nondum est naturæ est perfectio, ut in iis ratio se exercere possit;

Pelagians say, Infants are saved by Gods fore-sight of those good works which they should have done if they had lived; Augustine refutes this opinion, 2 Cor. 5. 10. every one is to be saved according to what he hath done.

The Lutherans would have them saved by an actual faith, though it be unexpressible.

Beza saith, The faith of the parents is imputed to them by vertue of the Covenant of grace.

Mr Down hath a Treatise of the faith of Infants, and how they are justified and saved, and goes much that way, but denies that they have habitual or actual Faith.

nedum habitus supernaturalis, actusve ex eo ortus, esse possit. Possius de Sacramentorum vi & efficacia. De fide habituali res est manifesta: nam infantes, in statu integritatis nati, fuissent habitibus originalis justitiæ ornati, ut docent non solùm Sententiarii, lib. 2. Sent. Dist. 20. verùm etiam Evangelici Theologi, cùm differunt de primo hominis statu, quem integritatis vocant: unde paret manifestè, habitus fidei, spei & charitatis, etiam nunc iis inesse posse: quia quicquid olim possibile fuit, etiam nunc esse potest, modò respiciamus potentiam Dei absoluram. Fidem etiam actualem, seu actum credendi, iis posse inesse facilè probatur exemplo Joannis Baptistæ, qui Luc. 1. 24. dicitur exultasse in utero matris in gaudio. Ergo cognovit Domini sui præsentiam, & proinde infans potest intelligere, & per consequens actu credere. Baron. Philos. Theol. Ancil. Exercit. 3. Art. 10. Vide plura ibid.

Whether Faith be in the Saints when they are translated into Heaven, and see God face to face?

Some say, there is a kind of faith in the blessed Saints, since they both believe things past, all things which Christ hath done for our sake, and things to come, viz. the second coming of Christ, the resurrection of the flesh, the last judgment, and the perfection of the Church, and this knowledge of things past and to come depends upon the authority of God.

Vide Baron. Philos. Theol. Ancil. Exercit. 3. Art. 13.

The office and imployment of Faith shall cease, though the nature of it do not.

See Mr Pemb. Vindic. grat. p. 110, 111, 245, 246 and of Justification, pag. 38. cap. 2. Sect. 2.

It is a great Question, An fides justificans in decalogo præcipiatur? Whether justifying faith be commanded in the Decalogue?

Dr Peter Baro in his Treatise de Fide saith, It is commanded in the first Commandment. See Dr Hammonds Appendix to the Review of his Annotat. 1 pag 286, 287.

L' homme n' est point obligé à croire en Jesus Christ, quand il luy est annoncé. Adam n'y estoit pas obligé avans qu'il pechast. Il a commencé à y estre obligé, & luy a promis la semence, qui briseroit la teste du Serpent. Esclaircissement Des controverses Salmuriennes, par Pierre du Moulin.

Adam had a power to beleeve what God propounded as an object of faith, the righteousnesse of Christ was not propounded to him, it is commanded there therefore not directè, because not revealed to Adam, but reductivé.

It stood not with Adams Covenant, he was to be righteous himself, not to look for the righteousnesse of another. Adam in the state of innocency had a power of many things, which in that state could not be reduced to act, he had the affection of sorrow, but could not mourn for want of an object: so the Angels had a power to beleeve in Christ for their confirmation, though Christ was not made known till the second Covenant. There was a power then given not onely to obey God in the duties of the first Covenant, but to submit to God for the change of the Covenant when the will of the Lord should be: not to submit to the change of the Covenant in man fallen, is a sinne, Gal. 4. 21. therefore Adam had a power to submit to it.

Mr Lawson in his Body of Divinity, lib. 2. cap. 19. saith, That some Precepts of this Law are mixt, and are partly moral, partly positive, as Faith and Repentance, considered in their general nature, as duties to be performed to God, are moral. For faith, whether it be assent unto the truth of Gods word, or a reliance upon him, promising any Reward or Benefit: Repentance, as it includes materially ally in it subjection to God, as supreme Lord, and obedience unto his commands, are duties of the moral Law, as moral. But as Faith assents unto the truths of the word concerning Jesus Christ, and relies upon Gods promises in him, and repentance, as it's unto God Redeemer in Christ, as attoned by his blood, and so made propitious, may be said to be Positive, as the objects of both are Positive, and above the Law of nature.

Though Adam was able to have obeyed perfectly, without sin, and had grace sufficient to have upheld him, and conquered temptations, if he had done his part, which by that grace he might have done; yet whether that grace was sufficient to the works that we are called to, is a doubt that many have been much troubled with, whether it belonged to his perfection, to be able and fit for such duties, that were then unsuitable to him, on supposition they had been suitable and duties, this is the difficulty, which some make use of to prove that such works cannot now be required of us, without suitable help, because we lost no such grace in Adam. Mr Baxter of Death, Still 5.

Whether Faith or Repentance precede? To repent is prefixed before beleeve, Mark 1. 15. In the order of things Repentance must needs be first in respect of the act of Contrition, acknowledgement and grief for sinne, the Law precedes the Gospel, and one is not to be raised before he knows himself to be cast down. And although saving Repentance considered compleatly according to all its acts be not without faith, yet it precedes it according to some act.

See the 22. Sermon preached at Giles in the Fields, where faith is asserted to be first.

Faith is before other graces, not in time, because all graces are infused together, but usu, in respect of exercise and orderly dependance on each other as Hales distinguisheth.

Christians should endeavour to live the life of Faith:

First, The necessity of it.

It is a Question, An sine speciali Revelatione possumus credere Mysteria Fidei? Whether without a special Revelation we can believe the Mysteries of Faith?

See Mr Pemb. Vindic. grat. p. 100,101. Vide Bellarm. de grat. & lib. arbit. l. 6. c. 1,2,3.

The Arminians cry down faith, and call it Scripturarum tyrannidem, & Theologorum ludibrium, and cry down all infused habits, would have non but acquired.

There is a necessity of faith in respect of divers truths of Scripture that are to be beleeved.

1. The Resurrection of the body, none of the Heathens beleeved this. See Acts 23.8. Matth. 22 23,29. Some that profest the Christian Religion perverted this Doctrine of the Resurrection, 2 Tim. 2. 18. the Disciples themselves were long in believing it, Luke 24. 11. John 20 25.

2. The depravednesse of the soul, and the enmity of natural reason to the things of God. The Philosophers saw clearly the common principles of justice and injustice, but not the corruption of nature, Rom. 7.7. The wisdom of the flesh is enmity against God.

3. The necessity of renovation of the soul and body, the great Doctrine of Regeneration, John 3. 3. When our Saviour had brought Arguments to prove this Doctrine, and answered Objections against it, how blind still is Nicodemus? verse 9. of that Chapter.

4. The necessity of a Mediatour, and that Christ is this Mediatour, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

The Devils and damned believe these truths with a common faith. But we need faith to believe these truths savingly.

2. We need faith also to bring us unto God, Rom. 5.3. we cannot come to God but by Christ, nor to Christ but by faith.

3. To conform us to Gods Image. Acts 15.9.

4. Without the life of faith we cannot abide with God, Matth. 11. 6. Heb. 3. 12, 13.

5. We cannot take fulneſſe of delight and complacency in God, but by faith, Heb. 11. 6. we cannot pleaſe God, nor he us, till we believe. The life of a Chriſtian is to pleaſe God, and to be well-pleaſed with him.

Secondly, What it is to live by faith:

1. It is to believe the goodneſſe of all that which God commands, as well as that which he promiſeth, and the real evil of all that evil he forbids as well as threatens.

The precepts of God are good and for our good as well as his promiſes, Deut. 10. 12. Pſalm 73. ult. The Devils tremble at Gods threatnings, but they believe not the evil of ſinne which he forbids, for then they would not rebell againſt God.

Faith is the proſpective of the ſoul, Heb. 11.26. it ponders the worth of the bleſſing promiſed, 1 Pet. 1.11. it actually expects the bleſſing, Pſal. 5.3. Hab. 3.1. 2 Pet. 3.10. The life of faith is the higheſt life in this world. Next to that of viſion or ſight, above that of ſenſe and reaſon.

2. To look after thoſe things principally that are future, rather than the things that are preſent, Luke 15. 12. & 6. 24. Pſalm 17. ult. An unbeliever will venture upon future evils to be freed from evils preſent. A godly man fears two things chiefly, Sin in this world, and Wrath in another, 2 Cor. 5. 10.

3. To live more to things inviſible than viſible, Heb. 11. 1. 2 Cor. 4. ult. Heb. 11. 7. The inviſible things are the great things, Angels, mens ſouls, the great glory God promiſeth his people is inviſible, 1 Cor. 2. 9.

4. To believe thoſe things to be certain which are incredible to nature, Rom. 4. 18. Pſalm 73. begin. that the Saints are happy in all their miſeries, and the wicked miſerable in all their happineſſe.

5. To keep to the word of faith in all our converſation, Eſay 8. 20. Gal. 6. 16. Pſalm 119. 92, 93. Pſalm 17. 4.

6. To believe that all the providences of God are ſubſervient to his promiſes, even when they ſeem to be againſt them, Heb. 11. 13.

7. To believe ſo the fulfilling of Gods promiſes, that we make not haſte, but wait Gods time for the fulfilling of them, Eſay 28. 6. Since God will

1. Certainly perform what ever he hath promiſed.
2. He will fulfill in his own ſeaſon, Luke 1. 20.
3. His ſeaſon is the fitteſt: Therefore it is moſt reaſonable we ſhould wait Gods time, and not make haſte.

We ſhould live by faith much in troubleſome times, Hab. 2. 5. Faith is the life of Chriſtianity, and a good life is the life of faith. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, part. 2. Sect. 10.

Firſt, By faith of the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, Micah 5. 5. This man, that is, the Meſſiah, ſhall be the peace, the procurer of peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come into our Land, he was then the known enemy of the Church, all the enemies of the Church.

1. We ought to eſteem it much, Eſay 25. 4. See 6, and 8th verſes.
2. Should repoſe our ſelves in it, Heb. 6. 18. This impſies
   1. A flying to Chriſt for refuge.
   2. The ſouls laying hold on his righteouſneſſe, expreſt in Pſalm 2.
   3. Pleading the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt to the Father.

Secondly, By faith in the providence of God, which conſiſts in three particulars:

1. We ought to believe that God will take care of his people in the worſt times, Eſay 49. 14, 15.
2. That he will afflict his people in meaſure, Jer. 30. 10, 11. Eſay 27. 7, 8.
3. Will yet find out a way for their deliverance, Eſay 54. 11.

Chriſtians muſt alſo die in the faith, Heb. 11. 13. See Mr Calamies Sermon on that Text.

Reaſons: Firſt, Faith is not ſound unleſſe it perſevere to the end, we cannot elſe receive the end of our faith, viz. the ſalvation of our ſouls.

Secondly, Becauſe the hour of death is a ſpecial ſeaſon wherein faith comes to be exerciſed; Faith is often expreſt by the term of committing, 2 Tim. 1. 12. 1 Pet. 4. 19. Commit thy ſoul then to God, Luke 23. 46. Acts 7. 56. This is the time to put the promiſes in ſuit, Pſalm 16. 9.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, There are many promises to be performed after our decease, it is an honour to God to professe our confidence in them:

1. Publick promises concerning the Church, the prosperity of it, the calling of the Jews, the second coming of Christ, the fall of Antichrist.

2. Private, promises concerning our families and relations, 2 Sam. 7. 19. because then Satan will be most busie.

To die in the faith is,

1. To resigne up the soul with comfort to God, Job 7. 8. Luke 12. 19.

2. To dismisse thy body to the grave in hope, Job 19. 25. Psalm 16. 9.

3. To meditate on the happinesse on which thou art entring, Acts 7. 55. We are going to better company, better imployment, and a better place.

4. Commend our faith to others, Josh. 23. 14. Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you, he repeats it again in the same verse.

Two things make faith strong, Knowledge and Affiance, when these are strong faith is strong, though there be not assurance.

By the woman of Canaan, Mat. 15. 25. and the Centurion, Mat. 8. 10. it appears that four things shew what a strong faith is:

1. The more it rests on a naked word, the lesse it hath of sense, Rom. 4. 20, 21. Heb. 11. 13.

2. When it bears up the soul against great opposition, Rom. 4. 21. The woman of Canaan would take no denial, still she cries, Lord help me: Though he kill me (saith Job) I will trust in him.

3. When it finds out arguments to support the soul. The Son of David (saith the woman of Canaan) is sent to Gentiles as well as Jews, and the dogs eat of the crums that fall from the masters table.

4. When it draws out the heart to earnest and incessant prayers, and perseveres therein, Psalm 88. 13. Gen. 49. 24. It is a common mistake, that where there is no joy of the holy Ghost, no assurance, there can be no strong faith. God usually proportions mens afflictions according to the greatnesse of their faith: afflictions are therefore called the trial of faith, 1 Peter 1. 7. See Esay 27. 8. Jer. 30. 11. Spiritual desertion is the greatest affliction that can befall a godly man, it befell Christ when he cried out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? therefore they have the greatest strength that are most exercised with afflictions. 2. This is the way the Lord takes with his people many times, to try them after assurance, by hiding his face from them. Mens graces are ripened not only by communion but by desertion. Therefore there may be strong faith and more grace where there is no assurance.

Motives to perswade us to get Faith:

First, This grace brings God most glory: It doth that to God in a way of duty, which God doth to the creature in a way of grace. God justifies, sanctifies, glorifies.

Faith first justifies God, Esay 18. 13. Luke 7. 29. against the accusations of the world, and fond surmises of our own hearts, Heb. 10. 29.

2. It sanctifies him.

3. It glorifies God, Rom. 4. 20.

Secondly, It doth us most good:

1. Our life stands upon it, Gal. 2. 20.

2. Brings peace, Rom. 5. 1.

3. Glory, 1 Peter 1. 9. The Devil most oppoſeth it, 1 Thess. 3. 5.

It is a principal grace, Gal. 6. 5. it derives vertue from Christ, John 15. 4. without it, it is impossible to please God, Heb. 11. 5 John 16. 9. Salvation is cast and determined by it, Mar. 16. ult.

Helps to Faith:

Consider thy condition, while an unbeliever thou liest under the guilt of all thy sinnes, and the wrath of God, what ever thou dost is displeasing to him, Matth. 9. 12.

Secondly, Labour to lay hold on the promise of God, John 3. 16. Be convinc'd

1. Of the truth.

The general means are the word & prayer, we must ask for it in prayer, & wait for it in the answer of the Word.

2. Of

2. Of the goodneſs of it.

Thirdly, Seek earneſtly to God to work this grace in thee. Pray for a diſcovery of Chriſt, John 6.40. and labour after an high eſteem of him, 1 Pet. 2.7.

Fourthly, Strive to act faith, to make a full compleate choice of Chriſt, and perfectly reſign thy ſoul to him.

Chap. V.

Of the Communion and Fellowſhip Believers have with Chriſt, and their Benefits by him, and ſpecially of Adoption.

I will come to you and manifeſt my ſelf to you. Chriſt imparts his graces and communicates his counſels to them Unregenerate men have many communications from Chriſt, no communion, that is founded in union.

THis is the higheſt intimacy between Chriſt and his people, A Fellowſhip, 1 John 1.3. A Friendſhip, John 15.15. The Church is called, the Lambs Bride, Husband and Wife make but one fleſh, Chriſt and a believer make one Spirit, 1 Cor. 6.17.

Communion with God through Chriſt by the Spirit is the great duty and priviledge of the Goſpel, 2 Cor. 16.13. 1 John 1.3. It is begun by faith, carried on by fear and love, perfected in Heaven. Conſider Firſt, The honour of this Communion: Chriſt hath our nature, our ſins, our wrath and ſhame; thou haſt his Titles, Nature, Spirit, Priviledges. He is one with God, thou art one with him. He is Gods fellow, Zech. 13.7. thou his fellow, Pſalm 45.7. God is Chriſts God and our God, his Father and our Father.

Secondly, The comfort of it, John 15.12. This joy differs from the joyes in Heaven, not in kind but in meaſure, Pſalm 16. ult. 2 Cor. 1.5. Hoſea 2.11, 12.

Our fellowſhip with Chriſt conſiſts

1. In our confederation or entring into Covenant with him, therefore it is ſet forth by the conjugal Covenant, Hoſea 3.3.

2. In our union and implantation into Chriſt, Epheſians 3.17.

3. In the fruition of Chriſt, his righteouſneſſe, grace, Spirit, 2 Corinthians 5.21.

4. Familiarity with him, Job 22.21. Romans 8.15, 23. & 9.4. Galatians 4.5. & Epheſians 1.5. It ſignifies the putting one for a Son.

Thirdly, Motives to this Communion.

1. We were made for fellowſhip with God. All things were made to glorifie God, Men and Angels to enjoy him, Eccleſ. 7. ult.

2. God much deſires our Communion with him, Luke 2.14, he hath been at great coſt for this, Epheſians 2.13. Hebrews 10.19. it is the great end of the Word, 1 John 1.3. Gods providences aim at this.

3. Conſider the greatneſſe of the priviledge, 1. Pleaſure, Pſalm 16.11. 2. Profit, Matthew 6.33. 3. Honour, John 1.12. James 2.23.

Fourthly, The Priviledges you enjoy by this Communion:

1. Liberty of acceſſe to God, Rom. 8.15. Heb. 4.6. they come to him ſitting on a throne of grace, Hebrews 4.16.

2. An intereſt in Gods particular providence, and a ſanctified uſe of the creatures, 1 Cor. 3.21.

3. The influences of grace, 1 Cor. 1.30. John 14.6.

Evidences of this Communion:

1. Holineſſe, 1 John 1.6, 7. & 4.13. John 14.17. Rom. 8.9.

2. Heaven-

2. Heavenlineſſe, Phil. 3. 20. Col. 3. 1.
3. Delight in God, Deut. 4. 7. Pſalm 84. 12.
4. Reverence toward God and humility toward men.
5. A conſtant dependance on God for Direction, Comfort and Strength, John 15. 5.
6. Living to his Glory, and conſecrating all we have to him. Whole Chriſt is ours, and we are all his, Cant. 2. 14. He is ours by his own grant, and we his by our conſent.

Laſtly, Means to attain this.

1. Humble your ſelves that God hath been ſo long neglected, Jeremiah 31. 9. Luke 15. 8. be ſenſible of your alienation.
2. Make uſe of Chriſt, he died for this, Epheſians 2. 13. 1 Peter 3. 18.
3. Avoid ſinne, Habakkuk 1. 13. Pſalm 50. 18. Conformity makes way for Communion.
4. Be mindful of God in your ordinary converſe, Pſalm 16. 8.
5. Be often with God, Job 22. 21. redeem ſome time for Communion with him.
6. Obſerve Gods coming and going, rejoyce in his preſence, Pſalm 30. 7. bewaile his abſence, Pſalm 30. 7.

The Benefits which Believers partake of through Chriſt, are either in this life or in the life to come.

In this life, 1. Relative, which make a change of our ſtate. 2. Moral, which concern the change of our perſons.

Firſt, Relative, which concern the change of our ſtate and condition.

1. Adoption.
2. Juſtification.

Secondly, Moral, which concern the change of our perſons, Regeneration, Sanctification.

Some ſay Adoption is the firſt of all the priviledges communicated to us; Others ſay Juſtification. The word is uſed but five times in the New Teſtament.

Of Adoption.

As ſoon as a ſoul is by faith united to Chriſt, he is made the child of God in the Sonſhip of Chriſt, 1 John 3. 1.

God is ſaid to have three ſorts of ſons:

1. By Nature or Generation, ſo Chriſt, he was his own Son, Rom. 8. 32.
2. By Original Creation, the Angels, and Adam, Luke 12. 30.
3. Voluntarily, made his Son, his adopted Child.

God takes ſuch for his own, Eph. 1. 5, 6.

1. Children, 1 John 3. 1.
2. Heirs, Romans 8. 17.

It is little mentioned in the Old Teſtament, in the New frequently, becauſe the Romans who had then the Empire of the world had ſubdued the Jews to them, and communicated their cuſtoms to them, it was an ordinary cuſtome among the Romans.

It is a gracious ſentence of God the Father on a believer, whereby for Chriſts ſake he cals believers his children, and really admits them into the ſtate and condition of children.

See Mr Harris of the Beatitudes, p. 45. and Par. on Rom. 8. p. 33. Some Sons by outward profeſſion, Gen. 6. 4. ſo the whole Nation of the Jews, Deut. 1. The Civilians thus define it, Eſt gratuita aſſumptio perſonæ non habentis jus in hæreditate ad participationem hæreditatis. Adoptio imitatur naturam. This adoption is gratuitous on the part of God the Father, Epheſ. 1. 5. meritorious by the purchaſe of Chriſt, Titus 2. 14.

He cals us ſons, Gal. 3. 26. & 4. 4, 5. and admits us into the ſtate and condition of ſons, I will be their Father, and they ſhall be my Children.

It is amongſt men a remedy found out for the ſolace of a father which hath no childe, by taking one to the right of an inheritance who by nature hath no claim to it.

Adoptio nuptiarum ſubſidium, fortunæ remedium, ſupplet ſterilitati, vel orbitati. Juriſc.

First, There is the election of him that would have him.

Secondly, The conſent of the adopted.

Thirdly, He called him Son in the Court; when the Lord makes believers his children he thus adopts them.

There is an Agreement and a difference between divine and humane adoption.

They agree in four things:

1. The party adopted is not the others child till he be adopted, Exod. 2, Eſther 2.5,6,7. ſo God takes thoſe that are not his children and makes them his children.

2. The child adopted is taken into the family of him or her that adopts him, and gives him his name, *Gen.*48.5. See *Rev.*2.17.

3. The adopted child is put into all the priviledges of a Son, he hath right to the inheritance; if Sons then Heirs.

4. It is an act of free mercy and not of merit, Eſther 2. ſo is divine adoption an act of free grace, 1 John 3. 1. Gal. 3.18,29.

There is a difference yet between divine and humane adoption:

1. Man puts not a new nature into the party adopted; God when he adopts he makes them new creatures, 2 Peter 1.4.

2. Man is moved to this many times by ſome perfection or apprehended excellency in the party; ſo Mordecai adopted Heſter, becauſe ſhe was his Kinſwoman and beautifull; Pharaohs Daughter becauſe ſhe ſaw Moſes a fair childe took him for hers; but it is not ſo with God, there is no good but what he works, *Ezek.*16.6. When we were fallen in Adam, we were all equally miſerable.

Profectio hæc eſt indulgentiæ non indigentiæ, Ber.

3. They adopted for their comfort, and becauſe they had no ſons on whom to beſtow their inheritance; but God infinitely delighted in his own natural Son, and he needed not us, he hath his Angels to glorifie him.

How this Adoption is wrought:

The way and means of divine adoption, That is,

It is done by applying of Chriſts Sonſhip to them. The applying of Chriſts righteouſneſs to us makes us righteous, and the applying of his Sonſhip to us makes us the ſons and daughters of God. Chriſt being the firſt-born is heir, and all Gods people co-heirs with him, *Rom.*8.16,17,18. By Union with Chriſt and for the merit of Chriſt.

1. Per Chriſtum, by faith in Chriſt. God is firſt Chriſts Father, and ours in him, John 20. 17. 2. Propter Chriſtum, for Chriſt, he hath purchaſed this at the hands of God, John 1. 12.

What Benefits have we by it?

All the whole work of our Redemption is ſometimes expreſt by it, John 1.11. The glory of heaven is laid down in this one word, *Rom.*8.15. We groan that we might receive the adoption of Sons.

The Benefits thereof are brought to two heads:

Ephes. 2. 18. There are three great fruits of our Adoption, 1. Dignity, 1 John 3. 2. John 20. 17. Heb. 2. 11. 2. Liberty, Rom. 8. 21.

1. We are really cut off from the family from which we ſprung, old Adam, ſin, hell, we are now no more in a ſinfull condition.

2. We are ingraffed into Gods family, and have all the priviledges of a natural ſon. By the Law of the Romans one might do nothing to his adopted child, but what he might do to his own begotten Son.

By this means,

1. They receive the Spirit of Sanctification, *Rom.*8.15. Adam was ſanctus natus, we ſancti facti.

3. Inheritance, If ſons then heirs, Gal. 4. 6. Filiatio Adami erat infirma, becauſe in his own keeping, our Sonſhip ratione vinculi manus in æternum, Joh. 8. 39.

2. They have the honour of ſons, John 8. 35.

3. They have the boldneſſe and acceſſe of ſonnes, may cry Abba Father; they may come to God with open face, as men freed from condemnation, Epheſ. 3. 12.

4. They

4. They have the inheritance of sons, Rom. 8. 17. they have a double right to heaven, Titulo Redemptionis & Adoptionis.

Four things will shew our Adoption:

1. Likenesse to the Spirit of Christ, thou wilt be holy as he is.
2. Thou wilt bear an awfull respect to God, the child honours the Father, and to Christ the natural Son.
3. There is the Spirit of prayer, the childe comes to the Father to supply his wants.
4. A love of the brethren, 1 John 3. 10.

Chap. VI.

Of Justification.

THis word is used in Scripture sometimes to celebrate with praise, Luke 7. When they heard this they justified God.

2. To commend ones self, being puffed up with the thoughts of our righteousnesse; so the Lawyer willing to justifie himself.

3. To be freed, as he that is dead is justified from sinne.

4. It is taken for the declaration of our justification, as some expound that, Was not Abraham justified by works?

Justification or to justifie in Scripture is not to infuse in a man righteousnesse, by which God will pronounce him righteous, but is taken for Gods absolving of him in the Court of free-grace, not laying his sinnes to his charge, and withall giving him the right to eternall life, because of the obedience of Christ made his.

It is a judical act, Psalm 143. 2. 2. It is opposed to condemnation, a Law term, Prov. 17. 15. Rom. 8. 33, 34. taken from the Courts of Judicature, when the party accused and impleaded by such adversaries is acquitted.

Believers are freed from the condemning power of sinne, John 3. 18. & 5. 24. Rom. 8. 1.

1. From the condemnation of their own consciences, 1 John 3. 20. Heb. 10. 2. 1 John 5. 10. Rom. 8, 16.

2. From condemnation, as it is Gods sentence, Rom 5. 1. & 8. 33.

Reasons:

1. Christ hath taken away sinne, the cause of condemnation, Rom. 8. 3. by satisfying the justice of God. He hath fullfil'd the precepts and penaltie of the Law.

2. He hath made us the righteousnesse of God, 2 Cor. 5. 21.

It was so fully beaten out at the beginning of reformation, as there was scarce any thing added to it.

There is a great difference between Vocation and Juſtification, Vocation precedes, Juſtification follows. Juſtification præſupponit aliquid, viz. Faith and Repentance; Effectual Calling ponit hæc, non autem præſupponit.

The Doctrine of Predeſtination is handled in the ninth Chapter of the Romans, and the firſt of the Epheſians; of Juſtification in the third and fourth Chapter of the Romans; of the firſt ſinne of Adam in the third of Geneſis, and fifth of the Romans; of the Lords Supper in 1 Cor. 11. of the Office of Miniſters, 1 Tim. 3. of Excommunication, 1 Cor. 5. of Aſſurance, 1 ep. John.

The Papiſts confound Juſtification and Sanctification, they ſay, to juſtifie ſignifies to make righteous by infuſion of grace. Remiſſion of ſinnes (ſaith Bellarmine) is extinctio peccati in ſubjecto, The extinguiſhing of ſin in the Subject.

Some ſay Juſtification hath a twofold notion: Sometimes to juſtifie us, to make us juſt, thus God did make Adam juſt, and juſtified him by making him a perfect, holy, good creature; this is called the Juſtification of infuſion. But properly it is a Law term, and to juſtifie is to declare one juſt and righteous. Thus we are ſaid to juſtifie God, that thou maiſt be juſtified when thou judgeſt, we do not make but pronounce him juſt.

Juſtification and Sanctification go together, 1 Cor. 6. 11. Titus 3. 5. We were left by Adam under the guilt of ſinne, and tyranny of corruption, and therefore are not only freed from the guilt of ſinne by the merit of Chriſt, but from the pollution of ſinne by the Spirit of Chriſt, elſe Chriſt ſhould not reſtore what Adam loſt, Acts 5. 21. nor fully anſwer the types of the Law, there was ablution as well as oblation, and in the Temple not only an Altar but Laver, Exodus 30. 18, 19.

Juſtification is a judicial Act of God the Father upon a believing ſinner, whereby his ſins being imputed to Chriſt, and Chriſts righteouſneſſe to him, he is acquitted from ſin and death, and accepted righteous to eternal life.

Juſtificatio & Sanctificatio peccatorum ſunt duo beneficia, à ſe invicem valde diverſa & diſtincta, ſed minimè ſeparata. In Papatu non diſtinguuntur, à multis Proteſtantibus ſeparantur. In which deſcription there are four things:

1. The Author, who it is that juſtifieth, God the Father Rom. 3. 29, 30. & 8. 33. it is God that juſtifieth, and it is done by God as a Judg of the quick and dead. See Eſay 43. 25. Mat. 6. 12. He is the wronged party, Pſal. 51. 4. 2. He is the Supream Judg, Gen. 18. 25.

2. The object of it, who it is that is juſtified, a believing ſinner, Rom. 3. 16, 17. John 8. 21.

3. The matter of it, the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed to him, the righteouſneſſe of Immanuel, of God made man, 1 Cor. 1, 30. He is the Lord our righteouſneſſe.

4. The form, it is a ſentence pronouncing or declaring us free from ſinne and death, and accepted of God.

It is an Act of God, not an immanent but tranſient Act, an Act of free Grace.

1. In

1. In that God would accept of a ſurety.
2. In pardoning men and not Angels, us and not others.
3. We deſerved nothing from God.
4. In reſpect of the fountain of it, Gods love.

There is an imputation which ariſeth from inherent guilt; ſo our ſins were not imputed to Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 21.

2. Which is founded in a natural Union; ſo Adams ſinne is imputed to us: but neither the filth nor guilt of Adams ſinne were conveyed to Chriſt, he came of Adam in a ſingular diſpenſation by virtue of that promiſe, The ſeed of the woman ſhall break the Serpents head.

3. By way of voluntary ſuſception, Chriſt ſubmitted to our puniſhment, he was made ſinne by Covenant, by treating with his Father.

The debt of a believing ſinner is reckoned to Chriſt, and the obedience of Jeſus Chriſt is really reckoned to a believing ſinner. The reſult of which exchange is the acquitting of a ſinner from ſinne and death. All the puniſhments due to us for our ſins are reckoned to Chriſt by virtue of thoſe tranſactions between God and him. Chriſt became our Surety, God layed on him the iniquity of us all, 2 Cor. 5. He became ſin for us, and his righteouſneſſe is imputed to us; that phraſe is repeated eleven times of Gods imputing Chriſts righteouſneſſe to us.

Though God puniſheth believers for their ſin, yet there is no believer that hath the puniſhment of ſinne, the puniſhment of ſinne beginneth in the wrath of God, and endeth in eternal damnation. Maſter Hooker on Titus 2. 14.

Faith is ſaid to be imputed for righteouſneſſe, but not as a grace or quality in us, for that faith is but one grace, but the Law requires an univerſal righteouſneſſe, even an entire conformity to the Law of God, by faith in Chriſts blood we obtain Juſtification.

2. To juſtifie is to abſolve or pronounce righteous, we cannot be ſo from our own righteouſneſſe which is imperfect, the Scripture cals Chriſt our righteouſneſſe 1 Cor. 1. 30. Rom. 5. 18. Adams ſinne was made ours by imputation, we being in his loins, ſo Chriſts righteouſneſſe is made ours, we being in him the ſecond Adam.

* Piſcator and Mr Wotton make Juſtification to be nothing but the Remiſſion of ſinnes, and imputation of Righteouſneſs and the Remiſſion of ſinnes the ſame thing; a man being therefore accounted righteous, becauſe his ſinnes are not imputed to him, and they deny that the Scripture ever ſaith Chriſts righteouſneſſe is imputed to us.

Mr Burgeſs of Juſtificat. pag. 216. Some urge Rom. 4. 7. & Rom. 8. 33, 34. Act. 13. 38, 39. to prove Remiſſion of ſins to be Juſtification.

Mr Baxter in his Aphoriſ. p. 186. confeſſeth that the difference between Juſtification and Remiſſion of ſinnes is very ſmall.

Mr Gataker in Mr Wottons Defence, pag. 58. and alſo in his Animadverſions upon the Diſputes between Piſcator and Lucius, and in his Anſwer to Gomarus, ſeems to diſtinguiſh between Juſtification largely taken, and Remiſſion of ſinnes.

See Mr Burgeſſes 2d part of Juſtif. Serm. 27, & 28.

Juſtificatio & Remiſſio planè non ſunt idem, qua enim ſubjecto differunt & inter ſe differunt, at ſubjecto iſta haud raro differunt, poteſt enim juſtificari, cui nihil remiſſum ſit, cum falsò delatus fuerit; poteſt remitti peccatum, ubi nulla juſtificatio fuerit, cum & peccatum in confeſſo ſit, nec intervenerit ſatisfactio. Nec ſatis fuerit obijcere, Deum nulli remittere quem non juſtificet, nullum juſtificare cui non remiſerit, de quo tamen queri poteſt; vide Pſal. 78. 36, 38. neque enim ſequitur, iſta eadem planè, quia ſimul ſunt. Gatak. Animadv. in Piſcat. & Lucij Scripta part. 1. Sect. 3. Iſta duo revera, eadem prorſus non ſunt: nec tamen, qui idem eſſe utrumque cenſet, aut unum ex altero conſequi neceſſariò, is, aut veram Chriſti juſtitia imputationem, qualem ſacra litera docet, aut ſalutem independentem è medio tollit. Gatak. Elench. Gom. Diſp. Elentic. de Juſtif.

The righteouſneſſe by which we are juſtified and ſtand righteous before God, is not our own righteouſneſſe, but the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8, 9. 2 Cor. 5. 21. not the righteouſneſs of Chriſt as God the ſecond Perſon in Trinity, but as Mediator, God-man. In which there are two things:

1. The perfect holineſſe of his humane nature, Heb. 7. 26.

Oſiander ſaid, men were juſtified by the eſſentiall righteouſneſſe of Chriſt as God, which opinion is largely confuted by Calvin in his Inſtitutions.

2. The perfect righteousnesse which he performed in doing and suffering according to the Law, this is imputed to us.

Christs active obedience, his good works and holy life could never have been meritorious for us, nor brought us to Heaven, if he had not died for us, therefore our Justification and obtaining of Heaven is ascribed to his bloud, as if that alone had done both, Rom. 5. 9. Heb. 10. 19. Revel. 5. 6,9,11. his intercession and prayers had not been meritorious for us, if he had not died for us.

* The parts of Justification:

First, Imputation of Christs righteousnesse, that is, God accounting his righteousnesse ours, as if we had in our own persons performed it, Rom. 4. 6, 9, 23. as there is a true and real union between us and Christ; so there is a real imputation of Christs righteousnesse to us, Cant. 6. 10. Revel. 12. 1. a soul triumphs more in the righteousnesse of Christ imputed, then if he could have stood in the righteousnesse in which he was created. The imputation of Christs righteousnesse was first rejected by the Jesuites. Carl. Consens. Eccles. Cathol. contra Trid. de gratia cap. 5. See that full place 1 Cor. 5. 21. & Phil. 3. 9.

See Mr Chauncy of Justification Serm. 20. & 21.

Secondly, From thence there follows a forgivenesse of sins, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Psalm 32. This is called hiding ones sins, Blotting them out, Burying them in the Sea, Daniel 9. 24.

Justification (say they) is one act respecting two terms, the term from which, and so it is called Remission of sins, and the term to which, and so it is called the imputation of righteousnes.

Some say, not imputing of sinne and imputing righteousnesse are not two parts, but one single act, there is the term from which and to which. There are two sorts of contraries, such which have both a real being, as white and black in colours. 2. Privatively, as light and darknesse; darknesse hath no being but the absence of light, so sinne and righteousnesse are two contraries, but sinne hath no being, for then God should be the authour of it; introduction of light is the expulsion of darknesse, not imputing sinne, and imputing righteousnesse is one thing, else the Apostles Argument (say they) would not hold Rom. 4. 6. where he alledgeth Psalm 32. He brings that place which speaks of not imputing sinne to prove that we are justified by Christs righteousnesse imputed.

By the same act of Justification a sinner is absolved from the guilt, and pronounced righteous, as by the same act of cloathing a man there is the putting on of the garment and the covering.

Bishop Usher urgeth Rom. 4. 6. for this purpose. See his Sermon on Rom. 5. 1. and Testardus his Synopsis Doctrinæ de Natura & Gratia, 195.

* Disput. Elenct. de Justif. materia & forma.

This they esteem their Argumentum palmarium, saith Gomarus *. Thus they argue, Paul here proves by the testimony of David, that Justification is an imputation of righteousnesse, either by his words, or by words that are equipollent: not by his own words, therefore he proves it per verborum equipollentiam, and consequently those speeches, to impute righteousnesse, and forgive sins are equipollent, but a thing may be proved also, saith Gomarus, by force of consequence, and Mr Gataker saith the Argument is weak.

Christ dying is the deserving and satisfactory cause to Gods justice, whereby we obtain Justification and Remission of sins.

Some Hereticks hold, God was never angry with man, only men were made enemies by their own sins, and do therefore conclude that satisfaction by Christs bloud, as by way of a price, is a falshood, and all that Christ did by dying and suffering, was

was only as an example to teach us in what way we are to obtain remission of sins, and therefore according to them Justification is a pardoning of sin without Christ as a Mediator.

Arguments to the contrary:

1. Christ is called a Redeemer, Rom. 3. 14. 1 Cor. 1. 30. and Job, I know that my Redeemer liveth. He is a Redeemer, and we obtain our Justification by this Redemption, therefore he is the meritorious and deserving cause of it, He hath redeemed us by his blood, and we are bought with a price.

2. He is a Mediatour 1 Tim. 2. and he is the Mediatour of the New Testament. These things are implied in that

1. That God and men were equally disagreeing, God was alienated from men, and men from God.

2. Christ came that he might pacifie God angry with us, and convert our hearts who were rebels against him.

3. The means by which this was done, the death of this Mediator, as appeareth Heb. 9. 15, 16.

3. From those places where Christ is called a Propitiation, 1 John 2. 1. in allusion to the Mercy-seat, Exod. 25. 17. & Numb. 7. 89.

Two things are implyed here:

1. That God was exceeding angry with us for our sins.

2. That Christ did pacifie him by his bloud.

The Mercy-seat was called also the Oracle, because God answered by it; and the covering, because it covered the Ark, in which were laid up the Tables. Christ is compared to this both in regard of his Prophetical Office, because God doth by him declare his will, as also in regard of his Priestly Office, because by this God is pleased.

4. From the places where Christ is said to be a Sacrifice, Ephes. He gave himself an Offering and a Sacrifice; and in the Hebrews, Christ was once offered; whence note,

1. That Christs death is a true Offering and Sacrifice.

2. It was done in the dayes of his flesh for the destruction of sinne.

5. All those places must needs prove Christ to be the meritorious cause where Christ is said to take away our sins, and the punishment from us, Esay 53. He bore our iniquities, 2 Cor. 5. 21.

When were we justified, seeing Justification is a change not of our quality but state?

We are justified in Gods Decree, in esse cognito, & in esse volito, before we believe, not actually.

Some say it was an eternal transaction before all time, only manifested to us by the Spirit.

We must distinguish between the Decree and execution of it, we may as well say we are glorified ab aterno, as that we are actually justified. Vide Doctoris Arrowsm. Tact. Sac. l. 3. c. 3. We must distinguish, 1. Between the secret purpose of Gods grace, and the sentence of his Law, a sinner may be an enemy by the sentence of the Law, though he be beloved in respect of election, Rom. 11. 28. We have no legal release from the wrath of God till we believe, Rom. 3. 24. 2. We must distinguish between the purpose of reconciliation, and actual reconciliation. 3. We may distinguish of a two-fold love of God, Amor benevolentiæ, & complacentiæ, God bears a good will to the elect in a natural condition, though he delight not in them, because he makes them lovely by his own grace. We are justified, 1. In Gods counsel from all eternity. 2. Virtually in our Head, when Christ rose again. 3. Actually, when God works faith. 4. Sensibly in assurance. 5. Publickly at last day.

There are four set periods of Justification:

First, In Gods purpose, which reacheth as far as the eternal transactions between God and Christ, such as were set down in the Lambs book.

Secondly, When Christ did in the name and stead of sinners perform that which was the matter of their justification, but in neither of these periods was the soul translated out of the state of nature into the state of grace.

Thirdly, Actually, at that moment when we come to own Christ as a Saviour by believing.

Fourthly, When the Spirit which translates the soul out of the state of nature into the state of grace makes it known to the soul.

Others

Others say there are five (as it were) periods or degrees of Justification:

1. When the Lord passeth a sentence of Absolution on men at their first Conversion, immediately upon their union with Christ, Acts 13.38,39.

2. He that is justified falls into daily transgressions, therefore there must be a daily imputation and application of the death of Christ, John 13.10.

A Leper could not make use of his house, though he had a right to it.

3. There is an high act of justification after great and eminent fals, though there be not an intercision, yet there is a sequestration, such cannot then plead their right. Davids sinne of adultery and murder made a great breach upon his justification, therefore he prayes God Psalm 51. To purge him with hyssop, to apply anew the bloud of Christ.

4. There follows a certification, a sentence passed in the soul concerning mans estate, 1 John 5.9. Rom. 8.33,34.

There is Justificatio via & patriæ.

5. Justification is never perfected till the day of judgement, Acts 3.19. then sentence is passed in open Court before men and Angels.

Of preparatory Works to Justification:

The 13th Article of the Church of England saith, Works done before the grace of Christ or Justification, because they are not done as God hath commanded them, we doubt not but they are sins. Matth. 7. A corrupt tree brings forth corrupt fruit. Heb. 11. Without faith it is impossible to please God, Tit. 2.9. To the defiled all things are defiled.

Whether Works with faith deserve grace ex condigno?

* Lib. 4. *de Justif. c.*10.

We say not (as Bellarmine * chargeth us) that the Works of the regenerate are simply sins, but in a certain respect.

Bona renatorum opera habent omnia, quamvis non perfectè & in summo gradu, qua ad moralem actionis bonitatem essentialiter requiruntur.

The Papists say, after one is made a new-creature he can perform such Works as have an intrinsecal merit in them, and then by their good Works they can satisfie for their smaller offences.

Secondly, They have such a worth that God is tied (say some of them) by the debt of justice: Others say, by the debt of gratitude to bestow upon them everlasting glory. Some say, they deserve this ex natura operis: Others say, Tincta sanguine Christi, being died with the bloud of Christ. This is a damnable doctrine, throws us off from the Head to hold justification by works.

Sunt enim bona 1. Quoad objectum, quia versantur circa rem licitam & lege divina præceptam. 2. Quoad principium, quia fiunt ex fide, & vero Dei amore. 3. Quoad finem, quia ad Dei gloriam referuntur. Et 4. Quoad circumstantias, *quia debita circumstantia in iis faciendis observantur. Our good Works as they flow from the grace of Gods Spirit in us, do not yet merit Heaven.

1. From the condition of the Worker, though we be never so much enabled, yet we we are in such a state and condition that we are bound to do more than we do or can do.

1. By our natural subjection to God as we are his creatures.
2. By our redemption.
3. In regard of our filial relation.

Luke 17. 7. We cannot enter into Heaven unlesse we be made sons, Come ye blessed of my Father; and the more we have the Spirit enabling us to good, the more we are bound to be thankfull, rather than to glory in our selves; He that merits must do the work by his own strength, and it must be properly his own, 1 Cor. 15. 10. Again, we are sinners, the worker being a servant, sonne, sinner, cannot merit.

Secondly, From the condition of the worke; those workes that merit Heaven must be in materia indebita; our obedience is a due debt, our workes are defective, Exod. 20. 38. and proportionable to the reward, it must be proprium operantis, but ille facit ut faciamus. An equality and commensuration as a just price to the thing bought, but our works are not so, Rom. 8. 18. those sufferings were the most glorious of all; when Paul was whipt, imprisoned, ventured his life, he doth not account these things considerable in respect of Heaven. See Rom. 8. 18. James 3. 2. 1 John 1. 8. Rom. 7. 24. & 11. 35, 36. Ephes. 2. 8. and Dr Sclater on Rom. 2. pag. 118. to 185.

The cause of our reward is not the dignity of our persons, nor the condignity of our works, Esay 54. 6. Our works are only necessary, and antecedent dispositions. In a work properly meritorious, there is Relatio meriti & remunerationis, we giving to God, and he repaying to us.

The Papists say, The Protestants so cry up Justification by grace, that they cry down all good works, at least the reward of them; we say, there is a reward of mercy, Psalm 62. last end. Bona opera non præcedunt justificandum, sed sequuntur justificatum. Aug. Bona opera sunt occultæ prædestinationis indicia, futuræ felicitatis præsagia. Bernard. de grat. & libero arbitrio.

Dr Willet confutes the calumny of the Romanists, charging our Doctrine of justification by faith only, as a great adversary to good Works. For he proves that in the space of sixty years since the times of the Gospel 1000000lb hath been bestowed in the acts of piety and charity.

See Dr Willet fully to this purpose in the end of his Synopsis Papismi. 5. Edit. pag. 22. See Mr Hilders. on Psal. 54. 7. Lect. 130. and Mr Pemble of Justificat. Sect. 3. cap. 1.

We should be zealous of good works, Titus 2. 14.

1. As they are the fruits of justifying Faith.
2. As they are the ornaments of our profession, Titus 2. 10.
3. As they are the testimony of our thankfulnesse, Rom. 12. 1.
4. As they are the way wherein we are to expect peace and comfort, and to eternal life, Rom. 6. 22. Gal. 6. 16.
5. As they are an encouragement to others, 1 Tim. 4. 12.

Hearing, James 1 19. Meditation, frequent thoughts of God and his Word, Psalm 1. 2. Daniel 6. 11. Keeping of the Sabbath, a religious use of the Seals.

2. Opera vocationis, the works of our calling, we should be diligent in them, Titus 3. 14. Luke 3. 10, 11, 12.

3. Opera justitiæ, to give every one his due, to hurt none.

4. Opera charitatis & misericordiæ, to relieve the poor, Matth. 25. toward the end.

We should perform all these,

1. With respect to God, Rom. 14. 6. 2 Chron. 30. 1. Ephes. 6. 7.

2. In due season, Psalm 1. 3.

3. The more visible and publick good works are, the more they glorifie God, 1 Chron 16. 29. Psalm 87. 2. Hag. 1. 8.

4. The more we abound in them, John 15. 8. John 5. 26. Col. 2. 9.

Whether we be justified by inherent or imputed righteousnesse?

Si re ipsa injusti & solum putativè justi sumus, magis Diaboli quam Christi imaginem geremus. Rectius enim denominamur ab eo quod sumus, quàm ab eo quòd esse putamur. Bellarm. de Justificat. lib. 2. cap. 3. Si per justitiam imputatam, verè dici possumus justi & Filii Dei, ergo poterit etiam Christus, per injustitiam nostram sibi imputatam dici verè peccator, & quod horret animus cogitare, filius Diaboli. Id. ibid. cap. 6.

We do not deny (as the Papists falsly slander us) all inherent righteousnesse, 2 Cor. 5. 17. nor all justification before God by inherent righteousnesse, 1 Kings 8. 32. But this we teach, That this inherent righteousnesse is not that righteousnesse whereby any poor sinner in this life can be justified before Gods Tribunal, for which he is pronounced to be innocent, absolved from death and condemnation, and adjudged unto eternal life.

The Church of Rome holdeth not this foundation, viz. the Doctrine of Justification by Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 11.

1. They deny justification by the imputation of Christs righteousnesse, yea they scorn it, and call it a putative righteousnesse.

2. They hold justification by inherent righteousnesse, that is, by the works of the Law, Gal. 5. 4.

* Vide Bellar. de Justificat. l. 2. c. 2, 3. M^r Goodw. of Justificat. part. 2. cap. 4.

The Papists* place the formal cause of justification in the infusion of inherent righteousnesse. The opinion is built upon another opinion as rotten as it, viz. perfection of inherent righteousnesse; for if this be found to be imperfect (as it will be always in this life) the credit of the other opinion is lost, and that by consent of their own principles, who teach that in justification men are made compleatly righteous.

2 Cor. 5. 21. Our sinne was in Christ not inherently but by way of imputation, therefore his righteousnesse is so in us. See Acts 13. 38, 39. Phil. 3. 9. Yet some much dislike the imputing of our sins to Christ, and say, that whom God accounts a sinner, is really so: and urge that of Austin, Christus suscipiendo pœnam sed non culpam, & culpam delevit & pœnam.

Arminius asserit in hominis coram Deo Justificatione justitiam Christi non imputari in justitiam, verum ipsam fidem seu τὸ credere, per gratiosam Dei acceptationem, esse justitiam illam nostram qua coram Deo justificamur. Twiss. contra Corvinum cap. 14. Sect. 6.

The Papists acknowledge all to be by grace as well as we, but when we come to the particular explication there is a vast difference, they mean grace inherent in us, and we grace without us, that is, the love and favour of God.

Arguments against them:

First, That grace by which we are justified is called the love of God, Rom. 5. 8. not not love active, whereby we love God, but love passive, that is, whereby we are loved of him, Rom. 9. 15. All our salvation is sanctified to the mercy of God, which is not something in us, but we are the objects of it. [illegible] only some acts of God to us which we are only the objects of. To be justified or saved by the grace of God, is no more than to be saved by the love, the mercy, or philanthropy of God; all which do evidently note that this is not any thing in us, but in God.

2. Grace cannot be explained to be a gracious habit or work, because it is opposed to these Rom. 11. 4. Titus 3. 5. Ephes. 2. 8. by grace is as much as [illegible] works, not of ourselves.

3. It appears by the condition we are described to have when justified, which is set down Rom. 4. a not imputing sin, a justifying the ungodly, the Apostle there instanceth in Abraham, who had so much inward grace in him, yet was considered in his justification as unholy, and he was justified in this, that God imputed not to him the imperfections he was guilty of.

There is a three fold righteousness. 1. A perfect righteousness, but not inherent; 2 [illegible] 2. inherent, but not perfect. 3. Perfect and inherent, but not [illegible]

The first is the righteousness by which we are justified. The second by which we are sanctified. The third by which we are glorified. Dr Featleys Speech before the Assembly of Divines.

For the imputation of Christs righteousness there is Justitia Aliena, that is imputed, non justitia Medicinæ as they say in Logick. Medicina gratuita sanat

The righteousness by which the just are justified before God is Justitia Aliena, though not only. Though [illegible] for in his sight shall no man living be justified, Psal. 143. 2.

To speak properly, the will or grace of God in the [illegible] of justification, the material is Christs righteousness, the formal is the imputing of this righteousness unto us, and the final is the praise and glory of God, [illegible] formal cause to be sought for in us.

Medicina gratuita sanat & justificat donatum habitum & tantum ex habitudi opera perfecta sine interruptione præstita, non verò quæ ex fide cum magna imperfectione fiunt: quum tamen sub Evangelio verum sit, si quis perfectè Deo obediat, eum ex operibus justificandum esse. Rad. Lud. Lucæ 10. 28. ut taceam ridiculum esse imperfectum justificare posse. Davenant. Determ. 41.

Some say, but falsly, the righteousness by which we are formally justified before God, is not the righteousness of Christ, but of faith, that being accepted in the righteousness of the Law. Fides sine fiducia Christi.

Whether inherent justice be actual or habitual?

Bishop Davenant, cap. 3. De habitu justitiæ, saith, a certain habit or inherent justice is infused into all that are justified, John 1. 16. 2 Cor. 3. 18. Gal. 6. 15. Col. 3. 10. 2 Pet. 1. 4.

Per inhærentem justitiam intelligimus supernaturale donum gratiæ sanctificantis, oppositum originali peccato, & in singulis animæ facultatum reparans & renovans illam Dei imaginem, quæ per peccatum originale deformata fuit. Davenant. Determ. 39. de habitual justitia. Vide Bellarm. l. 2. de justificat. c. 15. & 16.

All those that are justified do supernaturally work, Ergo it is evident that they are endued with supernatural grace and holiness. We are said to be righteous from this inherent justice, we are said to be just, and that by God himself, Gen. 6. 9. Luke 1. 6. & 2. 25. 1 Pet. 4. 18.

Bellarmine, l. 5. de Justificatione, c. 7. prop. 3. saith, Propter incertitudinem propriæ justitiæ, & periculum inanis gloriæ, tutissimum est fiduciam in sola Dei misericordia & benignitate reponere: By which saying he overthrows all his former Dispute about inherent righteousness.

Quod perinde est, ac si diceret, Quanquam ego ad scribendum à Romano Pontifice compulsus, hanc contra solius fidei justificationem, & solius misericordiæ fiduciam scripserim, Profiteor tamen hanc Doctrinam, quam oppugnavi, tutissimam esse. Ex quia nulla sententia de fide tutissima esse potest, nisi quia est verissima, eandem profiteri cogor verissimam esse: ac proinde contrariam sententiam, quam de operum meritis ex congruo hominum nondum renatorum confirmare volui, esse falsissimam. Whether we be juſtified by the paſſive obedience of Chriſt alone, or alſo by his active?

In this Controverſie many learned Divines of our own differ among themſelves, and it doth not ſeem to be of that importance that ſome others are about Juſtification.

M. Chancie and many others are for both Chriſts active and paſſive obedience. *Etſi autem in negotio Juſtificationis magno periculo erratur, prout ea de re controverſia procedit inter nos & Pontificios, utrum ſcilicet gratiâ Dei Juſtificatio nobis contingat, an meritis noſtris: Attamen prout inter nos & Remonſtrantes controverſia agitatur, paſſivâne tantùm, an etiam activa Chriſti obedientia juſtificemur coram Deo, nullo prorſus eventur periculo. We are juſtified in part by Chriſts active obedience, for by it we obtain the imputation of that perfect righteouſneſſe which giveth us title to the Kingdome of Heaven. Seeing it was not poſſible for us to enter into life, till we had kept the Commandements of God, Matth. 19. 17. and we were not able to keep them our ſelves, it was neceſſary our Surety ſhould keep them for us, Dan. 9. 24. Rom. 10. 4. Rom. 3. 21.

Mr Hilderſ. on Pſal. 51. 7. Leſt. 119.

The Scripture ſeemeth to aſcribe our Redemption wholly to Chriſts bodily death, and the blood that he ſhed for us, Epheſ. 1. 7. Revel. 5. 9. but in theſe places the holy Ghoſt uſeth a Synecdoche, it putteth one part of Chriſts paſſion for the whole:

1. Becauſe the ſhedding of his blood was a ſenſible ſign and evidence that he died for us.

Id. ibid.

2. This declared him to be the true propitiatory Sacrifice that was figured by all the Sacrifices under the Law.

See Mr Bradſhaw of Juſtification.

Some urge this Argument, By Chriſts active Obedience imputed to them, the faithfull be made perfectly righteous, what need is there then of his paſſive righteouſneſſe? need there any more than to be made righteous?

Chriſt fulfilled the duty of the Law, and did undergo the penalty, that laſt was a ſatisfaction for the treſpaſſe, which was as it were the forfeiture, and the fulfilling the Law was the principal, Pſalm 40. 4. Jer. 31. 3. Gal. 4. 4.

Some to avoid Chriſts active Obedience, queſtion, Whether Chriſt as man was not bound to fulfill the Law for himſelf? All creatures are ſubject to Gods authority. Yet this detracts not from his active Obedience, partly from his own free condeſcenſion, and partly becauſe his whole Perſon God and man obeyed.

Some Divines ſay, That Juſtification is compleated and perfected at one inſtant, when we firſt believed. Others ſay, It is a continued action, and happily both may be reconciled. For take Juſtification as it connoteth a ſtate we are put into, ſo it's not iterated, but done once. But if we take Juſtification for the particular acts of it, remitting of ſinne, and imputing of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, then theſe are daily and continually performed. CHAP. VII.

Of the Parts and Termes of Justification, Remission of sins, and Imputation of Christs Righteousnesse.

JUstification is used so largely in the Scripture, as to comprehend under it Remission of sins; but if we will speak accurately, there is a difference between Remission of sin, and the justification of the sinner.

Peccati remissionem & justificationem a imputationem non assequitur eadem plane ratione, qua peccatum alienum de cœlo remittitur, aut justitia non imputatur, &c. Conclus. Gallic. Animadvers. in Thesaur. & Ide. Scripta nostri coram Deo Justificationis, part. 1. Sect. 2.

The justification of a sinner properly and strictly is the cleansing and purging of a sinner from the guilt of his sins by imputation of the righteousnesse of his Surety Jesus Christ, for which his sins are pardoned, and the sinner freed from the punishment of sin, and received into the favour of God.

Remission or forgivenesse of sins may be thus described. It is a Blessing of God upon his Church procured by the death and passion of Christ, whereby God esteems of sin as no sin, or as not committed. Or thus: It is an act of grace acquitting the sinner from the guilt and punishment of sin by vertue of Christs satisfaction. Not the physical entity of sin, but the moral being of it is taken away, the power in it to condemn the soul:

1. The guilt of sinne, the imputation of it, Psalm 32. 2. Colos. 2. 14. Jer. 31. 34.
2. The punishment of it, Rom. 8. 1. 1 Thessal. ult.

Every subject of Christs Kingdom hath his sins pardoned, Esay 33. ult. This is one of the priviledges of the Church in the Apostles Creed, Acts 2. 38, 39. and all his sins totally pardoned, Exod. 34. 6, 7. Micah 7. 18, 19. This is a great priviledge, Psalm 32. 1. Exod. 32. 32. It is no where to be had but in the Church, because it is purchased by Christs bloud, and is a fruit of Gods eternal love. Remission of sins is the principal part of Redemption, Colos. 1. 14. Ephes. 1. 7. one of the chief things in the Covenant, Jer. 31. Heb. 8. The holy Ghost seldom names it without some high expression, Psalm 51. Ephes. 1.

The foundation of our happinesse lies in the pardon of sinne, Psalm 32. 1.

First, If we consider the evil removed thereby, sinne is a great burden to tender and wounded consciences, Psalm 38. 4. & 40. 12. Lam. 3. 14.

2. It is filthy, and therefore odious unto God, Tit. 3. 3.
3. It is a debt and binds us over to judgement, Mat. 6. 12.

Secondly, If we consider the nature and manner of pardon of sin:

1. It is universal, Psalm 103. 3.
2. Full; Sinne pardoned is as if it had never been.
3. Many excellent priviledges accompany it:
   1. God is reconciled, at peace with us, Rom. 5.
   2. The heart is sanctified, 1 Cor. 1. 20. 1 Cor. 6. 11.
   3. The curse and sting of misery is removed, 1 Cor. 15. 50.
   4. A right to Heaven is bestowed.

This Remission is both free and full, Esay 43. 25. Ezek. 16. 6. Esay 59. 20. Micah 7. 18. Heb. 8. 12.

Manasseh, Solomon, Paul, Mary Magdalen were great sinners, yet pardoned.

God doth of his own free grace and mercy forgive us our sins, Psal. 51.1. Rom. 3.24. Eph. 1.7. 1 John 2.12.

1. The word remitting or forgiving implies that sin is a debt or offence, as Christ cals it in his form of Prayer. God is said to forgive when he takes away the guilt, and frees us from condemnation, Esay 44.22.

1. The party forgiven is accepted with God as if he had never sinn'd.

2. Where God forgives one sinne truly, he forgives all sinnes, Exod. 34.6, 7. Psalm 103.3. Micah 7.18. not past, present and to come, for pardon presupposeth some thing past, Jer. 33.8. it's an act that follows our repentance, Psalm 32.5. 1 John 1.9.

3. Where God forgives the sinne he forgives the punishment:

1. A man is freed from eternal punishment, Rom. 5.9.

2. From temporal, as part of the curse.

4. Many benefits follow forgivenesse:

1. God is reconciled to us, Rom. 5.1.

2. The heart is sanctified, pardoning and subduing of sinne go together, Micah 7.18. 1 John 1.9.

3. Providence is blest, the curse is taken out of our blessings, Psalm 69.22. and the sting out of our afflictions, 1 Cor. 15.56.

4. A right to Heaven is restored, Rom. 5.10.

* Learned Mr. Pell in his Preface to his English School-Book, saith, Remission (Aphesis) is the longest word in the Scripture, consisting of seven syllables, a syllable more than any word in the Bible. It is certainly the most comfortable word to those which can justly lay claim to it.

Secondly, The inward cause in God which moves him to it, is his grace, for God might have left all mankind under the power of their sins, as he hath done the Devils.

Thirdly, The outward meritorious cause is the blood of Christ. Paul in the Epistle to the Hebrews largely shews, that it was the blood of Christ typified by the Sacrifices that purgeth us from our sins, by Christs merits Gods grace is obtained.

Fourthly, The instrumental cause is faith, Rom. 3.25. & 5.1. not considered as a work, but as an act of the soul receiving and applying Christ to us, not going out to him, as love doth, for then it were a work.

Fifthly, The immediate effect of it is sanctification, and the healing of our nature, Rom 8.1. to be cleansed or washed from sin, implies both the taking away the guilt of it, and giving power against our corruptions.

For these six thousand years God hath been multiplying pardons, and yet free grace is not tired and grown weary.

Our sins are covered, Psalm 32.1. as a bath some sore, cast into the Sea, Micah 7.19. as Pharaoh and the Egyptians, blotted out as a debt in a book, Esay 44.22. Psalm 51.1.

Isa. 55.7. Rom. 5.16.

Object. We have forgivenesse of sins upon a price, therefore we are not freely forgiven.

Answ. Forgivenesse of sins and Christs Satisfaction may well consist, whatsoever it cost Christ it costs us nothing.

1. It was infinite grace that God should ever intend to pardon a wretched sinner, Ephes. 1.6.

2. That he should give his Son for this; and that this sinner should be pardoned, and not another.

Object. God will not forgive except we repent and beleeve, Acts 2.19. & 10.42.

Answ. God promiseth forgivenesse to such only as repent and believe, but they have forgiveneſse meerly from the grace of God, not from the worthinesse of their believing or repenting, Hosea 14.4.

2. These graces are freely given them, To you it is given to believe, and God hath given repentance to the Gentiles.

What course we should take to get sins pardoned:

First, Look to our interest in the Covenant of grace; the Covenant of works binds over those to punishment that break it. We should labour to get an interest in the Covenant of grace, and the Mediator of it.

Secondly,

Secondly, Confesse our sins.

Thirdly, We should solemnly act faith on the blood of Christ, Rom. 2. 25.

1. Look on Christ as the only means of attonement, Esay 45 22. looking is an act of the understanding, righteousnesse and salvation is to be had in him, and no other.

2. It must rest it self only on the satisfaction of Christ for pardon, it is expresst by staying on the Lord, trusting on him.

3. Tender up the satisfaction of Christ to the Father, and desire him to accept of it for us, in the old Law they were to lay their hands on the head of the Sacrifice, to teach them to offer up Christ for them.

To whom it appertains to remit sins.

The power of remitting sins belongs only to God, I, even I blot out thy transgressions, Esay 43.25. that is true in the Gospel, though not well applied, Who can forgive sins but God only? because it is an offence against him, that you may know who hath power (saith Christ) to forgive sins, I say unto thee, Walk, he only by his own power can forgive it, who by his own power can remove any judgement the effect of sin. Ministers are said to remit sins, John 21, 23. but that is because they have a special Office to apply the promises of pardon to broken hearts. See Luke 24. 47. Acts 13. 38. The Ministry of Reconciliation is committed to them as to the Embassadors of Christ, 2 Cor. 5, 18, 19, 20.

An confessio auricularis sit necessaria ad remissionem peccatorum? Whether auricular confession be necessary to the remission of sins?

The Church of Rome will have it necessary for every one to confesse unto a Priest all his deadly sins, (And hath indeed all whatsoever without the mercy of God in Christ, Rom. 6. ult. Gal. 3, 10.) which by diligent examination he can find out, together with the several circumstances whereby they are aggravated.

Nothing will suffice to procure pardon in the ordinary way of sins without this Confession, either in re, aut in voto, as Bellarmine doubts not to say. This is no small task which they impose upon the people of Christ, Quid mortalibus, quia onerosius? saith Bellarmine, therefore saw they had need to have good warrant for it, especially being so peremptory as to anathematize all which shall refuse to subscribe unto them.

Concil. Trid. Sess. 14. c. 5.

De panitentia l. 3 c. 20.

Ibid. c. 12.

No general Council until that of Lateran under Innocent the third (about twelve hundred years after Christ) decreed a necessity of auricular confession. Eyb-mud Acts 19. affirmeth, That it was not ordained by God, nor yet practised in the ancient Church after Christ.

The hinge of the Question is not concerning confession of sins in general unto a Minister, but of particular sins, neither whether we may, but whether we ought necessarily purpose a manifestation of every known mortal sin, and the grievous circumstances thereof, or otherwise stand hopelesse of all remission of our sins. B. Mort. Appeal. l. 13. c. 12. S. 1.

Papists speak much of confession of sins in all their Catechisms, which they urge as a matter of so great necessity, which they call a Sacrament, and make one of the especial parts of true repentance, without which they say no man can receive absolution and remission of his sins, nor entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven, but they ascribe all this, not to the confession of sinnes that is made unto God, but that which is made in the ears of a Priest. Father Binet the Jesuite told Casaubon, that it were better all Kings were killed, than a confession should be revealed, because the power of Kings is but an humane right, but confession is of Divine right. See Bishop Halls Remaining works, Sermon 24 on Ephes. 4. 32. Pag. 1229. Nec adeo unquam Catholicum tam fuit indoctum, ut ex hoc loco confessionis probaret Sacramentum. Maldonat. in Matth. 3.

There is no ground in Scripture for it, but much against it, in that the Scripture in many places sheweth it sufficient, except in some cases, to confesse unto God only. Besides such confession as Papists require, viz. a particular enumeration of all mortal sins with their several aggravating circumstances, is not possible, and therefore not of divine institution.

Cardinal Cajetane on James 5. acknowledgeth, Non agi de Sacramentali confessione.

That

That Confession Matth. 3. 6.

1. Was not made of every one apart, of every particular fault they had committed, and secretly in S^t Johns ear.

2. The Greek word signifieth confession of known faults, and overthroweth the recital of secret sins which ear-confession requireth.

3. It is contrary to the nature of the meeting, which was publick.

4. To the nature of a Sacrament administred, which being publick required a publick confession of mans corruption.

5. This was but once, and before Baptism, and not as the Papists have it here, and before the Lords Supper, Carrw in loc.

The first Covenant required perfection, but promised no remission, therefore unregenerate man can never be saved till their Covenant be changed, Heb. 8. 8, 12.

The apprehension of the pardon of sin will sweeten every condition:

1. Sickness, Matth. 9. 2.

2. Reproach, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

3. Imprisonment, Rom. 8. 34.

4. It will comfort one in the remainders of corruption, Rom. 8. 1.

5. Deadly dangers, The Angel of God (saith Paul) stood by me this night, whose I am, and whom I serve.

6. It will support us at the day of Judgement, Acts 3. 19.

Reasons: First, Because sin in the guilt of it doth imbitter every condition, even death it self, 1 Cor. 15. 26. then one looks upon every crosse coming from God as an avenger, Jer. 30. 14. and upon mercies as given him to fat him to destruction.

Secondly, This makes a man look upon every affliction as coming from a Fathers hand, when he can look on sinne as pardoned, Heb. 12. 9. there is an ira paterna.

Thirdly, Remission of sins gives him boldnesse at the throne of grace, Eph. 3. 12. 1 John 3. 21.

How to know when our sins be pardoned?

1. Did you ever repent for sin, that is a necessary condition (though not a cause) of the forgivenesse of it, Acts 3. 19.

2. Examine your faith in Christ, Rom. 5. 1. Being justified by faith we have peace with God.

3. Remission and Sanctification go together, Heb. 9. 14.

4. There is a witnesse of bloud, 1 John 5. 8. the Spirit of God gives testimony of our Justification as well as Sanctification.

Whether peccata remissa revocentur?

Whom God justifieth, Rom. 8. 30. that is, forgiveth their sins, them he glorifieth.

Justificati hominis in Christo longè alia conditio est, quàm Adami fuit, Ejus ibi quidem posse non peccare, sed in Christo confecuti summum non posse peccare, quod etsi in vita hac mortali nondum absolutè perfectum sit, hic tamen certo aliquo modo inchoatum esse restatur Joannes Apostolus 1 Joan. 3. 9. Abbot. in Thomæ Dietrib.

Jer. Taylor.

The remission of sins is perfect, it makes as if the sin had never been, it is called blotting out, and throwing into the bottome of the Sea, taking of them away; there is much difference between taking away the guilt and power of sinne, the later is taken away by degrees and in part, but the guilt of sin is quite discharged, He will remember them no more; the godly who have their sins fully remitted, do feel the sting and terrour of it in their consciences, as David, Psalm 51. yet it is not because it is not forgiven, but to make us humble and taste of the bitternesse of sinne, thou maist yet take as much comfort in the pardon of all thy offences, as if they had never been acted by thee.

See M^r Hilders. on Psal. 51. 7.

When God hath pardoned the fault all punishment is not necessarily taken away, but only punishment which is satisfactory to Gods justice. Remissa culpa remittitur & pœna, Esay 53. 5. How are we healed, if notwithstanding Christs Passion and Satisfaction, we are to be tormented for our sins with most bitter torments?

God is fully reconciled by Christs satisfaction with the truly penitent, Rom. 5. 1, 10.

The

The chastisements of Gods people come from a loving Father, and are medicinal not penal.

This overthrows,

1. Popish Indulgences, viz. relaxations from satisfactory pains in Purgatory flames after this life, which Rivet fitly terms Emulgences. Heb. 12. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

2. Prayers for the dead.

Where sins are forgiven, whether only in this world?

That Parable Matth. 18. is brought by some to prove, that they are not onely forgiven here: This man who was forgiven (say they) because he did not do as he should, therefore had he all his former debts laid to his charge: nothing is argumentative from a Parable, but what is from the scope and intention of it.

This is the time only wherein a sin may be forgiven, the foolish Virgins would have got oyl when it was too late, but then they ran up and down to no purpose; thus it is with all after death, then comes judgement; to day is the time of repentance, reconciliation, it is too late to cry out in hell, thou wilt be drunk, unclean no more.

Chap. VIII.

II. Imputation of Christs Righteousnesse.

TO impute in the general is to acknowledge that to be anothers which is not indeed his, and it is used either in a good or bad sense, so that it is no more than to account or reckon. It is the righteousnesse of Christ imputed to us, and accepted for us, by which we are judged righteous. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth righteousnesse without works, and again, That justifieth the ungodly. The Gospel brings in ejus imputationem personæ, but not justitiæ.

There is no appearing before God without the righteousnesse of Christ, Rivet. 19. 8.

If we be sinners by the imputation of Adams sin, then are we also righteous by the imputation of Christs righteousnesse, Rom. 5. 12, 19. because his disobedience is imputed to us. Peccatum Adami ita posteris omnibus imputatur, ac si omnes idem peccatum patravissent. Bellarm. de amiss. grat. & statu peccat. l.4. c.19.

There is some difference between the imputation of our sins to Christ, and his righteousnesse to us; for though our sin was by imputation his, as his righteousnesse by imputation ours, yet the manner of this imputation is not to be urged, as Bellarmine would stretch it by our tenets, as by Christs righteousnesse imputed to us, we are righteous truly though not inherently, yet Christ by our sins cannot be called a sinner truly, he was reckoned among sinners, and God laid our sinnes upon him, yet he cannot be called a sinner, because he took our sinnes upon him not to abide but vanquish them, he so took them on him that he took them away, but his righteousnesse is so made ours as that it is to abide in us. How can it stand with reason, that they by the Popes indulgences should be made partakers of the merits and good works one of another, and it be against reason, that we by the Ordinance of God should be made partakers of the merits and righteousnesse of Jesus Christ. Abbot against Bishop. Imputatio enim fit alicui Dei imputantis, idque ex voluntate sua & Filij, nihil imputat filio quam quod ipse suscepit, nempe peccata nostra ratione reatus, & pœnæ. Cum autem ab omni culpa sit immunis, Joh. 14. v. 30. Filij autem Diaboli sunt imitatione culpæ, non imputatione reatus, & salutari pœna, nullo modo potest dici filius Diaboli. Rivet, in Psal. 22. Vide plura ibid.

Object. The righteousnesse of Christ as it flows from him being God and man is infinite, but we need no infinite righteousnes, for we are not bound bound to do any more than Adam was, he was not bound to be infinitely righteous.

Answ. Christ must needs have infinite righteousnes to be a Mediatour, and to satisfie the justice of God, but for that righteousnesse which is communicated to us, it is so farre given as we need it, therefore some partake of it more, some less.

Three things will help us to judge whether we have Christs righteousnesse:

Marks to try whether we have Christs righteousnes. See Mr Cotton on 1 Joh. 5. 12. Serm. 7. p. 101. 102, 103.

1. If thou laist hold upon Christ by faith, and chooseſt him to be thy Lord, and adhereſt to him with all thy heart.

2. If thou loathe thy self in thy approaches to God, as the Publicane, Luke 18.

3. Where ever Christ puts on the soul imputed righteousnes, he fails not to give inherent, 1 Cor. 5. 11. Titus 3. 5, 6.

Means to get the righteousnes of Christ.

1. Labour to be thorowly convinced of thy own miserable condition, what a vile sinner thou art, Rev. 3. last end.

2. Study much the holinesse and purity of Gods nature, Job 42.

3. Study much Christs righteousnes. See Mr Burr. on Matth. 5. 6. 1. How beautiful a garment is the righteousnes of God. 2. Christs willingnes to have thee put it on by faith.

4. Put it on by faith, rely on Christ, venture thy soul on him.

Whether God sees sin in justified persons.

But the thing that David did displeased the Lord.

God is not so affected with the sins of his people (to whom he is reconciled) as to be an enemy to them for them, but he is angry with them for their sins, Exod. 4. 14. Deut. 9. 20. reproves them, Numb. 13. 8. and often punisheth them for them, 2 Kings 12. 10, 11, 14. 1 Cor. 11. 30, 32. they are said to be committed in his sight, Psalm 51. 4.

That Text Numb. 23. 21. is sufficiently vindicated from the Antinomians by Mr Gataker in his Treatise on the Text, and elsewhere. That place Hab. 1. 3. & 13. agrees with that in Numbers, Videt visione contemplationis, non visione comprobationis. He sees it because he beholds it, but not without displeasure and detestation, although he bear for a time.

God could bestow such a measure of grace on his people, and so guide them with his Spirit that they should not sin, but he doth not dispense his grace and Spirit in such a measure as to keep his people free from sin, for then they should have no use of the Lords Prayer to beg remission of sinnes. The Priests in the Old Testament offered first for their own sinnes, and then for the sinnes of others; and Christ taught the Apostles in the New Testament to pray, Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

* Vide eos Cicum. l. 2. quod Tenenda est Justificatio duplex personae alterius, altera facti. Justificatio personae est qua acceptum habet Deus hominem ad vitam aeternam, quae revocari aut rescindi nunquam potest. Una certe manente, dominat tamen Deus justificatorum & filiorum suorum saepe male, & usque adeo non justificat ut gravissimè nonnunquam puniat, & juvenda practipiat, usque mortem aliquando inflgat, 1 Cor. 11. 30. Servata interim misericordia illa aeterna, quae in Justificatione per Spiritum Sanctum consignata est. Abbot. in Thompſ. Def. Rel. cap. 16.

Acceptation of our Persons and Services. This is a fruit of our reconciliation, though little handled by Divines.

There is a twofold Acceptation in Scripture.

First, Of mens Persons, when God takes them into grace and favour, Isaiah 66. 2.

Secondly, Of their Services or Works, Isaiah 60. 5. Psalm 49. ult. Eccl. 9. 7. they come from a supernatural principle, are directed to a supernatural end: God had respect to Abel and to his offering.

Acceptation of their Persons consists in four things:

1. God specially honours them, Gen. 4. 7. Mal. 1. 8. and 2 Kings 3. 14. 2 Kings 4. 16.

2. He bound

2. He delights in them, and is well pleased with them, 2 Cor. 5. 9.
3. Shews love and favour to them, Jer. 31. 30. Rom. 9. 23. Cant. 8. 10.
4. Gives them free accesse to him, and denies them nothing, 1 Sam. 25. 35. Job 42. 8.

Chap. IX.

Whether one may be certain of his Justification.

The Scripture holds out assurance in reference,
1. To Faith, Heb. 10. 22.
2. Hope, Heb. 6. 11.
3. Love, 1 John 4. 17, 18.

Our knowing our Justification is called the first fruits of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 23. The witness of the Spirit, Rom. 8. 16. The sealing of the Spirit, Eph. 1. 14. The earnest of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 5. 5.

One may be certain,
First, Of his Justification, Isaiah 45. 24.
Secondly, Of his Adoption, Isaiah 63. 16.
Thirdly, Of his Perseverance in Gods favour unto the end, Psalm 23. 6.
Fourthly, That after this life he shall inherit eternall glory, 2 Cor. 5. 10. 1 John 3. 14.

There is a threefold certainty,
1. Moral, this consists in opinion and probability, and admits of fear.
2. Of evidence, either external of things particular and obvious which comes by the senses, or internal, by the understanding and energy of principles.
3. Of Faith, this certainty is the greatest and exceeds the evidence of the outward senses, or the knowledge and understanding of all principles, because that full assurance of faith relies on the Divine Promises. Faith is called ὑπόστασις, Heb. 11. 1. πληροφορία, Eph. 3. 12. and πληροφορία, plena certitudo, Heb. 10. 24. words that signifie a sure and certain establishment.

Assurance of Gods grace and favour to save a mans self in particular is wrought in the hearts of those that have it in truth, in three degrees.

Council. Trident. Sess. 6. can. 9. Facet catholica ecclesia, quando hanc fidem piorum omnium & ab omni pietate remotam fiduciam. See Mr Hildersam on Psal. 51. 7. Lect. 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127. and on v. 6. from Lect. 86, to 87. Mr Cartw. Rejoynder to the Marquesse of Worcester, pag. 139, to 251. Mr Burgesse of Grace and Assurance, Serm. 1. Serm. 5, 6, 7, 8. Holy Bayne sayes of himself in one of his Letters. I thank God, in Christ sustentable Discourse of the Christian Assurance of Heaven in his Remaining Works.

ven I have, and some little strength; suavities spirituall I taste not any. See Br Hall's Good Security or Comfortable

First, They apprehend a possibility of it, when the heart is convinced of sinne, and wounded with sinne, when the Law cometh in such power, the sinne reviveth and a man dyeth, that is, findeth himself dead or in a damnable estate, even then the promises of the Gospel being believed and acknowledged for first true, do cause the dejected Spirit to support it self with this thought, The Lord can forgive, can accept me, be a Saviour to me. There are mercies enough in him, merits enough in Christ, it is not impossible but that I even I also may be taken into grace. So the Leper came to our Saviour, saying, Lord if thou wilt thou canst make me clean, and the blind men being asked by Christ, Believe you that I can do this for you? said, Yea Lord; To which he replied, Be it unto you according to your faith.

Secondly, They apprehend a probability of it, not alone God can save me, but it may be also that he will, Who can tell but God will have mercy upon us that we perish not? as did the Ninevites; and Hezekiah did wish that Isaiah should cry mightily if so be that the Lord of Heaven would hearken to the words of Senacherib and deliver them. When Bartimeus the blind man came crying after Christ, at first he was perswaded that Christ could cure him, but then when he called him, and the people told him so much, he cast off his cloak and came running with more life, he began to be perswaded then, that like enough Christ meant him some good, and would restore him his sight.

Thirdly, They apprehend a Certainty, a mans soul concludeth, The Lord will pardon, will save, is reconciled, will deliver: God is my shepherd, I shall not want. Thus doth Assurance grow in the Saints from weak beginnings; first, he saith, I am sure God can save, and therefore I will run to him, then hopes God will help, and therefore I will continue seeking; lastly, I am sure God will save, therefore I will most confidently rely upon him.

We do not presse every man to believe that he is justified; but to believe 1. Assensu intellectus, to acknowledge that there is a sufficiency of merit in Christ for the justification of sinners. 2. Amplexu voluntatis: to accept, embrace, and cleave unto Jesus Christ. Master Woodbridge of Justification, chap. 4. Sect. 6. Habakkuk 3. ult. had assurance in the height, so had many of Gods worthies, Heb. 11. 13, 15. Psal. 48. This God is our God.

There is a three-fold Assurance:

1. Of Evidence, it is the duty of every Christian to attain this.
2. Of Affiance, which God doth accept of.
3. Of Obsignation, which God vouchsafes to some in bounty, whereby God doth so firmly seal the faith of some, as if he had told them that he did die in particular for them, this Assurance really excludes doubtings, and is given to men after long and fiery trials, when they have stood in an eminent way for Christ, as did the Apostles and Martyrs. Some have been so swallowed up with joy, that they have cryed out, Lord humble me, one to whom God revealed his Election could neither eat, drink, nor sleep for three dayes space, but cryed out, Laudetur Dominus, laudetur Dominus.

Gods people may have an infallible and setled Assurance of their being in the state of grace, and the continuance therein.

This may be proved,

1. From Scripture.

There is an expres promise to this purpose, Isa. 60. 16. See 2 Cor. 13. 5. Heb. 8. 11. 1 John 3. 2. to 15. & 2. 3. & 5. 13. 2 Ep. 14.

2. Reason.

Sententia communis est fere omnium Theologorum, non posse homines in hac vita habere certitudinem fidei de sua justificatione, nisi ex speciali, quibus Deus speciali revelatione hoc indicare dignatur. Bellarm. lib. 3. de Justificatione cap. 3. Sensum electionis nullum in hac vita Remonstrantes agnoscunt. Et qui agnoscunt: Qui non vivos, sed mortuos eligi statuunt, & non vivis sed mortuis ejus fructum tribuant oportet. Scultet. Orat. de certitudine & sensu electionis. Vide plura ibid. The Remonstrants hold, 1. That none truly regenerate can in this life be certain of his salvation without a special revelation. 2. That doubting of our salvation is laudable and profitable. The Scripture teacheth: 1. That all the faithfull may and ought to be certain of their salvation, and without a peculiar Revelation. 1 John 2. 3. Rom. 8. 16, 17. 2. That doubting is contrary to faith, and pernicious to man. Luke 24. 18 James 1. 6, 7, 8. The Papists grant an assurance of hope but not of faith. There can be no assurance of hope till there be an assurance of Faith, Hope works after Faith, we hope for those things which faith believes, and proportionably to the measure of our Faith. Faith Heb. 1. 1. is called the substance of things hoped for, that by which the things subsist which are hoped for as present.

1. From the nature of this estate. The state of grace is called life, Translated from death to life, and light, life and light cannot be long hidden. Again, a man is brought into this condition by a great change and alteration, and many times also sudden, great changes chiefly being sudden will be easily perceived. It is a passing from death to life, a translating from the power of darknesse into the Kingdome of his dear Son. The state of grace doth alwayes bring with it an earnest combate and conflict between two things extreamly contrary one to the other, flesh and Spirit, this battle cannot be fought in the heart, but the man will feell it. In the state of grace Christ dwelleth in the heart by faith, and by his Spirit, and the Word dwelleth there, the inhabiting of such guests is evident, a King goes not in secret with his train, nor the King of glory.

2. The Lord hath afforded such helps to his servants, as may bring them to the knowledge of their own estate, and their certain continuance therein. The Word of God layes down the general Proposition, All that turn shall live, all that believe believe shall be saved, the Sacraments bring the general promise home to each particular soul, being a particular Word, as much as if God should come and say to the child, If thou be not careless to seek Regeneration, and to come to me for it, I will surely regenerate and wash thee. The Lords Supper is an actual word too, as if God had said, If thou hast confessed thy sinnes with sorrow and dost labour to be perswaded of my will to pardon them in Christ, Be they pardoned, be they healed. The Spirit of God worketh with the Word and Sacraments to make both effectual and to stablish, strengthen and settle the soul that it shall not be moved. It sealeth them up to the day of Redemption, that is, not only marks them for Gods own, but as an earnest of their inheritance assures them, that by the power of the Spirit they shall continue so.

There is not an Article of the Faith which doth not necessarily carry with it a special Faith, I beleeve that God is my Creator and Christ my Redeemer.

We receive the Sacraments that we may be assured of Gods love and goodnesse to us, Rom. 4. 11. Bellarmine saith, Sacraments are seals on Gods part of our justification, and of his love to us; but all the Question is, Whether we have done our duties? for a man may think he putteth no impediment to sacramental grace, and yet do it: the Apostle bids us examine our selves. There are rich and precious promises concerning assurance of Gods favour, Psal. 50. 23. Mal. 4. 2. Psal. 85. 8. 9. and 97. 11. John 14. 15. Gods people, 1. Give thanks for faith and an inward Call, Psal. 103. 2, 3. Rom. 7. ult. and 8. lat. end. Gal. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 8. 2. They rejoyce with joy unspeakable, boldnesse ariseth in the heart from the assurance of Gods love, Eph. 2. 3. Rom 5. 1. The Papists run to the deceitfulnesse of mans heart, yet the Spirit of God searcheth our hearts, and makes us see what things are wrought in us, the heart of a godly man is in part sincere as well as deceitfull. They say Paul and Peter, and some special Saints might have it by immediate revelation, but Paul concludeth it Rom. 8. 38, 39. upon such arguments as are general to all the godly.

Lastly, We are bound to rejoyce in God and that alwayes, and that in tribulation, Rom. 14. 17. 1 Peter 1. 8. and when we are persecuted for well-doing, which no understanding can conceive to be possible, unless the soul be assured of life eternal, that is to say, that he both is and shall continue a true Christian. Can one be glad to suffer the hardest things for Christ, if he know not whether he intend to save or destroy him.

We should have confidence in prayer, 1 John 5. 14. Cry Abba Father, Rom. 8. 15. that is, speak it with confidence and courage, there should be perfect love to God, 1 John 4. 17, 18. The triumph of faith, Rom. 8. 35.

It is the proper work of the Spirit to settle the heart of a believer in the assurance of eternal happinesse, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Rom. 8. 16. 1 Cor. 2. 12. There is a three-fold work of the Spirit:

1. To reveal unto us the things of Christ, to enlighten the mind in the knowledg of them, John 16. 15.

2. The Spirit draws the image of these upon the soul, conforms our hearts to the whole tenour of the Gospel, in the work of Regeneration and progress of Sanctification.

3. It brings in evidence to our souls of our interest in these things, Gal. 1. 15, 16. Rom. 8. 16.

First, Constant sense of the guilt of sinne is not inconsistent with Gospel-assurance, Heb. 8. 11, 12, 13. sense of the guilt of sinne may stand with faith of the pardon of sinne, Psalm 31. 10, 14.

Secondly, Godly sorrow, humiliation for, and contritenesse of heart, is a necessary concomitant and preserver of assurance, Isaiah 51. 16.

Thirdly, Sense of the power of indwelling sinne, being perplexed with it, weary of it, and desirous to be delivered of it, may stand with assurance, Rom. 7. two last Verses.

Fourthly, Temptations, fears and doubts in perplexing and troubling the soul, if they prevaile not, may stand with Gospel-assurance.

It is difficult to attain Assurance:

1. From our own corrupt nature which enclines us to both extreams contrary to this, to presume or despair, Prov. 30.12. Psalm 36.2. Rev. 3.17.

2. From the world, our friends flatter us, and others load us with slanders and discourage us, as Jobs friends did him.

3. From Satan whose chief engine next to hinder our conversion, is to keep us from Assurance, and to delude us with false assurance, and he joyns with our unbelief to make us despair. See Eph. 6.16.

4. The nature of the thing it self is very difficult, because it is a matter of great largeness, one must forsake all sins and creatures, true and false graces are very like lukewarmness and the smoaky flax; there is a variableness of mind even in the converted, Gal. 5.17.

There are three means of difference, whereby presumption and the true sense of Gods love are distinguished.

First, Presumption grows from a carelesness of ones estate in that he examins it not by the Word; True Assurance follows the most serious examination of ones estate.

Secondly, Presumption goes without book, True Assurance rests it self upon the evidence of Gods Word.

Thirdly, Presumption imboldens to sinne, and makes careless of good duties; True Assurance encourageth to all goodness and withdraws the heart from sin.

The proper and natural fruits of Assurance:

1 John 4. 6, Psal. 89. 15. Such go about duties with comfort, resist sin, bear crosses patiently, Heb. 11. 17. He whom God loves, though he know it not is an happy man: He that knows it, knows himself to be happy.

1. An undervaluing of all things here below, Psalm 16.6,7. it is spoken of Christ who lived on the alms of his servants.

2. This will comfort us under all afflictions, Psalm 46. 4.

3. Our love will be the more abundant to God, Cant. 6.3.

4. It will make a man to prepare for glory, 1 John 3.3.

5. One will desire daily to be dissolved that he may be with Christ.

Motives to get Assurance:

First, Every wise man will labour to get a good thing as sure as he can. Many will question our title to eternal life; Satan follows believers with many objections and temptations, our hearts will joyn with him.

Secondly, When this is once got, the soul is possessed of the most invaluable treasure of this world.

To walk in the light of Gods countenance is a priviledg,

1. Of Honour.

2. Comfort, 1 John 3.20. Assurance is usefull in life and death, for doing and suffering.

Thirdly, The Devil most opposeth it and labours to keep men in the dark, that is an uncomfortable doubtfull condition, Isaiah 50. 11.

Fourthly, It may be attained in Gods ordinary dispensation, under the Gospel the whole Church had it, 1 Cor. 2.12.

Means to get and keep it:

I. To get it:

In times of desertion keep up faith, in times of communion keep up fear. Though we blame Papists for teaching to doubt, and making doubting a duty, yet we presse for an holy search, and a godly fear and trembling in the trying of our hearts, lest we be deceived. We should desire it not to excell others, nor out of wantonnesse, there is a luscious sweetnesse in Spiritual comfort. In order to more holiness. Matth. 5. 3. and greater communion with God. Assurance consists not in puncto, it may be greater or lesser. this world is not a place altogether for wages but work. One may have a clear Gospel-assurance, when he lies groveling on the earth in a sense of sin, as well as when he is lifted up to Heaven in a sense of love.

First, As doubts arise get them satisfied, and as soon as sinnes are committed get them pardoned, 1 John 2. 1. be frequent in proving thy self, the Word is the rule of this trial and examination, proving is a comparing our selves with the rule, the precepts and promises of Gods Word, to see whether we be such as they require or not; David saith, Commune with your own hearts upon your beds. 1 Cor. 11. 28. The necessity and utility of it will prove it fit to be done.

1. The

1. The neceſſity of it, becauſe of our exceeding aptneſs to deceive our ſelves and miſtake, and Satans diligence to beguile us. Elſe if we be falſe, we ſhall flatter our ſelves in vain, if true, we ſhall want the comfort of it. But often proving will chaſe out hypocriſie.

2. An humble, patient, ſelf-renouncing heart, is that frame of Spirit from which this Aſſurance will never long be abſent; never did God reveal himſelf more to any than Paul, who was vile in his own eyes, the leaſt of ſinners and greateſt of Saints.

3. Labour to get a high eſteem of this priviledg, think how happy thou ſhouldſt be if God were thine in Chriſt, Mat. 6. 21. Pſalm 4. 6. & 63. 3. & 80. 3. and beg this Aſſurance at Gods hands.

4. Labour to know faith above all other graces, all Aſſurance comes into the ſoul by faith; know the nature and object of faith, the promiſes the Lord hath made to imbolden thee; ſay with Paul, I know whom I have believed; renew acts of faith, and treaſure up experiences. Frequently meditate on Gods Commandments to believe, and on his faithfulneſs.

II. To keep it:

By what means Aſſurance may be held faſt and confirmed more and more.

1. For the Judgment.

2. For Practice.

The Judgment muſt be rectified in ſome things:

Firſt, It muſt be concluded as a truth, that a man may be the true child of God, and have true faith and holineſs in him, and yet not enjoy this Aſſurance, 1 John 5. 13. to believe in the name of the Son of God, and to know one hath life, are not one and the ſame thing.

Secondly, One muſt know that ſuch doubts and objections which are raiſed up againſt his being the child of God without ground out of the Word, are to be rejected and ſleighted.

Thirdly, One muſt be rightly informed of the difference betwixt the obedience which the Law and the Goſpel require, for both require obedience (faith eſtabliſheth the Law, and makes a man become a ſervant of righteouſneſs) but the difference is exceeding great, the Law exacteth compleat obedience, the Goſpel expecteth upright obedience.

2. For Practice:

Firſt, Renew Repentance often, God often cloatheth ſuch with Garments of joy as humble themſelves in aſhes, Bleſſed are the Mourners, for they ſhall be comforted.

Secondly, Study Sanctification, he muſt follow after holineſs that will ſee God, Pſalm 50. 23. Conſtantly exerciſe Grace, 1 John 4. 16.

Thirdly, Renounce all confidence in your own Righteouſneſs, and labour to be found in Chriſt, having his righteouſneſs, Rom. 4. 5.

Fourthly, Often and earneſtly beg for the Spirit of Adoption to ſeal thee up to the day of Redemption, and to reveal unto thee the things that are freely given thee of God.

Fifthly, Communicate thy fears and doubts to thy Brethren which be of underſtanding, and can conſider and obſerve the conſolations of God given them.

Fear the withdrawing of the light of Gods countenance, Hide not thy face from me. We ſhould be tender of Gods honour. Chriſt abode in his Fathers love, by being zealous of his glory. The zeal of thy houſe hath conſumed me, Joſhuah 7. 9.

Stand for his truths, 2 Tim. 2. 12, 13. Prize every manifeſtation of the love of God, Lift up the light of thy countenance upon us, Luk. 17. 5. Take heed of nouriſhing jealouſie and ſuſpitions of God in your hearts, Jer. 29. 11. Take heed of ſinning preſumptuouſly. Be conſtant with God, 1 Chron. 28. 17.

Whether faith alone doth justifie.

FAith obtains this great benefit of Justification, because it is the receiving grace, John 1. 11, 12.

It is,

1. For Gods glory, we renounce our selves and give all to Christ, 2 Thess. 1. 11, 12.

2. For our comfort, it is an humble and sure claime.

It is not an empty faith, but that which works by love, Gal. 5. 6. all graces that are true will be active and lively, every grace hath its operation, 1 Thess. 1. 3.

See Mr Pemble of Justif. Sect. 2. cap. 3. pag. 42, 43, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55.

It is well enough known, how great dispute there is between them that profess the Reformation and the Church of Rome, whether a man be justified before God in Christ, by faith alone, or by faith and works both, speaking of actual righteousnes; or, if we speak of habituall righteousnes, by faith and love. Mr Thorndike of the Covenant of grace, chap. 1.

Satis constat omnem religionem à vera religione alienam, juxta statuere Justificationem hominis coram Deo fieri secundum opera. Hinc videre mihi videor mysterium doctrinæ Arminianæ in negotio justificationis. Nam licet fortè dixerint nos justificari fide, non autem ex operibus, tamen fidem istam non accipiunt relativè ut solent nostri sed formaliter ut qualitas est sive ut opus est. Nostra sententia est, cùm dicimus fide justificari hominem, sola Dei gratia & propter obedientiam Christi justificari hominem. Per fidem enim intelligimus obedientiam Christi fide apprehensam. Sed quia dicimus justificationem istam nemini contingere nisi credat; ideo dicimus hominem justificari fide sine operibus: Hoc est, justificari hominem justitia imputata, non inhærente. At Arminiani nostri sicut Sociniani atque etiam Pontificii hactenus concordant justificari hominem fide, eumquam sanctitate homini inhærente. Twiss. contra Corvin. c. 9. Sect. 1.

God justifies judicially, Rom. 8. 33. Christs blood meritoriously, Faith instrumentally, Works declaratively, Rom. 3. 24, 28. Rom. 4. 5. Marke 5. 36. Luke 8. 50. Acts 13, 39.

The Papists, Socinians and Remonstrants all acknowledge Faith to justifie, but by it they mean Obedience to Gods Commandements, and so make it a Worke, and not consider it as an instrument receiving Christ and his promise.

A Papist, a Socinian, a Protestant saith, We are justified by faith, but dispositivè, saith the Papist, conditionaliter, saith the Socinian, applicativè, saith the Protestant.

By Instrumentum we mean no more than medium, whereby the soul receiveth, the Gospel righteousnes tendred unto it. See Mr Burgesses 2d part of Justif. Serm. 23, 24. Neque propriè Fides est id (ut ait Martyr*) quod nos justificat, sed quo* Justificamur, hoc est, Instrumentum quo Christum apprehendimus. P. Baro. De Fide.

* Fides salutaris pro qualitate sumpta non justificat nec ratione propriæ dignitatis suæ & meriti, sed tantum quam instrumentum recipiens & applicans nobis imputatam Christi justitiam. Rivet. Cathol. orthod. Down of Justif. lib. 1. cap. 2.

Faith justifieth not as a quality * or habit in us, as the Papists teach, Ipsa fides censetur esse justitia, for so it is a part of Sanctification, but as it is the instrument and hand to receive Christ, who is our righteousnes, much les as it is an act, as Socinus and his followers teach, as though ad movendum ipsum credere, did properly justifie, if we should be justified by it as it is an act, then we should be justified by our works, and we should be no longer justified actually than we do actually believe, and so there should be an intercision of Justification so oft as there is an intermission of the act of faith, but Justification is a continued act.

Bertius being a Protestant fell away unto Popery, and when he came to France, and made a Renuntiation of his former Faith, and shewed the reasons of his Conversion to the Popish Faith, he tells us in his Printed Oration, that the first step to that Conversion, was the knowledg of, and contending for that Doctrine, that Faith as an Act justifies. Mr Bridge on 1 Peter 5. 10.

Doctor Heylin in his Theologia Veterum, Article 2d pag. 105. faith, suffice it, that that as God was pleased to make choice of faith, so he made choice not of the habit, or the object, but the act of faith, to be imputed to us for our justification. He quotes Gen. 11. 6. Rom. 4. 3, 5. 'Tis the τὸ Credere, (saith he) the very act of faith it self, which God requireth of us for our Justification, instead of all the works of the Law.

We are justified only by faith, for what else in Scripture mean those many negatives, not by works, Rom. 9. 11. Gal. 2. 16. Titus 3. 5. not of works, Rom. 11. 6. Ephes. 2. 9. not according to works, 2 Tim. 1. 19. without works, Rom. 4. 6. not through the Law, Rom. 4. 13. not by the works of the Law, Rom. 3. 20. without the Law, Rom. 3. 27. not but by faith, Gal. 2. 16.

How can a man be justified by his works, when he himself must be just before the work can be, Gen. 4. 4. Good works make not a man good, but a good man makes a work good, and shall that work which a man made good return again and make the man good? Perkins on Heb. 11.

These two likewise cannot be compounded into one. The scope of the Epistle to the Galatians, is to prove that these cannot be mingled. We are justified by faith alone, that it might be of grace, Rom. 4. 16.

1. That so God may have all the glory of our salvation, Ephes. 2. 10.

2. That we might be continually dependant upon him, our grace depends on the grace in God, as the light in the air on that in the Sun.

3. That God may have the honour of distinguishing between us and them that perish.

When we say, Faith alone doth justifie, we do not mean fidem solitariam, that faith which is alone; neither do we in construction joyn sola with fides the subject, but with Justification the predicate, meaning that true faith though it be not alone, yet it doth justifie alone, even as the eye, though in respect of being it is not alone, yet in respect of seeing, unto which no other member doth concurre with it, it being the only instrument of that faculty, it is truly said to see alone; so faith though in respect of the being thereof it is not alone, yet in respect of justifying, unto which act no other grace doth concur with it, it being the only instrument of apprehending and receiving Christ, is truely said to justifie alone. Nihil est in Scriptura frequentius, quam nos justificari fide, gratis, sine operibus legis, ex gratia, non ex propria justitia. Riverus ubi supra. Bp Downh. of Justification, lib. 6. cap. 6.

See more there. Fides qua justificat, works by love, but quatenus justificat, it relies onely on the righteousnesse of Christ. Fides justificat separatim, non separata, the person which is justified is full of charity.

When we say by faith onely, this opposeth all other graces of the same order, but not the merits of Christ, or the efficacy of Gods grace, the Apostle Rom. 4. makes it all one, to prove a man justified by grace, Christ, and by faith. It is to be considered as alone in the act of Justification, but not in the subject justified, therefore that is a reproach cast on Protestants to call them Solifidians. What the judgment of the Catholicks before the Councel of Trent was in this matter of Justification, Bp Carl. proves out of Contarenus. Scripsit librum de justificatione Gasper Contarenus, Cardinalis, vir doctus, & pius, postquam jam Lutherus, aliique suam sententiam de hac re declarassent, suo libro testatur Protestantes & Catholicos in hac re convenire. Recte Contarenus, qui, quum ex industria Protestantium doctrinam examinasset nihil in ea invenisse se profitetur, quod à Catholicorum sententia dissentiret. At in sententia de justificatione non convenit Protestantibus cum Concilio Tridentino, non igitur erat illud Concilium conventus Catholicorum. D. Carl. Conf. Eccles. Cathol. cons Trid. de fid. Justif. c. 6.

We are said to be justified by faith, to live by it, to be saved by it, to have it imputed unto us for righteousnes: all which is to be understood not principally, immediately, meritoriously in regard of any worth or dignity of it, or efficaciously in regard of any power or efficacy in it self, but mediately, subserviently, organically, as it is a means to apprehend Christ his satisfaction and his sufferings, by the price and merit whereof we are justified, saved, and stand as righteous in Gods sight, and as it hath a special respect and relation thereto. Mr Gataker against Saltmarsh, Shadows without Substance, pag 56.

In the Covenant of Works, Works are considered as in themselves performed by the parties to be justified and in reference unto ought done, or to be done for them Id. ibid.

by

by any other, whereas in the Covenant of grace, Faith is required and considered, not as a work barely done by us, but as an instrument or mean whereby Christ is apprehended and received, in whom is found, and by whom that is done, whereby Gods justice is satisfied, and life eternal meritoriously procured for us, that which carrieth the power and efficacy of all home to Christ.

The Papists urge 1 Cor. 13. 13. to prove that we are justified by charity, because it is a better grace than faith.

First, It is not a better grace simply but in some respects.

Secondly, It doth not follow that it therefore justifieth, though it were the better grace.

Thirdly, God hath purposely chosen this begging grace to justifie, that he may have all the glory.

Object. Faith is a Work, therefore if we be justified by Faith, then by Works.

Occurrendum Pontificijs, qui hinc nos operibus justificari tradunt, quod fide qua opus est justificamur.

Answ. With Faith we must joyn the object of it, viz. Christ, Fides justificat non absolutè, sed relativè &c. cum objecto, non efficiendo sed afficiendo & applicando. The Scripture saith, We are justified by faith, and through faith, but never for faith, or because of our faith, per fidem, ex fide, non propter fidem. We can only be justified by that righteousness which is universal and compleat, faith is a partial righteousness, Phil. 3. 9. and as imperfect as other graces.

Nam primum est perversum ad justitiam fidei, pro subjecto Christum : in se manum eamque mancam & ineptam ad operis aliquid faciendum dicamus, Nos ditasse, quod infiniti pretij Margaritam acceperit. Deinde fides est ita Dei opus ut nostrum non sit, utpote in quo Deus non cooperatur, sed meré Deum operatum patiatur : cum in aliis bonis operibus Deus ita operetur, ut nostra animæ facultates ad operationem excludantur. Cartw. in Harmon. Evang. Faith justifies instrumentally, correlatively, not because of any worth in it, but because of the excellency of Christ, not dispositively by being the root of other graces, so the Papists affirm, but then it would still be in the way of a work. Quid dicam de insano Pauli Sarmo & fabula Socinianis qui justificationem dicunt esse metaphoricam esse insaniunt, Christumque mediatorem ejusdem justificationis modis tollunt : & forensitatem tantummodo ob munus Regium & Propheticum, non autem sacerdotale asserunt illisque non promerendo, sed prædicando & confirmando salutem peperisse. Creguti Bivrim de Justificatione.

Object. Gal. 2. 16. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the Law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ.

Answ. But is adversative, that is, by faith alone. 2. Only faith receives Christ and a promise.

Faith justifies by the meer ordination of God, that on the receiving of Christ, or resting on him we shall be justified. The proper act of faith which justifieth it, is, the relying on Christ for pardon of sinne.

To justifie doth not flow from any act of grace, because of the Dignity and Excellency of that act, But because of the peculiar nature, that it doth receive and apply, Therefore to receive Christ and to believe in him is all one, and faith is alwayes opposed to works.

Bellarmine objects, That to apply is a work or action; It is true, it is a Grammatical action, but a predicamental passion. But saith Bellarmine, Love layeth hold on Christ, and by love we are made one, but yet there is a difference; love makes us one with Christ extra mittendo, faith intra mittendo, and besides love joyneth us to Christ after we are made one by faith, so that it cannot justifie us.

See Mr Down of Reconcil. of Paul and James. Dr Manton on James 2. 24.

Paul and James do not contradict one another; Paul sheweth what is that which justifieth, and James sheweth what kind of faith justifieth, viz. a lively effectual faith. James sheweth that that faith justifieth Quæ viva, Paul sheweth that it doth not justifie Quæ viva, which is a great difference though the Remonstrants scoffe at such a nicety. Who would give a Lemmon-paring for the difference?

There is a justification:

1. Ad Regnum, which brings one into the state of Grace, of which Paul speaks. 2. In Regno, Abraham was justified by works, and he was called the friend of God, of that James speaks.

As

As sinners we are meerly justified by faith, as guilty, we are justified by works from the guilt of sinne and hypocrisie.

Whether Sanctification precede Justification.

Bishop Downame in his Appendix to the Covenant of Grace, doth oppose my worthy Tutor Mr Pemble for holding this opinion, but perhaps a distinction may solve all.

Sanctification is of the same time with Justification, but Justification doth in order of nature go before it, for all the graces of Sanctification are bestowed on a man as in Christ, Eph. 1.3. so one. Mr Pemble clears himself by a distinction of Justification in foro Dei, and in foro conscientia.

As Sanctification is taken for the act of the holy Ghost working holinesse into us, so it goes before Faith and Justification, so the Apostle puts it before justifying, saying 1 Cor. 16. 21. But ye are sanctified, justified; but as it is taken for the exercise of holinesse in regard of amendment of heart and life, so it follows justification in nature, but it is joyned with it in time. The Apostle Romans 8. 30. placeth Vocation before Justification, which Vocation is the same thing with the first Sanctification or Regeneration. See Acts 26. 18.

CHAP. XI.

Of Sanctification.

HAving spoken of the relative Change, or of our state in Adoption, Justification, I shall now speak of the moral Change of our Persons and Qualities in Sanctification.

Although we distinguish between Justification and Sanctification, yet we acknowledge that they are inseparable, and that one doth necessarily follow the other.

Many Divines make Sanctification, Regeneration, Conversion, Repentance, and inward calling Synonyma.

It is taken

1. More largely for the whole entire work of grace on the heart, so it is the same with conversion and regeneration, 2 Thess. 2. 13.

2. More strictly for that part of the work of grace which follows faith and our union with Christ, 1 Cor. 1. 30. 1 Thess. 4. 2.

To sanctifie sometimes signifies

First, To acknowledge the holinesse of a thing, so God is said to sanctifie himself, and his own name, or to use it according to its holinesse: so we are said to sanctifie the Lord and the Sabbath-day, that is, use it holily.

Secondly, To make holy, so a person or thing may be said to be made holy three wayes:

1. When it is separated from a common use.

2. When it is devoted to God, made peculiar to him, so one might sanctifie a house or beast.

3. When it is cleansed and purged from all filthinesse and naughtinesse.

In the two first senses it is opposed to common and prophane, in the last to unclean in Scripture, such are goods, houses, the Temple.

God made man a holy creature, he was peculiarly devoted to Gods service, had the habits of holinesse, and the exercise of them, 1 John 3. 9. When man fell the Devil defiled this Temple, God departed from us, he again cleanseth away this filth, and repaireth his Image in us.

What Sanctification is.

Some describe it thus:

It is the grace of God dwelling in us, by which we are inabled to live a holy life.

It is a supernatural work of Gods Spirit, whereby the soul and body of a believer are turned to God, devoted to him, and the Image of God repaired in all the powers and faculties of the soul.

It is a work of the Spirit of God, whereby the whole man is renewed after the Image of God, the habits of all grace infused, and the man inabled to die to sinne and live to righteousnesse.

It is a resolution of will and endeavour of life to please God in all things, springing from the consideration of Gods love in Christ to mankind revealed in the Gospel.

Sanctification is a continued work of the Spirit flowing from Christ as the Head, purging a man from the image of Adam, and by degrees conforming us to the image of Christ.

The Son gave himself in pretium, the holy Ghost gave himself in arrhabonem, the Father reserveth himself in præmium. Bish. Buckeridge on Psal. 95. 6. * Loc. Commun. Class. 1. c. 11.

First, It is an act of the Spirit. The special work of the Father is Creation, of the Sonne Redemption, of the holy Ghost Sanctification. The Father proposed and plotted the work of Reconciliation. Christ undertook the service, but the Spirit is the Unction that takes away all enmity that is within us. The Spirit dwels in the Saints, 2 Tim. 1. 14. John 14. 17. 1 Peter 4. 14, 18, 23. John 14. 16. & 16. 14. and in their persons, but principally in their souls, he counsels the understanding, comforts the conscience, quickens the affections, he works, preserves and excites grace in them, and also dwels in their bodies, 1 Cor. 6. 19.

Some dislike that passage of Luther *, Habitat ergo verus Spiritus in credentibus non tantum per dona, sed quoad substantiam, though others of our Divines follow him. The Spirit of God is the efficient cause of Sanctification. The sanctified are called such as are in the Spirit, and walk in the Spirit, Gal. 5. 16. If we mortifie the deeds of the flesh by the Spirit we shall live. If any be led by the Spirit he is the Son of God, and if any have not the Spirit he is none of his, Ezek. 36. 27. The holy Ghost useth the word of God, the Doctrine of the Gospel as its immediate instrument to work this holinesse of heart and life, Gal. 3. 2. Christ sends his Spirit that by the Word works faith and all graces. An act of the Spirit flowing from Christ as the Head, common works of the Spirit flow not from Christ as the Head, John 1. 16. Colos. 1. 19. Christ is the common treasury of all that grace God ever intended to bestow, 1 John 2. 20. the intendment of union is communication.

They say it may be thus evidenced,

1. A possibili, he may for ever abide in them, and they urge chiefly that place Rom. 8. 11. for such a dwelling of the Spirit in the Saints.

2. A type, he dwelt between the Cherubims.

3. A testimonio, 1 Cor. 3. 16.

But that place 1 Cor. 12. 9. seems to hold forth, that Christ dwels in his people virtually and operatively by his gifts, graces, comforts.

See Mr Baxters Answ. to Tolvinus, Sect. 22.

Some thus distinguish between the Spirits dwelling in the humane nature of Christ, and in the Saints:

1. He dwels in Christ (say they) by a connatural right, Esay 59. ult. Matth. 3. ult. 1 John 3. ult. Christus ut homo per gratiam unionis est filius Dei naturalis, say the Schoolmen, Heb. 1. 1. in the Saints by a derivative right.

2. He dwels in Christ immediately, Col. 2. 9. in us mediately.

3. He dwels in Christ by way of procession or emanation, Esay 11. 2. John 15. last end. in us by way of mission or donation, 1 John 3. ult.

4. It dwels in Christ necessariò, in us liberè.

5. It dwels not in Christ as vinculum unionis, but in us.

6. It dwels in Christ without measure, Esay 11. 2. John 3. 34. in us by measure.

Secondly, A continued work of the Spirit, to distinguish it from Vocation, Conversion, Regeneration; it is styled Vocation, because it is wrought by a heavenly Call;

Call; Converſion, becauſe it is the change of a mans utmoſt end; Regeneration, becauſe one receives a new Nature and new Principles of action. The carrying on of this work in blotting out the image of old Adam, and by degrees introducing the image of Chriſt is ſanctification, 2 *Cor.*7.1. therefore we muſt have ſupplies of the Spirit, Pſalm 92. 10

Sanctification is anſwerable to original corruption, and intended by the Lord to be a Plaiſter as broad as the ſore. That was not one ſinne, but a ſin that had all ſin: ſo this is not one diſtinct grace, but a grace that comprehends all grace, therefore called the new creature or creation, 2 Cor. 5. 17. new creature to ſignifie the power that effects it. 2. To note the entireneſſe of the work, new all over.

It is called the new man in oppoſition to the old man, becauſe it makes us new, Col. 3. 10. changing from the natural filthineſſe of ſinne to the righteouſneſſe and holineſſe whereof we were deprived by the fall of Adam, and to note the author of it, which is the Spirit of God working it in us, 1 Peter 1.2. called the holy Spirit, becauſe he is ſo in himſelf, and works holineſſe in us, the Divine Nature, 2 Peter 1.4. becauſe it is a reſemblance of that perfection which is in God, and the Image of God for the ſame cauſe, becauſe it maketh us in ſome degree like unto him.

Phil.1.19. There muſt be an exerciſe of the habits, *Gal.*5.25. There is a total change of the whole man, 1 Theſſ. 5.23. the Mind, Rom. 12.2. Spirit, Ezek. 36.26. Heart, Deut. 10. 26. Conſcience, Heb 9.14. Will, Phil. 2.13. Affections, *Gal.*5.24. The body it ſelf, *Col.*2 11. *Rom.*6.12. Chriſt is our Sanctification, 1 *Cor.*1.30. three ſeveral wayes: 1. Meritoriouſly, he hath purchaſed it from God by his being an offering for all our defilement. 2. As he is the exemplar or copy of it, 1 Pet. 2.21,22. 3. He is by his Spirit the efficient cauſe, that brings into the ſoul the vertue of his Death to kill ſinne, and of his Reſurrection. whereby his life is communicated to us, *Epheſ.*5.26. Acts 5.31. The Spirit of grace is the Spirit of Chriſt as well as of the Father.

The moving cauſe is the conſideration of the love of Chriſt to mankind revealed in the Goſpel, the matter of it, a reſolution and conſtant endeavour to know and do the whole will of God revealed in his Word, Pſalm 119. 30 & 73. 10. the form a conformity to Gods Law or whole will ſo revealed, Pſalm 119. the end principal to glorifie and pleaſe God, ſecondary to attain his favour and eternal happineſſe. The extent muſt be in all things, the ſubject of it is the whole man, the whole ſoul and body. Sanctification reacheth to the frame of his heart. David hid the Law of God in his heart, the inward man, therefore called a New-Creature; and outward Converſation, therefore called a living to God, 1 Theſſ 5.23.

The patern to which this holineſſe muſt be conformed is Gods Image Rom. 8.29. *Eph.*4.23,24.

The exerciſe of Sanctification conſiſts,

1. In the mortifying of ſinne, Rom. 8.13.
2. In the practice of poſitive holineſſe, Rom. 6.4.

The Parts of it are two, Mortifying and Crucifying the old man with its luſts and affections, quickning the new man, bringing forth the fruit of the Spirit.

The Properties of it:

1. It is ſincere.
2. Conſtant; therefore it is called A walking in the way of the Lord.
3. Imperfect here.
4. Grows and proceeds toward perfection.

The grace of the Goſpel teacheth men to live godly, Titus 2. 12.

1. In reſpect of God it honours him, Matth. 5. 16.
2. In reſpect of our ſelves, it's the evidence of the grace of God in our hearts, 2 Peter 1. 5. compared with verſ. 10. 1 John 2. 6.
3. In reſpect of the world:
   1. To convince men, 1 Peter 2. 15. & 3. 16.
   2. To convert them, 1 Peter 3. 1.
4. In reſpect of the godly:
   1. For their mutual conſolation, Pſalm 122. 1.
   2. For their edification, Heb. 10. 24.

A godly life is distinguished,

First, From the false goodnesse of the Hypocrite, for that is willing sometimes to do Gods will, not with such a seeled will as to endeavour it, and willing in some things, not in all things to do Gods will. The motive to that is onely love of himself or some outward thing.

Secondly, From the perfect goodnesse which was required in Adam in the Covenant of works, for that was not onely a will and endeavour to Know and Do, but an actual Knowing and Doing. They differ as much as shooting at the Mark and hitting it.

There are none so potent Arguments to holinesse as from an Evangelical consideration.

Christ came to destroy sinne, 1 John 3. 5,8. the incarnation of Christ is called the mystery of godlinesse, 1 Tim. 4. 16. 1 Cor. 15. 49. there is no stronger argument to keep our vessels pure, then to consideration, that Christ took our nature into the union of the God-head, 1 Cor. 6. 8. Christs whole conversation was a patern of holinesse, 1 John 2. 6. his passion is a strong inducement to holinesse,

1. He was a great example of obedience in his sufferings, Phil. 2. 8.

2. Shew'd great love in his passion, 2 Cor. 5. 14. if we consider also the efficacy and end of his sufferings, Heb. 9. 12. Titus 2. 14. Rom. 14. 9. 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. the Institutions and Ordinances were appointed to promote holinesse, the Ministry of the Word, Ephes. 4. 11, 12, 13. Coloss. 1. 28. the Sacraments, Baptism, there we covenant to lead a holy life, 1 Peter 3. 21. in the Lords Supper we celebrate the death of Christ, 1 Cor. 11. whereby faith, love and thankfulnesse are awakened. Christs Resurrection, Ascension and Intercession also are usefull to promote holinesse, Rom. 6. 4, 5. Col. 3. 1. John 17. 17, 23. his pouring out the Spirit of grace on his people, Psalm 68. 18. Zech. 12. 10 Christs coming to judgement is a great argument to holinesse, Acts 17. 30, 31. 2 Cor. 5. 10, 11. 2 Peter 3, from verse 11, to 14. All the Offices of Christ tend to holinesse, his Priestly Office, Heb. 4. 14, 15 his Prophetical Office, he teacheth his people by his Spirit, Acts 10. 22. his Regal Office, therefore he is called the King of Saints, Revel. 15. 3. The priviledges and benefits of the Gospel are motives to holinesse,

1. Of their Redemption, 1 Peter 1. 18.

2. Of Justification, Psalm 130. 4. of Adoption, Heb. 12. 9. 1 Peter 1. 14. the great and precious promises, Heb. 10. 36.

See Dr Willet on Exod. 30. 34.

Purity consists in freedom from mixture with that which is of a baser nature, as when silver is mixed with lead or drosse it is impure.

All godly men must be pure, Titus 1. 15. The Apostle Paul describes godly men by this Epithete; Our Saviour telleth his Apostles, Now are you clean, or pure (all is one) by the word which I have spoken unto you, John 15. 3. Matth. 5 8. Psalm 24. 4. 2 Cor. 7. 1. He that hath this hope purifieth himself, as he is pure.

See the 23th Sermon at Giles in the Fields, of Holinesse.

Impuritas uniuscujusque rei consistit in hoc, quod rebus vilioribus immiscetur. Non enim dicitur argentum esse impurum ex permixtione auri, per quam melius redditur, sed ex permixtione plumbi, vel stanni Aquinas 2a, 2ae. Quæst. 7. Art. 2.

Reason 1. Because he hath to do with a God of pure eyes which can abide no iniquity nor unclean thing, and therefore one must be pure, else he cannot possibly be accepted with him, nor have any of his services favourably entertained.

Secondly, The Lord Jesus by his Spirit and Word, and by faith doth dwell in the heart of his people; now Faith, the Word and Spirit, will purifie, all these are clean and pure things, of a cleansing and purging nature, therefore he in whom they be must be pure. Purity or being purged is opposed to foulnesse and uncleanesse. Uncleanesse is a deformity cast upon a thing through the cleaving to it of some thing worse and baser than it self. Sinne is the uncleanesse of the soul which defiles it, and makes it deformed and unpleasing to God, so that he can take no delight in it, and admit it into any ſociety and familiarity with himſelf; Purity is a freedom from ſinne, becauſe that is the onely thing which can pollute the ſoul.

There is a double freedom from ſinne, one when it is not at all in the ſoul, nor no ſpots or ſtain of it, and ſo no man is pure; another when no uncleanneſſe is ſuffered to remain, but is waſhed off and purged away by the application of the bloud of Chriſt, and the water of true repentance, ſo that no ſtain of ſinne is there allowed or ſuffered to reſt upon the ſoul, and this is the purity meant, 2 Samuel 22. 27. when a man is carefull to obſerve, lament, confeſſe, reſiſt, crave pardon of, and ſtrive againſt all the ſinfull and corrupt fruits of his evil and naughty nature which cannot be altogether repreſſed.

Puritan in the mouth of a Drunkard doth mean a ſober man, in the mouth of an Arminian it means an Orthodox man, in the mouth of a Papiſt it is a Proteſtant, and ſo it is ſpoken to ſhame a man out of all Religion.

How far this purity muſt extend:

First, To the heart, which Solomon wiſheth a man to keep with all diligence, and of which the Apoſtle ſaith, That faith purifieth the heart, becauſe God ſearcheth the heart, and his pure eyes do principally look unto the inſide.

Secondly, To the Tongue likewiſe; Solomon ſaith of the pure, His words are pure.

Thirdly, To the Actions, Pſalm 24. 4.

It hath been an old cuſtom of the world to hate and malign the righteous, to reproach them, to call them Puritans, though very Heathens have acknowledged that there is no Religion without purity. Cicero, Horace and others, deſcribing a man that is religious, ſay, that he is an entire man, a man pure from ſinne. Mr Fenner on Joh. 3. 20. See Mr Burrh. on Hoſ. 2. 5. pag. 307. and Mr Baxters Preface to the Grotian Religion diſcovered. Primus uſus & abuſus hujus appellationis fuit in Anglia: ſed tantum reſpiciebat illos qui religionis quaſdam ceremonias & hierarchiæ Eccleſiaſticæ iſtic expurgari optabant. Poſtea tradudta eſt hæc appellatio ad omnes alias Eccleſias extra Angliam, quibus non uſum fuit ceremoniis & hierarchiam retinere. Voet. Sel. Theol. Diſputat. pars tertia De Theologia practica. Vide plura ibid.

He then is a pure man which doth with ſuch due care oppoſe and reſiſt the ſinfulneſſe of his nature, that either it doth not break forth into ſinfull thoughts, words and deeds, or if it do, he labours preſently to purge himſelf by confeſſing and bewailing the ſame before God, by humble begging of pardon, by renewing his purpoſes and reſolutions of amendment, and by labouring to reſt upon the bloud and merits of Chriſt for pardon. He that doth this is altogether as free from ſinne in Gods account, as if he had not ſinned, God eſteeming him as he is in Chriſt.

Grace in Scripture is ſet forth under divers notions:

First, It is put for the free favour and kindneſſe of God, this is the firſt grace, Gen. 6. 8. Rom. 5. 15, 17, 20, 21. this is oppoſed firſt to the wrath or diſpleaſure of God, Rom. 1. 7, 18. And ſecondly, to mans deſert, Rom. 11. 6. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

Secondly, It is put for the work of his grace in us, all the fruits of the Spirit, 2 Peter 3. ult. faith, love, humility; this is oppoſed to our corruptions, natural luſts, faith to unbelief.

Thirdly, For the actual preſence and aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit to carry us thorow any duty, to excite the graces that are in us, 1 Cor. 15. 10. Col. 1. ult. This is oppoſed to our power, not onely natural, but that grace which we have received.

Fourthly, For that bleſſed and happy condition of a believer who hath Gods favour, his grace, and the aſſiſtance of his Spirit, Rom. 5. 2. ſo it is oppoſed to our miſerable condition by nature.

Fifthly, For the Goſpel the doctrine of grace, Acts 20. 32. Heb. 13. 9. Tit. 2. 11. ſo grace is oppoſed to the Law, John 1. 16. Rom. 6. 14.

Grace in Scripture moſt frequently ſignifies the free favour of God, Luke 1. 30. ſo we are ſaid to be juſtified and ſaved by the grace of God, that is, by the free favour of God.

Secondly, It is taken for a gift or all kind of gifts, which are given out of grace and and favour, whether they belong to eternal life, as faith, hope and charity, and the vertues joyned with them, or not, as the gifts of tongues, miracles, and others, 1 Cor. 12. 4. Ephes. 4 7. 1 Peter 4. 10. And in this signification the Schoolmen are wont still to take it, and not in the other, viz. for gifts and qualities infused into the soul, by which we work good. Which is the cause why they erre toto Cœlo, when they interpret Scriptures, in which we are said to be justified and saved by the grace of God. For they ascribe justification to qualities infused, especially faith and charity, and by consequent also to the fruits of them, viz. good works. Although Aquinas sometime being overcome with the plain places of Scripture, by the name of grace understands the free mercy of God. See Strangius de voluntate & actionibus Dei circa peccatum l. 11. *c.*27. of the distinction of grace, and of habitual and actual grace.

The Excellency of the work of Sanctification:

There is, 1. A beauty in holinesse, 1. Every grace is an ornament, 1 Pet. 3.4. See Psal. 45.13, 14, 16. Ezek. 8.14. 2. Holinesse is called a new Creation, Eph. 4.24. A Resurrection, Ephes. 4.4. 3. Sinne is a deformity, 2 Pet. 3.14. filthinesse it self, 2 Cor. 7.1. Ephes. 5.27. Corruptio optimi pessima, sinne is not only malum triste, but turpe. 2. This beauty of holinesse consists in four things; 1. It is a conformity to the Image of God, 2 Cor. 3.18. It is bonum Dei excedens ordinem naturæ. Aquinas. 2. Beauty consists in indeficiency when no part is wanting, 1 Thess. 5.23. 2 Tim. 3.17. they are in parts perfect, as children, though not in degree. 3. Beauty consists in a symmetry, a due proportion of parts, the understanding guides the man, the will submits to the dictates of an enlightned understanding, the affections are subject to the command of reason. John 11.33. 4. There is a lustre in beauty, the Spirit of grace is called the oyl of gladnesse, Psal. 45.7. because it makes the face to shine. Sincerity is the harmony, and zeal the lustre or varnish of all graces, Psal. 42.11. 3. There is that beauty in holinesse which is not to be found in any thing here below, 1. It is in the inward man, 1 Pet. 3.3. Absolom though outwardly beautifull was inwardly deformed. 2. This commends a man to God, 1 Pet. 3.3, 4. 3. All other beauty will decay by sicknesse or old-age, nor this, Prov. 31.30. 4. This prepares you for the wedding; the time of this life is the time of Espousals, the Marriage shall be in the life to come, Revel. 19. 7.

Grace is

First, Necessary to happinesse:

1. To free from the wrath of God and everlasting damnation, John 3.17.

2. To fit one to enjoy God, John 3. 6.

Secondly, A solid and substantial good; there is a real worth in it, Prov. 8.21.

Thirdly, A permanent and stable good, grace cannot be lost, nor the advantages of it, the love and favour of God and eternal life.

Reasons, 1. Because holinesse is the Lords own excellency, it is his great Attribute, He is glorious in holinesse; The Cherubims (Esay 6.) sing holy; and the Church sings so in the Revelation.

Secondly, It is the Image of God wherein he created man, when he intended to make him a beautifull creature. See Ephes. 4. 24.

Thirdly, It is a great part of the happinesse which the people of God shall enjoy in Heaven to all eternity. Ephes. 5. 27.

Fourthly, A soul that is empty of it is abominable in Gods sight, Psalm 5. 5. Hab. 1. 13. there are but two sorts of creatures capable of holinesse, Angels and Men, the Angels as soon as they sin'd, were for ever thrust out of Heaven, as soon as man sinn'd, God cast him out of Paradise, and God left the greatest number of men to perish.

Fifthly, God every where pronounceth such blessed, and makes great Promises to them. This priviledge is communicated to every one under the Dominion of Christs grace, Esay 11. from vers. 1, to 12. 1 Peter 2. 8, 9. and to none else, the world is Satans Kingdom.

This

This ſerves to comfort and cheer the ſoul; what ever God doth for any he never gives a greater pledge of his love than to ſanctifie them. God gives holineſſe for the onely great ſtanding Evidence of his Favour; Holineſſe is the Evidence of thy Election, Calling, Juſtification, Adoption: Juſtification and Adoption have Comforts which Sanctification hath not, yet this clears them to me.

The work of Sanctification is imperfect in all the ſervants of God, while they are in this world, Rom. 6. per tot. the ſeventh and eighth Chapters, 2 Cor. 5. 11. Epheſ. 4. 18. to the end.

Firſt, Thoſe gracious Qualities which the Spirit of God hath wrought in the ſoul, are but feeble and initial, 1 Cor. 13. We know, love, and believe but in part.

Secondly, There remains ſtill a body of corruption, a depravation of all the faculties of the ſoul, which conſiſts in averſneſſe from that which is good, and proneneſſe to all evil, therefore Sanctification conſiſts in mortifying thoſe reliques of corruption, Col. 3. 5. Rom. 7. later end. 1 John 1. later end.

Thirdly, While Gods people are in this world, no good things they do are perfect, yea they are all tainted with corruption, Eſay 64. 10.

It is perfect:

Firſt, Extenſively, as to the parts, wholly both in the inward and outward man the underſtanding is purged from errour, darkneſſe; the will from ſtubbornneſſe, rebellion; the affections from diſtemper, inordinacy; the conſcience, the body alſo and bodily members, Heb. 10 22. 1 Theſſ. 5. 23.

2. Intenſively, and to the utmoſt degree hereafter, Gal. 5. 26.

The Lord could as eaſily make Sanctification perfect, as Juſtification. He hates the ſtain of ſinne as well as the guilt, and the Law requires a pure nature as well as pure life; but God ſuffers the work of Sanctification to be imperfect, and theſe reliquiæ vetuſtatis (as Auguſtine cals them) remain.

1. Becauſe he would have his people fetch their life from the intercourſe they have with Chriſt, the exerciſe of faith, and delights that his people ſhould ſtand in need of Chriſt; if Sanctification were perfect, Chriſt ſhould have nothing to give.

2. He would exerciſe his people in prayer and confeſſions. His people ask for themſelves in prayer the deſtroying of corruption and perfecting of grace.

3. God loves to have his people nothing in themſelves; all Chriſts courſe on earth was an abaſed condition; God would have his people like Chriſt, low and baſe.

4. The Lord hath appointed that this life ſhould be to his people a warfare, Job 14. 14. Their great conflict is with their own luſts.

5. Becauſe he would have his people long to be in Heaven, 2 Cor. 5. 2.

6. That he might thereby magnifie the grace of the new Covenant above all that he gave in the old; God gave perfect grace to Angels, and to Adam and his poſterity; but that vaniſhed away, yet now a ſpark of grace lives in a Sea of corruption.

7. Hereby Gods patience and forbearance is much exalted to his own people, Numb. 14. 17, 18.

Therefore it is hard to diſcern whether the work of Sanctification be wrought in us or no, becauſe of the reliques of corruption.

Evidences of Sanctification:

Firſt, A heart truly ſanctified ſtands in awe of the Word; Sanctification is the Law written in the heart, a principle put into the ſoul anſwerable to the duty the Law requires, John 14. 22, 23. Holineſſe is the Image of Chriſt.

Secondly, The remainders of corruption, and the imperfection of grace will be his continual burden, Rom. 7. 24. 2 Cor. 11. 23.

Thirdly, There is a continuall combate maintained betwixt ſinne and grace, Gal. 5. 17.

Fourthly, Where there is true Sanctification it is of a growing nature; living ving things will grow, 2 Peter 3. 18. Malachi 3. 3, 4.

Fifthly, Where there is true grace you ſhall eſpecially ſee it when God cals you to great trials, Natura vexata ſeipſum prodit, Gen. 22. 20.

Others give theſe Marks of Holineſſe,

1. It is affected much with Gods holineſſe, Exodus 11. 15. and eſteems of men for their holineſſe, as Mr Fox being ſhew'd a poor Chriſtian, and askt, whether he knew him, ſaid, Yea, I forget Lords and Ladies, and remember ſuch godly perſons.

2. It is troubled for the diſhonour done to God, as Lot for the Sodomites unclean converſation; What wilt thou do to thy great Name?

3. It makes one ſtrive after the greateſt degrees of holineſſe, Phil. 3. 11. therefore he propounds the beſt paterns to imitate. See in Mr Ley his patern of piety, the choice vertues and graces of an eminently godly woman Miſtreſſe Jane Ratcliffe.

There is a difference between reſtraining and renewing grace:

First, Reſtraining grace uſually begins in the actions, and is a burden; renewing grace begins in the affections, and is a delight.

Secondly, Reſtraining grace is partial, uneven, not uniform; renewing grace is an univerſal work.

Thirdly, Reſtraining grace is very confuſed, renewing grace more orderly.

Fourthly, Reſtraining grace is raſh and grows looſer and looſer; renewing more deliberate, and gets ſtrength daily.

Fifthly, That is moſt outward to approve ones ſelf to men; this is more inward, and for approving ones ſelf to God, Rom. 2. penult. & ult.

Sixthly, That is propter aliud for eaſe or gain, but virtus eſt ſui pramium. Of the difference between ſaving and common grace, ſee Durham on Revel. 2. 6, 7. Digreſſ. 3.

Means to get holineſſe:

Onely the Spirit of Chriſt beſtowed upon thee by faith, John 7. 38. the Apoſtles arguments to holineſſe are taken from their intereſt in Chriſt, Tit. 2. 11. The grace of God that brings Salvation. Faith in the blood of Chriſt, Heb. 9. 14. See Acts 15. 9. The Word, John 17. 17. 1 Peter 1. 22. The Word read, heard, meditated in, tranſformeth the ſoul into its likeneſſe. The Sacrament is a ſanctifying Ordinance, the death and merits of Chriſt ſet before us, prayer, pray more for Gods ſanctifying Spirit, 1 Theſſ. 5. 23.

First, Let us mourn for the want of holineſſe, and labour to ſee that our great excellency lies in holineſſe, Daniel 12. 10.

Secondly, To improve holineſſe:

1. Pray,
   1. Believingly.
   2. Importunately.
   3. Perſeveringly.
2. Walk by Rule.

See Mr Reyners ten Rules to walk by, or Duties to be performed every day.

Chap.

CHAP. XII.

The Parts of Sanctification are two, Mortification and Vivification.

I. Mortification.

WHere grace is truly wrought it will be the daily ſtudy and practiſe of thoſe that are ſanctified, to ſubdue the body of corruption. This is called a dying to ſin, putting off the old man, crucifying the fleſh, moſt uſually the mortifying of it.

There is a twofold Mortification, and ſo Vivification, ſay the Schoolmen,

1. Habitual and more Internal, the work of Gods Spirit in our firſt Regeneration, Gal. 5.24. whereby the Dominion of ſinne is ſubdued and brought under the power of Gods Spirit, this and internal Vivification are the two parts of our Converſion.

2. Actual, Practical and External, our own work, the daily practice of a child of God, while he lives on earth, this flows from the other. See Wolſals Doctrine and practice of Mortification, and Mr Pagets Meditations of death, part 2. ch 3,4,5.

Every godly man walking according to Chriſtianity, doth daily in his ordinary courſe mortifie the body of corruption that dwels in him, Rom. 4.8,9. Epheſ. 4.20, 21,22. Col. 3.5. Gal. 5.24. Rom. 6.6. Mortifie (or make dead) is a Metaphor taken from Chirurgeons, whoſe practice is when they would cut off a member, to apply ſuch things as will eat out the life of it, ſo our care muſt be to make the living body of corruption inſtar cadaveris.

Practical Mortification, is the faithfull endeavour of the ſoul to ſubdue all the luſts and motions which are prone to ſpring from our ſinfull fleſh.

It ſtands in three things:

1. A full purpoſe or bent of the heart (the mind and will) againſt ſinne, when my will doth nolle peccatum, though it may be active.
2. In ſhunning all the occaſions that ſerve as fewel to it.
3. In applying all ſuch means as may ſubdue his corruptions.

The Practice of Mortification is,

1. A neceſſary duty.
2. One of the moſt ſpiritual duties in all Chriſtianity.
3. The hardeſt duty.

The Popiſh exerciſes of Mortification conſiſting in their kind of Faſting, Whipping, Pilgrimage and wearing of Hair-cloth next their skin, will never work true Mortification in the heart, yet Baals Prieſts exceeded them in cruelty to themſelves, 1 Kings 18.28. See Rom. 8. 13. Col. 2. 23. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

See Rom. 6.13,14. but this work is carried on by degrees till it be utterly extinct, Rom. 6 ſin is called the old man for its weakneſſe and decay. See 1 Theſ. 5.22,23.

Anno Chriſti 1262. exorta eſt ſecta Flagellantium, qui ingenti turba obeuntes pagos & oppida, nudi umbilico tenus, facie tecta ſeſe flagellis cruentabant: manavit hic mos Roma, ubi ſeptimana qua diem Paſchatis proximè antecedit, pœnitentes longo ordine, nudis ſcapulis, larvata facie publicè ſe diverberant flagellis: Quem morem ipſi vidimus Lutetiæ ſub Henrico tertio. Homines ad furorem uſque ſuperſtitioſi, neſciunt Deum amare immutationem cordium non verò dilaniationem corporum. Molinæi Hyperapiſtes, l. 1. c. 29. Vide Novar. Schediaſm. Sac. prophan. l. 1. c. 22. They are hoſtes natura not peccati.

A great duty lies on all the regenerate to mortifie the deeds of the fleſh, Rom. 8.13. No nature, nor piety, nor wiſdom, nor perfection, but will need it, either to ſubdue a luſt, or a paſſion; to cut off an occaſion, or to reſiſt a temptation; to ſecure our preſent eſtate, or to proceed towards perfection. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar. part 1. Sect. 8. of Mortification. See more there.

Firſt, With reſpect to Chriſt, that we may receive him as God offers him, not only as a foundation of comfort, but fountain of grace, 1 Cor. 1.30. Sanctification is one of the ſpecial bleſſings of Chriſt, Acts 3. 26. greater than Juſtification; that frees us onely à malo naturali, from the guilt of ſinne which is contrary to our own happineſſe; this à malo morali, from the power of ſinne, which is contrary to the glory of God.

Our relation to him,

1. By external profeſſion requires it, Rom. 6. 3. 2 Peter 1 9.

2. By real implantation: Mortification is,

1. The effect of our Union with Chriſt, Phil. 3. 10. Rom. 6. 5. Gal. 2. 20.

2. An evidence of it, Gal. 5. 24.

Secondly, With reſpect to ſin,

1. It abides in us, therefore we ſhould be ſtill killing of it, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Heb. 12. 1.

2. It worketh in us, is a ſtirring principle, James 4. 5.

Thirdly, In regard of grace received:

1. Juſtification, Titus 2. 11, 12.

2. Sanctification, that we may exerciſe grace received, John 3. 9. preſerve it in ſtrength and vigour, 1 Peter 2. 24. and increaſe the grace of Sanctification.

In theſe caſes one doth not mortifie his corruptions:

1. Such a one as lives in the voluntary practice of his ſins, Rom. 6.

2. The body of corruption may be wholly unmortified, though it break not out in the ordinary and conſtant practice of any groſſe ſin, the ſeat and throne of ſin is in the ſoul, the ſlaviſh fear of ſhame and puniſhment from men, or eternal damnation from God, may keep a man from groſſe ſins.

I ſhall lay down,

1. Motives or ſeveral Meditations to quicken us to the ſtudy of this work every day.

2. Means which God will bleſſe to one that is willing to have his luſts ſubdued.

I. Motives.

Conſider,

1. This is the great thing God requires at our hands as our gratitude for all the goodneſſe he beſtows on us, that for his ſake we ſhould leave thoſe wayes that are abominable in his ſight, Rom. 12. 1. Epheſ. 4. 21, 22. 1 Peter 2. begin. Deut. 32. 6.

1 Pet. 3. 21. Secondly, How deeply we have obliged our hearts to it by Vow, Oath, Covenant in Baptiſm; we have there covenanted to die to ſinne, put off the old man; and ſo in the Lords Supper we ſhew forth the Lords death, and when we have been in danger.

Thirdly, The manifold evils of unmortified luſts abiding in the heart.

Sinne,
1. Abuſeth us; Man being in honour continued not; a wicked man is called a vile perſon, Pſal. 15.

What makes thy ſoul loathſom and unclean in the eyes of God and Angels, but ſin? What grieves God, pierceth his Son, fights againſt him but this? What brings any evil upon thee but this? What is the ſting of any affliction but onely thy ſins? What ſtrengthens death but it? It is only thy ſins that keep good things from thee, thy unmortified ſins.

2. It defiles us, and ſtains all our actions, Tit. 1. 15. 3. Deceives us, Heb. 3. 12. Epheſ. 4. 22. 4. It keeps away all good, Iſa. 9. 2. 5. It lets in all evil, Jer. 2. 19.

Fourthly, The abſolute neceſſity of this work, if we mean to eſcape hell and everlaſting damnation, De neceſſariis non eſt deliberandum, Rom. 8. 13. 1 Cor. 6. 9. Grave Maurice at Newport-battel, ſent away the boats, and ſaid to his men, Either drink up this Sea, or eat the Spaniards.

Fifthly, The wonderfull gain that will come to thy ſoul, if the Lord teach thee this duty.

1. In mortifying and deſtroying thy beloved luſts thou deſtroyeſt all other enemies with them, they all receive their weapons from thy ſins.

2. All other mercies flow in a conſtant current, if thou mortifie thy corruptions, of; Gods favour, the whole ſtream of the Covenant of Grace.

II. Means of Mortification.

Some uſe moral motives, from the inconveniences of ſinne, death, the fear of hell and judgment; ſome carnal motives, as eſteem and advantage in the world; others natural, moderate in things indifferent, and ſhunning the occaſions of ſin; the meditating on the death of Chriſt is the quickeſt and moſt effectual way of mortifying ſin, 1 Peter 4. 1. Look upon Chriſts death not only as a pattern but cauſe of Mortification, John 3. 14. Heb. 12. 2.

1. Look upon ſin as the cauſe of Chriſts ſufferings, Zech. 12. 10. Acts 2. 37.
2. Conſider the greatneſſe and dreadfulneſſe of his ſufferings, Rom. 8. 32.
3. The fruit of his ſufferings, Col. 2. 15.
4. Reaſon muſt argue from the end of Chriſts ſufferings which was Mortification as well as comfort and pardon, 1 John 3. 6. Epheſ. 5. 27.

Improve the death of Chriſt:

1. By faith, Rom. 6. 6. & 7. 25.
2. By prayer, Heb. 10. 19.
3. A preparation to this duty. Labour daily to find out thy ſins; we are naturally very prone to entertain a good opinion of our ſelves, and diſcern not many evils in us.

The death of Chriſt is uſefull for mortifying of ſin. 1. By way of repreſentation, it ſhews us the hatefulneſſe of ſinne, Iſa. 53. 10. Conſider his agony and ſorrow on the Croſſe, though ſinne was but imputed to him, 1 Cor. 5. 21. 2. By way of irritation, it ſtirs up in the ſoul a diſpliceney againſt ſin, Iſa. 43. 24. ſhall ſin live that made Chriſt die? 3. By way of pattern and example, therefore the Scripture often expreſſeth our Mortification by our crucifying, Gal. 2. 20. & 5. 24. & 6. 14. Of all deaths crucifying is the moſt painfull and ſhamefull, it notes that ſorrow and ſhame which Chriſtians feel in the remembrance of ſin, that which was done really in Chriſt, muſt be done in us by analogy, Phil. 3. 10. 4. By way of merit, Chriſt ſhed his bloud to redeem us; 1. From the world, Gal. 1. 4. that it might not be ſo pleaſing an object. 2. From our vain converſation, 1 Pet. 2. 24. Grace is a part of Chriſts purchaſe as well as pardon. 3. By way of ſtipulation and engagement. Chriſt ſtood as a Surety before Gods Tribunal. He was Gods Surety and ours; on Gods part he undertook to beſtow on us not only remiſſion of ſins, but the Spirit of God to become a principle of life to us, and of death to our corruptions, Rom. 8. 13. 1 John 3. 19. on our part he undertook that we ſhould no longer ſerve ſin, Rom. 6. 13.

The greateſt part of Popiſh Religion, of that which looks moſt like Religion is their profeſſion, conſiſts in miſtaken wayes and means of mortification. Their Vows, Orders, Faſtings, Penances, rough garments are all built on this ground. Their Sermons and Books of Devotion look all this way. Dr Owen of Mortificat. Chap. 3.

1. Study the Law, Rom. 7. I was alive without the Law, but when I ſaw the inward motions of ſinne were abominable to God, I died; compare thy own ſoul with it.

2. Study thy own wayes, When thou art croſt, how art thou troubled? ſay, Is not this anger, when others reproach thee, how art thou troubled? ſay, Is not this pride and ſelf-love?

3. Have an ear open to the admonition of faithfull friends, leave not thy heart till it plead guilty.

4. Make uſe of Ordinances, the Word read and heard, Prayer, the Sacrament: after he had commanded them to put off the old man, Col. 3. he ſaith, Let the Word dwell plentifully in you. David begs of God to ſtrengthen him. Preſſe the Lord with his promiſe, Eſay 42. 3, 4. Rom. 6. 14.

5. Take heed and ſhun all the occaſions that foment and cheriſh thy corruptions,

1. Inward, thy own thoughts, we cure the itch by cleanſing the bloud, Job 31. 1. Why ſhould I think on a maid?
2. Outward, there are two of all ſins,
   1. Idleneſſe the devils cuſtion.
   2. Evil company.

Pſal. 38. 13. Eccleſ. 3. 10. About means of mortification of ſinne, ſee Mr Hilderſ. on Pſal. 51. 5. Lect. 64. 65, 66, 67.

6. Upon ſpecial ſeaſons there muſt be the ſolemn exerciſe of faſting and humiliation, becauſe we muſt mortifie the inclinations of ſin, James 4. 9.

Chap. XIII.

II. Of Vivification.

See Pagets Meditations of Death, part. 2. chap. 6.

THere are two parts of a Christians duty, Dying to sinne and Living to God. Mortification helps Vivification, 1 Peter 2. 24. and Vivification Mortification, Gal. 5. 16. Mortification is put first, 1 Peter 3. 11. and grace, Job 1. 1.

It is called living to God, Rom. 14. 8. Gal. 2. 19. to holinesse, the life of righteousnesse, rising to Christ.

It is first Habitual, when the Spirit of God infuseth such principles, whereby we are able to live unto God.

Secondly, Practical Vivification is the constant endeavour of a believer to exercise all those Graces which the Spirit of God hath planted in him. The life of a thing is the acting according to the principle of it; so something daily draws out the exercise of those holy graces the Spirit of God hath wrought in him, Prov. 4. 23.

Spiritual life is that supernatural grace by which the whole man is disposed to live to God. 1. A supernatural grace, because it comes from our union with Christ, John 6. 57. 2. By which one is disposed to live to God, Galat. 2. 20. The supream or fundamental principle of spiritual life is the in-dwelling vertue of the Spirit, Galat. 4. ult. Rom. 8. the Apostle speaks of being led by the Spirit, living by the Spirit, walking by the Spirit, and following the guidance of the Spirit.

Practical Vivification reacheth to all things which concern Christianity, but consists in two things:

1. The active bent and propenseneſſe of the inward man to the things of Gods Kingdom.
2. Strength and ability to act according to the Rule.

The School-Divines make this spiritual bent to stand in five things:

1. In oppugnatione vitiorum, the same with practical Mortification.
2. In contemptu terrenorum.
3. In repulsione tentationum.
4. In tolerantia afflictionum.
5. In aggressione bonorum operum quamvis ardduorum.

This strength comes

1. From the principle within, the life of the habits.
2. The Spirit of God dwels in them, and stirs them up to act. This new life is Christs rather than our own. He is the root and author of the life of grace, John 8. 12. The Gospel is the ministration of life, Colos. 3. 4. 1 John 5. 11, 12. 2 Tim. 1. 10.

Christians have a life spiritual distinct from the natural and rational:

First, They have distinct principles, the Spirit of God dwelling in them, 1 Cor. 15. 45. and operations, Unumquodque operatur secundum suam formam.

Secondly, They have distinct supports, the flesh and bloud of Christ to feed upon, the consolations of the Spirit, Col. 1. 10.

Thirdly, They have distinct ends; the end of the new creature is to live unto God, Gal. 2. 19. as his utmost end.

Life is taken

1. Literally, for the life proper to every creature, the vegetative life of plants is the vigour of the sap; sensitive life of beasts is the vigour of the bloud; reasonable life in men is the life of reason; all living things have their life from God.
2. Metaphorically for joy, comfort, Prov. 16. 15. 1 Thess. 3. 8. this life is from God, Psalm 30. 5.
3. Spiritually,

1. The

1. The life of grace, Gal. 2. 20.
2. Of glory, Col. 3. 4. 1 John 5. 11.

There is a three-fold life:

1. Natural or personal. 2. Politick. 3. Divine or Spiritual.

1. The natural life flows from the Union of soul and body.

2. The politick life comprehends all those things which people perform one to another by vertue of their Relations and Associations of people together by Laws.

3. Spiritual life which ariseth from the intercourse between God and the soul.

Life in the creature is an ability to perform the acts proper to that life, the ability sensitive is the life of a beast, to discourse the life of reason. Spirituall life is the ability which God hath given to the soul to act unto God as his portion and utmost end.

This is but natural life over-ruled and sublimated, we have it in Christ by vertue of our union with him, 1 John 5. 12. from Christ by vertue of his merit, 1 John 4. 9. According to Christ by vertue of his patern.

There is a great similitude and dissimilitude between also the natural and spiritual life.

The spiritual life is more excellent than the natural:

First, In the original of it, 1 Cor. 15. 45. it is bought with the blood of Christ, wrought with the Spirit of Christ.

Secondly, Life natural is short and uncertain; grace is a spark that cannot be quenched, it begins in grace, and ends in glory.

Thirdly, In regard of the provisions of it.

Fourthly, It is a life that we are never weary of. Many have repented the day of their birth, none of their new birth.

They agree in these things,

1. Natural life supposeth some generation, so doth spiritual life, therefore it is called Regeneration, 1 John 2. 27.

2. What the soul is to the body in the natural life, that is God to the soul in a spiritual life. As the soul is the principle of all the actions and operations in the body, so in the spiritual life Christ works all but by the man.

3. So long as the soul is in the body, one is an amiable creature, when that is gone he is but a carkasse; so, so long as God is with the soul it is in good plight.

4. Where there is life there is sense and feeling; spiritual life is seen by the tenderness of the heart, Ephes. 4. 18, 19 it is sensible of injuries done to it by sinne, Rom. 7. 24. or the decayes of it by Gods absence.

5. Where there is life there is a nutritive appetite, an instinct to preserve life, 1 Peter 2. 2. This life is nourished by the Ordinances and constant influences of the Spirit.

6. Where there is life there will be growth; Gods people grow more wise, solid.

They differ thus,

1. The Union between the soul and body is natural, between God and the soul from free grace.

2. In the natural life there is an indigence till the soul and body be joyned, but there is no want on Gods part though he be not united to the soul.

3. The soul and man united make one person, so do not God and the soul.

4. The natural life comes wholly from corrupt principles, and it is a fading life, James 4. 14. but he that lives this one life once, lives it for ever, John 6. 5.

This divine spiritual life stands in two things:

First, We by our Apostasie are fallen off from God, when God restores us to life, he restores us to his favour, Ephes. 2. from v. 11, to the end, and so sin and the curse is removed.

There is,
1. A spiritual life imputed when the guilt of sin is removed by the imputation of Christs righteousnesse. 2. Inherent, whereby the soul is enabled to live unto God. Christ is the treasury of the life of the Saints, as life is taken for righteousnesse, holinesse, comfort or glory.

Secondly,

Secondly, There is wrought in the soul a suitable frame of Spirit to do the things agreeable to the will of God, an inward principle of holinesse, the repairing of Gods Image in us, Ephes. 1. & 2. ch. quickned by him.

Christians have a three-fold spiritual life:

1. Of Justification, it is called therefore the Justification of life, Rom. 5. 8. See John 5. 24.

2. Of Sanctification, which lies in conjunction of the soul with God, Ephes. 2. 4, 5.

3. Of glory, Rom. 6. 23.

Dr Arrowsmith in his God made Man on John 1. 4. mentions five sorts of spiritual life, a life of Reconciliation, Justification, Sanctification, Consolation, Glory.

Christ is our life, and the fountain of this spiritual life three wayes:

1. He is the meritorious cause of it, he hath purchased all this for us by his bloud, he bare the wrath of God for us by his active and passive obedience. He hath merited that all this life should be communicated to us.

2. He is the efficient cause of it, works all this in and to us; he sends his holy Spirit into the souls of all those whom he means to save, applies to them their peace and pardon, and quickens them.

3. As he is the exemplar, rule and copy how our life should be led.

The preaching of the Gospel is the ministration of this life thus:

In the letter of it, though delivered by never so faithfull Ministers, it is able to do nothing, therefore these things are often preacht and men not bettered, when the Spirit accompanies it, it is efficacious: see Rom. 1. 16. Phil. 2. 15.

The preaching of the Gospel is,

1. The only means of the revelation of this life, 2 Tim. 1. 10.

2. It is the divine seed, whereby the Lord conveys this life, and begets it in the soul, 1 Peter 1. 23, 25.

This work of the Gospel consists in five things:

1. The preaching of the Gospel opens the understanding, makes us see the misery of sinne, and the excellency of Christ, and the things of God, Ephes. 1. 2 Cor. 5.

2. It makes the will and affections to relish Christs sweetnesse, perswades the heart to chuse him, and consent that God and they may be united in a league of friendship, this is the work of faith.

3. Turns the heart from all evil wayes it walkt in; men are said to be pull'd out of the power of Satan.

4. Creates in the soul, and stamps in it all the graces wherein Gods Image stands.

5. By administration of the promise and instruction fortifieth the soul, and makes one do all things belonging to this life.

Some say, we should not take any comfort from the exercise of grace:

1. All the promises are conditional, as to pardon and Heaven, Heb. 5. 9.

2. I ought to judge my self as God will judge me hereafter, if I be a repenting and believing sinner.

3. I am to mourn at the presence of sinne, therefore am to rejoyce at the presence of grace.

4. The best rejoyce at others graces, 2 Cor. 1. 12. 1 Thess. 3. 6, 7, 8.

A beleevers life is most excellent, Christs life and theirs are in a sort one, John 5. 57. The life of God, Ephes. 4. 17.

1. God lives this life, 1 Tim. 1. 15.

2. It is the first and highest life, as God is the first good and truth, so the life of God is the first life.

3. It is the most perfect life: He possesseth all things in God and God himself who is above all.

4. It is the most satisfying life, because such enjoy an infinite good.

5. It is an immutable life, John 14. 19, 21.

Arminians

Arminians give too much to man, and too little to Christ. Antinomians and Familists give too much to Christ, and too little to man. They give so much to Christ that they abolish the nature and act of the creature, they say, Christ must do all, and we can do nothing. They dream of an insensible motion without us, place grace in a naked apprehension, there must be not only a work for us, but in and by us. The work of the Father is in Heaven, of Christ on the Crosse, of the Spirit within us, Col. 1.29. They deny not only mans work, but the Spirits work in us, Rom. 16.20.

Secondly, They say, Christ must do all, and we after we have received grace, nothing; there is not a coordination but subordination of our wils to his grace, though at our first conversion we were meerly passive, yet when grace is received we may act; motion follows life, Col. 2.4.

The Familists deny all inherent graces in the Saints, because it is said we do not live, but Christ, he (they say) believes, repents, as if we lived not at all, and he is formally all habits and graces; but the Scripture grants habits and graces to be in a man, John 19.28. Matth. 12.33. 1 John 3.9.

2. The sins of our actions then could not be charged on our selves, but on the faint operations of his grace.

Marks and Evidences of spiritual life:

First, Every creature which lives values life, A living dog is better than a dead Lion, a dog was an unclean creature, a Lion the most noble creature. If one values his life he will prize,

1. Pabulum vitæ, Attend on the Ordinances, the Word, Sacrament, Prayer, Communion of Saints, 1 Peter 2. As new born babes. Cant. 4. last end.

2. He will avoid what is destructive to life; Beware of grieving and quenching the Spirit, Ephes. 4.30. 1 Thess. 5.19. by neglecting the motions of it, or noisome lusts.

3. He will endure any evil and part with any good rather than part with life.

Secondly, This new life brings alwayes a great change along with it; when a child quickens in the mothers womb she finds a great change; so when Paul, and Manasseh, and the blind man, John 9. were converted, unlesse they were religiously trained up, as Timothy from their youth.

Thirdly, Sense, a spiritual sense in the soul; senses exercised, favour the things of God, Rom. 8.

Fourthly, Every life hath some kind of motions and actions that are sutable to it, as in this spiritual life.

1. That inward work of adhering to Christ as their chief portion, the fountain of all their good, a true faith.

2. Repentance, labouring to cast out corruption, and to turn to God.

3. The Spirit of Prayer, You have received the Spirit of Adoption whereby you cry Abba Father. Our Law judgeth a child alive that was heard to cry. Do you pray as living men? Rom. 12.11.

4. The minding of heavenly things, Col. 3.1,2.

5. Life hath a sympathy, a fellowship with those that are members of the body, the same quickning Spirit lives in all Christians, Weep with them that weep, and rejoyce with them that rejoyce.

6. If we be regenerated we do that to God which children do to their Father.

1. Honour him and stand in awe of him.

2. Rely on him as the fountain of all our good, as children do on their parents for a supply of all their wants.

3. Are obedient to him.

Motives to live to God:

1. It is a dishonour to God when the creature seeks to exalt self, that which I

To live to God is,

1. To exalt him in our hearts as the chiefest good, whom if we obtain we are happy, Psal. 27.40.

2. To own God and appear for him here, and at such times, and in such places as it will be prejudicial to us so to do. Noah was righteous when all flesh had corrupted his ways, when Christ is made a reproach. 5. When we prefer his interest before our own, stand for the truths and ordinances of Christ, Ps. 119.36. 4. When we can be meek and patient in our own cause, and zealous in Gods cause, Numb. 12.3. 5. When we rejoyce that others act for God, though we have no part in it, Jam. 4.6. 6. When we desire to live to glorifie God, John 12.27,28. 1 Cor. 10.31.

make make my utmoſt end I make my god, Phil. 3. 10.

2. Conſider the ſelf-denial of Chriſt, he came from Heaven to do the will of him that ſent him, Rom. 15. 3.

Means of ſpiritual life:

1. Labour to get thy miſerable condition by nature ſet cloſe upon thy ſpirit, how thou art dead in ſin, and undone without Chriſt, Epheſ. 5 14.

2. Study to get into Chriſt, 1 John 5. 12. onely he can quicken, Epheſ. 2. 5. Ezekiel 16. 6. he is never got but by faith, Luke 15. the Prodigal is the patern of a converted ſoul. See verſe 31. Take hold of Chriſt and imbrace him by faith, Rom. 6. 11. 2 Theſſ. 1. 12. Faith accepts Chriſt from God in the Word, and preſents Chriſt to him in prayer, Epheſ. 3. 12.

We ſhould,

Firſt, Live upon Chriſt, as

1. Have recourſe to him for juſtification and acceptation of our perſons, Phil. 3. 8, 9.

2. For the pardon of daily ſins, 1 John 1. 7. & 2. 1, 2. his bloud is called the bloud of ſprinkling, Heb. 12. 24. there muſt be a freſh application of his bloud for the pardoning of our daily infirmities.

3. For actual grace,

1. For mortification, Rom. 8. 13.

2. Quickning and exciting grace, 2 Theſſ. 3. 5.

3. For ſtrengthning and aſſiſting grace, Phil. 4. 13. Pſalm 29. 11.

Secondly, Live to Chriſt, Phil. 1. 21. He that is the principle of life will be the end of it. We may know this,

1. By our conformity to God, Rom. 6. 10.

2. Then we will live like Chriſt, Gal. 2. 20.

3. Then we will be ſenſible of his abſence.

Chap. XIV.

The Sanctification of the whole Man Soul and Body.

WE ſhould live more to the ſoul than body, Pſalm 119. 175. & 141. 8. & 142. 7. & 143. 11.

1. The ſoul is diſtinct from the body, as the operations of it ſhew.

2. It lives when the body dies, Eccleſ. 12. 7. Matth. 10. 28.

3. It is far better than the body.

4. The concernments of the ſoul are higher than thoſe of the body, 1 Peter 3. begin.

5. The ſickneſſe and death of the ſoul is worſe than that of the body, 1 Kings 8. 38. John 8. 21, 23.

6. We never live to any purpoſe but when the ſoul lives.

Thoſe that are in Chriſt can do nothing without him, Hoſea 14. 8. John 15. 5. 2 Cor. 3. 5. David, Pſalm 119. often prayes God to quicken him, 1 Cor. 15. 45. See Ezekiel 36. 27.

Reaſons, Firſt, Becauſe grace is but weak and imperfect, it doth not totaliter ſanare, Adam could have done any thing per commune auxilium, we need ſpecial help.

Secondly, There is a ſubordination of believers to Chriſt as of members to the Head, and it was the Fathers deſign to honour him, Coloſ. 3. 11.

First, Of the faculties of the ſoul.

Grace

Grace spreads it self through all the faculties.

A faculty is an ability of producing some effect or operation agreeable to our nature, and for our good, implanted in man by nature.

There are three reasonable faculties proper to men alone:

1. The Understanding, by which we know truth.
2. The Will, by which we desire good.
3. Conscience, a power of ordering our selves to and with God.

1. Of the Understanding.

It is that power which God hath given a man to acquaint himself with the Being, Properties and Differences of all things by discourse.

Or, It is that faculty by which we are able to inform our selves of the general natures of things. Sense alone perceives particulars, the understanding abstracts things, and forms in it self the general natures of things. I see this or that man, but understand the nature of man.

We call it mens the mind à metiendo, because it weighs and measures all things, or quasi eminens, because it is the most eminent faculty in man, by which we excel all others:

Sanctius his animal mentisque capacius altæ.

The Object of it is omne intelligibile.

Truth in general in the utmost latitude and universality of it is the object of the Understanding, good in the general in the universality of its nature is the object of the Will, therefore till it come to enjoy God, which doth eminently contain all good in him, it can never come to have full satisfaction.

See Mr Pembl. Vindic. grat. 200, 201, 202.

Light was the first thing in the Creation, and so in the new Creature, Ephes. 4.23. He hath a new judgement speculative and practical.

1. Speculative, he apprehends and discerns those Reasons and Arguments against sinne, and for grace, more than ever he did; he is amazed to consider what darknesse and folly he lived in before, 1 Cor. 2.14.

2. Practical, he applies the things he knows for his humiliation and exercise, he so knoweth truths that he loves them and delights in them, he knows them experimentally.

Conversion of a man is a Divine teaching of him, Esay 54.13. Jer. 31.34. John 6.45.

Sicut olim Deus inchoavit opus creationis à lumine corporeo & sensibili, ita etiam opera regenerationis & glorificationis nostra à lumine spirituali ordiatur: cùm enim Deus efficaciter electos vocat ad salutem per Spiritum Sanctum: Primò, eorum intellectum illuminat lumine fidei & collustrat. Secundò, voluntatem emollit & sanctificat. Similiter in opere glorificationis ordine naturæ præcedit illuminatio intellectus nostri, per lumen gloriæ ad Dei essentiam clarè & perspicuè videndam; deinde sequitur voluntatis inflammatio & incensio per ardorem charitatis. Ratio hujus ordinis est, quia cognitio præcedit amorem, atq; adeo clara cognitio seu visio præcedere debet ardentem & perfectum amorem. Baron. Philos. Theol. ancil. exercit. 3. Art. 6.

The Properties of this teaching:

1. It is necessary, without this all other teaching is in vain; David often prayes that God would teach him his statutes, open his eyes; the Ministers teach the ear, God the heart.

2. Efficacious, Job 36.22.

3. Clear and distinct; hence Gods Word is called a Light, and it is called the riches of the assurance of understanding.

4. Practical, it is an acknowledgement after godlinesse, Verba Scripturæ non sunt verba legenda, sed vivenda, said Luther.

5. Abundant under the Gospel, All shall know me from the greatest to the least! Knowledge shall cover the earth as the waters do the Sea.

A great part of Conversion both in the renewing of the mind, Rom. 12.2. Eph. 1.17,18. Phil. 1.4.

This saving knowledge of the will of God is called the renewing of the mind, Rom. 12.2. the mind of Christ, 1 Cor. 2.16. Phil. 2.5.

This renewing consists,

First, In Knowledge; and that 1. Doctrinally, of the truths to be believed, this is the very foundation, and that which is called historical faith, that is, a knowledg with an assent to those truths which are recorded in Scripture, many may have this and more which yet are not converted; but yet where Conversion is, this must necessarily precede, 1 Cor. 2. 2. Whom God converts he enlightens, John 6. 45. 2 Cor. 4. 6. and may whole Conversion is called a searching.

There is a difference between common illumination, which may carry men far, Heb. 6. and special illumination. Heb. 10.32.

2. Practically, partly of our own filthinesse, John 3. it was necessary for Nicodemus to know his natural filthinesse; partly of Christ, sin will overwhelm the soul without this, Rom. 7. 24, 25. Eph. 1. 19, 20. one must know his own poverty and Christs riches, his own guilt and his satisfaction.

3. It makes the soul to believe and assent to those truths, the understanding doth not only need converting grace to turn, but to assent and firmly to adhere to the truths revealed, to the promises manifested; for the heart doth not turn to God by knowing the promises, but by firm relying on them, and this is that which is called trusting so much in the Psalms.

4. To regard the things of eternity beyond things of time, 2 Cor. 4. ult. 4. To judge of things as the Scripture judgeth them; what that commends we commend and judge worthy of commendation; what that condemnes we condemne and judge it worthy of condemnation; we will then judge of things by the end. Such will minde Spiritual Ordinances, so as to prepare for and profit by them; Spiritual gifts and graces so as to choose and use them; Spiritual priviledges, so as to make sure of them, and glory in them; Spirituall persons, so as to pray for and sympathize with them.

To be rightly illuminated or spiritually minded, Rom. 8. 6. is
1. To mind the things of Heaven rather than the things of earth 1 Cor. 15. 48. 1 John 2. 15.
2. To be more mindfull of the good of the soul than of the body, Mat. 11. last end.

4. The judgement is induced to approve of Gods Word, his precepts and promises as the best. He accounts those things best and worst which the Word doth. The converted man esteems of Gods favour, and freedom from corruption more than all the glory and riches of the world.

5. The mind is in part sanctified in regard of the thoughts, they were roving, distracted, impertinent and very frothy; now the mind is renewed about them, so that it hath more holy thoughts, more composed, more profitable and united in all duties and performances, more low thoughts of our selves, and high thoughts of Christ.

6. It looketh then only to Gods word, My sheep hear my voice: To the Law and the Testimony.

7. Their mind is renewed in respect of consultations. Paul consulted not with flesh and bloud; he subjects all to the glory of God and this Word.

8. He invents holy purposes, means and wayes to propagate Gods glory.

9. He discerns things that differ, Rom. 12. 7.

Chap. XV.

Of the Sanctification of the Will.

Voluntas est appetitus rationalis. per quem homo sponte sua, & cum cognitione sui se movet ad bonum assequendum, fugiendumve. sit vero bonum vero apparens. Molin. Bucan. gravissi. Quæst. de Libero arbitrio.

GODS great work in conversion is in the Will, Esay 1. 19. Revel. 22. 17. Psalm 110. 3. Ephes. 1. 19. when ever he converts the soul he subdues the Will, 1 Chron. 28. 9. Phil. 2. 13. Grace is a resignation of our selves to the will of God, Rom. 6. 17. 2 Cor. 8. 10. Though the will of man be subdued in conversion, and made free, yet it is not perfectly made free; as a degree of blindnesse remains in the Understanding, so a degree of bondage in the Will. The work of Conversion is never perfected till the will be gained, it begins in the mind, Ephes. 4. 23. but ends in the will, Deut. 30. 6. All liberty must proceed from Liberum judicium, a judgment of the understanding not misled by sensitive objects. Aquinas.

Luke 13. 34. Deut. 30. 6. it is willing to be convinced, Psal. 141. 5. Prov. 15. 32. The offers of Christ and grace are mainly made to the Will, Rev. 22. 17. The complaints also of rejecting grace, and of sin, Jer. 13. 27. John 5. 40. Luke 19. 14. I would, and ye would not, Matth. 23. 37. Israel would none of me, Psalm 81. 11. Prov. 1. 29. 3. Joshua 24. 22. Esay 66. 3. Psalm 119. 30. Exodus 33. 5. Judges 5. 2.

1. The denomination is from the will, not from knowledge.
2. Acceptation is from the will, 2 Cor. 8. 12.
3. The ſtrength of corruption, and ſo of grace, lies in the will, wicked men are not ſo bad, nor the godly ſo good as they would be.
4. Life and death is in the will, Prov. 4. 23. Deut. 30. 19.

The Will is renewed in a godly man in theſe particulars:

Firſt, It is made flexible, ſo Paul when he was converted, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Pſalm 40. 8. & 143. 10. This Will is broken which before was contumacious and ſtubborn, Eſay 11. 6.

Secondly, Tender, it was hardened before, this is implyed in that, a fat heart, Zech. 7. 11, 12. Acts 28. 26, 27. that hath no ſenſe or feeling, either of Gods diſpleaſure or the fearfull eſtate it is in; the man converted hath a heart of fleſh, Ezekiel 36. 26. which is oppoſed there to a ſtony heart, that is, ſenſleſſe and ſtupid.

Thirdly, It is moved upon pure motives for the holineſſe of the precepts. David prizeth Gods Word above thouſands of Gold and Silver; for the ſpiritual profit of it, it would quicken and enlarge his heart, ſupport him in afflictions.

Fourthly, It is eſtabliſhed and ſetled in a good way, the honeſt heart holds faſt the Word of God, cleaves to the Lord with full purpoſe of heart.

Fifthly, It is made efficacious and fervent in holy things, their ſervices are free-will offerings, 1 Chron. 29. 14. Rom. 7. 18.

Sixthly, In regard of its acts,

1. In its election and choice it is ſanctified, preferring holy and eternal things before ſinne and temporal, Heb. 11. Moſes choſe the reproaches of Chriſt before the treaſures of Ægypt. Election is an act of the Will about the means, and anſwereth to conſultation in the Underſtanding.

2. In its conſent, it conſents to God and Chriſt, Eſay 1. 19. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rom. 7. 16.

3. In regard of the power it hath over the other faculties, for it commands the other powers of the ſoul, as on the underſtanding, to make it think and reaſon about this or that, 2 Peter 3. 5. it ſets the underſtanding on ſearching the truth, and finding it out, and the Will delights it ſelf in good things.

Seventhly, It is adorned with thoſe habitual graces which are neceſſary for it.

1. Fiducial recumbency and truſting in God, the Will renewed rolls it ſelf upon Jeſus Chriſt, and hath confidence and boldneſſe.
2. Love to God above all other things, therefore he ſaith, I will circumciſe you, that you ſhall love the Lord your God with all your hearts.
3. A divine hope which keepeth up the ſoul in all difficulties, Lam. 3. 13.

The Will of all the faculties is,

1. Capable of the greateſt enlargement, O that I could love thee more Phil. 3. 11.
2. It is moſt enlarged, this is called Writing the Law in the mind.
3. God works this enlargement by his perfect Rule his Law, 2 Cor. 7. 1. and Be ye holy as he is holy.
4. Proportionably to the enlarging of their Will ſhall be their future happineſſe.

There are five acts of the Will, Intention, Election, Conſent, Imperium, or Command, Fruition.

1. Intentio, that is, finis, he takes God for his portion, Pſalm 73. 25. and intends the enjoyment of him as his onely happineſſe, Jer. 42. 7.
2. Electio, that is of the means, Chriſt; chooſeth him as his all-ſufficient Mediator, John 14. 6.
3. Conſent to take Chriſt, Matth. 22. 19. This muſt be,
   1. Hearty and real to accept of Chriſt with all his benefits.
   2. Habitual and fixed without wavering, Deut. 5. 28. 1 Chron. 22. 19.
   3. Compleat and thorow without reſervation, Cant. 2. 10.
4. Imperium, the Power or Command of the Will for the proſecution of this with all our might. It muſt be

1. A ſpeedy proſecution of the things of God, Pſalm 119. 16.
2. Zealous, Pſalm 27. 4. Phil. 2. 12.
3. Conſtant, Pſalm 119. 8.

5. Fruition, which is a delightfull acquieſcence in a good poſſeſſed. The fruition of Chriſt is moſt ſweet and pleaſant.

Obedience is the vertue of the will by which it is flexible to Gods will in all things, and for his ſake. Here Cæca obedientia, blind abſolute obedience is as neceſſary and commendable, as in Friars to their Superiours it is fooliſh and unreaſonable. Vide Davenant. Determ. Queſt. 6.

It is good to conſider the authority of God in his Word to gain the heart to a full obedience, Pſalm 119. 4.

Reaſ. 1. Then the heart would not be ſo looſe, Titus 2. 15.

2. We will not be ſo bold in ſinning, Prov. 13. 13. The conſcience of Gods command is Ratio formalis of active obedience, Ratio motiva may be taken from the reaſonableneſſe of it, Rom. 7. 12. and the profit of it, Deut. 10. 13.

All Faith implies Obedience,

1. As it aſſents to the whole Doctrine of God, Acts 2. 41.

2. As it cloſeth with Chriſt, it is often called the obedience of faith, Acts 6. 7. Rom. 1. 5. & 16. 26.

There is a two-fold Obedience:

Firſt, Legal, ſo to keep Gods wayes as to do all which the ten Commandments require at all times, in all fulneſſe, without any the leaſt failing in matter or manner, which was the bargain made with our firſt Parents Adam and Eve, and which by nature lies on us, Do this and live: ſuch a keeping of the Law is utterly impoſſible; for Paul ſaith, That which the Law could not do in as much as it was weak through the fleſh. The Law cannot bring us to Heaven, becauſe our fleſh in breaking it diſables it from giving us the reward which is promiſed to abſolute perfection, and by the works of the Law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified; if we could perform ſuch an Obedience, we needed not any Mediator.

Nos qui non loquimur magna, ſed vivimus quaſi ſervi & cultores Dei, patientiam quam magiſterijs cæleſtibus diſcimus obſequijs ſpiritalibus præbeamus. Cypr de bono patientiæ.

Secondly, Evangelical, a true ſtriving to perform the former Obedience, it is an upright and hearty endeavour after the fore-named perfect Obedience. For the Goſpel doth not aboliſh the Law from being the rule of our life, but alone from being the means of our Juſtification, and ſo from bringing the malediction of the Law upon us; but it eſtabliſheth the Law as a rule of good life, tying and inabling us to labour with uprightneſſe and ſincerity to performe all things written in the Law in all perfection. The Obedience of the Law excludes all defects, that of the Goſpel all wilfull defects and allowed ſins.

This Obedience is two-fold:

Firſt, Counterfeit, falſe and feigned, when the will in ſome things yeelds to Gods will, not becauſe it is his will, but becauſe his will doth not much croſſe the motions of theirs, this is the obedience of hypocrites.

Secondly, True and hearty, when for Gods own ſake principally the will frames it ſelf in all things to ſtoop unto him.

Of this there are two degrees, one perfect when the will is wholly carried after Gods will without any gain-ſaying, with the full ſway and whole ſwinge of it, this was only in Adam.

Secondly, Imperfect, when the will oppoſeth it ſelf to its own diſobedient inclinations, and doth conſent to obey, and is diſpleaſed with its own diſobedience.

Joh. 14. 15, 20 21, 23, 31. 1 John 2. 5. & 5. 3.

We muſt all ſet our ſelves to yeeld true obedience to God: How often and earneſtly doth Moſes inculcate this, Deut. 4. 1. & 5. 1. If ye love me, keep my Commandments, ſaith Chriſt. Peter ſaith, We muſt yeeld our ſelves to God as thoſe that are riſen from the dead, meaning quickned in ſoul by vertue of Chriſts Reſurrection, 1 Kings 2. 3, 4.

There is a three-fold obedience, 1. Veri, of a mans Defires, but comes ſhort in his actions. 2. Of Conformity, when in ſome meaſure my actions anſwer. 3. Of Reſignation, when ones will is given up to Gods, and that with delight.

Reasons, 1. From God.

First, In regard of his right to rule, he is the author of our being and continuance, he hath also redeemed us, wherefore it is pressed on the people of Israel, that they ought to obey God above all people, because he redeemed them out of the hand of Pharaoh. Christ will be a Head where he is a Saviour, Ephes. 5. 23 Rom. 14. 9. Acts 5. 31. The Spirit renewes us to obey Christ, Titus 3. 5. 1 Peter 1. 2. Acts 5. 32.

Secondly, His fitnesse to rule:

1. He is most wise and just to make good, righteous and equal Laws.
2. Most carefull to observe the carriage of men.
3. Most bountifull to reward obedience.
4. Most severe to punish disobedience.

Thirdly, He hath done us already so much good, and laden us with so many benefits that we are ingaged.

Fourthly, To this adde the excellency of his holy Nature for wisdome and goodnesse.

Secondly, From our selves: Who are

1. Subject to him, as being his Children, Servants, Subjects.
2. Foolish and weak in our selves, subject to many enemies, dangers.

Our obedience was purchased by Christ, 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. and Christ was obedient to his Father, John 6. 38. Phil. 2. 8. The Covenant ingageth us to it, Thou shalt be my people, there is a stipulation between God and us; God hath promised to cause us to walk in his statutes.

Thirdly, From the Commandments which we must obey:

1. They are most just, as holding perfect agreement with right reason and equity, teaching us to give God and man his own.
2. They are fitted to our good as well as to Gods glory, confusion would follow if every one might hate and kill whom he would.
3. Obedience is most necessary, acceptable, profitable and possible, praying, hearing, knowledge of God, faith.

The Rule of it must be the Word of God, the extent, the whole Law in every point, Deut. 28. 58. Levit. 19. ult. Psalm 119. 6, 96. Acts 13. 22. Col. 4. 12. the whole will of God; the forme of it is conformity to the Word and will of God, Psalm 119. 1. The end, principal, that we may honour and please God, Matth. 5. 16. As you have received of us how you ought to walk and please God, saith Paul.

The service of sinne is, 1. Chargeable, 2 Chron. 28. 20, 21. 2 King. 18. 15, 16. Gen. 25. 31 Exod. 32. 3, 4. Hos. 8. 14. Luke 5. 30. Act. 19. 19. 2. Toilsome and laborious, Job 4. 8. Esay 4. 18. Micah 7. 3. & 3. 1. Jer. 3. 10. Job 24. 15. Esay 44. 12. Hab. 2. 3. Eccles. 2. 23. & 4. 8. Esay 5. 7, 10. Jer. 8. 6. Exod. 6. 9. & 25. 39. to 46. 3. Empty and fruitlesse, Esay 55. 2. & 44. 12. Haggai 1. 6. Hosea 10. 13. Gal. 6. 7. 4. Irrational, Esay 46. 8. 1 Corinth. 16. 13.

The Properties of it:

1. Generality or Universality, it must be entire, Luke 1. 6.
2. Constancy, I will encline my heart to thy testimonies alwayes to the end.
3. Sincerity, it must be grounded on Gods authority, and aim at his glory.

Our Obedience to Gods Commandments should be

1. Cordial, Rom. 6. 17.
2. Cheerfull, 1 John 5. 3. We have these principles of cheerfull obedience, unfeigned faith, Gal. 5. 6. Love, a lively hope, filial fear, Gen. 39. 9. Hosea 3. 5. patience in wel-doing, Rom. 2. 7. Heb. 10. 36.
3. Zealous, 1 John 3. 3.
4. Diligent, Rom. 12. 11.
5. Universal, John 15. 10. when we pick and choose, we do not Gods will but our own.

There must be

1. Some solemn time of giving up thy will to God, Rom. 12. 1.
2. We must give up our selves without reservation, Acts 13. 22.

How to know that we are kindly affected to the will of God:

First,

First, The great reason of our obedience will then be the will of God, 1 Thess. 4. 3. & 5. 8. 1 Peter 2. 15.

Secondly, If we be inquisitive after his will, Rom. 12. 2. Ephes. 5. 17.

Thirdly, If we keep our selves from our own iniquities, Psalm 18. 23. Matth. 5. 29, 30. and check the lusts of our own wils against his.

Fourthly, If we beg grace sincerely to do his will, Matth. 6. 10.

Motives to Obedience:

Consider, first, The Majesty and Excellency of him whose servants you are, He is the King of Kings. Constantinus, Valentinianus, Theodosius three Emperors, called themselves Vasallos Christi, Moses my servant, Peter, Paul a servant of Christ.

Secondly, The honourableness of the work, His service is perfect freedom.

Thirdly, The great priviledges and reward of this service, Psalm 119. 56. Such shall have sufficient incouragement in this life.

1. Peace of conscience, Esay 32. 17. Psalm 119. 165. Phil. 4. 7.
2. Joy in the holy Ghost, Rom. 5. 11. Psalm 119. 14.
3. Increase of grace, Psalm 84. 7. Prov 4. 18.
4. Many gracious experiences and manifestations, Psalm 17. 15. John 14. 21, 23.
5. Protection, Psalm 31. 19, 20.
6. In publick and common judgements God sometimes makes a difference, Eccles. 8. 12. Esay 3. 10, 11. Jer. 15. 11.
7. So much prosperity as shall be good for them, Psalm 84. 11.

Fourthly, All creatures obey God, Psalm 114. 5, 6. Matth. 8. 27. Christ obeyed the Law perfectly for you, Rom. 5. 19.

II. Means:

First, Take notice of, and be abased in the sense of our own disobedience.

Secondly, Pray to God to give his Spirit to encline our hearts to his testimonies, and follow the direction thereof.

Thirdly, Consider the necessity, fruit, excellency and equity of Obedience. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 12. 28. Sect. 134. Of serving God.

Fourthly, Look that it be the obedience of faith, Rom. 16. 19. compared with 26, that fetcheth strength from God, and actuates our union with Christ.

Chap. XVI.

Of the Sanctification of the Conscience.

THat there is a Conscience in every man, is proved,

1. By the necessity of every creatures being under a Law.
2. By the constant endeavour of good men to approve themselves in secret to God.
3. By the overflowing joy which holy men have had in their greatest sufferings.

God put a Conscience in man for these ends:

1. To testifie of God.
2. To convince of sinne, and to leave men without excuse.
3. To punish men afore-hand.

Conscience is taken,

Conscience is the faculty or power of the practical understanding in man, whereby

First, More strictly and properly when it is joyned with other faculties of the soul, as Titus 1. 15. 1 Tim. 1. 5. in the first it is differenced from the mind, in the later from the will.

he is privy to all his actions, whether they be immanent and conceived within, as thoughts, or emanant and issuing forth, as his words and works. Mr Down Subject. to higher powers. Vide Dicksoni Therapeutica Sacra lib. 1. cap. 1. Conscientia est cordis scientia. Bern. Scientia cum alio. Aquinas. Cum alia scit animus scientia dicitur, cum seipsum conscientia. Sal vita amicitia, Oculus vita sapientia, Vita vita Conscientia.

Second-

Secondly, More largely, when 'tis put alone, and so it stands for the whole heart, soul and spirit working inwardly upon it self by way of reflex: so Acts 24. 16.

It is disputed in the Schools, Whether conscience be an act, a habit, or a faculty? It is not a bare act, for sundry actions are ascribed to it; a habit it is not, but a faculty, and a distinct faculty. Mr Lawson in his Examinat of the Pol. part of Mr Hobbs his Leviathan, Chap. 13. saith, Conscience is a mans knowledge of his own acts, as agreeable or disagreeable to the Law of God. It's not a faculty (saith he there) but an act of the soul: and an act not of the will, but of the understanding, and the same as practical. See more there about that Question, Whether an erroneous conscience doth bind? Vide Doctoris Sanderson Prælect. 1. & 4. De obligatione Conscientiæ.

It is a distinct faculty, the Apostle seemeth to make it so, when he saith of unbelievers, That their minds and their consciences are defiled, and because it hath the name of the whole heart given unto it, 1 Samuel 24. 5. 1 John 3. 20. and because in the working of it, it hath a certain general and universal command over all the other faculties. Its proper work is to dispose a man aright to Gods word, and to set awork all the rest of his powers for that purpose.

Conscience is an ability in a man to judge of his estate and actions according to a rule prescribed by God; it is no further therefore Liberty of Conscience (but licentiousnesse) then it is regulated by the Word, for the Conscience is Regula regulata.

Est liber animæ ad quem emendandum scripti sunt omnes libri. Bern. What Conscience is it is hard to find, as in mens dealings the use of it, some making it a distinct faculty from the understanding, some an habit, some an act; it is the understanding reflecting upon its self in its acts in regard of the goodnesse or badnesse of them. Or, the judgement that a man gives of himself in reference to the judgement of God. There is a kind of syllogism, He that believes in Christ shall be saved: But I believe in Christ. He that loves the Brethren is passed from death to life: But I love the Brethren.

The Offices of Conscience are,

1. Dirigere, to shew what we ought to do.
2. Ligare, to bind.
3. Testificari, to witnesse.
   1. To the matter of fact.
   2. To the morality of an action, whether it be good or evil.
4. Mordere & accusare.
5. Excusare & consolari.
6. Monere, suadere, stimulare.

Converting Grace renewes a mans conscience:

First, Whereas it is naturally cauterized, 1 Timothy 4. 2. it puts feeling and apprehension into us, this is the first work of grace converting upon the soul when it begins to be tender, Acts 24. 16 and is not able to endure those heavy burdens of sin, which before, though mountains, it never felt, is also now active that was silent, Daniel 9. 8. Ezra 9. 6. Jer. 8. 12. Ephes. 4. 19.

Secondly, Whereas naturally it is self-flattering, it will accuse when it ought, naturally it flirreth in a false way, promising Heaven and salvation when there is no such matter, Deut. 29 19. Davids heart soon smote him, and Psalm 51. He acknowledged his sinne and bewailed it; and again, I and my house have sinned. Conscience speaketh the truth, Thus often thou hast prophaned the Sabbath, abused thy self, and that in all the aggravations, this makes the godly lie so low in their humiliation.

Conscience is the greatest comforter or terrour, 2 Cor. 1. 12. Rom. 8. 1. if we suffer it to be our councellour and commander, it will be our comforter. A good conscience, 1 Pet. 3. 16. Heb. 13. 18. spiritually is, 1. An enlightned conscience, Prov. 19. 2. 2. An awakened conscience, 2 Tim. 4. ult. A sleepy but my heart wakes. 3. A working active conscience, Acts 24. 16. 4. A pure conscience, 1 Tim. 3. 9. & 2 Tim. 1. 3. purged from the guilt of sinne by justification, Heb. 9. 14. & 10. 22. & 12. 24. 2. Purged from the filth of sinne by sanctification, Acts 15. 9. 2 Tim. 1. 5. Dan. 1. 8.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, The erroneousnesse of it is taken away, the mischief of an erroneous conscience is seen in Popery and other heresies, how they make conscience of worshipping that which is an Idol, if they should eat meat on a fasting-day, not adore the Sacrament, how much would their hearts be wounded; this erroneous conscience brought in all the superstition in the world, but the godly obtain a sound judgment, conscience is to be a guide.

Fourthly, The partial working of it about some works but not others, is taken away, as Herod. Psalm 50. Those that abhorred Idols did yet commit Sacriledge; they neglect the duties of one of the Tables; as the civil mans conscience is very defective, he will not be drunk, unjust, yet regards not his duty to God, is ignorant, seldome prayeth in his Family; the hypocritical Jews and Pharisees would have Sacrifice but not Mercy, Acts 24. 16. 1 Peter 3. 16. Heb. 13. 18.

Secondly, Inward motions and thoughts of sinne as well as outward acts, his conscience now deeply smites and humbleth him for those things which onely God knoweth, and which no civil or worldly man ever taketh notice of. So Paul Rom. 7. How tender is Pauls conscience! Every motion of sinne is a greater trouble and burden to him, than any grosse sinne to the worldling. Hezekiah humbleth himself for his pride of heart. Matth. 5. the Word condemneth all those inward lusts and sinnes which are in the fountain of the heart, though they never empty themselves into the actions of men, the conscience of a godly man condemneth as farre as the Word; it is not thus with the natural mans conscience, nor with the refined Moralist, he condemneth not himself in secret, he takes not notice of such proud, earthly motions, they are not a pressure to him.

Thirdly, In doing of duties to take notice of all the imperfections and defects of them, as well as the total omission of them, his unbelief, lazinesse, rovings in the duty. I believe, Lord, help my unbelief: All our righteousnesse is a menstruous ragge. A godly man riseth from his duties bewailing himself.

Fourthly, To witnesse the good things of God in us as well as the evil that is of our selves, it is broken and humbled for sinne, yet this very mourning is from God.

Fifthly, About sins of omission as well as commission, whereas the wicked if they be drunk, steal, have no rest in their consciences, but if they omit Christian duties they are not troubled, Matth. 25. 36.

Sixthly, In the extremity of it, being rectified from one extream, fals into another, from the neglect of the Sacrament they fall to adoring of it; this is rectified by grace, it will so encline him to repent as that he shall be disposed to believe, so to be humble as that he shall be couragious.

Seventhly, Converting grace also removes,

1. The slavishnesse and security of conscience, puts in us a spirit of Adoption, Rom. 8. All the men in the world could not perswade Cain but that his sins were greater than could be pardoned.

2. That natural proneness to find something in our selves for comfort; men think if they be not their own Saviours they cannot be saved at all, Phil. 3. I desire to know nothing but Christ and him crucified, and count all things dung for his righteousnesse.

3. The unsubduednesse and contumacy in it to the Scripture. Conscience is wonderfully repugnant to the precepts and holinesse of Gods Law, in the troubles of it contradicts the Scripture-way of Justification.

Every one should labour to keep his conscience pure, Acts 24. 16.

First, Because conscience is only known to God.

Secondly, Because it is the secondary rule of mens actions, the Word is the primary Rule.

Thirdly, Because the violation of conscience is a great aggravation of sin.

Fourthly, Nothing will be so sweet to a man as a good conscience, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

Chap. XVII.

Sanctification of the Memory.

MEmory is a faculty of the mind whereby it preſerves the ſpecies of what it once knew, 1 Chron. 16. 15.

See Mackwels Apol. l. 3. c. 6. Sect. 1. p. 211, 212.

Memory is the great keeper or maſter of the rols of the ſoul, Ærarium animæ, the ſouls Exchequer.

Senſe and underſtanding is of things preſent, hope of things to come, Memoria rerum præteritarum, memory of things paſt.

It is one part of the ſanctity of the memory, when it can ſtedfaſtly retain and ſeaſonably recall the works of the living God.

A ſanctified memory conſiſts in three things:

Firſt, In laying up good things concerning God, Chriſt, Gods word, his works, experiments, Luke 2. 19. Mary laid up theſe things in her heart. Pſalm 119. 16. elſe Meditation will fail, Col 3. 16.

Secondly, For a good end, ſinne to be ſorry and aſhamed of it, Thy Word have I hid in my heart that I might not ſinne againſt thee: Remember the Sabbath to ſanctifie it.

Thirdly, In ſeaſonably recalling them, thy perſonal ſinnes on a day of humiliation, Gods mercies on a day of thankſgiving, good inſtructions where there is occaſion to practiſe them. Nothing keeps the heart more tender than when truths are ready, James 1. 25. Luke 22. 61.

Lam. 3. 19, 20. John 14. 26. There is a double act of a good memory, ſaith the Philoſopher, 1. Ut fideliter conſervet. 2. Ut prompte reddat.

A ſanctified memory is a practical memory, as the Lord ſayes, Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy. Pſalm 109. 16. A Countrey-woman after the hearing of a Sermon, met as ſhe was going home, with the Miniſter, he aſked her, Where ſhe had been? ſhe told him at a good Sermon; he asked her the Miniſters name and Text: ſhe anſwered, ſhe knew not him nor remembred the Text, her memory was ſo bad, but ſhe would go home and mend her life. Another complained that for the expreſſions, and other things delivered in a Sermon he could remember but little, but he had learned by it to hate ſinne, and love Chriſt more.

Memory is the hand-maid of underſtanding and conſcience.

Helps to remember the Word:

1. Attention, receiving the truths with reverence, Prov. 14. 21. Heb. 2. 1.
2. Affection, affection of truths comes from application.
3. Meditation, that digeſts what we have heard.
4. Beware of inuring the mind to vain thoughts, they diſtract it.
5. Order is an help to memory.
6. A lively ſenſe of what we hear or read, Pſalm 119. 93.
7. Conference.

Chap. XVIII.

Sanctification of the Affections.

Auguſt. de civ. Dei. l. 9. c. 4. Vide Crakan. Log. p. 163. Non Ciceroni aſſentio, qui ἀπαθῆ perturbationes vertit. Nam perturbatio nomine ipſo declarari vitioſa videtur: Ut ipſe fatetur, lib. 3. de fin. Requiritur vox, quæ locum etiam habeat, quando motus conſiſtunt intra modum. Quare placet affectuum nomen, quo uſus Ovidius, Livius, Valerius, Seneca, Plinius, alij: ſive affectiones, quod eſt apud Cic. 1. de Invent. l. 1. Gell. l. 1. cap. ult. Quanquam nec improbem commotiones animorum, vel ſimpliciter permotiones. Voſ. Rhet. lib. 2. cap. 1. τὸ πάθος alij affectionem, alij perturbationem, alij permotionem, nonnulli verò (ut Græcam vocem ſignificantiùs exprimerent) vocabulo, caſtis Ciceronianis nondum probato, paſſionem nominarint. Grant. Græcæ linguæ Spici leg.

THe Affections were called by Tully perturbations, by ſome Affectiones, or affectus, by others paſſions.

The affections are different from the vertues which are called by their names. They are certain powers of the ſoul by which it worketh and moveth it ſelf with the body to good and from evil.

Or, They are powers of the ſoul ſubordinate to the will, by which they are carried to purſue and follow after that which is good, and to ſhun and avoid that which is evil.

Affections are the motions of the will, as carried out to the proſecution of good or avoiding of evil: they are as the Philoſopher ſpeaks, Exitus animæ, the outgoings of the ſoul, like wheels to the cart, ſinews to the body, wings to the bird, wind to the ſails ſpread.

Mr Fenner on Col. 3. 2. Ser. 1.

They are the forcible and ſenſible motions of the will according as an object is preſented to them to be good or evil.

Firſt, Motions, Rom. 7. 5. Anger, Love, Joy are the putting forth of the will this or that way. The Scripture cals them the feet of the ſoul, Pſalm 119. 59, 101. Eccleſ. 5. 1.

Secondly, Motions of the will. Some Philoſophers place them in the ſenſitive ſoul, but Angels and the ſouls of men ſeparate from the body, have theſe affections, 1 Peter 2. 12. James 2. 19.

Thirdly, Senſible, becauſe they have their operation chiefly on the ſenſitive part of man, manifeſt themſelves there; and forcible, becauſe they move with force, 1 Chron. 29. 3.

Fourthly, According to the object propounded: Affections are but the ſhaping or forming of the will in ſeveral motions according to the object preſented.

Their uſe is to ſhun evil and purſue good. The manner of doing is by certain ſtirrings, motions, workings of the bloud and ſpirit about the heart.

They are commonly called paſſions, Jam. 5. 17. becauſe they imprint ſome paſſion on the body by working. In the Infancy they are affections; in the youth and age paſſions; when they over-rule reaſon perturbations.

The Epicures allow of immoderate paſſions, and would have a man wholly ſwayed by his affections.

Paſſions abſtractively conſidered, are neither good nor bad morally, but as they are determined to this or that object, as they are in man the ſubject who is wholly fleſh and dead in ſinne, his affections and paſſions are defiled with ſin, as well as the underſtanding and the will. The Papiſts, though they ſay, the ſuperiour faculties of the ſoul like the upper region are altogether clear and undefiled, yet the inferiour faculty, viz. the ſenſitive appetite in which are lodged the affections (they ſay) is vitiated with ſin.

The Stoicks utterly extinguiſh all paſſions.

Gratia non extinguit ſed ordinat affectiones. Aquinas. Gratia non tollit, ſed attollit naturam, hos affectus Stoici imputandos, Peripatetici temperandos putant. Lactant. Div. Inſtit. Epit.

Their ſinfulneſſe appears:

There are three kinds of faults found

Firſt, In that they are not carried to the right object; the object of love was God and his Law; of hatred, ſin; now theſe paſſions are clean contrary.

Secondly,

Secondly, If to the right object, then inordinately: they cannot joy but over-joy, love but over-love, Ephes. 4. 26.

Thirdly, There is a contrariety in them, this is implied in that Phil. 4. 6. μηδὲν μεριμνᾶτε, Be carefull for nothing; the word implies a tearing and torturing of the heart.

Fourthly, In their distraction; this differeth from contrariety, that is, when one passion sets against another, this when one passion is too inordinately set upon his object, then the other cannot do his proper office, because the heart is finite, the Apostle would have us hear and pray without wrath, since the heart hereby is so distracted that it cannot attend.

Fifthly, The importunity of passion; Ahab fell sick because of Naboths vineyard, Quicquid volunt valde volunt.

Sixthly, Their tyranny over the will and understanding, James 1. 14.

Seventhly, Their incertainty and inconstancy, as Ammon loathed Tamar after he had his desire, more than he liked her before.

in the passions of mens minds,
1. That they arise before reason be consulted, or give direction.
2. That they proceed further than they should, and stay not when they are required.
3. That they transport reason and judgement it self. Christ had these passions, but in a sort free from all these evils. For neither did they rise in him before reason gave direction, John 11. 33. neither did they proceed any further, if once reason and judgement commanded a stay and retreat; whence they are called Propassions rather than passions, because they are beginnings of passions to be staid at full and perfect leisure, and therefore much lesse had they any power to transport judgement and reason it self. Doctor Field of the Church, lib. 3. cap. 18.

To be above passions will be our happinesse in Heaven, rightly to order them should be our great care here.

First, The Scripture bids us not cast off but rectifie our affections, Colos. 3. 1. 1 John 2. 15.

Secondly, They are natural faculties planted in the soul by God himself, and so in themselves good; Christ which was free from all sin was not without affections. He was angry, did grieve, rejoyce. Now we must not dare to abuse any power which he did sanctifie.

Thirdly, Affections rightly ordered much further and help our course in godlinesse. If we joy not in prayer, delight not in obedience, the work is tedious; but good affections make the work delightsom, they are spurs in our sides, which whosoever wanteth goes on but in a dull and slow pace.

Fourthly, Manifold are the evils which come from disordered passions.

1. They blind the judgement. Perit omne judicium cùm res transit ad affectum,

Impedit ira animum ne possit cernere verum.

If the Spectacles be of green or red glasse, all things through them seem to be of the same colour.

2. They seduce the will, for the will sometimes is guided by reason; it is often also carried away by passion.

3. They fill the heart with inward unquietnesse; they interrupt prayers, 1 Peter 3. 7. and hinder the working of the Word, 1 Peter 2. 1. They disturb reason, and hinder a man in Meditation, whereby his heart is quieted. When fear, anger, jealousie begin to stir, then is judgment disturbed and hindered. Again, these passions fight one with another, fear with anger, and anger with fear, joy with sadnesse and sadnesse with joy; one passion carries a man one way, and another another way. Passion can never be satisfied.

4. They often (when they are excessive) hurt the body, some by immoderate joy have ended their dayes, because the spirits flie out too suddenly to the object, and so leave the heart destitute of them; more by grief and fear, because the bloud and spirits so hastily flie to the heart that they choak it; anger hath stopt many a mans breath, envy is the rottennesse of the bones.

Jure prudentissimus Deus animis nostris indidit affectus, ut sint quasi adminicula ad præclaras actiones. Quod enim ventus navigio, id nobis affectus: in quorum temperie animi nostri tranquillitas, immo vitæ hujus fœlicitas consistit. Vos. Instit. orat. l. 2. cap. 1. Sect. 2. Tres affectus, vel ut ita dicam tres furiæ sunt, quæ in animis hominum hanc tos perturbationes sciens & interdum cogunt ita delinquere, ut nec famæ nec periculi sui respectum habere permittant; Ira qua vindictam cupit, Avaritia qua desiderat opes, Libido qua appetit voluptates. Lact. Div. Instit. Epit. l. & de vero cultu, l. 6.

Gal.6.14. Vide Dudleii Fenneri Sac. Theol.l.2.c.2.

The regenerate man is renewed in all his passions, as we may see in Davids love, Psalm 119. 9. in his hatred, Psalm 130. 22. in his desire, Psalm 35. 9. in his fear, Psalm 119. 120. in his delight, Psalm 119. 6. & Psalm 16. 2. in his sorrow, Psalm 119. 138.

Some make zeal to be sanctified anger. There are in repentance, melting affections, sorrow for sin, Zech. 12. 10, 11, 12. shame before God, Ezra 9.6. *Lam.*3.29. fear of offending him, *Prov.*28.14.

Marks of sanctified affections,

The affections are specificated per actum & objecta, say the Schoolmen. Two things perfect every faculty and grace, 1. when they take in the whole object and exercise perfect acts upon it, Jam. 1. 4. Spiritual and eternal objects are of great compasse. 2. When they act freely and fully on these objects, answerable to the nature of them; love God with all the heart, soul, strength; it notes not onely all the faculties, but the intention of them, Psalm 119. 20. The affections are, 1. Disingaged from lusts and creatures to which they were wholly inthralled. 2. Set upon God and the things that are above, Ephes. 2. 6. Colos. 3. 3. 3. Grace composeth the affections that could never agree one with another; before conversion, hope and fear, joy and grief, humility and resolution were repugnant one to another; but after conversion, when the soul is most full of hope of Heaven, one is most afraid to displease God; spiritual joy and grief sweetly agree, *Psal.*2.11. Moderation and zeal, *Numb.*12.3. yet Moses was all on fire when God was dishonoured; humility and resolution also accord, none more humble, nor yet more resolute than Paul after his conversion. 4. The desires are satisfied, yet exceedingly enlarged.

First, They must be universal, carried to all good and against all evil. Some love to hear the Word, some to read, some to pray, but they are not as carefull to subdue passion; they will be angry, pettish, discontented; they will give way to doubting. The affections are regular when they are set on their right objects, inlarged when they take in the whole object. He that loves God, loves whole God, loves him not only as gracious, mercifull, but as just, holy, faithfull; he that hates sin, hates all the evil of it, *Ephes.*3.18.

Secondly, They are subjected to grace in the rise, measure and continuance of them; they must rise and fall, ebbe and flow at the command of faith, according to the nature of the thing presented. Faith will make us affect things according as the Lord doth, in cases which concern his glory affections must be raised up to the highest pitch. Adams passions were subject to reason,

1. In their rise, they were commanded by him.
2. In their measure.
3. In their continuance.

Thirdly, Sanctified affections do constantly and most immediatly discover themselves in Meditations, projects, inward desires and endeavours of the soul; if thy thoughts of sin be pleasant, thou hatest it not.

Jehu's zeal, and Ahab's mourning had not a holy motive.

Fourthly, The true metal of Sanctification is sincerity, and the edge of it zeal in every faculty.

Motives to get the affections sanctified:

Almost all the signs of a good man in Scripture are taken from the affections, they love the Lord, hate evil, desire that which is good, hunger and thirst after righteousnesse.

First, All Christians are really as their affections are, and God judgeth of them by their affections. A man that is carnal in his affections, is judged a carnal man, and one who hath his affection set on heavenly things is judged a spiritual man, I am my Beloveds, and my Beloved is mine; he doth not say, I am Christs and Christ is mine.

Secondly, Without sanctified affections one is no Christian at all, *Deut.*5.29.

Thirdly, Most of the Gospel promises are made to the affections, *Matth.*4.6. and so to love, fear, delight and confidence in God.

Fourthly, Holy and enlarged affections from God are one of the greatest means to keep one from backsliding: Ephesus did bear with the bad, and had lost her first love.

Christ takes content in the affections of his people, Simon Peter, lovest thou me? See how she loves me; much was forgiven Mary Magdalen, because she loved much.

The right Means to sanctifie the affections:

1. Sanctified affections are not to be found in any unregenerate man, *Deut.*5.29. Pray therefore much for a new nature.

2. Con-

2. Converſing much with Chriſt, and pondering of him will keep thy affections right.

3. Let not our thy affections much on any thing in the world, Col. 3.2.

4. Affections are not only ordered, but much quickned by knowledge, John 4.10. Pſalm 9.9. Ignoti nulla cupido.

5. Pray conſtantly to God, ſay, Lord unite my heart to thee that I may fear thy name, love thee. Pſal. 86.11. See Jer. 32.39.

Chap. XIX.

Of the Particular Affections.

Some affections are cheering and comforting, as Love, Joy, Hope; ſome diſquieting, afflicting, as Anger, Sorrow, Fear, Deſpair: to afflict the ſoul at a Faſt is to awaken ſome or all of theſe afflicting paſſions, the ſoul is onely afflicted by it ſelf, in Heaven all afflicting affections ceaſe in their acting, in hell they are all exerciſed. See Burtons Melancholy, part 1. Sect. 2. Subſect. 3.

Affectus, ut optimè Thomas Aquinas diſſerit, vel locum habent in facultate concupiſcibili, vel iraſcibili. In concupiſcibili ſedem obtinent ſex affectus; nam ſi afferat ſe res bona, oritur ejus amor: ac ſi abſens ſit, deſiderium ejus exiſtit: ubi verò illud conſecuti ſumus, gaudium exſurgit, ſeu delectatio. Itidem ſi quid ſe obtulerit ſub ſpecie mali, ejus naſcitur odium, quod amori opponitur: ſi malum abſit, fuga ſeu averſatio ejus erit, qua repugnat deſiderio: ſin malum præſens erit, exoritur dolor ſive triſtitia, qua gaudio adverſatur. At affectus, qui in iraſcibili ſedem habeant, quinque numero ſunt: duo ratione boni, tres ratione mali. Nam bonum arduum (quod iraſcibilis facultas reſpicit) vel ejuſmodi eſt, ut aliquis ſe credat illud conſequi poſſe; atque exoritur Spes: vel tale eſt, ut credat aliquis, ſe id non valere adipiſci, ac naſcitur deſperatio. Ratione verò boni ardui præſentis, nullus in iraſcibili eſt motus, quia, quod quis jam obtinet ardui habere rationem deſiit. Ratione autem mali ardui, tres exſurgunt affectus: quia autem malum arduum eſt abſens, aut præſens; ſi abſens, vel refugimus, & eſt metus ſive formido: vel obviam ei imus, & eſt audacia. Sin præſens ſit, fuerit ira, qua exardeſcimus ad malum depellendum. Voſſ. Inſtit. orat. l. 2. c. 1. Sect. 3.

According to their ſubject they are divided into thoſe of the concupiſcible and iraſcible appetite. Vide Aquin. 1a 2æ Quæſt. 23. Art. 1, 2.

Concupiſcible, whereby the ſoul is carried to that which is good.

When the object is good, the deſiring faculty draws the heart toward it: if it be preſent good it is joy, if the preſent good be near at hand it is called love, if eaſie to be obtained deſire, if difficult hope, if impoſſible deſpair.

Iraſcible or ſhunning faculty from evil, if the evil be preſent it is grief, if it make an attempt on the heart, if it be vincible it is courage, if invincible horrour.

Objecta paſſionum appetitus concupiſcibilis ſunt bonum & malum abſolutè, objecta autem paſſionum appetitus iraſcibilis ſunt bonum & malum cum quadam elevatione & arduitate. Aquin. 1a, 2æ, Quæſt. 46. Art. 3.

Some affections embrace their objects, as Love, Joy, Deſire. Others ſhun and decline them; as Hatred, Fear. Thoſe paſſions wherewith we proſecute good are more excellent than thoſe wherewith we eſchew ill: and among theſe, Love holdeth the principal place, becauſe that uniteth the lover in affection with the object beloved, it is the root of all other affections; Love joyneth us in friendſhip with God and man.

The ſanctified exerciſe of thoſe affections which imbrace or proſecute their object, conſiſts in this, That they move to all known good ſoundly, orderly, in fit ſeaſon.

The ſanctified exerciſe of the affections which decline or flie from their object, ſtands in this, That they ſhun or decline ſoundly, orderly, conſtantly according to the direction of Gods word.

Mans affections are linked together in their working. Love is the chiefeſt, next is

is desire of attaining the thing loved, after comes joy if one have it, grief if he have it not, anger against those that crosse us of it, kindnesse toward those which further us in it, fear to lose it, and courage to keep it, shame if he have it not, boldnesse if he have it.

Serious, setled and usefull affections are founded on apprehensions; the higher our apprehensions are of God, the dearer are our affections to him, Psalm 9. 10.

Every man is, as his affections are. The best discovery of the affections are the thoughts and endeavours.

The chief of the Affections are of two sorts:

1. Some simple, which are exercised upon Good or Evil it self, viz.
   - I. On Good, considered
     1. Simply in it self, Love, a motion of being united to it, of complacency and liking.
     2. Respectively to its
        1. Presence, Joy a motion of enjoying it, an enlargement of the heart to receive good.
        2. Absence, both in regard of
           1. The good it self, Desire, a stirring of the heart to use means to get it.
           2. The likelihood of attaining or not attaining it, which are
              1. Hope, a moving and lifting up of the mind toward it.
              2. Despair, a falling from the future good.
   - II. On Evil, considered
     1. Simply, Hatred a motion of separating from that which is counted evil, as when we see a Toad.
     2. Respectively, to its
        1. Presence, Sadnesse, a pulling together of the heart in the sense of a present evil.
        2. Absence, considered
           1. In it self, Flight, Detestation if it come, a motion of flying from it.
           2. In its likelihood of being shunned or suffered.
              1. If we conceive it avoidable, Courage, a motion of rising against it, and making resistance.
              2. As it is likely not to be escaped but suffered, fear, a kind of perplexednesse or shrinking from it.

The simple affections are,
1. Love, Hatred.
2. Joy, Sorrow.
3. Desire, Flight.
4. Hope, Despair.
5. Fear, Courage.

2. Some compound, being the divers workings of two or more of these together, and they respect other things for good or evil, viz.
   - I. The possessors thereof, whether
     - I. Our selves,
       1. Shame for evil or turpitude, in regard of evil working by motions of Fear, Hatred, Grief.
       2. Boldnesse for good we have done or got in regard of the good esteem of it, motions of the contrary affections.
     - II. Others,
       1. For Good we think we see in them; reverence, differing from simple fear, looking to a thing conceived as excellent, a joynt working of Fear, Love, Desire, Joy.
       2. For Evil, contempt, a motion of vilifying and abasing, disdaining one by joynt working of contrary passions to those fore-named.
   - 2. The furtherances or hinderances thereof, viz.
     - I. The things which further Good hinder Evil, viz.
       1. Kindnesse, well pleasednesse, a melting of the heart toward the thing or person which hath done us good, or kept us from evil by the joynt motions of Love, Desire, Joy.
       2. Confidence, staying of the heart upon any thing or person for good, or

These affections are renewed,
1. In respect of their quality.
2. In respect of their object.
3. End.

Holy affections are those inward motions stirred up in the hearts of the Saints by the Spirit of God, whereby they are inclined toward God, and the things of God. Affectus est spontanea quadam & dulcis animæ inclinatio.

deliverance

deliverance from evil, by a mixt work of Love, Courage, and Desire supporting Hope.

II. The things which further Evil and hinder Good from us, viz.

1. Anger, a motion of punishing or hurting that thing so to remove it, or put it away in Hatred, Grief, Desire.
2. Diffidence, a shaking and wavering of the soul from any thing which should but cannot help him to Good or against Evil, and is mixt of Fear, Abomination and Hatred, overthrowing Hope and pulling away the heart from them.

All these affections which respect good, and the furtherances to it, and possessors of it, should be exercised on God, and one also which doth look to evil, because God considered as angry, is the creatures greatest evil of misery.

I shall handle them thus, among the simple Affections I shall rank three pairs under the concupiscible Appetite:

1. Love and Hatred.
2. Desire and Flight.
3. Joy and Sorrow.

CHAP. XX.

I. Of the Simple Affections.

THe two first and fundamental Passions of all the rest are Love and Hatred. They are the most universal, the most operative, and the most durable passions of the soul.

Pretium hominis amor. Nerembergius. A man is worth no more than his love.

The whole work of Redemption is set forth by Christs love to us, John 3. 16. and all our obedience by our love to him.

Love is the chiefest of the inclining affections, if one love much he will desire much, and delight much; Hatred of the declining affections, if one hate much, he will fear much, and grieve much; nothing argues more holiness than love of God, and hatred of sinne. Amor, Dilectio & Charitas, are taken promiscuously in the Scriptures and writings of the Fathers. Vide August. de Civit. Dei, lib. 14. cap. 7. Yet according to the Schools these are distinguished; so that love is larger than dilection, and that than charity. Love not only notes spiritual but carnal and sinfull affections.

Nullus enim liberior est affectus amore, nec qui minus aut imperari possit, aut imperio deponi. Baud. Epist. Cent. 2. Epist. 57.

1. Love. This is the master-Bee which carries all the swarme with it, a cardinal affection, John 11. 35. 36. the first affection corrupted and renewed.

It is the opening or setting out of the heart after some good proportionable to it self.

Or, It is an affection by which the soul setleth it self in the liking of what is esteemed good, as it is good. The Schoolmen say, It is not onely vinculum ligans, but pondus inclinans, quod pondus in corporibus id amor in spiritibus. Amor meus pondus meum. Aug. in Confess. It should be an equal weight, greatest to the greatest good; our love to all other things should be subordinate to that. Fecerunt itaq; civitates duas amores duo, terrenam scilicet amor sui usque ad contemptum Dei, cœlestem vero amor Dei usque ad contemptum sui. August. de Civitate Dei, lib. 14. cap. 28.

Si terram amas, terra es, si Deum amas quidni dicerem Deus es. Aug.

The Schoolmen question, Whether one can do any thing, but from love; hatred is a fruit of love, because one loves God, therefore he hates sinne; sorrow is a fruit of love, John 11. 35, 36. Psalm 97. 10. it sets hope a work, and obedience, 1 John 3. 3.

The Image of God in this affection was the placing of it on its proper object for Measure, Weight, Intention, Order, Degree.

God

To love God is to become godly, and to have the mind after a ſort deified, 2 Pet. 1.4. To love the world is to become a worldling.

God is the great and proper object of it, from the knowledge of his excellencies, and the ſenſe of his raviſhing goodneſſe. Adams heart was wholly carried to him as his chief good.

1. The love of concupiſcence or deſire made out to the poſſeſſion of God.
2. The love of complacency took wonderfull pleaſure in him.
3. The love of friendſhip was willing to do what God would have him.
4. The love of dependance expected good from no other.

The Schools mention three kinds of love, which indeed are rather three effects of love, 1. Love of benevolence, whereby one wiſheth, and ſo farre as he can procureth the welfare of the thing loved. 2. Love of concupiſcence by which it is carried with a longing to be united to the thing loved, or to enjoy it. 3. Love of complacency by which the ſoul is ſatisfied, contented and made to reſt in the thing loved when it doth enjoy it. So when our hearts ſo cleave to God as the chief Good, that we wiſh all Glory, Honour, Felicity to him, and long to enjoy him, and be ſatisfied ſo farre as we have power or hope of enjoying him.

The ſoul did this,

1. Freely, without violence.
2. Superlatively.

The ſecond object of mans love in his pure condition was himſelf; all his love to himſelf was to take delight in that in himſelf which was moſt lovely, Gods Image in himſelf.

Thirdly, All the reſt of the creatures ſave the Devil, as any creatures did ſet out Gods glory, or was a means to bring him to the fruition of the chief good, all creatures were loved in a ſweet order and ſubordination to God.

2. The Image of the Devil in our love.

Firſt, This love of God is wholly rooted out of the heart, naturally men are haters of God.

1. We have no deſire to enjoy him, we like not to walk in the wayes that may bring us near God.
2. For complacency, we would not have God to be ſuch an one as he is.
3. For friendſhip, a natural man abhorres to doe what ſhould pleaſe God.
4. For dependance, though we are upheld by him, yet we will rather truſt to any thing than God.

Secondly, We are fallen from that love God would have us bear to our ſelves for our being like him.

Thirdly, We hate the creatures as they are like God, the Saints, Gods Ordinances. Our depraved love is beaſtly or deviliſh, it is beſtowed on things which we and the beaſts love alike, ſenſual delights or ſpiritual wickedneſſe.

The work of Gods grace in ſanctifying this affection, conſiſts

Two things draw out our affections towards good things, 1. The good that comes by them. 2. The good that is in them, a wicked man may love good things for the good that comes by them, a godly man for the good that is in them.

1. In turning the bent of the affection toward thoſe things which God at firſt made its proper object.
2. In guiding and directing it proportionably to every object, to God, the creatures, and ſelf, in due meaſure, method, order and degree.

It carries the affection of love to God in the firſt place,

1. In a love of Union.
2. In a love of Complacency.
3. In a love of Friendſhip.
4. In a love of Dependance.

Secondly, It carries it next to God to love our ſelves, and to love that in our ſelves which God would have us love, the regenerate part.

Thirdly, The creature, thoſe to which we have any relation, ſo much as is of God in them.

Two things draw out our affections againſt evil things. 1. The evil that comes by them, ſo a wicked man may be affected with the evil that comes by them, Exod. 10. 17. Acts 8. 24. A godly man is affected with the evil that is in them, he loves God, and hates ſinne for it ſelf, Hoſea 14. 1, 2. 2 Sam. 24. 25. Luke 15. 18. Zech. 12. 10. Jer. 31. 19.

The

The Saints ought to love God, Psalm 31. 23.

Reasons, first, God hath commanded it, Matth. 22. 36. he hath commanded onely men and Angels to love him, Deut. 10. 12.

Secondly, God hath deserved it, 1 John 4. 19. Beauty and amiableness is the proper motive of love.

Thirdly, God hath desired our love,

1. He threatens those that love him not, 1 Cor. 16. 22.
2. Promiseth great things to them that love him, 1 Cor. 2. 9.
3. Beseecheth us earnestly to love him, Prov. 23. 26.
4. God hath given us this affection to that end; there is an earnest bent and strong inclination of the soul after that which is good for us.
5. The disposition and new nature of the Saints draw them to it, they have new thoughts, desires, love; they love God for his holiness. Nothing can be reciprocal between us and God, but love 1 John 4. 19. If he be angry with us, we must not be so with him; if he reprove and judge us, we must not reprove and judge him; we cannot be bountifull to him as he is to us. See Mr Manton on 2d verse of Jude.

How to know whether our love be sanctified so as to be carried unto God as it ought.

All men will professe they love God. It is the first and great Commandment to love God above all; the first in order of time and eminency of nature, it comprehends in it all the other Commandments, Rom. 13. 10.

The love we owe to God is setling our hearts in the liking of him, as the chief, and in a manner the only good, Deut. 6. 5. Matth. 22. 37. the main intent of that precept is to shew what love is appropriated to God; we must not love any person or thing with all our hearts, this is proper onely to God. There are two things in the precept, 1. The extension of parts; the heart, soul, mind, strength. 2. The intention of degrees; our understanding must think of God, our will cleave to him, our love, fear, confidence, delight must be carried out to him without division or derivation to other things. We must love God in his creatures, Christ in his members, love other things in subordination to him, Luke 14. 26. Dupliciter contingit ex toto corde Deum diligere. Uno quidem modo in actu, id est, ut totum cor hominis semper actualiter in Deum feratur: Et ista est perfectio patriæ. Alio modo, ut habitualiter totum cor hominis in Deum feratur: ita scilicet quod nihil contra Dei dilectionem cor hominis recipiat: Et hæc est perfectio viæ. Aquin. 2a, 2æ Quæst. 44. Art. 4. Præcipitur nobis, ut tota nostra intentio feratur in Deum, quod est ex toto corde: Et quod intellectus noster subdatur Deo, quod est ex tota mente: Et quod appetitus noster reguletur secundum Deum, quod est ex tota anima: Et quod exterior actus noster obediat Deo, quod est totis viribus Deum diligere. Aquin. ibid. Art. 5. He alone loves God, as much as he ought, that loving him as much as he can, strives to repair the deplored imperfection of that love, with an extream regret to find it no greater. Mr Boyles Seraphick love.

Love to God is discerned,

1. By frequent thoughts of God, Psalm 63. 6. Love begets musing of the party loved, Psalm 63. 6.
2. By desires of communion with him, Psalm 63. 1, 2.
3. It is a plotting grace, one will be carefull to glorifie God, Psalm 116. 12, 13.
4. It is willing to do or suffer any thing for the party beloved. Jonathan said to David, What ever thy soul desires, that I will do for thee; he exposed himself to his Fathers displeasure, and to danger for his sake.
5. Love when it can not reach the person, will expresse it self to those that have neerest relation. David was kind to Mephibosheth for Jonathans sake.

Marks of this love:

1. When we love him with all the heart, soul and strength, a superlative love, such a love that in comparison of it all other love is hatred; when a thing is lesse loved, it is said to be hated in Scripture; Jacob hated Leah. We love not God perfectly, We know and believe but in part. A true child of God loves him with a fervent and unfeigned love, though perhaps he find not this in time of temptation.
2. When the soul loves him with all those kinds of love he is capable of.

First, With a love of Union, Phil. 3. 8. in other objects called the love of desire or concupiscence.

Four things are to be found in such a one:

1. His ſoul is carried with earneſt deſire after all the means that would bring God and him nearer, and he declines all thoſe things that would ſeparate between God and him, the wayes of ſin.

2. He is troubled for want of him.

3. The ſoul longs after the full fruition of him in Heaven, Heb. 9. lat. end.

4. A love of union and deſire of neareſt conjunction with the people of God, 1 John 3. 14.

Secondly, With a love of complacency and delight. We may know whether we make God our chief delight, and love him with a love of content and ſweetneſſe.

1. If we deſire to be preſently poſſeſt of him, his preſence is life, and his abſence death.

The Schoolmen ſay, we firſt love God with a love of concupiſcence, after with a love of complacence. Comparing our affection to God with our affection to other matters is the beſt way to ſhew the temper of our love, 2 Tim. 1. 4. Luke 12. 21.

2. This love is not to be meaſured ſo much by the lively acts of love, as by the ſolid eſteem.

3. It is not altogether to be judged by our time and care; bodily neceſſities are more preſſing. God hath given us ſix days for our worldly imployments, and reſerved but one day for himſelf.

2. Next to God himſelf we will take delight in thoſe things which are Love-tokens from him, Cant. 1. 2. and thoſe things that are moſt like him, neareſt to him, his Saints, Pſalm 16. 3.

3. The tongue will delight to be talking of him, and telling of all his wondrous works.

Thirdly, With a love of friendſhip. The whole Covenant of Grace betwixt God and us, is but a league of friendſhip. All that God doth for us from his Election to Glorification are fruits of his love, and what we do to God after we know him is from the Law of love.

Six things will diſcover whether we love the Lord with a love of friendſhip:

1. Friends take great delight in being together, they have two ſouls as it were in one body; there is none then ſo conſtantly in thy tongue and thoughts as God.

2. This love will make thee ſuffer and endure great matters for friendſhip-ſake, 2 Cor. 5. 14.

3. The love of friendſhip is a moſt bountifull affection. David called all to contribute toward the Temple, and himſelf gave three hundred Cart-load of ſilver, and yet ſaid he did it of his poverty.

4. This makes a man ſympathize with his friend in his condition. Moſes was much provoked when God was diſhonoured: Rivers of tears run down mine eyes, becauſe men keep not thy Law.

5. This is the fountain of all Obedience to God; one will then be carefull to pleaſe God, and fearfull to offend him, If you love me keep my Commandments.

Reaſons. 1. Our love to God is a love of ſubordination, ſuch a love as a creature bears to his Creator, a ſervant to his maſter, not a fellow-like familiarity.

2. Our love to God is not determined ſo much by outward profeſſion, as by inward affection, and the real expreſſion of it, Mat. 7. 21. uniform obedience.

3. The Commandments can never be kept unleſſe we love God; there muſt be a ſenſe of our obligation to Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 15. Rom. 12. 1.

4. From the difficultie of obedience. To keep the Commandments of God is a laborious thing, John 2. 23. See 1 Theſſ. 1. 3. The word in faſhion is, man is free to this or that, but bound to nothing.

6. It can be ſatisfied with no recompence but love for love, Cant. 1. Thy love is better than wine. Pſalm 63. 3. Thy loving kindneſſe is better than life.

Fourthly, With a love of dependency. Every creature capable of an affection of love is carried to that from whom it receives its good; ſo is the heart carried with delight to God from whom it expects all good, this is the ſweetneſſe of faith. We ſhall know this love by theſe ſigns,

1. All other creatures are not able to give any ſubſiſtence or ſatisfaction to us. In our fall we loſt God and cloſed with the creature, and we never think of returning to God till he have taught us the vanity of all other things; there muſt be ſatisfaction in the judgment, that there is in the Lord Chriſt what ever will ſerve my turn, and fully content all my faculties.

2. The heart hath ſweetneſſe, joy and [illegible] in its portion, God is All-ſufficient.

3. It

3. It is taken off from depending on any thing else.

Next to God (though he be to be loved transcendently, supereminently) there is a holy self-love. No man ever hated his own flesh; our love to our selves is the rule and measure of our love to our neighbour, I must love him as my self. Inordinate self-love is a great part of our original corruption: Men shall be lovers of themselves: If any one will be my Disciple, he must hate and reject himself. All the arguments God useth to winne men to love and fear God, and walk with him, are drawn from love of our selves, That it may be well with thee.

How to know whether the love wherewith I love my self be a sanctified self-love.

First, Who ever loves himself aright, it is the regenerate self which he accounts himself. Adam while he stood had but one self, so all unregenerate men. In one renewed by grace there is a double self, flesh and Spirit, the corrupt self is lookt on as an enemy, Rom. 7. lat. end. I delight in the Law of God in the inward man, and concludes, but I my self (that is, his sanctified self) serve the Lord. Mark what it is that thou esteemest in thy self: Is it Grace, Gods Image? and what thou dislikest and strivest to destroy, is it the body of sinne?

Secondly, Then that love is subordinate to the love of God. God to every sanctified man is the Summum bonum & ultimus finis, therefore all other things are but media subordinata, none of us must live to himself.

Thirdly, Such a one loves himself for those ends God allows him.

1. That he may be happy for ever. God presseth us to duty by this argument, That we may have eternal life.

2. He would have thee get more knowledge, grace, experience, that thou maist be more serviceable here.

The third object of our love is our neighbour.

Marks to know whether my love to my neighbour be a sanctified love:

1. When it is subordinate to the love of God, when I love him under God, we must love our neighbour in God and for God.

2. I must love there specially where God loves, those that have most of God in them, All my delight is in the Saints: Christ cals this a new Commandment.

3. There will be a performing of all second Table duties, Love is the fulfilling of the Law. I will give him that respect which is due unto his place, I will strive to preserve his life, chastity, estate, good name. I shall be content with my own and rejoyce in his welfare. It is the nature of love to seek the preservation of the thing beloved.

The fourth object of our love is the rest of Gods creatures which he hath given to us.

Marks to know whether our love to the creature be right or no:

1. When the beholding God in the creature draws the heart out, the delighting to behold the wisdom and power of God in the creature.

2. Mark for what end thou lovest the creature. Every creature must be delighted in as it brings us nearer to God, or serves as an instrument to honour him; thou lovest the creatures because they are a means to keep thee in a better frame for duty.

Gods people have also a great love to his Word, Psalm 119. 97.

The Word deserves it,

1. In respect of the Author, it is Gods Word, Hos. 8. 12.

2. Because of the matter revealed there.

It is,

1. True, certainty of truth will draw affection, Ephes. 1. 13. John 17. 17. it carries its own evidence with it. See 2 Pet. 1. 19. a transient voice is more easily mistaken than a standing authentick record.

2. Good, that will gain the affections, the happinesse of the will is the enjoyment of good. God is primum verum, & summum bonum, Nehem. 9. 13.

Our love is many wayes inordinate.
1. We love sin which we should hate.
2. We hate good which we should love.
3. We love that much we should love little.
4. We love that little which we should love much.
5. We love a private good more than the publick, the body above the soul, the creature more than the Creator, prefer things of time before those of eternity.

1 Tim. 1. 15. it ſhews the way of reconciliation with God, 2 Cor. 5. 19. and of eternal ſalvation, 2 Tim. 1. 10.

3. Profound and myſterious, Pſalm 119. 181. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Chap. XXI.

II. Of Hatred.

Amor eſt conſonantia quædam appetitus ad id, quod apprehenditur ut conveniens: odium verò eſt diſſonantia quædam appetitus ad id, quod apprehenditur ut repugnans & nocivum: ſicut autem omne conveniens in quantum hujuſmodi habet rationem boni, ita omne repugnans in quantum hujuſmodi habet rationem mali, & ideo ſicut bonum eſt objectum amoris, ita malum eſt objectum odij. Aquin. 1a, 2æ. Quæſt. 29. Art. 1.

THe affection oppoſite to love is Hatred.

1. The Nature of Hatred.
2. The Image of God in it.
3. The extream Depravation of it by ſinne.
4. The work of grace ſanctifying it.

Of the firſt.

Hatred in a reaſonable ſoul is a motion of the will whereby it flies from that which it apprehends to be evil, and oppoſeth it, endeavouring to hurt it.

It ariſeth from a diſcord and diſconformity of the object.

Love is the affection and propenſion of the mind toward ſome thing as good, hatred is an alienation of the mind from ſome thing as evil, to ſtand ſo affected to it, as thoſe words, Far be it, Far be it from me, ſet forth, when the ſoul riſeth againſt it.

There is a two-fold Hatred:

1. Odium abominationis, a flying only from a thing.
2. Odium inimicitiæ, whereby I purſue what is evil.

There was little uſe of this affection in our primitive pure eſtate, there was nothing evil to man or in himſelf, a concord in all.

Some ſay there is a three-fold hatred:

1. Natural; this the Philoſophers call Antipathy.
2. Odium inimicitiæ; this makes one do evil and rejoyce when he doth it to a perſon.
3. Odium abominationis, of loathing and deſpiſing a thing or perſon.

Wicked men hate the godly, Matth. 5. 44. & 10. 22.

1. With a natural inbred hatred; Diſſonantia naturarum eſt fundamentum odii.
2. With a hatred of enmity, Geneſis 3. 15.
3. With an hatred of abomination, Prov. 29. 27.

There are divers cauſes of this hatred, 1. Antipathy. 2. What hinders us from attaining good, envy, jealouſie, there was nothing then to work this but the ſin of the Devil only, which whether man knew it or no is uncertain, yet this affection was in him and ſanctified.

Firſt, He was prone in his ſpirit to ſhunne a real evil, ſinne in that degree it was evil.

Secondly, The depravation of this affection, the image of the Devil.

As much of our original corruption is found in this affection as any. The greatneſſe of the depravation of this affection appears in three things,

1. The Object of it.
2. The Quality of it.
3. The Fruits.

Only ſin is the proper object of it, but now our hatred is wholly taken from ſin, it abhors nothing that is evil.

The ſecond object of it now is that which is truly and properly good.

1. God

1. God himself primarily; all wicked men hate him, Psalm 81. 15. Rom. 1. 30. in all his glorious perfections, Justice, Holiness. They cannot endure to think of him, that is a pleasing thought to them to think that there is no God. Titus 3. 16. The Schoolmen propound this Question, Whether it be possible for a man to hate God, the chiefest good and fountain of all good? They say we hate him not as a Creator and Preserver, but as a Law-giver and a Judge, Psalm 12. 4. Rom. 8. 7. Wicked men despise his Omniscience, Jer. 2. 26. 1 Cor. 10. 22.

2. They are enemies to Christ, John 7. 7. & 15. ult. by apostasie, Heb. 10. 29. to his Priestly office, Phil. 3. 18, 19. to his Kingly, Luke 19. 14.

3. They are enemies to the Spirit of God, by resisting and quenching his motions, Gen. 6. 4. See Ephes. 4. 30. 1 Thess. 5. 19.

4. They hate all good men, You shall be hated of all men for my Names sake.

5. All Gods wayes and Ordinances, Fools hate instruction, Prov. 1.

Every man by nature is full of wrath against God, Ephes. 2. 3. Some interpret that actively, Psal. 68. 1. There is an enmity in man, 1. Against the very being of God, Psal. 14. 2. His Attributes, would not have him to be so just and jealous, Psal. 50. 21. so pure and omniscient, Isa. 29. 5. 3. Against the councels of God, Esay 66. 3. Ezek. 14. 3, 7. 4. Against the precepts and prohibitions of God, Rom. 7. 5, 8. 5. The worship of God, Deut. 32. 17. Psal. 106. 37. 6. The threats and promises of God, Job 15. 7. His administrations, Rom. 3. 4.

Secondly, The Quality of this affection. It is

1. A causlesse hatred, Christ saith, They hate me without a cause, and so the Saints may say. See Deut. 13. 20. Rom. 5. 10. 2 Peter 1. 4.

2. Perfect, entire without any mixture of any love.

3. Violent, Psalm 55. 3.

4. Cruel, Psalm 25. 9.

5. Durable, irreconcilable.

Thirdly, The effects of it:

1. All sins of omission.

2. Abundance of actual wickedness, contempt and distrust of God, his ways and children.

Fourthly, The Sanctification of this affection of hatred.

The work of grace in every faculty is destroying the power of corruption, and creating in it those principles of grace that turn it again into the right way.

1. It is taken off from those objects to which it was undeservedly carried afore.

2. It is ordered aright for measure.

3. It brings forth that fruit which God requires.

First, What the work of Gods grace carries the affection of hatred * to.

1. It makes all our opposition to God and his Ordinances cease, it ceaseth to hate good, and hates that which is evil.

2. It is carried to the right object, which is every thing that is really evil to us, the will shuns and opposeth it.

* Our hatred must be withdrawn from such things and persons as are not to be hated.

First, Things, 1. Goodness, vertue, piety, because it is the Image of God, and is in it self most beneficial, Prov. 1. 22, 29. 2. The means of goodness, as Instruction, Reproof, Correction, Prov. 9. 8. & 12. 1. John 3. 20. Secondly, Persons 1. The Church in general. 2. Any good man, 2 Tim. 3. 3. Psal. 34. 21. 3. He which admonisheth or correcteth, Prov. 9. 4. an enemy, Matth. 5.

Two sorts of things are really evil:

1. What ever is opposite to our natural being, our life, peace, wealth, name, as sickness, affliction, death.

2. What is contrary to our spiritual being, as sin.

All evils of the first nature come from God. Gods will is the rule of all holiness, therefore we should submit,

1. Our will to God to do what he pleaseth. That is the greatest evil which is against the greatest good, God: sin and wicked men oppose him, the greatest evil must have the greatest opposition, I hate every false way; sin strikes at the being and excellency of God; we must dislike wicked men for sins sake.

2. The work of grace appears in the degree and measure of working, when it san-sanctifieth any affection. It is according as the light of understanding guided by Gods counsel orders the Spirit; of evils sinne is to be more hated than punishment, and the greater the sin, the greater should be the opposition.

3. The work of Gods grace in sanctifying this affection, is much seen in the fruits of hatred.

This stands in two things:

1. Hatred is a Sentinel to the soul to keep out evil, it makes the soul warily shun and avoid those things which are really evil to me, it is a deep and severe passion, not sudden as * anger.

2. It quickens the soul to the destruction of the thing hated, it maketh it endeavour its ruine.

* Hatred differs from anger in three things: 1. Anger is with a particular; Hatred against universals, πρὸς τὸ γένος against the whole kind, I hate every false way. 2. Anger may be cured by time, but not hatred. 3. Anger is content to render like for like, hatred aims at the destruction of things. Among the Ægyptians a Fish was the Hieroglyphick of Hatred, because of all creatures they do most devour one another.

Signs.

I. Of Hatred.

Speaking against a thing still, and disgracing, it is displeased at its company, and cannot endure its presence.

II. Evidences of hatred of God:

1. A loathnesse to speak, think or hear of God, Psalm 10.4. Psalm 104.34.
2. When base pleasures are prefer'd before him, 2 Tim. 3.4.
3. A storming at the convictions of the Word.
4. Maligning the servants of God, Prov. 29.27.

We must hate sin as sin, for it self, else our hatred is not from a principle of love to God, as sin is a transgression of his Law, Psal. 97.10. If we hate sin for it self, we will, 1. Hate all sin, à quatenus ad omne valet consequentia, as he that loves a Saint for himself, loves every Saint, Psal. 119.113. 2. We will dislike sin under what shape soever it comes. 3. We will dislike it in all sorts of persons; those that are near us, Psal. 139.20,21. 4. We will hate sin in the being as well as acting of it, the Law requires a holy nature as well as life. 5. We will set no bounds to our hatred, Isa. 33.15. 6. Will dislike all occasions and means that tend to it.

III. Of Sanctified Hatred:

1. If it be sanctified, thou ceasest to be a hater of God. This makes a creature so like the Devil that no man will believe he hates God. Hatred is an opposition to love, love of God makes us endeavour an union with him, thou carest not for a knowledg of God, or being nigh him.

2. A desire that another may not be so excellent as he is; wicked men would not have God have a being, or so excellent a being, would not have him be so holy, pure, just.

3. A great signe of hatred is contrariety or opposition of wils. Gods will is revealed in his Word; when there is an opposition to it, we sinne against him, Exodus 20. the second Commandment, Those that love me, and keep my Commandments; those hate God that do not keep his Commandments. God chooseth holinesse, you filthinesse; if thy will be contrary to the choice he makes, thou hatest him.

4. That which is feared, unlesse it be with a reverential fear, is hated. To stand in awe of God as the Indians of the Devil, who dare not but offer Sacrifices, lest the Devil should hurt them.

Secondly, For the evil of punishment, how far sanctified hatred may be carried against crosses.

We may use all lawfull means to have the crosses removed, but with a quiet resignation to the will of God, if he will have it so.

Every Christian should have his heart possessed with a loathing, detestation and hatred of sin, that being indeed the first and principal, and most immediate object of hatred. Hatred of sinne will bewray it self, 1. In a constant jealousie and watchfulnesse over the soul, and over every small rising of corruption. 2. By a serious resistance in the temptation, Rom. 7.15. 3. By bitter grief after the transgression, Jer. 8.6. Rom. 7.23.

If our hatred be sanctified, then it is carried against sin primarily and properly, because it is Gods great enemy and ours, and the great evil in it self.

How

How to know whether our heart be rightly carried against sin.

This is a great part of Repentance, Psalm 97. 10. Repentance is the turning of the affections, especially those two great affections of love and hatred in our lost condition. Our hatred was against God, and our love set on sinne, now contrarily.

First, Where ever this affection of hatred is carried aright against sin, the mind judgeth of sinne as Gods Word doth, counteth it the greatest abomination, and dislikes it not onely because it brings damnation, but because of the nature of it. The Scripture cals it our deformity, uncleanneſſe, nakedneſſe, a running issue.

Secondly, Here sinne is grieved for as the greatest evil; if one have an antipathy against a creature, yet if that be farre enough there is no great trouble, Rom. 7. Wretched man that I am. It is the greatest spiritual, though not sensitive grief; we are most troubled at those evils which most affect the body, have the greatest sense of grief for them, as the Cramp, Gout, Stone, but here the intellectual nature is most offended with sinne, chuseth more to be rid of it than trouble, and judgeth himself more abominable for it, Gal. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 24.

Thirdly, A constant hatred of sin, and all sin, Psalm 119. 104, 113.

Fourthly, It endeavours to ruine and destroy it, the Scripture often expresseth it by killing of sin, Mortifie your members.

Fifthly, It hates it upon those grounds that God hates it; because it is a rebellion against God, crucifieth Christ, grieves the Spirit, is at enmity to the grace of God in me, I hate it upon such spiritual grounds.

Sixthly, Where ever sinne is truly hated, there we hate it most in those that are neareſt to our selves. Hatred of sinne is one half of repentance; sinne is a hatred of God, and a loving of sinne; in Repentance our love is turned to God, and hatred set on sinne.

It must be,

1. An irreconcilable hatred.
2. An unlimited hatred, hate all sinne in all, and especially my self, at all times, and every where.
3. Perfect, Psalm 139. 22.

Means to get our hatred of sin sanctified:

First, Study to get a right information of sinne; what ever can be the object of hatred meets in sinne in the higheſt degree; in crosses there is something evil, but in sinne there is nothing good; it is not onely evil, but hath in it all kind of evil.

1. A defiling evil.
2. Deprives us of all other good, robs us of God, peace, comfort.

Secondly, Principally get thy heart filled with the love of God and his wayes; You that love God hate that which is evil, Psalm 119. I love all thy Commandments, therefore I hate every evil way; love the holy Spirit, and thou wilt hate filthineſſe.

Chap. XXII.

II. Desire and Flight.

THe next Affection is that of Desire.

It differs no more from love than the Act from the Habit, it being the exercise of love. Amor currit per desiderium, quiescit per gaudium, sayes the Philosopher. See Mr Pemble's Vindic. gr. pag. 129, 130.

The

The surest Character you can make of a man is by his desires[a], as much as the Physician can judge of his patients condition by his appetite, Esay 26. 8,9.

In this affection four things are considerable:

1. The Nature of it.
2. The Image of God in it before the fall.
3. How extreamly depraved our desires are in their natural condition.
4. The work of grace in sanctifying of it.

Desire is the going out of the will, endeavouring after that we love, a good thing not yet enjoyed or not perfectly, the making out of the soul for the fruition of that good. Desiderium est appetitus rei non habitæ, it is that affection which excludes loathing.

There are three affections conversant about good, say some, Love about good in general, present or absent, Desire about good absent, Joy about good present. Des Cartes saith, not only the presence of good absent, but also the conservation of a good present is desired.

God gave to the soul of man when he created it a two-fold appetite:

1. Sensitive or natural, whereby the desires are carried violently after their own preservation.
2. Rational, or the will, these rational desires are exercised about spiritual things in the fruition of which one placeth his happinesse.

[a] In these hungrings and thirstings of the soul there is as it were the spawn of faith, Semen fidei, there is aliquid fidei in them. Psal. 10.17. & 145. 19. Isa. 55.1. & 44.3. & Luke 1.52. Revel. 22.17. Bolton on Mat. 5.6. It is the reaching of the soul after that which likes us, because it is like us.

It is an affection of pursuing or following after the absent good. It is that by which the minde stirres up in it self longing and wishing, and quickens it self to seek and attaine that good which it loveth, and yet is not present with it, Phil. 3. 14. Prov. 18. 1. Bonum delectabile non est absolutè objectum concupiscentiæ, sed sub ratione absentis: sicut & sensibile sub ratione præteriti est objectum memoriæ. Aquin. 1a, 2æ Quæst. 30. Artic. 1. The natural use of these desires is to keep up the soul in duty, notwithstanding discouragements, Bolton. 4. 6.

Of the Image of God in our desires in our innocent condition.

The understanding then lookt on God as his only absolute good, and the will of man did adhere to him, and acquiesce in him.

He desired a more perfect fruition of God, and that he might lay out himself more for him. Natural desires were few, moderate, subordinate to this, to be helps and furtherances of the perfect enjoying of God.

2. The depravation of this affection.

A great deal of our original corruption is vented out this way, the corruption of the understanding, will, love, hatred, thoughts, fall in here.

1. The object of the desire; whereas God should be onely desired, in our sinfull condition we have no desire after him, onely velleities, faint wishings and wouldings. Though the soul be full of desires, they are taken off from God and wholly carried to some poor empty creature.
2. The Qualities or Properties of these sinfull desires.
3. The wofull fruits of them.

The Qualities of our corrupt and carnal desires.

1. The vanity of them, which appears in three particulars,
   1. There is no reason to be given of our corrupt desires, as Samson, Give me her, she likes me.
   2. The things that we desire appear to be toyes.
   3. The innumerablenesse of them.
2. They are intense and violent, the soul pursues such things.
3. They are insatiable.
3. The wofull effects and fruits of them.
   1. These corrupt desires have got the regiment of the soul, they enslave reason the most noble faculty of it.
   2. Destroy all hope of profiting, they take up our time and study; the soul is ever imployed about some of these unworthy desires.
   3. They make the soul extreamly unthankfull for the mercies already received, they make the Soul and Spirit of a man base.
4. The work of Gods grace in renewing or sanctifying our desires.

The

The desires 1. of a carnal man after Christ flow from a principle of self-preservation, Numb. 23. 23. of a true believer from a supernatural work on the heart, Gal. 5. 17.

2. The carnal person desires Christ out of necessity onely, the true believer out of obedience, hath respect to the Commandment, John 20. 31. 1 John 3. 24.

3. A good mans desires proceed from his experience of the wayes of God, Psalm 19. 10, 11.

The activity of grace appears chiefly in our love and desire, for the good things of Christians are not yet enjoyed, and therefore is this affection so much exercised.

1. In general; the work of grace is to renew that which our original corruption spoiled in the affections, or to repair the Image of God once stamped there. It takes off the desire from the creature, and turns it to the proper object of it in a due order, method and measure.

2. Particularly.

First, The true object of a sanctified desire, primary and ultimate, is God, Christ, and all the graces of his Spirit, and the meanes of Grace, the Ordinances, and in a due place moderately the creature, and what ever is helpfull to me.

We ought to desire,

1. For our selves only good things, Prov. 11. 23 God chiefly, Psalm 42. 2. & Revel. 3.

2. Christs righteousnesse, and the vertues of the Spirit, the means and helps to grace, as the sincere milk of the Word, Psalm 119. 20. and the company of the Saints, and the like helps, as Paul desired to see Timothy; places and occasions of doing good if we finde our selves furnished for them, 1 Tim. 3. 1. Natural benefits and good things, health, liberty. We ought to desire for others, their conversion, Rom. 10. 1. and growth in grace and salvation, the welfare of the Church.

Secondly, The act or measure of it carried to its proper object, God and Christ, with greatest immensnesse, called hungring and thirsting: As the hart pants after the water brook. Esay 26. 9. and moderately carried to the things of this world: grace is a spurre to our desires for spiritual things, and a bridle to them for earthly.

Christ brings the heart to Heaven first, and then the person: His own mouth spake it, Mat. 6. 21. He that had truly rather have the enjoyment of God in Christ, than any thing in the world, shall have it. Baxters Saints everlasting Rest, part 1. chap. 3.

We should much desire,

1. The light of Gods countenance, Psalm 105. 4. Hosea 6. 1.

2. Mortifying grace, Psalm 19. 13 & 119 29, 36, 133.

3. Quickning grace, Psalm 119. frequently.

4. The word written, Joshua 1. 8. preacht, Ephes. 4. 11. James 1. 8. from a natural instinct, 1 Peter 2. 2. our experience of the power of it, James 1. 18, 19. and our necessity.

We must, 1. Desire spiritual things more than temporal, Matth. 5. 6.

2. Among spiritual things those most which may do us most good, as Paul bids us covet spiritual gifts, chiefly that we may prophesie.

3. The publick good more than our own.

There is no evidence of grace so constantly to be found in a gracious heart, as the holinesse of their desires, Nehem. 1. 11. The desire of our hearts is toward thee. Rom. 7. Cant. 1. Draw me, and we will run after thee. It is the great Gospel-qualification, Esay 55. 1. John 7. 37. Revel 22. 17. God hath made great promises to such as thirst, Esay 44. 3. Psalm 107. 9. Luke 1. 53. Matth. 5. 6.

Reasons. 1. Because their good is absent from them, the heart which cannot say, I pray and believe, can say, I desire to pray and believe. The true desire of grace is grace it self in a degree.

2. The Saints of God have ever pleaded their desires as an evidence of their interest in God, when they could plead nothing else, My soul longeth for thy salvation.

We may know our Desires after spiritual things,

1. By our delight in them, Psalm 119. 47.

2. By our prayers, they are the breathings out of our desires.

3. By the time we take for holy things; we will then redeem time from sleep, idle company and visits.

4. By our aims and the tendency of our spirit.

Marks to try whether our desires after these things be sanctified:

First, Then thou desirest all that is good, Christ, Grace, the Ordinances; the Gospel holds out Christ to be good to me, therefore one may somewhat desire this, and not be sanctified. I must desire him to be my King and Lord as well as my Saviour.

Secondly, It hath five Properties:

1. It is the greatest and strongest the soul hath of rational not sensitive desires, therefore set out by hunger and thirst, panting after God, Whom have I in Heaven but thee, and in the whole earth in comparison of thee? Rom. 7. 24. Desires put out on Election and counsel are put out most on these things.

2. It is accompanied with sadnesse and languishing if it attain not the thing desired: Hope deferred makes the heart sick.

3. They would enjoy the object presently. Balaam could desire it at later end; If I desire a thing as an end, I cannot but desire it presently.

4. These desires are constant till the thing be fully enjoyed, John 4. 14.

5. Such desires are operative, otherwise if they put us not on the use of means, they are not right. Such an one will be at any cost for exalting, adorning that thing. What is a mans happiness, end, glory, he desires to make as excellent as may be? Who ever truly desires spiritual things, desires them as their glory, they will give all for the glory of Christ, and the beauty of the Gospel?

How to know whether our desires after the things of this life be sanctified, try that by two things;

1. In the point of subordination, as they may stand with subordination to the great things he desires. As far as these outward things may be usefull and helpfull to the things of Gods Kingdom. One thing have I desired, saith David, as an end. Zech. 7. 5, 6. Whether you eat or drink, or what ever you do, and so desire, do all to the glory of God.

2. You shall try it by the moderation of your spirit, If you desire these things as inferiour goods, 1 Cor. 7. 27.

A wicked man may have some languid and vanishing motions toward the means as well as end, Velleitas est voluntas incompleta. Aquinas. His desires will not bear up against opposition, 1 Chron. 22. 9. it's but a conditionate will, they prosecute not what they have desired, Prov. 21. 25. & 13. 4.

Means or Directions to keep your desires strong and vigorous after spiritual things, and to moderate your desires after earthly things.

Of the first,

First, Labour for a thorow knowledge and acquaintance with these spiritual things; knowledge of a thing stirs up the appetite. Two men did vehemently desire a spiritual communion with God, Moses and Paul, and none knew more of Christ than these. Study the things of God, of Christ, and Gods Kingdom, not only a speculative knowledge, but a practical taste of God; rest not till thou hast some experience of this supernatural object. Other truths quickly cloy, when one understands an Art or Tongue, the knowledge of spiritual things quickens the appetite and enlargeth the soul.

Secondly, Labour to be acquainted with thine own emptinesse, how empty of all grace, and full of corruptions thou art; Teenum habita, labour to get a sense of these things, what a great evil an hard heart is, and what it is to be deprived of God; so the Lord counsels the Angel of Laodicea; and be restlesse upon every decay, till we have got our former pitch, Psalm 39. ult. Consider how short thou art of others, and of perfection.

Thirdly, Hope of attaining is the whetstone of desiring; study those promises, He will satisfie the hungry soul, and those that thirst after the Well of life, and open thy mouth and I will fill it.

Fourthly, We should be intimate with such as are of most quick and fervent desires.

Directions

Directions how our desires after the things of this life may be sanctified.

In general. The sanctification of these desires stands in their moderation; we must have a care that they be not inordinate.

Labour in general for a contented minde, Hebrewes 13. Be without covetousnesse; get a contented spirit which may stand in an indifferency to these things. Two Rules.

1. Let thy desires be fully let out after the things of Heaven; this will moderate them to all other things, because they will satisfie them.

2. Labour to be rightly informed what all these worldly things are, and thy soul will be moderate toward them: know six things of them.

1. None of all the things of this life have any good in them to us further than they are usefull. There is a necessity of food and raiment to uphold our natural being, but otherwise all these things are but usefull in a subordinate way, not good further than of good use.

2. They are of no use at all to the saving of thy soul: I am going to a place, said the Martyr; where money is nothing worth, the thing I am to look after is the saving of my soul.

3. They are all by Gods own appointment most inconstant and fading things: Riches take themselves to their wings, they are but flowers; these three considerations limit the good in them.

4. They are all vain, empty not simply, but entitatis debitæ; a Well is empty, though it be full of Air, if it have no water in it. Solomon challenged all the world to find more in learning, pleasures, than he did, What can the man do after the King

5. They are vexation of spirit, either in getting, keeping, fear of losing, or real parting.

6. They beguile, bewitch and make us worse.

1. Blind the judgment with erroneous principles, that they are prone to think amisse of God and his wayes.

2. Draw the heart from God: he (who is the great disposer of all earthly blessings) out of his fatherly love will measure out of all these mercies the best portion unto thee; Therefore be carefull for nothing, but let your request be made known to God.

The affection opposite to Desire is[b] flight. This was Moses his fault, Exodus 4. 13.

[b] Some call it Abomination.

It is a stirring of the soul to get away from the evil before it come too near, and have surprized a man.

We have an example of it in him that owing a man money, knowing or thinking that he will come to such a place, finds a kind of lothnesse to meet with him, and is moved to go out of the way, or absent himself that he may not meet with him.

Scio equidem vulgò in Scholis opponi Passionem quæ tendit in bonum, & quæ sola nominatur cupiditas vel desiderium, ei quæ tendit in fugam mali, quæ vocatur Aversio. Sed cum nullum detur bonum cujus privatio malum non sit, nec ullum malum, cujus privatio non sit bonum: Et cum quærendo, exempli gratiâ, divitias, necessariò fugiatur Paupertas, ac fugiendo morbos, quæratur sanitas, & sic de aliis; mihi videtur eundem semper esse motum, qui simul fert ad prosecutionem boni, & ad fugam mali quod ipsi contrarium est. Des Cartes de Passion. Anima part 2. Artic. 87.

It must be exercised on such things as are fit to be loathed and shunned: Such things as may be hurtfull to us:

We must not shun good things, as Christ shunned not his sufferings, Act. 21.13.

1. All manner of sinfull actions, Luke 12.1, 15. 2 Tim. 2.22, 23. & 1 Peter 3. 11. 1 Cor. 10.14. & 6. 18.

2. All manner of occasions and sollicitations to sin, 1 John 5. Babes keep your selves from Idols. Prov. 5.8. Joseph fled from his mistresse.

3. The familiarity and friendly society of sinners, chiefly such as would and do sollicite us to sin, Prov. 1.15. & 4.14. Away from me you wicked, saith David. 2 Tim. 3.5. 2 Thess. 3.6. Rom. 16.17.

4. Natural evils, when we are not put upon them by necessity of our calling; as poverty, disgrace, danger of limb or life, liberty, and the like, and such things as may be hurtfull to others.

5. Things unprofitable, vain and useless, Titus 3. 9.

For measure of working:

We ought,

1. To loathe and shun spiritual evils more than temporal, sin than danger.

2. To loathe publick evils and shun them more than private, the hurt of the Commonwealth or Church more than our own losse or danger, as David did when he went against Goliah.

3. To shun those natural evils most which most hinder goodnesse, vertue and the discharge of the duties of our place, as the losse of life more than of goods, of good name more than of liberty.

Chap. XXIII.

III. Joy and Sorrow.

THe next pair of affections are Joy and Sorrow. The Philosophers make these two the ground of all our vertues and endeavours.

Of Joy.

Four things are to be considered in Joy:

1. The nature of the affection.
2. What the Image of God was in this in our primitive condition.
3. The corruption of it in our Apostate condition.
4. What the Spirit of God doth to the repairing of this in our conversion.

1. What the Nature of Joy is.

It is an opening and dilatation of the heart upon the appearance of some present good, whence it hath the name of Latitia, as it were a broad and spreading passion. Latitia à mentis latitudine.

Joy is Acquiescentia cordis in bono sibi congruenti, the acquiescence of the will in the presence of a suitable good.

Joy enlargeth the heart, it breaketh out into serenity of countenance, into fluency of expressions, into active and vigorous gestures.

It is either,

1. Bodily, then the content the soul takes in it is called voluptas, pleasure.
2. Spiritual, then the content the soul takes in it is called gaudium, joy.

These things are required to make up this affection.

1. It must be a suitable good which gives satisfaction.
2. Proper, one must have an interest in and a title to it.
3. Present, the desire accomplished is the joy of the soul.

2. Mans joy in his primitive condition.

Then it was our happinesse, because in that pure estate man was not onely freed from all evils which might molest him, but was compast about with all good suitable to him. He enjoyed God himself, and all things which might conduce to his happinesse.

The holinesse of this joy.

The Image of God in this affection stood in the suitablenesse and proportionablenesse which was betwixt all the good which man enjoyed, and this affection. The rectitude of any faculty is when the faculty and the object meet. God is the onely absolute, adequate and supream good; therefore the greatest joy of the soul of man was placed in the enjoying of God, he found a suitable joy in all other good things, yet so that he did above them all prize God, and by them all did rise up more and more to the service of God.

3. Mans joy in his fallen condition.

The Object of it { 1. Privatively, is not in God. 2. Positively.

It

It is much placed,

1. In the deeds of darkneſſe, Rom. 1. 32. They take pleaſure in unrighteouſneſſe.
2. In all things wherein bruit beaſts and man do agree.
3. In meer fictions, Chymæra's, fancies and imaginations.
4. The comforts that the reſt of the creatures may give the ſoul; it is irregular in all.

The Properties of ſinfull joy:

1. It is unlimited; we place all our happineſſe in theſe things, Pſalm 49. 18. The rich glutton, Soul, take thy eaſe.
2. Vain; an immortal ſoul cannot find real ſatisfaction in an imaginary object
3. Various; the ſoul reſts not in any one of theſe comforts, but flits from one thing to another.

Thirdly, The wofull effects of theſe depraved joyes.

1. They wholly keep the ſoul from ſeeking or accepting the onely good which may give reſt to it; all Ordinances, the motions of the Spirit, the thoughts of God and goodneſſe are in vain propoſed to the ſoul, Eccl. 11. 9. Like the Ivy that ſeems to adorn the tree, but eats away all the ſap of it.
2. They leave a ſting and venom of ſorrow after, Prov. 14. 43. Job 20. 5. the end of that joy is ſorrow.

Fourthly, What is the work of Grace in ſanctifying this affection?

The Saints are full of ſpiritual delight, that is only of preſent good; paſt good is made preſent by remembrance, and future by hope.

Firſt, They delight to think of what of God they have enjoyed, Cant. 1. 4. Pſalm 146. 7.

Secondly, Delight to think what they ſhall enjoy, Rom. 5. 2.

Thirdly, They delight in thoſe good things which they do at preſent enjoy, ſo farre forth as God therein is manifeſted to them, Rom. 5. 11. They delight in thoſe glimpſes of favour they receive from him, Pſalm 94. 9. Cant. 2. 2.

Fourthly, They delight in the Ordinances,

1. Preaching, Rom. 10. 15.
2. Meditation, Pſalm 1. 2. & 104. 34.
3. Prayer, Pſalm 109. 4.
4. In the Sacraments, Matth. 24. 28. Acts 2. 42.

Delight is the flowing of love and joy, the reſt and complacence of the mind, in a ſutable deſirable good enjoyed, Nemo ſine delectatione diu poteſt vivere. Aquinas. Chriſt delights exceedingly in his Saints, Eſay 62. 5. Zephany 3. 17. Prov. 8. 31. and they alſo in him.

There is, 1. Habitual delight, which is the ſolid content and ſatisfaction of the ſoul in God.

2. Actual, ſtirr'd up, upon ſpecial occaſions, Luke 10. 23.
1. Upon ſome ſolemn manifeſtation of Gods love to his ſoul, Pſalm 4. 6.
2. Upon ſome ſolemn exerciſe of faith, 2 Peter 1. 8. Rom. 15. 13.
3. Upon Meditation, Pſalm 134. 34.
4. Upon renewing Covenant with God, and cleering up their intereſt, Acts 8. 39.

There is a delight which is a duty required of us, and a delight which is a diſpenſation given by God, for it is both required and promiſed in one verſe, Eſay 58. 13, 14.

This is,

1. A conſiderable affection; it ſets all the other affections on work.
2. A choice affection; it reſpects the laſt end, therefore it muſt be reſerved for God who is the chiefeſt good and laſt end, and his Word which is neereſt him.
3. If it be not rightly ſet it is moſt apt to degenerate, 1 Cor. 7. 30.

Although Gods people actually enjoy not the benefits of this affection, as of ſome others, becauſe of the weakneſſe of grace, yet a great part of our happineſſe lies in this. 1. The Spirit of God turns it from the corrupt to the right object, and helps the affection to act in the measure and order upon that object as it deserves. He turns the stream from rejoycing in those sensual and imaginary things, 1 Cor. 1. 13. it rejoyceth not in iniquity. 2. It is turned to God in Christ, hath interest and communion with Christ: We are the circumcision who rejoyce in Christ Jesus. I will go to God (saith David) who is my exceeding joy. See Psalm 104. later end. He is the full object of a regenerate soul. God in Christ is not here to be enjoyed immediately, but in and by the Ordinances, the more of God is in them, the more joy doth the soul take. 1. There are divers Commandments to rejoyce in God, Psalm 68. 3. & 105. 3. Phil. 4. 4. 2. It is for the honour of God that his servants rejoyce. It was not lawfull to be sad before the Persian Kings, they thought it to be a disparagement to their graciousnesse and honour. See Calv. 1. 10, 11. Phil. 3. 3. Galat. 5. 22. Rom. 14. 17. We are as much bound to make God our joy, as sinne our grief. We cannot love God with all our strength, unlesse we rejoyce in him. 1. It is not onely a duty but a priviledge to joy in God: What is your happinesse in Heaven but joy in God which is begun on Earth?

and

To joy in God is to joy, 1. That there is a God, who could hang the earth on nothing, ballance the clouds, make such a glorious world, but he? 2. That he is such a God, a living God, one that reignes and rules immutably, Psalm 18. 46. 3. To joy in the wayes of his communicating himself to us, his Word and Ordinances, Jer. 15. 16. Psalm 40. 6. Rom. 7. 14. To delight in his Sabbaths, in his Commandments and councels, Psalm 110. 3. Rom. 7. 22. To rejoyce in those graces whereby we are made conformable to him, when we rejoyce not onely in the profession of his name, but in persecution for his truth, Acts 5. 41. Heb. 10. 34. Rejoyce in communion with him, in hope of his appearance.

2. It is a priviledge peculiar to justified persons, Rom. 5. 5. Adam after he fell, saith, He heard the voice of God, and was afraid. See Psalm 106. 4, 5.

3. It is the highest priviledge that Saints can enjoy on this side Heaven, God is the chiefest object for this joy to be placed upon, and joy in God is the chiefest of all joyes, Psalm 4. 6.

Believers ought to rejoyce in God:

First, To shew their esteem of Gods favour, and their spiritual priviledge by Christ, Ps. 63. 3. Bernard saith, The joy of Saints is greater than that of Angels, because they were kept, not restored; they never had experience of another condition.

Secondly, To manifest a spiritual savour, by rejoycing in spiritual and heavenly things, Rom. 8. 5.

Thirdly, God is honoured by our rejoycing in him, when we serve him cheerfully.

Fourthly, Because of the benefit and advantage of it

1. It sweetens duty, Nehem. 8. 11. Acts 20. 24.

2. It marres the taste of carnal pleasures, Cant. 1. 4.

3. Supports us in afflictions, 1 Peter 1. 6.

The Spirit of God makes the soul close with the object in that measure and proportion that the object deserves, therefore joy in God and Christ are the most transcendent; it is called Joy unspeakable and glorious: Rejoyce exceedingly you righteous, Epist. 5. 18.

This is often called, The joy of the holy Ghost, Rom. 14. that is, not onely joy which is sutable to the Spirit of God, but that joy which the holy Spirit works in us.

There are seven things which every childe of God hath received from God, that give him occasion to rejoyce abundantly, though he be in tribulation.

First, All their sins are pardoned and freely done away in the bloud of Christ, Esay 40. begin. Christ said to the man sick of the palsie, Son, be of good cheer thy sins are forgiven thee.

Secondly, They are covered with the perfect robes of Christs righteousnesse before the Lord, Esay 61. 7, 8. they may rejoyce in their inherent righteousnesse, their sorrow for sin, love to the Lord and his people, much more in the imputed righteousnesse of Christ, Revel. 17. the guests were to rejoyce at the Brides marriage, much more the Bride.

3, Because

Thirdly, Because they are reconciled to the Lord, and all their services accepted notwithstanding their mixture of corruption.

Fourthly, All evil is removed from them: Sorrow is the apprehension of the heart, because of some evil object, Psalm 9. No evil shall come nigh his dwelling that is under the protection of the Almighty.

Fifthly, The Lord hath undertaken in his Covenant to supply them with all good, and to provide them whatsoever shall be needfull for them, whilst they live in this world.

Sixthly, When this life is ended there is provided for them a glorious condition in Heaven; the Angels will carry them thither, and Christ receive them, Matth. 5. Rejoyce and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in Heaven.

Seventhly, All these things are kept for them by Christ; thou art therefore more happy than Adam in Paradise, or the Angels before they fell, they had the image of Gods grace, yet in their own power to lose, and they did lose it.

Religion is no melancholy thing: Spiritus Calvinianus, Spiritus melancholicus, was an old Proverb, either from the Papists or Lutherans, because the Calvinists were against dancings and revellings.

Men think there is no joy but in the creature, a Christian hath his comforts as well as his sorrows. Christians offend in walking sadly. The pleasures of this world should not withdraw us from God, Rejoyce in the Lord always.

This Joy is,

1. Well bred, Gal. 5. 22.
2. Fed by the Word, John 17. 13. maintain'd and kept up by promises, Psalm 36. 8. Acts 8. 39.
3. A real joy, 1 Cor. 6. 10.
4. It is an intimate and cordial joy, Psalm 4. 7. & Psalm 119. 111.
5. It is a strong joy, Heb. 6. 18.
6. It is a joy that we are never weary of, nor ashamed of, 2 Cor. 1. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 31.

The Properties of this joy:

First, It is spiritual, its working is in the inward and most spiritual faculty of the soul, the intellectual nature, of the same nature that the joy of God and Christ is.

Secondly, It is given for the time of afflictions and trial especially, Rejoyce in tribulation, 2 Cor. 7. exceedingly rejoyce in all our troubles.

Thirdly, It is built on such things as will never fail, on pardon, free favour, unchangeable promises.

Fourthly, Everlasting, Everlasting joy shall be upon their heads.

Motives to sanctified joy:

First, The Lord cals for the exercise of this affection as frequently and earnestly as any; we are not more frequently exhorted to fear God, to love him, to desire and seek after him, than to rejoyce in him, Phil. 4. 4.

Secondly, God is offended if his people rejoyce not in his service, Deut. 28. 47.

Thirdly, Joy breeds thankfulnesse; the Psalmist often joyns these two together, Joyfulnesse and singing of Psalms.

Fourthly, It breeds spiritual strength, The joy of the Lord is your strength, Nehem 8. 10.

Fifthly, This is a great honour to the profession of Religion, and glory to Christianity, it will satisfie others that there is some secret excellency in that way.

Sixthly, The example of other men, who rejoyce in vanity, and wilt not thou rejoyce in Christ?

Marks and evidences of spiritual and sanctified joy:

First, By the Antecedents of it.

1. It is promised to the mourners in Sion, Esay 61. 1. Matth. 5. 4. till sin be our sorrow we shall never have this joy, John 16. 9. The first work of the Comforter is to convince the soul of sin, and so of sorrow.

2. To believing in Christ, one is not capable of Gospel-joy till he believe in Christ, Rom. 15. 13. 1 Peter 1. 8. Phil. 1. 25.

Secondly,

1. Then you will delight in his institutions, in means of communion with him, Psa. 122. 1.
2. In other things in reference to him, Deut 28. 4. & 26. 11.
3. By cheerfulnesse in the practice of holinesse, Ps 119. 14. Acts 20. 24. 1 John 5. 3.

Secondly, By the object of it, it is Christ and the things he brings with him; the suitableneſſe betwixt theſe and our ſouls is the joy. In what proportion any creature brings Christ with it, in that proportion we rejoyce, as David, Jeremiah, Job; in the Word, becauſe there is abundance of Christ in preaching, the Sabbath is Christs viſiting-day, therefore their delight; prayer, becauſe there is an intercourſe betwixt God and the ſoul, Job 27.10. Communion of Saints.

Thirdly, By the Companions of it; the reſt of the fruits of the Spirit, Galat. 5.22,23. 1. They come by cluſters, love, meekneſſe, patience, temperance. 2. It is jealous and fearfull leſt it ſhould be miſtaken; the two Diſciples believed not for joy.

Fourthly, By the fruits of it.

1. Hereby we are fortified againſt ſinning.

2. It will make one readily part with any thing for Chriſts ſake, Endured with joy the ſpoiling of their goods, Heb. 11. Pſalm 51.12. Ignatius ſaid, Bring the Lions, I ſhall make brave bread when I am ground.

Means to get our joy ſanctified, and to keep it.

It is gotten in the new-birth, all affections are ſanctified at once.

How we may come to make God in Chriſt our ſupream joy.

1. Thou muſt labour to know God and Jeſus Chriſt, Mat. 13.44. when he found the treaſure and ſaw the worth of it, he rejoyced; know how good, merciſull and gracious the Lord is.

2. Faith will produce joy; ſtrengthen faith and ſtrengthen joy, 1 Peter 1.6,7. Rom. 13.15. and hope likewiſe, Rom. 12. Rejoycing in hope.

3. Beg it much at Gods hand; pray him that thou maiſt rejoyce, John 16.31 ſay, Lord in mercy fill my ſoul with the light of thy countenance.

4. Meditate of the things thou haſt heard and learned concerning the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; ponder on the good things given thee of God in Chriſt, ponder how excellent it is to be a pardoned man, to be accepted of Gods Son, to have the promiſes of the Goſpel belonging to thee.

5. Labour to preſerve uprightneſſe of Spirit in thee; no man can rejoyce in God that doth not walk with him: true righteouſneſſe may be without joy, but true joy cannot be without righteouſneſſe.

6. Frequently renew godly ſorrow; carnal mirth ends in ſorrow, godly ſorrow ends in joy: this will keep thee low in thine own eyes.

7. For maintaining of your joy, be carefull of your bodies; next to ſin nothing is more to be ſhunned than to be under the power of melancholy.

How our joy may be ſanctified in reſpect of the outward mercies and good things of this life.

God allows his children to take joy and comfort in all the things of this life, in wine, muſick; Live joyfully with the wife of thy youth.

This joy is ſanctified:

Firſt, When we take joy in every creature, ſo as we finde God in them; ſee his love to us.

Secondly, As any creature bears Gods Image. David loved Salomon becauſe he was a Jedidiah.

Thirdly, Be as it not in all the joy that thou takeſt in them, 1 Cor. 7. be moderate.

Fourthly, Let not thy heart draw thee from God.

Fifthly, All the joy thou takeſt in the creatures muſt be in due ſeaſon as well as in due degree, not in time of mourning, Rejoycing alwayes in the Lord.

Chap. XXIV.

Of Sorrow.

THe oppoſite paſſion to Joy or Delight, is Grief and Sorrow. Yet godly ſorrow and ſpiritual joy are not inconſiſtent; thoſe that have had the moſt raviſhing joy, have had it often after the exerciſe of godly ſorrow. Sorrow makes us ſerious, joy makes us active. The end of mourning is to bring comfort to the ſoul, Matth. 5.4. 2 Cor. 7. 10. There are diſtinct ſeaſons for both theſe duties, Eccleſ. 3. 4.

It is a paſſion which doth tie up, bind and ſtreighten the heart through the apprehenſion of evil preſent.

It is a paſſion whereby the appetite doth abhor with perturbation evil preſent, whether ſo in deed or in apprehenſion. Par on Rom. There muſt be, 1. Conjunctio mali, an evil preſent. 2. Perceptio mali, one muſt know it to be preſent.

Grief in it ſelf is a good affection planted by God in mans nature at the firſt, to be a means of cauſing him to avoid things that were evil for him, and would procure his hurt.

It is procured by the gathering of the worſt and groſſeſt bloud about the heart, which cauſeth a dulneſſe in the Spirits, and conſequently unlivelineſſe in all the other parts; for the bloud and ſpirits are the inſtruments of all affections.

To grieve is natural, to grieve for ſinne is a ſtrain above nature; Grace doth not deſtroy but correct nature.

Godly ſorrow is that ſenſe and apprehenſion which one hath of ſome thing contrary to the honour and will of God, and that trouble which ariſeth in the will, becauſe of the ſame, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10, 11. It is diſtinguiſht,

1. From natural ſorrow, becauſe there one grieves for ſome thing deſtructive to nature.

2. From worldly ſorrow which reſpects temporal good, but godly ſorrow is called for ow after God.

Terrour of conſcience apprehends wrath, fury, vengeance and damnation, and is thereby perplexed for a time. Contrition looks chiefly to a fault, and a contrite perſon is troubled, becauſe he hath deſerved damnation.

Contrition of ſpirit is called the Sacrifice of God, Pſalm 51. 17. Becauſe God provides it, and delights in it, Pſalm 34. 17. Eſay 61. 1. & 66. 2. and by way of eminency, it is called alſo in that Pſalm Sacrifices, becauſe it is required in all Sacrifices and ſervices, in prayer, hearing, receiving, and becauſe it is inſtar omnium, eſteemed by God above all Sacrifices. He will not deſpiſe it, that is, will moſt favourably accept it. See Eſay 57. 17. This was ſignified by the Meat-offering of fine flower mixed with oyl which was to be joyned with their burnt-offerings. That fine flower did type forth this contrition, by which the heart is as it were ground to pouder, that it may by the holy Ghoſt be offered up unto God, Levit. 2. 1. * Quoties te in conſpectu Domini video ſuſpirantem, Spiritum ſanctum non dubito aſpirantem, cum intuor flentem, ſentio ignoſcentem, ſaith Cyprian.

Terrors of conſcience drive men (in whom there is no contrition) to vain and idle helps, ſports, company, and leave a man deſperate

Contrition of heart is that grace whereby a mans ſoul is truly humbled in the ſight of his ſins, Matth. 5. 4. It differs ſomewhat from the grace of humility. For humility was in Adam during his innocency, and ſhould have been in all of us if we had never ſinned, and (as ſome think) is in the Angels; for all creatures that are truly good, do caſt down themſelves before God, and make no account of themſelves in regard of him, which to do is to be humble: but contrition of ſpirit doth neceſſarily preſuppoſe ſinne, and when the ſoul doth ſo apprehend the nature of ſinne, and its own ſinfulneſſe, that it is thereby caſt down, abaſed, afflicted, this is brokenneſſe of heart. It differs alſo from terrour of conſcience, ſtiled attrition by the Schoolmen; that looks to the puniſhment of ſinne, this chiefly to the evil of ſinne as it is ſinne, and to the very fountain of all ſinne, the corruption of nature from which all actual ſins ariſe.

Contrition is joyned always with an humble boldneſſe to live to the mercy of God in Chriſt.

Few affections or graces contribute more to a Chriſtians welfare than this; a great part of Gods Image, and the practice of holineſſe lies in it.

There is a two-fold ſorrow:

1. Senſitive, expreſſed in a ſenſible manner.

2. Intellectual. The ſorrow of the will or rational ſorrow is a being diſpleaſed with a thing as having the heart diſtaſted and diſliked with it, a feeling of ſinne as evil with an averſneſſe of the will. Paſſionate ſenſible ſorrow is ſuch a ſtirring of the heart as brings forth tears, this follows the bodily temper. Not ſo much the greatneſſe of the ſorrow as the efficacy of it muſt be looked unto, and the motive of it, that it be the conſideration of the ſpiritual miſchief of ſinne in provoking God and cauſing his diſpleaſure: the ſmalleſt meaſure of ſorrow thus grounded and working is repentant.

Tears are not of the eſſence of godly ſorrow:

Firſt, Becauſe they much follow the conſtitution of the body, ſpiritual graces are not founded in a natural conſtitution.

Secondly, There may be the greateſt ſorrow where there are no tears, Cura leves loquuntur, ingentes ſtupent.

To weep for fear is childiſh, that is unbeſeeming a man; and to weep for anger is womaniſh and weak; to weep for meer grief is humane; for ſinne, Chriſtian; but for true zeal and compaſſion is Saint-like and divine; every one of theſe drops is a pearl. Bp Halls Remaining Works on Phil. 3.18.

The work of Gods grace in ſanctifying it:

1. The Author of it.
2. The true Object.
3. The gracious Effects.

Firſt, Of the Authour of it.

It is the holy Spirit that is the worker of all godly ſorrow. It infuſeth ſuch a principle that it turns it from all evil objects, and ſets it on the right objects in that meaſure and proportion that the thing requires.

Zech. 12. 10.

Secondly, The true Object of it.

We muſt grieve,

See Mark 3. 5. & Luk 19. 41. Rom. 9. 2. Pſal. 119. 136. Rom. 12. 15.

Firſt, For our own ſins, Ezek. 7. 16. & 9. 4. and the ſins of others, even of particular men; and the publick ſinnes. Pſalm 119. 136. David ſaith in another place, He beheld the tranſgreſſours and was ſorrowfull: And Jeremiah ſaith, He would weep in ſecret for their pride, Jer. 13. 17. 2 Peter 2. 7.

Secondly, For the miſeries and calamities of others, which is pity, chiefly publick calamities of the Church and State, as Nehemiah and Mordecai, 1 Sam. 20. 34. 2 Cor. 11. 29.

Thirdly, Our own croſſes and afflictions which befall us in our ſelves and others, as Job did mourne when the evils befell him, and David when he was threatned his childe ſhould die, and Paul was ſorry for the ſickneſſe of Epaphroditus.

Rom. 7. ult.

Fourthly, Our own ſins and offences for which we are called to afflict our ſelves and mourn, and to turn unto the Lord with tears and lamentations.

The meaſure of our ſorrow.

1. Simply, all our ſorrows muſt be proportionable to their cauſe.

2. Moderate, not as men without hope, neither for friends nor croſſes, nor continue over-long.

3. Comparatively, we ought to grieve more for our ſins than croſſes, for the faults of others than their afflictions. We ſhould grieve moſt for ſinne appretiative, if not intenſive. It ſhould be a Chriſtians beſt ſorrow for quality, if not his greateſt for quantity: Sorrow for ſinne is more intellectual and durable, Semper dolet & de dolore gaudet, the matter of this ſorrow ſtill continues, yet a Chriſtian is to teſtifie his godly ſorrow, ſometimes more than another, 1 Samuel 7. 6. Zech. 12. 10, 11.

Sorrow for ſinne may be,

1. A more ſetled, inward and conſtant ſorrow.
2. More deeply rooted, though not ſo vehement.

The Objects of it, are

Such

Such things as are principally and properly matter of griefe to him, either the absence of that wherein their real goodnesse lies, or the presence of a real evil.

First, The want of Gods presence in his favour and grace, the want of his Image and Ordinances, Psalm 42. 3,4.

Secondly, The presence of that which is really evil, Gods wrath and displeasure. David and Heman could have no peace, because God was angry. To lie under the guilt of sinne, Psalm 51. to be under the power of corruption, Rom. 7. when Gods name is dishonoured. Psalm 119. Rivers of tears runne down mine eyes, because men keep not thy Law. Rom. 9. I have great heavinesse of heart, because my brethren are cast off.

The gracious Effects or Fruits of godly sorrow.

Eccles. 7. 3. that is, by the sadnesse of the heart exprest in the countenance, the heart is made better, 2 Cor. 7 10,11.

1. In general; it is a marvellous help to Repentance, it brings forth Repentance never to be repented of. There are two comprehensive duties Faith and Repentance; Repentance is the turning of the soul from evil unto good, it stands chiefly in our affections, and consists in turning them from evil; godly sorrow and hatred do this.

2. More particularly, it worketh great care and fear of being overtaken with sin, indignation and zeal; it makes the soul very humble.

Thirdly, It is an excellent help to patience and meek subjection to the hand of God; I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned against him.

Some think it is a crime to mourn for their own sins, and those that would be counted Christians of the higher forme; they say, Ministers which presse this duty are legal, and that such as mourn understand not their own liberty; the Gospel taketh not away the conscience of sin, though it doth the fear of damnation. To scoff at mourning and humiliation was once a badge of prophaneneſſe: Those that say justified persons must not mourn for sins, may as well say, they must not have an heart of flesh. David one of the holiest Saints in the Old Testament, and Paul in the New were eminent in the grace of godly sorrow.

Marks of godly sorrow:

Consider, first, When we mourn, whether we grieve for sin when we are quiet from crosses, and when our sin is kept from the world, and when we have no terrors of conscience, then our sorrow for sin is because we have offended God. Sin is made grievous indeed by the other effects, and when they come the sorrow is made more and more troublesome.

Secondly, For what sins we mourn; If for such sinne as will not bring discredit in the world, yet if they offend God more we grieve more; this is a good sign.

Thirdly, In what sort we behave our selves in mourning; if we go to God, complain against our selves to him, confesse to him, lament before him, seek to reconcile our selves to him. Judas ran crying to the High-priest: Peter wept to God in secret. Other Marks,

1. If we could wish that sin past had never been.
2. If the constant bent of the will be not to sin for the time to come.
3. If one be sensible of his want of godly sorrow, and mourns under it.

Motives to godly sorrow:

First, It is a great evidence of thy love to God, Ezekiel 16. later end, the Church mournes when he was pacified to her, to thinke how she had grieved him.

Secondly, Often meditate of the wonderfull fruit godly sorrow brings forth in the soul of man, the mournfull Christians which grieve when God cals for sorrow, are the most fruitfull in afflictions.

Means or Helps to godly sorrow:

1. Meditation, 1. Of the necessity and profit of it, if we bewail not our sins we cannot attain pardon of them, for Christ is sent to binde up the broken in heart,

Intueamur quemadmodum ubi Deum dixit nolle sacrificium, ibi Deum ostendit velle sacrificium. Non vult ergo sacrificium trucidati pecoris, sed vult sacrificium contriti cordis. Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 10. cap. 5.

to comfort mourners, to refreſh and give reſt unto the weary ſoul, Zech. 12. 10,12, & 13. James 4. 8,9. Voluntary ſorrow or remorſe of heart whereto the ſoul doth of its own accord ſtrive to work it ſelf by taking pains with it ſelf, is exceeding medicinable; it hath a purging power, a healing vertue, Gods Spirit doth work with and by it, to the making clean of the heart and hand: Godly ſorrow breedeth Repentance, that is, Reformation of heart and life. Onely the blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt can cleanſe from the guilt of ſinne, and deſerve by way of merit the remiſſion of the puniſhment thereof; but the teares of penitent ſorrow will help to waſh away the ſtain and filth of ſinne, and to break the dominion of it from off the ſoul, and to confirm the heart againſt it; a man muſt grieve for his ſins here, or howl for them hereafter, and by this he ſhall prevent many chaſtiſements, and be armed againſt carnal ſorrow, and be made capable of ſound conſolation.

Meditate what mourning and ſorrow ſinne hath coſt thy Saviour.

2. Prayer to God that he would perform his promiſe of taking away the ſtony heart, and giving a fleſhy heart in ſtead of it.

3. A good man muſt repreſent his ſins unto his own ſoul, as exceeding grievous, dangerous and loathſome. He muſt aggravate ſinne to himſelf, and cauſe his underſtanding to apprehend it a very vile thing, worthy to be lamented and wept for more than any thing in all the world beſides, and to that end he muſt conſider

Often remember and read over the evils that thy ſoul is guilty of.

1. How exceeding many and innumerable his ſins are.

2. The greatneſſe of ſome of them in regard of aggravating circumſtances; moſt groſſe and palpable for matter, preſumptuous for manner, againſt plain and evident light, conſcience, reproofs, purpoſes, vows and all helps, made even a trade of them. I know your great ſins, ſaith the Prophet: and, This people hath committed a great ſinne, ſaith Moſes: and ſo David, Forgive mine iniquitie, for it is great.

3. The hatefulneſſe of ſin in regard of the vile effects thereof.

First, It doth wrong and offend God in his Sovereign Authority and greatneſſe, and in his Wiſdome, in his right to the creatures who is ſo excellent and great.

Secondly, It hath brought much miſery upon all the creatures; the earth is barren, the Sea troubled, the Air infected, and every thing out of order, becauſe of ſinne. We have loſt the ſtate of innocency, are caſt out of Paradiſe, deprived of Gods favour, his Image, the dominion over the creatures that we had, forfeited our right to heavenly glory, loſt our knowledge of God, and of all his excellent creatures. The ſoul of man is dead in ſins by reaſon of ſinne, and his body mortal, and both ſubject to eternal death. We are curſed in all that we put our hands to, becauſe we have tranſgreſſed the Law of God.

Thirdly, Conſider Chriſts ſufferings, in which we may ſee the odiouſneſſe of ſinne.

Fourthly, The torments of hell which the damned do ſuffer, becauſe they did not in time bewail their tranſgreſſions, and we ſhall endure if we grieve not.

Fifthly, Call to mind the examples of thoſe which have mourned for ſinnes, David, Peter, Mary Magdalen.

David, quo nemo flevit diutius, Pſ 6.6,7. Petrus quo nemo flevit acerbius, Matth. 26.75. Magdalena quo nemo flevit abundantius.

The affections of the iraſcible appetite follow, viz. thoſe which reſpect their object with difficulty of attaining or avoiding of it.

Chap. XXV.

Hope and Fear.

I. Of Hope.

I. The Nature of this Affection.

Philosophers call it, Extensionem appetitus naturalis.

It is an earnest and strong inclination and expectation of some great good apprehended as possible to be obtained, though not without difficulty. It is an expectation of the good things God hath promised, and faith believed.

Hope, trust and confidence are all one.

It is a great Question, Whether it be more difficult to trust in God for spiritual or temporal blessings? The promises for temporal things are not so expresse, and they are not fulfilled in the letter. On the other side, there are more natural prejudices against pardon of sinne than daily bread. We do not so easily believe Gods supply of temporal blessings, because bodily wants are more urgent. He that will not trust in Christ for provision for his body, will not trust in him for salvation of his soul.

Spei objectum est bonum futurum, arduum, possibile adipisci, saith Aquinas.

First, The object about which it deals is some great and sutable good, especially salvation, Gal. 5. 5. Col. 1. 3.

The good is thus qualified:

1. It is Futurum, Hope is of good things to come, Tit. 2. 13. Joy is in a good present, fear is of evils to come.
2. Possibile, else we never expect it; herein it differs from despair.
3. Difficile, because it ever looks on the good it waits for, as not to be obtained by its own strength.

Secondly, The act of what the soul doth in reference to this object, an expectation; this the Scripture expresseth by waiting, patient abiding.

We may and must hope, 1. In regard of our selves, for all good things both spiritual and temporal, both for this and a better life. As 1. For salvation and remission of sins. 2. For maintenance in this world, and all other needfull comforts. 3. Deliverance out of crosses so far as shall be good for us. 2. In regard of others, we must hope for the welfare of the Church, and the ruine of the enemies thereof.

All hope is either Humane, the expectation which the rational creature hath from some second cause; this the Scripture cals A vain hope, A Spiders-web, A lie. Divine, the expectation of the will to receive good from the hand of God. The ground of such a hope must be the Word of God, by which alone his power and truth stand ingaged to us, and to hope for any thing but from them, is vain. So we must either have a general or particular promise * of the thing hoped for, or else it is idle to expect it. Therefore David repeateth it more than once, that he hoped in Gods Word, Psalm 130 5. & Psalm 119. 49, 81. So Abraham had Gods promise for a son in his old-age before he expected one.

* Act. 26. 6, 7. Ephes. 2. 12. Heb. 6. 18. Col. 1. 23.

The measure of Hope.

It must be strong and firm without wavering, so as to hold out even against hope, all likelihood.

The continuance of it. It must hold out against all delaying and procrastination, 1 Peter 1. 13. this is waiting on God, which is commanded.

II. The Image of God in this affection. There will be no use of hope at all in glory, there was little use of it in the primitive condition of man. The object of his happinesse was present and enjoyed, God, his favour and communion, and all things in him, but this did not continue.

III. The corruption of this affection.

1. The corrupt object of our hope when we are depraved.
2. The wofull effects and cursed fruits it brings forth.

First,

First, The object, that which is the only excellent object of it a wicked man hath wholly loſt, God, his Image, favour, grace, Eph. 2. 14. & 1. 11. That object though ſutable is not lookt on by him under that notion.

There is no declaration of the will of God to reach out this unto him. Although there be no real hope, yet there is a baſtardly hope which the Scripture cals preſumption, The hope and vain expectation of the wicked will be cut off; it is an ungrounded confidence whereby a ſinner without warrant will promiſe himſelf all good.

Secondly, The wofull effects which this falſe hope produceth in the ſoul of man.

Juvenes multum habent de futuro & parum de præterito, & ideo quia memoria eſt præteriti, ſpes autem futuri, parum habent de memoria, ſed multum vivunt in ſpe. Aquin. 1*a*, 2*æ* Queſt. 40. Art. 6.

1. It is a great means to draw them violently into the wayes of ſin. Young men are therefore eaſily beguiled, becauſe they are full of hope.

2. This corrupt hope wraps up the ſoul in a curſed, carnal ſecurity, Job 18. 13, 14.

3. When this is cut down it uſually ends in bitter deſpair, becauſe the confidence it had to uphold it ſelf was a meer figment.

IV. The Sanctification of this affection:

Becauſe the greateſt part of a Chriſtians good is unſeen and unenjoyed in this world, therefore hope muſt have a great influence on a believers life to comfort, ſtay and refreſh him, Rom. 8. 24, 25.

The work of Gods Spirit in ſanctifying this affection:

1. In turning it to its right object, and upon a right ground.

2. In producing the right, proper and natural effects of it; hope thus rectified is the eſtabliſhing of the ſoul in all ſtorms. It looks at two things, the good to be enjoyed, and the means whereby it is to be enjoyed.

The Covenant is rather the ground than the object of Hope.

God in Chriſt, and the Spirit, is the principal object that hope cloſeth with, Jer. 14. 8. Rom. 15. 13. Col. 1. 27. 1 Peter 1. 21.

The leſſe principal are the promiſes concerning this and a better life, Heb. 11. or rather the things promiſed.

The means of hope are the good will of God, the Interceſſion of Chriſt, the Ordinances.

Falſum non poteſt ſubeſſe fidei.

The ground of hope is faith in the Word; the act of Hope is expectation, the putting out of the rational appetite in the expectation of a future good which is difficult, not a vain uncertain expectation, but a ſure expectation of it, the object is ſure, if I believe it, this makes the ſoul poſſeſſe it ſelf in patience, Rom. 8. 24, 25. Heb. 11. 1. Faith looks at the truth as preſent, Hope cloſeth with it as future.

There is a certainty,

1. Of the object, when the thing I believe or hope for is infallible.

2. Of the ſubject, when the thing is made ſure to my ſoul.

Two things are contrary to Hope, Deſpair and Preſumption:

Deſpair is a falling of the heart from the future good conceived, as inattainable at leaſt to the parties ſelf. It is a ſoul racking it ſelf with what is, and what will be. See Job 13. 14.

We muſt deſpair of attaining any good thing by our own induſtry without Gods ſpecial help. We muſt not deſpair of attaining any good thing by Gods gracious bleſſing, favour and mercy, viz. power againſt ſinne, pardon of it, deliverance out of croſſes and life eternal. It is not a bare abſence or privation of hope, but a paſſion contrary to hope, as love to hatred. Francis Spira in the deſpair of his ſoul, cried out, Verily deſperation is hell it ſelf, he ſaid, My ſinne is greater than Gods mercy.

Preſumption, which is the exceſſe of hope; the Papiſts expect Heaven as a reward of their obedience. It is a taking of things afore-hand, or a looking for that God hath not promiſed.

What the proper uſe of this holy affection is to Gods people whilſt they live in this world.

1. To be a ſtay and ſafeguard to their ſouls in all times of difficulty, Heb. 6. The Anchor of the ſoul.

2. It

2. It is while we are in this world all the possession we have of the other world, *Rom.*6. We are saved by hope, See Gen. 49 18. Job 14. 14. Rom. 8 23.

No man can be satisfied with the things of this world; God hath promised, and Christ hath purchased eternal life, therefore hope expects it, 1 Pet. 1. 18.

Marks of a sanctified Hope:

1. The holy Scripture breeds it, Rom. 15. 4. Col. 1. 23. it discovers thy desperate condition in thy self, Lam. 3 24,25.

2. It is grounded upon true faith in Christ, Rom. 15. 13. Col. 1. 27.

3. Such a one minds heavenly things more than earthly, Heb. 11 15, 16.

4. He that hath true hope to go to Heaven, will be carefull to prepare and fit himself for it, 2 Cor. 5. 9. 1 John 3. 3. Psalm 37. 3. becaufe the foul expects good from God; it labours to walk acceptably with him.

5. It carries the foul chearfully on in the ufe of all thofe means which the Lord hath appointed for the attaining that end, Heb. 10. 23.

6. The ufe of it principally appears when ftorms and difficulties arife; the real ufe of it is to ftay the foul, when troubles come; it quiets the foul and makes it patient and content under preffures, 1 Tim. 4. 10.

It clofeth with the good things the Gofpel holds out, and in the way that it holds them out.

It is compared to an Anchor, and an Helmet. Eph. 6. 17. compar. with 1 Theff. 5. 8.

Motives to Hope:

Firft, There is a neceffity of it, we cannot live without it; it is an expectation of an abfent good; we fhall be daft on the rocks continually if we have not this Anchor of our lives, Prov. 10. 28. 1 Peter 1. 13.

Secondly, When this grace is wrought in the foul it will keep it in a quiet calm condition.

Thirdly, It will be a great help to Holineffe: He that hath this Hope will purifie himfelf as he is pure. One cannot have a Gofpel-hope, and lead a wicked life.

Fourthly, This hope will never deceive you, or make the foul afhamed, Rom. 5. 5. The hope of the wicked is like a Spiders-web, and the giving up of the ghoft.

Means to get a fanctified Hope:

In general you muft labour to be new-creatures, the Spirit of God muft work it.

Firft, Let thy hope never reft on any thing but a word of God, Rom. 15. 4. there is no bottom for this Anchor but that.

Secondly, Meditate on the All-fufficiency of God who hath given thee that word, Rom. 4. 18, 19. Pfalm 9. 10.

1. On Gods Almighty power, how infinitely able he is to help.

2. On his free-grace, on his own accord he makes and keeps the promife.

3. His Mercy, Goodneffe and Faithfulneffe.

Thirdly, Experience of Gods dealings with others, James 5. 11. and our felves, Pfalm 42. 8. Rachel when fhe had one fon, fhe called him Joseph, faith fhe, God will adde another. Pfalm 77. 10, 11. The fervants of God of old did write fome fpecial name on their deliverance, or named the place fo as to remember it, to help them both to praife God for mercies received, and to ftrengthen them to hope in God for time to come, as Eben-ezer. The ftone of help; Jehovah-jireth, The valley of Baracha, Pfalm 78. 9, 10 Rom. 5. 7.

Fourthly, The examples of his mercy and favour to others, Pfalm 22. 4. & 44. 1, 2.

Fifthly, Such a one muft be carefull to walk in holineffe and righteoufneffe before God, 1 John 3. 3, 29. Job 31. 24.

Chap. XXVI.

II. Fear.

It is Expectatio futuri mali. Objectum timoris eſt malum futurum difficile, cui reſiſti non poteſt. Aquinas 1a, 2æ *Queſt.*41. *Art.*2. Vox φόβου à militia ſumpta eſt, propriéque dicitur, cùm quis ſe in fugam conjicit. Eſt enim à φέβεσθαι, quod eſt fugere; Timor appellatur, quia propriè ſit expectatio eorum cenſura, qui in dignitate ſunt conſtituti παρὰ τὸ πρὼν cenſere. Plus autem eſt timere aut metuere, quàm vereri: unde illud: Malo vereri quàm timeri me à meis. Metus eſt dolor quidam, ac perturbatio, ex opinione impendentis mali, quod vel perniciem, vel moleſtiam afferre poſſit. Ariſt. Voſ. *Inſtit. orat. l.*2.*c.*6. *Sect.*1. & 2.

IT is that paſſion which makes the heart to ſhrink and withdraw it ſelf from an imminent evil which it conceiveth it ſelf now unable to eſcape or ſuffer.

Firſt, It muſt be exerciſed alone upon fit objects. The things we may and muſt fear are real evils.

1. Natural, as poverty, ſhame, danger, death, when God or our lawfull Governour threaten them againſt us; for we muſt fear Gods threats, and tremble at his Word, or when God or the Magiſtrate executes them; therefore when we hear of the puniſhment of ſinners, alſo it muſt make us fear. Jacob feared Eſau: and David ſaith, He feared reproach, that is, due and juſt reproach.

2. Spiritual, at all times, viz. ſinne, Gods anger and eternal damnation, we muſt fear to ſin, to incur Gods anger, and bring our ſelves to death, as Joſeph feared, How ſhall I do this great evil? and Paul ſaith, Having this terrour we perſwade men; and Job feared the judgment of God, and durſt not wrong his ſervant. So long muſt we fear eternal puniſhment of ſin till we be freed from it by Chriſt, and then we muſt fear it no more. Aquinas ſaith, Men fear not damnation, becauſe they look upon it as far off, Id quod longe futurum, quaſi eſt non futurum.

Secondly, The meaſure of our fear in two things:

1. All our fears of what things ſoever ought to be moderate, ſo far as to awaken wit, courage and care to avoid peril, and no farther. For all the affections of man were planted in him to further his welfare, and they muſt be fitted to that end in the meaſure of their working. As we ſee in Jacobs fear of Eſau, Gen. 32.7. and in Chriſts fear in the garden; yea our fear of Gods anger and eternal death ſhould be ſo moderate as only to move us to uſe the right means of eſcape, even of ſubmitting our ſelves to God. Onely in one caſe exceſſive fear is no ſinne, but alone a fruit of weakneſſe, viz. when God ſhews himſelf extraordinarily in terrible ſigns, or when an Angel ſhews himſelf.

2. We muſt fear ſpiritual evils more than natural, ſinne more than mans diſpleaſure or any loſſe, and damnation above all other evils whatſoever, as the Saints of God and Martyrs in former times have done. David ſaith, I will not fear what man can do unto me: And I will not fear though I walk in the valley of death.

We muſt not fear,

1. The cauſleſſe anger or reproach of men, nor imaginary evils, The wicked flie when none purſueth. The noiſe of a leaf ſhall chaſe them. The ſhadows of the mountains ſeem men to them, Judg. 4.

2. More real evils, when they oppoſe us in a way of our duty, Fear not them that kill the body; fear not any of theſe things that thou ſhalt ſuffer.

3. The evils againſt which God hath ſecured us by his gracious promiſe, as the Lord bids Joſhua not to fear; and the people are commanded not to fear when they ſhall ſee a great Army. David ſaid, God is my light and ſhield, I will not fear what man can do unto me. A Chriſtian reconciled to God ſhould not fear any outward danger, for he hath God ingaged to him, to ſave and deliver him in all extremity. The fearfull muſt to hell, thoſe that fear when and what they ſhould not.

1. No affection ſince the fall of Adam is more out of tune than this, *Lev.*26.17. *Jer.*36.24. Pſalm 53.5. Prov. 28.1.

2. By nature man is void of the fear of God, fears any thing but what he ſhould.

3. No

3. No affection is more mischievous and destructive than this. Not any one sin is charg'd on so many Saints of God as this of base fear; on Abraham, Gen. 12. 11. & 20. Isaac, Gen. 26. 7. Jacob, Gen. 33. 3. David, 1 Samuel 21. 10. Jonah, Elijah, Nicodemus, John 1. 13. The chief Rulers, John 12. 42. See 9. 22. The Apostles generally forsook Christ in his passion for fear. It is opposite to the love of God, Perfect love casts it out: to the true fear of God, Esay 8. 12, 13. to confidence in God, Psalm 56. 5. Matth. 8. 26.

There is,

1. A natural fear, that affection whereby one flies from, and abhors that which is destructive to nature.

2. Worldly fear, Matth. 10. 28. the base fear of men, Prov. 29. 25. Revel. 21. 8.

3. A holy fear of God. This is,

1. Legal, when we are afraid to offend God onely, because of his wrath, this is Timor servilis.

2. Evangelical, when we are afraid to offend God, because he hath forbidden us.

The way to rectifie this passion is to get faith in God, Psalm 112. 7. True fear of God, Esay 8. 12, 13. and good conscience toward God; Pro. 28. 1. Pray to him to sanctifie it.

The affection of fear must be distinguished from the grace and vertue of fear. Though where ever this vertue is, there the affection by power of the vertue will be ordered also aright, yet they must be distinguished; for the affection of fear is in all men naturally, yea in the very Devils, but the grace of the fear of God is a part of sanctification, and cannot be found but in the elect childe of God.

The fear of God may be thus defined:

It is a grace whereby a man is so overawed with the apprehension of Gods greatnesse and presence, that he dare not offend him, Deut. 23. 12, 13, 14. Eccles. 8. 12. Prov. 23. 17.

The three Patriarchs were eminent for three graces; Abraham for faith, Isaac for fear, Jacob for plainnesse of heart and humility of Spirit. Joseph feared to sin against God, Gen. 42. 18. Obadiah feared the Lord greatly. See Dr Gouge on Eph. 5. 21. M. Wheatley on Noahs example.

The fear of God is an excellent grace, Levit. 25. 17, 36, 43. 1 Samuel 12. 14, 15. Mal. 1. 6. Jer. 5. 22. I will shew you whom you shall fear, him that can cast soul and body into hell fire, saith Christ.

Love sweetens duties, fear makes us watchfull against sinne: love is the doing grace; fear is the conserving grace, Exodus 20. 20. Psalm 19. 9. & Psalm 4. 4. Prov. 16. 6. Job 1. 1. Jer. 32. 40. Nehem. 5. 15. it continues in Heaven. See Eccles. 12. 13. we cannot alwayes be praising God, nor worshipping him, but we must alwayes fear him, Psalm 23. 17. Prov. 28. 14. though it must be most active in the hour of temptation, Genesis 39. 9. We must worship the Lord with fear, Levit. 10. 3. Psalm 2. & 5, 7. Tremble at his Word. It is a help to sincerity, Levit. 19. 14.

The primary object of it is Gods divine Majesty and surpassing excellency, Deut. 28. 28. the secondary object of it is every thing that is displeasing to him, Genesis 39. 9.

There is not any one vertue more frequently commanded nor abundantly commended in Scripture. It is the first and chiefest point of wisdom, Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10. Psalm 111. 10.

We must fear God, Eccles. 8. 12.

First, In reference to his Word, Esay 66.

1. Because of the holinesse of the Commandments, the sweetnesse of the promises, 2 Cor. 7. 1.

2. The terrour of the threatnings, Heb. 11. 7.

Secondly, In reference to his works,

1. Ordinary, Jer. 5. 22, 23, 24.

2. Extraordinary,

1. Judgments, Esay 26. 9. Revel. 15. 4.

2. Mercies, Psalm 130. 4. Hosea 3. ult.

Some say this fear of God is a legal thing, and suits not with an Evangelical Spirit, who should delight, love, joy: See Luke 12. 4,5. 2 Cor. 7. 1. Revel. 14. 7.

Fear of the Lord is taken,

1. Generally for all graces and gracious disposicions, Eccles. 12. 13. as faith in the New Testament carries all graces with it, so fear in the Old: Compare those two Proverbs, Prov. 13. 14. with 14. 27. See Prov. 3. 7. & 8. 13.

2. For that affection whereby the soul in a filial manner is over-awed with the greatnesse and goodnesse of God, Hosea 3. 4.

Reasons. 1. From God; he is in himself every way surpassing excellent, having in him a perfect mixture of greatnesse and goodnesse, able to destroy, and yet willing to save and help; and in respect of us he hath an infinite and unlimited Soveraignty, as being a Creator who hath full and absolute power to dispose of the creature which he hath made of nothing; he can save and destroy, he hath authority to command, and reason to be displeased, if any thing be done by us otherwise than becometh us.

There is a natural distance between him and us, he being the Creator we the creature, dust and ashes. 2. A moral distance, he is infinitly pure, we unholy and sinfull.

Secondly, From our selves; we are mean and vile in comparison of God, no way able to resist him, or flie from him, or to deliver our selves out of his hand, and worthy to be subject to him in the lowest degree. We are in danger to offend God, and also in danger by sin without this grace.

Thirdly, The Effects of this fear are most excellent:

1. It interests him in whom it is to all the gracious promises of God for this and a better life, it plainly proves a man to be regenerate and sanctified, and to be Gods true child and faithfull servant.

2. It worketh a great tranquillity of mind, and a most setled quietnesse of heart, it armeth the heart against all carnal and inordinate * fear of other things, Exodus 1. 17. Esay 8. 12, 13. Luke 12. 4, 5. and strengthens against all temptations.

3. It makes a man depart from evil, so often in the Proverbs, and perfect holinesse, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Job 1. 1.

4. It is a sign the heart is tender and humble, Blessed is he that feareth always, but he that hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief. Be not high-minded but fear, Psalm 9. 20.

5. It keepeth a man close to God and his wayes, Jer. 32. 40. Mal. 3. 16. See Psalm 128. 1.

6. It inlargeth the heart, Esay 66. 5. and causeth one to delight in Gods Commandments, Psalm 112. 1. it expels the fear of man, Esay 8. 12. Luke 12. 45.

* This fear was a stain in the face of all Melanthons excellencies. Nemo modestior quidem fuit nemo timidior, saith Zanchy of him, in an Epistle to Bullinger. Pessimus in dubiis augur timor, maxime pessimus tyrannus.

There is a double fear:

First, Of Reverence, a reverent respect to God; this is kept up by considering Gods Attributes discovered in the Word, Psalm 16. 8. Job 31. begin. Esay 6. 3. Exodus 23. 11. Hab. 3. 16. His Holinesse, Revel. 15. 4. Justice, Heb. 12. 28. Power, Psalm 90. 11. Majesty, Psalm 89. vers. 6, 7. chiefly his Mercy and goodnesse in Christ, Psalm 130. 4.

Secondly, Of Caution or circumspection in our conversation, 1 Pet. 1. 17. Jude v. 12. This is stirred up by considering.

1. The strictnesse of the Law, Psalm 19. 9. See vers. 12. it condemns not onely acts but sinfull lusts and motions, Psalm 119. 96. 1 Cor. 2. 3. and the exactnesse of our account, Eccles. 12. 14.

2. The sad falls of the Saints when they have laid aside the fear of God, 2 Sam. 11. 2. Peter fell by a damsels question.

There is a servile fear of God as a Judge, and a filial fear of him as a Father, the one is ne puniar, the other ne deseram, Aug. We may take the fear of God as a check to sinne, and we may make the fear of punishment a motive to obedience. There are many promises made to them that fear God, Psalm 25. 12. Psalm 31. 19. & 13. 14. Prov. 10. 27. & 13. 23. & 19 23. & Psalm 34 10.

Courage or Boldnesse:

It is a passion quite contrary to fear, which stirreth up and quickneth the minde against evil to repel or bear the same without dejectednesse.

Saul, David, and Davids worthies, Jonathan, Caleb and Josuah were courageous. A godly man is bold as a young Lion. Be of good courage, Be strong, saith God

God to Joshua. Caleb and Joshua would have gone up to possesse the Land notwithstanding the strength of the Canaanites.

When the Scots fled from the Danes (at a place called Long-Carny) one Hay an Husbandman, then at Plough (with his two sons) snatching the yoak into his hand, not onely stopped the enemies further pursuit, but beat them back with a great overthrow, whose valour King Keneth the second (seven hundred years since) rewarded, with as much ground of the best in Scotland, as a Falcon flew over at one flight before it did take a stand. And the memory hereof is continued in the Arms of James Hay Earl of Carlile. Fullers Church History of Britain Epist. Dedicat. to the fourth Book. See Peachams Compleat Gent. Chap. 13. pag. 54. See Camden in Scotl. fol. 42. Vide Idæam Rosæ. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 11. 34. Sect. 236, 237. and Montaigns Essayes, l 2. ch. 23.

A certain Souldier of Norway was most famous almost for a miracle of manhood: He had been appointed with certain others to guard the passage at Stamford-bridg: The residue upon approach of the English forlook their charge; but he alone stepped to the foot of the Bridge, and with his Battle-axe sustained the shock of the whole Army, slew above fourty assailants, and defended both the passage and himself, untill an English Souldier went under the Bridge, and thorow a hole thereof thrust him into the body with a Lance. Sr John Haymard in the Life of King William the First.

The Earl of Morton Regent of Scotland, said at Mr Knox his Funeral, when he saw his Corpse laid in the grave, Here lieth the body of him, who in his life time, in the cause of God, never feared the face of man.

There is a double Resolution:

First, In sinne and iniquity, Jeremy 18. 12. The Devils are confirmed in wickednesse.

Secondly, In the truths and wayes of God, Daniel 3. 16, 18. Heb. 11. 23, 27. Acts 4. 13, 29. This is an almighty work of Gods Spirit, whereby a Christian is able to do and suffer glorious things for God and his cause, Daniel 1. 8. Acts 21. Nehemiah 6. 9, 11. Esther, Athanasius, Chrysostome, Luther and others were thus couragious.

It is said of Athanasius, Unus homo solus totius orbis impetum sustinuit. He was in his own cause a Loadstone, in the cause of God an Adamant. When Eudoxia the Empresse threatned Chrysostome with banishment, he answered, I fear God and sinne and nothing else.

Luther being cited to appear before Charles the fifth at Wormes, and being disswaded by his friends, he answered, He would go thither though there were as many Devils as tiles upon the houses.

There is boldnesse with God that flows from innocency, Job 11. 15. and that flows from flattery; a boldnesse that ariseth from a seared conscience, Deut. 29. 19. and from a reprobate conscience, Heb. 6. 1. John 14. 17.

It must be well ordered:

First, For the Object of it, it must be exercised against all sorts of evils; Natural, which may come upon us in the way of our calling and duty, as David used courage against Goliah, 1 Samuel 17. 34. Jonathan against the Philistims, and Esther against the danger of death: the Judges of Israel were couragious; and Paul in his sufferings; and chiefly Christ Jesus, when he set himself to goe up to Jerusalem, and to bear the curse of the Law. It must be withdrawn from unfit objects, we must not be couragious against Gods threats, nor great workes, as thunder, nor against our betters, nor against the evil of sinne and damnation. To be bold to do evil, and to despise Gods threats is hardnesse of heart. This was the sinne of the old world; and the Philistims when the Ark came against them, and of Pharaoh.

Secondly, For the measure of our courage; 1. It must be alwayes moderate, so as to resist and bear such evils as do necessarily offer themselves to be resisted and born, not to provoke danger.

2. It must be used more against publick enemies and evils than private, and against spiritual evils than natural; we must resist Satan, be strong in the faith.

Motives to true Christian Courage:

1. It is both munimentum, the armour of a Christian; and ornamentum the honour of a Christian.

2. Consider what examples we have in Scripture of this vertue; Moses, Exodus 10.26. Joshua, Daniel, Esther, Peter, Paul.

Means of getting Courage:

See Mat.10.39 & 16.25. John 12.25.

First, See your fearfulnesse with grief and shame, and confesse it to God with sorrow; for in the acknowledgement of the want of Grace begins the supply thereof. Think of those Scriptures, Proverbs 29. 25. John 7. 12. Revelations 21. 8.

Secondly, Consider of the needfulnesse, worth and excellency of this Grace.

Thirdly, Beg of God the Spirit of Courage, Psalm 56. 3. Esay 35. 4.

Fourthly, Take heed of self-confidence, Heb. 11. 34. Frustra nititur quuncunnititur. Bern. Remember Peter and Dr Pendleton.

In the last place, I shall handle some compound affections, Anger, Reverence, Shame, Zeal. It suites well with Gods Attributes and his Dispensations, that we should Love, Joy, and be confident, and yet fear, Psalm 11. Matth. 8. 8. God discovers different Attributes of Mercy and Justice, on which we are to exercise different affections. His Dispensations also are various, as there is a fatherly love, so there is Ira paterna, Deut. 26. 11. Jude 11. See Phil. 2. 13.

Of Anger.

There is the passion or affection of anger, which is a good thing, as all natural affections are; and the vice of anger which is sinfull and wicked.

Anger is a most powerfull passion, and hath by an excellency engrossed the generall name of passion to it self.

The most usual name used by the Hebrews to signifie Anger is Aph, which signifies also the nose, and by a Synecdoche the whole face, either because in a mans anger the breath doth more vehemently and often issue out of the nose, which is as it were the smoke issuing from the flame kindled about the heart, or else because in the face anger is soonest discerned. The Grecians used two names to expresse this affection θυμὸς and ὀργὴ; in the Latine it is called Ira, because it maketh a man quasi ex se ire, as it were to go out of himself; Ira furor brevis, It is the rising of a mans heart against one that behaveth himself amisse, to punish him.

It is the offence of the will upon the apprehension of an injury done to it. Ira & iracundia differunt, ut iratus & iracundus. Ira de causa est, iracundia de vitio multum irascentis, Donatus. Adel. Act. 4. Sc. 7.

It is a mixt affection compounded of these three affections, Hatred, Desire, Grief.

1. There is hatred in pure, just and innocent anger, of the sin and fault principally, and a little for the present, of the faulty person; but in corrupt anger of the fault little or nothing, of the person most of all.

2. There is grief in pure anger at the dishonour done to God, in corrupt anger at the wrong done to ones self or his friend.

Romani non habent vocabula quibus ira gradus distinguant. Nisi quod gravior ira χόλος vocatur furor. Vos. Instit. orat. l. 2. c. 2. Sect. 1.

3. There is desire in pure anger of using means according to our vocation of bringing the party to repentance, and hindering the infection of the sin: in unjust anger of revenging our selves upon the pary, and delighting in his smart: therefore it is so violent a passion, because it is composed of those three; all which affections are fiery. It is easy to perceive all these three concurring in every angry person. Therfore such as are in love, or in pain, or in sorrow, or hungry, in deep studies, are very teachy and soon moved to anger; for in all these there is an excessiveness of some one or two of these passions, whereof anger is made; and therefore anger is soon provoked, seeing that these will soon breed a third, as wood and fire will cause a flame with a little blowing.

Causa ob quam alij irascimur, est contemptus, sive negligentia. Vos. Rhet. lib. 2. cap. 2.

The formal cause of it, is when any thing is highly esteemed by us, and that is contemned by another.

I. The rectitude of it.

In the ſtate of Innocency there was little uſe of it, while man did not offend God, nothing offended him. Chriſt was perfectly holy, and yet angry at the hardneſſe of mens hearts, and the pollution of the Temple: ſo man might have been angry at the ſin of the Devils when he knew it, then it would have been no perturbation to his ſpirit, nor blinding of his mind. See Dr Holyday on Matth. 5.22.

II. The corruption of it.

Wherein obſerve,

1. The Object this corrupt anger is converſant about, and the meaſure of it.
2. The Cauſes which produce it.
3. The many curſed Effects it produceth in mens lives.

Of the firſt.

There are many Objects of anger. The right object is diſhonour done to Gods Name; ſin, that only diſpleaſeth God. The object of it is our corrupt ſelf, any injury offered to our name, eaſe.

The Object of it is miſtaken,

1. When I am angry with God, he is exempted in regard of his excellency and ſpotleſſe holineſſe. Jonah was faulty this way; and Salomon notes it of men who have perverted their wayes, that they fret againſt God. There is a diſorder of anger in regard of the motive.

2. When I am angry with my Superiours, it being the paſſion of correcting, puniſhing, the faults of ſuch ſhould grieve us, not anger us; therefore Jonathan was not altogether blameleſſe for being angry againſt his father Saul in the behalf of David. Four kinds of things ſhould not provoke anger in a man:

3. When I am angry with an innocent party, where there is no fault, there ſhould be no diſpleaſure.

Laſtly, In moſt caſes to be angry with unreaſonable or ſenſleſſe creatures which are too mean to be the objects of anger; as Balaam was wroth with his Aſſe: ſo to be angry with a horſe for ſtumbling or ſtarting, unleſſe when they be exorbitant from their natural goodneſſe, as when the Lion and Bear would worry a ſheep.

1. Needfull duties which God hath enjoyned unto man; ſo Nebuchadnezzar was angry with the three children for not worſhipping the Images which he ſet up; and Judas with the woman for anointing Chriſts feet. 2. Things lawfull and indifferent, which neither God nor man forbid, but are left to my choice and liberty, ought not to be a motive to anger; as Eliab was angry with David for enquiring about the reward which ſhould be given to him that did kill Goliah; he might do it the better to whet his own courage, and the courage of others. 3. Natural imperfections are not to move anger but pity, as to be angry with one becauſe he ſtammers, becauſe he ſpeaks over-faſt, is ſlow of wit, dull of capacity. Laſtly, ſins of meer infirmity and frailty, Gal. 6.1. ſo the anger of Paul and Barnabas one againſt the other, in the caſe of taking Mark with them to viſit the Churches, was ſinfull.

One offends in the meaſure or quantity of anger, when he is angry more than enough. The proper end of anger is to awaken courage, and ſet it awork to chaſtiſe evil, or to reſiſt and beat it down that the mind may not be ſurprized with it: ſuch a moderate ſtirring of this paſſion as doth ſerve thus to ſet the mind awork to reſiſt and oppoſe a fault or evil thing, is allowable, but if it come to a greater heat or flame than ſo, then it exceeds and is naught. If it be more vehement where the offence is leſſe, then it is exceſſive. There may be a fault in the defect, when we are not moved, a juſt occaſion of anger being offered, as in admoniſhing, reproving or correcting.

Secondly, The Cauſes which produce it.

Since the fall the natural humors of the body. The immediate cauſe of it is pride and arrogancy the fruit of ſelf-love, Proud and haughty ſcorner is his name that deals in fierce wrath: Should ſuch a one as I be thus dealt with?

2. Our low eſteem of others in compariſon of our ſelves.

3. Thoſe things which ſhould cauſe us to be meek and quiet, as learning, wiſdom, any affront done to that excellency which God hath given us; whereas theſe ſhould cauſe us to be meek, our weakneſſe (which ſhould alſo make us meek) puts us into paſſion, ſimple and ſick folks are moſt paſſionate.

When a Gentleman was commending Dr Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter his great pains in the confutation of Luthers Books; the wiſe Prelate ſaid heartily, that he wiſh-wished he had spent all that time in prayer and meditation which he threw away upon such useless wranglings. Doctor Taylors Preface to his Ductor Dubitantium.

Thirdly, The cursed Effects and fruits of this passion of anger:

1. It produceth a great deal of sorrow and woe in this world, The angry man never wants Woe; who hath reproaches, enemies?

2. It disarms the soul of its own force, and layes it open to be invaded by an enemy; In patience possesse your souls. Prov. 25. ult. Whosoever shall commit to memory the excesse or inconvenience of his rage or anger past, and how far that fit transported him, may see the deformity of that passion better than in Aristotle, and conceive a more just hatred against it. Montaignes Essayes, l. 3. c. 13. Cursing our selves and others, Gen. 16. 5. 1 Sam. 16. 22.

3. Puts out the eye of our reason; Ira furor brevis, Eccles. 7. 9.

Impedit ira animum, ne possit cernere verum.

Jonah said to God, I do well to be angry to death.

4. It hurries all the other passions of the soul its own way.

5. It is destructive to one of the principal ends of man a being, to humane society, Prov. 22. 24.

6. It sets the tongue on fire, Whence comes reviling, raging, &c. Moses when he was angry spake unadvisedly with his lips. It grows to wrath, and so to blasphemy, Col. 3. 8. it makes way for clamour and evil speaking, Ephes. 4. 31.

7. It produceth abundance of wicked actions, swearing, cursing, quarrelling, hurting and rude carriage, crying, stamping, staring.

8. It hinders a man from any communion with God:

1. From hearing, Receive the ingraffed Word with meekness.

2. Prayer, 1 Tim. 2. 8. Unbelief and anger hinder our prayers.

3. The Sacrament, that is a feast of love.

9. It quencheth all the motions of Gods Spirit, and closeth with the Devil; he by it possesseth the very soul, Ephes. 4. 26, 27.

Anger is not simply unlawfull, for Christ was angry, Mark 3. 5. There is a lawfull and just anger, Ephes. 4. 26. nay a laudable anger when it is carried out in zeal, Exod. 32. 19.

Mans nature is enclined to causlesse, ungrounded and excessive anger, 1 Samuel 20. 30, 31. Eliab was angry with David, when he spake valiantly; Nebuchadnezzar raged against the three children for not worshipping his golden Image, and against the Wise-men of Babel for not being able to declare his dream: Herod also was wroth against the Wise-men, because they returned another way, and brought him not word back again concerning the child Jesus whom they came to enquire of and worship. A godly man may fall into passionate fits, be over-cholerick, as David and Jonah. See Acts 15. 39.

Reasons why man is so prone to this unreasonable distemper:

1. The abundance of those vices in every one which concur to the working of unjust anger.

1. Self-love which makes one prone to anger, because it is so wakefull, jealous, observative.

2. Folly, Anger rests in the bosome of fools: A fool in the day of his wrath is known: An angry man exalteth folly, gives it a high room in his heart, makes it a great Ruler and Commander within him; now all men are in the corruption of nature fools, and have that title given them by the holy Ghost.

3. Pride, By pride alone cometh contention, saith Salomon.

2. Anger is a common fault; therefore Salomon saith, Make no friendship with an angry man, lest thou learn his wayes.

3. Men make small account of it; a little passion, choler, they say.

4. The bodily temper in the far greater number furthers it, the fiery choler which is in a mans body is the instrument of this hot vice.

So having a soul defiled with those vices which beget anger, a body consisting of such humours as will set anger on work, finding many examples of it, and making little account of it, no wonder if a man do prove a wrathfull creature.

This

This anger is greatly disgraced in Scripture, Prov. 12. 16. & 14. 17, 29. & 21. 24. & 19. 19. & 22. 24. & 29. 22. it is a fruit of the flesh.

Lastly, The work of grace in sanctifying anger.

The well ordering of this passion.

First, The efficient cause of holy anger. The principal cause is the Spirit of God in planting a new nature in the soul, and so in this affection. Moral Philosophy may go a great way in moderating anger, but the Spirit of God onely makes it holy.

Sanctified reason is the immediate caller of it out and orderer of it: if it be holy anger it is a grace, and therefore must be called out by reason.

Sanctified anger is zeal, and sanctified restraint of anger is meekenesse and forbearing; a meek spirit is a thing much set by of God.

Secondly, The motive or occasion of it; we are angry for what we should.

1. Grosse and presumptuous sins done wilfully, openly, as Christ was angry with the Pharisees and Peter. Sins grosse for matter, presumptuous for manner, and mischievous in effect, not common imperfections, weaknesses.

2. Insolencies against the Church and Commonweal.

3. For wrongs offered to us in a publick place, a place of Authority, as Moses.

Thirdly, The object about which it is conversant, only sinne, the persons with whom we may be angry, are

Our Inferiours, or near Equals, not our eminent Superiours, though they do us some wrong, Eccles. 8. 3. It is an affection of punishing, and we may punish no others, least of all must we be angry with God, Prov. 19. 3.

Fourthly, For the quickneſse of it, we must be slow to anger, Eccles. 7. 9. Prov. 14. 17, 29. Mat. 5. 22. not without a cause or unadvisedly.

Fifthly, The measure of it.

Passio appetitus sensitivi in tantum est bona, in quantum ratione regulatur. Si autem ordinem rationis excludat, est mala. Ordo autem rationis in ira potest attendi, quantum ad duo. Primò quidem, quantum ad appetibile in quod tendit, quod est vindicta. Alio modo attenditur ordo rationis circa iram, quantum ad modum irascendi: Ut scilicet motus ira non immoderatè senescat, nec interius, nec exterius. Aquin. 2a, 2æ Quæst. 158. Art. 2. Vide Art. 1.

1. It must be alwayes temperate, so much as to quicken spirits, not darken reason.

2. It must not exceed the proportion of the evil, when God is much dishonoured it must be more, as in Moses.

Sixthly, For continuance.

It never must be long, The Sunne must not goe downe upon our wrath; it must not be a bed-fellow. There must not be more anger than is requisite for the true and proper end of anger. The corrupt end of corrupt anger is revenge. But the true and proper end for which God did plant it in the heart was two-fold:

1. That it might serve as a means to inable the body and mind more to procure its just defence against any evil or hurt that should be offered it, especially against any sinfull temptation: Christ was angry with the Devil when he tempted him to worship him; Jacob with Rachel, Gen. 30. 2.

2. To stir us up when need is to use earnestnesse for the reforming of sinne in others which have committed it; so Christ was angry against them that did buy and sell in the Temple, and often against the hypocritical Pharisees, which made him so sharp with them oftentimes.

Marks of sanctified anger:

1. What is the thing which stirs this passion? Is it because God is dishonoured? Moses his spirit was never stirred above twice in his own cause, but he was impatient when the Israelites worshipped the golden Calf. The zeal of Gods house consumed Christ.

2. Such a one is most of all angry with himself, because he knows no man commits more injuries against that which is dear to himself, Gods glory, his own peace, against his own wanderings, failings.

3. He observes that Rule, Be angry and sin not, because it is against sin.

4. Holy anger will provoke him to his duty: Nehemiah was troubled when the Sabbath was prophaned.

5. It doth not exceed for measure.

Means,

1. To provoke this affection against sin.

2. To bridle our inordinate passion about things for which we should not be angry.

Of

Of the first.

Love God and hate sin.

Consider first how amiable a thing it is for a man to be impatient for God; a great part of our holy zeal (which is the edge of the soul) is anger against sinne. It is intensus gradus pura affectionis; Zeal is a composition of love and anger.

Secondly, God himself is extreamly angry with sinne, and the workers of iniquity. He is jealous, wrathfull; he drowned all the world, burned five Cities, made his Sonne drink of the cup of his wrath, was never angry for any thing but sinne.

Thirdly, Rightly understand the nature of sinne, what ever may call our anger meets onely in sinne; it is an injury against God, a contempt, an ingratitude against him, who is the holiest, wisest, excellentest in Heaven and Earth: who are they that do this, base creatures, worms, potsherds, that receive every thing which is good from him?

Secondly, How to bridle our inordinate passions:

1. Take heed of pride and overweening thy self, Prov. 11. 2. & 21. 24. David was much provoked at Nabal, but suffered Shimei to rail at him; there is nothing to be esteemed but the glory of God, his favour, communion with him.

2. Avoid suspition, love which is opposite to anger, is said not to be suspicious.

3. Abstain from all occasions of anger; take heed of tale-bearers, resist it in the beginning.

4. Consider the excellency of meekness and long-suffering; rightly understand the hand from which every injury comes, real or supposed: Shimei cannot curse David, but God bids him, he orders it.

5. Look to thy own thoughts, passe the thing over, do not think of it, Matth. 15. 19.

6. Consider the glorious examples of Moses, David, Christ himself.

7. Often disgrace this vice unto your selves; call to minde how earnestly God hath condemned it, how he hath vilified it, and those that give themselves unto it. Anger rests in the bosome of fools. The holy Ghost bids us put away anger and wrath, bitternesse, lying and evil speaking; he bids us, Walk not with an angry man, nor have fellowship with a furious man; he saith, An angry man aboundeth in transgression; it is opposite to Love, the best of vertues, a very drunkennesse, and disgraces thy self to thy self.

Reverence.

Reverentia respicit personam excellentem, say the Schools.

It is an affection by which the soul is stirred to entertain the good which appeareth to be of some worth or excellency according to its worth.

It must be exercised upon fit objects, things and persons reverend.

The holy things of God, his Sanctuary, Sabbath, Word, Sacraments and other Ordinances in which men draw near unto him, Levit. 19. 30. & 26 2.

The Image of God consisting in righteousnesse and holinesse. Salomon saith, that wisdom shall give a comely ornament.

It may be felt working when a man approacheth a Prince or some eminent superior, he finds a kind of motion carrying him to give all due respect to him. It seemeth to stand in the joynt-working of love, fear, desire, love towards the person or thing, fear to offend, lose or abuse the person or thing, desire to win it, and to be the better for it.

The Persons to be honoured, are

First, God. There is an infinite good in him, an infinite worth in the bloud of Christ.

All our addresses to him must be reverend:

1. There must be a reverent frame of the soul; a childe of God cannot be alwayes affectionate, that depends upon the bodily state, he must be reverent, Mal. 1. 14.

2. A reverent gesture of the body; the Scripture mentions standing, kneeling, falling on the face: as is the affection of the heart, so will the posture of the body be.

Secondly, The godly and vertuous, whom we must respect for the Image sake of God that is in them.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Governours and Rulers of all sorts, Commandm. 5th.

Fourthly, The Ministers of the Gospel.

Fifthly, Aged persons having a stamp of Gods eternity.

Reverence is properly exercised upon a person esteemed excellent and eminent in grace and vertue, especially if it be also joyned with Sovereign Authority. If Authority be separated from Vertue, yet in well considering men it will beget Reverence, for the place will be loved, though not the party. If Vertue be separated from Authority, that will beget a great measure of Reverence in a well-judging soul.

Secondly, For the measure, we must honour and reverence things and persons more or lesse, as they are more or lesse reverend; every person and thing according to its degree.

We must not reverence:

1. Idols and false gods, I mean the Image of any God-head set up to worship, or any conceited imaginary god. To kisse the Calves (a sign of Reverence) was a sinne.

2. Vile and base men of sinfull and wicked carriage; in regard of wealth, wit, beauty and other paintings. Masters, Parents, Kings must be reverenced for their Authority, but not for other vain things.

Zeal.

Psalm 69. 9. & Psalm 119. 139. Revel. 3. 19.

Zeal is by some defined the heat and intention of all the affections; as varnish is no one colour, but that which gives glosse and lustre to all, Acts 26. 7.

It is a holy warmth wrought by the Spirit of God, whereby all the affections are drawn out unto the utmost for the Lord and his glory.

It is amor intensus, nothing but heat or warmth; whence zealous men in Scripture are said to burn in the Spirit; but it is a spiritual heat wrought in the heart of man by the holy Ghost, improving the good affections of Love, Joy, Hope, for the best furtherance of Gods glory; using the contrary affections of hatred, anger, grief against Gods enemies.

Dr Holland when he went any journey was used to say to the Fellows, Commendo vos dilectioni Dei & odio Papatus.

All the servants of God should be zealous for the Lord, Revel. 3. 19. This is required in the Minister, Acts 18. 25. the hearer, Luke 24. 32. of them that would pray with comfort, James 5. 16. in every part of the service that we do unto God, Rom. 12. 11. it is in general required of us in our whole profession and practice of Religion, Titus 2. 14. Jehosaphat is praised for it, 2 Chron. 17. 6. See Chap. 31. 25. 2 Kings 23. 25.

Reasons. God is a Spirit, a pure act with whom we have to do, therefore we must be spiritual: he would not accept the first-born of an Asse, because it is a dull sloathfull creature.

Secondly, It is conversant in matters of Religion which are of highest concernment in the world; all the heart, soul and strength, are to be laid out about them.

Thirdly, This is an excellent grace,

1. Because it is the best evidence of a Christian; the Spirit of God works like fire.

2. The greatest means to draw out the soul to service for Christ, Esay 6. when he was toucht with a coal from the Altar, then he cries, Send me.

3. It will save a sinking Church, Numb. 25. 10. Jer. 5. 1.

4. It is the glory and beauty of all our services; as varnish adds a lustre to all other colours, makes them amiable.

Two Cautions.

1. It must be guided by knowledge, Rom. 10. 2. Zeal without knowledge is like mettle in a blind horse: Knowledge without zeal is like a precious stone in an old Toads-head.

2. Managed by wisdome; we must not go beyond our calling.

See Elton on Col. 4 13. and Mr Wards Coal from the Altar.

Zelare & zelari, sunt ex Graeco ζηλῶν. Dicitur utrumque de ardenti affectu, nunc pro aliquo, nunc contra aliquem. Vossius de Vitiis Sermonis l. 4. c. 29. De zelo (inquit ille) abundè egimus Oratoriarum Institutionum. lib. 2. cap. 13.

Moderation as it is opposed to excessive desires, cares, inordinate fear, fierceness of spirit is good, but not as opposed to zeal.

Zeal makes the Saints,

1. Most sensible of their own sins; as the Publican. See 1 Tim. 1. 15.

2. Makes them sensible of little sins as well as great; Spiritual sins, more hidden corruptions, Esay 63. 17.

3. Fils them with indignation against others sins, Psalm 119. 132. Revel. 2. 2.

4. They are not content with performing holy duties, unlesse they have found their affections up in them, Rom. 1. 9. that is, with the heat and vigour of my spirit.

5. It fils them with spiritual diligence and activity to perform what God cals them to, Acts 18. 25.

6. They aim at the highest pitch in Religion, are loath any should excell them in fruitfulnesse, 1 Cor. 12. ult.

7. It makes them love the lowest and plainnest things in Religion, Psalm 145. 11.

8. It makes them carry a kind of parity and evenness in spiritual things, Gal. 5. 14.

Signs of holy Zeal:

1. One is impatient for injuries done against God; so Moses, Exo. 32. 19.

2. It is ready to be imployed in any service which may advance God, as Esay 6.

3. It makes a man do it couragiously; a zealous man is bold for God, Shall such a man as I flee? said Nehemiah.

4. He will spare no cost in the cause of God, Cant. 8. 7.

5. What ever it hath done for God, it never thinks it hath done enough, Phil. 3. 12, 13.

6. This heavenly fire shines abroad, but burns most within.

7. Makes one take pleasure in the zeal and forwardnesse of others, I would all the Lords people were Prophets.

Of Shame.

There is,
1. A holy shame, which is an ingredient into true repentance; the object of this is sinne, Ezek. 16. 61.
2. Sinfull shame, when we are ashamed of Christ and his Word, and people, Mark 16. ult. 2 Tim. 1. 8.
Pudor à rebus putidis. Scal.
It is the blushing of the face upon the apprehension of doing something unseemly.

It is sometimes a vertuous habit and disposition in the mind, consisting in a mediocrity between two extreams, Impudence, Jer. 8. 12. and Bashfulnesse or Cowardise, Luke 9. 26. so men are said to be modest or shamefac'd, Ephes. 5. 12. It ariseth from the apprehension of a greater excellency in others, and our own inferiour condition, 1 Tim. 2. 9. It is called ingenuus pudor, and the colour of vertue, because it is the character of an ingenuous and vertuous mind. See Dr Jackson on the Creed, Book 11th, Chap. 18. pag. 3478, 3479, 3480, 3481. There was verecundia; an awfull modesty in innocency, but not pudor a fear of reproach. Compare Gen. 2. 25. with 3. 10

2. A perturbation of the mind; when our hearts smite us for some grievous sin, Ezra 9. 6.

3. It is taken for infamy and publick disgrace; when a man is made a spectacle of shame and derision to others, Zeph. 3. 11. so men are ashamed, put to shame, Hab. 2. 10, 11.

Shame is a meer confusion, as the Hebrew word signifies, a jumbling together of passions. It is a stirring of grief, fear, hatred, distrust, anger against some reproachfull thing in regard of our selves or others; therefore shews it self by blushing, weeping. It makes a man hide himself, and he dares not look upon another.

We must be ashamed of,

1. Foul, sinfull and unclean deeds. See Jer. 6. 15. Ezra 9. 6.

2. The company and fellowship of sinners.

Shame is defined by Aristotle, a grief and trouble of mind arising from such evils as tend to our disgrace, lib. 2. Rhet. cap. 9. Pudor est metus quidam infamiæ. Arist. Ethic. 4. cap. 15. Aquinas saith, It is metus turpitudinis exprobrabilis: others say it is Metus justæ reprehensionis.

3. The

3. The deserved punishment of sin.
4. The shews and appearances of sin.

We must not be ashamed:

1. Of good deeds; as Paul was not of the Gospel.
2. Of reproaches for well-doing; we should contemn such contempt.
3. Of good men suffering such punishments and reproaches; as Onesiphorus was not of Paul, Phil. 4.
4. Of poverty or affliction.

Shame ariseth, 1. From disappointment of hope, Job 6. 20.

2. From doing things against common light. There are two effects which follow sinne, grief and shame: There are two things in sinne, guilt and filthinesse; the former causeth grief, and the later shame. There are two sorts of shame, 1. Of a guilty conscience, which may be in reprobates. 2. Of a tender conscience, which is onely in Gods children. These two differ several wayes:

1. Shame in wicked men is presently after the commission of sinne; in Gods children when ever they look back on their former conversation.
2. Shame in the wicked is for sinne damning, not defiling; but in the other for the filthinesse of sinne, and the contrariety of his heart and wayes to Gods holinesse.
3. In the wicked it is accompanied with slavish fear; in the other with love, Luke 18. 13.
4. The shame in wicked men is mostly because of disgrace, 1 Samuel 15. 13. Jer. 2. 26. in the other from Gods eye, Psalm 73. 22.
5. The godly man maketh it his aim to get Gods favour, and sin pardoned; the other to get ease, and conscience deadned.
6. The wicked are ashamed of publick sinnes; the other of secret: the shame of the wicked ariseth from personal respects, and is rooted in self-love.

Chap. XXVII.

Of the Sensitive Appetite.

THus I have done with sanctifying the intellectual Nature, the Understanding, Will, Conscience, Memory, and the Affections. Now I come to Appetitus Sensitivus, the Sensitive Appetite.

It is an inclination of the soul to imbrace those things which are good or evil, according to the judgment of the sense.

It is a desire of food for the preservation of the individuum, and of generation for the maintaining of the kind.

There are five external Senses, Seeing, Hearing, Smelling, Touching and Tasting; and three internal, the Memory, Fancy, Common Sense: In these men and bruit beasts are alike.

In man this Sensitive Appetite differs from that in a bruit beast, in three things:

1. That in a bruit beast is all the soul which he hath; but in man it is not a distinct soul, but an inferiour faculty of the reasonable soul.
2. The motions of a bruit beast according to sense, are not guided by reason.
3. In a bruit beast his sense is all the guide he hath by which he is to make his judgment; mans rule is reason guided by God.

All the motions of the will which the soul takes upon the representation of the senses, is the bruit part.

The rectitude of it before the fall, or the Image of God in it.

It was wholly at the command of reason; it was to be a servant to the soul, onely to bring intelligence, and represent all the things which were done abroad: A man in his pure condition had not a desire to a thing till reason had judged of it.

Since mans fall, much of our depravation lies in this low brutiſh faculty; the Scripture ſaith, Every man is a beaſt: The Apoſtle ten times in the ſixth, ſeventh and eighth of the Romans, cals concupiſcence ſinne. Some think it is but the depravation of this he there means.

Man falling off from God, and making him his portion, turns to the creature, and makes it his portion.

1. The power which this brutiſh part hath over reaſon.
2. Over the Will and Affections.
3. The abominable Fruits which flow from both theſe.

Of the firſt,

Whereas reaſon ſhould impartially take all things without prejudice, and weigh them in the right balance; it puts out the eye or deludes it.

2. It takes up the will before any thing be propounded to reaſon; it often raviſheth the will, which the Scripture expreſſeth by madneſſe.

3. The wofull fruits of this.

Hereupon man, who was made after Gods Image, and moſt like him, becomes a carnal, earthly, brutiſh man; the ſpiritual part is drowned, Jude ver. 10. His joy is in his muſick, wine, horſe, garden, cloaths: Though he have an intellectual nature, yet his reaſon invents wayes and means to follow ſome ſenſual good, and to avoid ſome ſenſual evil; and in this caſe are all natural men. Corruption firſt came into the ſoul by the ſenſual appetite; Eve by ſeeing the fruit, hearing the Serpent, touching and taſting the fruit, and by imagining what good might come to her by it, was deceived: Scholars and wiſe men when corrupt are often taken up more with the things which work upon the ſenſes, then with what works upon reaſon. Many among the Arabians are learned in the Tongues and Mathematicks, yet their happineſſe and all their Religion from Mahomet is what pleaſeth the ſenſe; Popery is a meer pompous ſenſual Religion: Men often doe vertuous things that they may have the reward of vertue, and hate puniſhments becauſe they are ſenſual.

The work of Gods grace in ſanctifying this part.

The proper office of it was to preſent the intellectual nature with what of God may be found in the creature.

The Sanctification of it ſtands in two things:

Firſt, God by his grace ſpoils the reliſh of that good which is preſented to us by the ſenſes; it diſcovers to the ſoul better good to feed upon, the taſte of ſpiritual things, the conſolations of Chriſt.

Secondly, The ſoul is not much troubled at the evil which the ſenſes preſent, ſickneſſe, reproach; Though grace do not ſo far ſubdue the appetite that it ſhall not be medling, yet it ſtayes the will: In a gracious man the dictates of reaſon and conſcience conclude the buſineſſe, as in Samſons love of an uncircumciſed Philiſtim; if grace had prevailed that had ſoon ceaſed.

Phil. 3. 18, 19. 1. There is a great deal of wickedneſſe in the ſenſual appetite; it is impetuous ſince the fall.

2. It is a great debaſement for a man to be under that which ſhould be his ſlave.

Directions how to get this faculty ſanctified:

Firſt, We ſhall never get it under the yoke, untill we can get the ſoul to finde ſatisfaction in better things, Communion with God. Paul could abound and want. All the Philoſophy in the world cannot take thy ſoul off till grace do, their own rules took not their hearts off, becauſe they had not better things to ſatisfie it.

Secondly, Watch diligently over thy ſenſes, Satans Cinque-ports; what undid Achan? I ſaw a fine garment, and then I coveted. The Whore in the Proverbs allured the young man by inveigling moſt of his ſenſes. I made a Covenant with my eyes, ſaith Job.

Thirdly, We muſt be carefull of our inward ſenſes, our thoughts of earthly things.

Fourthly, Pray much to the Lord that he would keep us in his holy fear.

The

The vegetative soul is a power of attracting, concocting and expelling what is superfluous; it was not gracious in innocency, nor sinfull by the fall: the perverseness of it was brought in by sin, but sub ratione pœnæ.

Chap. XXVIII.

Of the Sanctification of Mans Body, and all the External Actions.

THe body as well as the soul was redeemed by the price of Christs bloud, taken into union with him, and shall be glorious to all eternity.

I shall here handle four things:

1. The Nature of the Body.
2. The Image of God in it before the fall.
3. Its Corruption.
4. Its sanctifyiing by the Spirit.

The work of Gods grace in sanctifying the body.

Of the first,

It is one of the most curious peeces of all Gods workmanship, Psalme 139. 14, 15.

The operation of the soul much depends on the temper or distemper of the body.

2. What the Image of God was in mans body before the fall.

God is a Spirit, how can the body be his Image?

The Schoolmen say it stood in three things:

1. In the admirable frame and composure of it; this is not probable.

2. In its Majesty which carried a beam of God in it; bruit beasts did stoop to him as their Lord.

3. It bore Gods Image significativè; it was the vessel wherein the soul did act that holiness which was Gods Image. The comelinesse of any mans body depends not on outward decking, but when it is imployed in the works of holinesse.

3. The depravation of the body since mans fall.

It is a great Question, Wherein the sinfulnesse of the body lies, because there is no sin in it till the soul comes, nor when it is gone? Yet that there is sin in it appears by 1 Thess. 5. 23.

Its sinfulnesse consists in three things:

1. In its fitnesse to sin; Rom. 6. 13.

2. In its readinesse to sinne; there is not onely a passive fitnesse, but an active readinesse in the members to sinne, Acts 13. 10. The feet are swift to shed bloud.

3. In its greedinesse to the service of sin; Deut. 29. 19.

Psal. 30. 12. & 57. 9. James. When the Apostle giveth up the Anatomy of a natural man in all the members of the body; he staieth longest on the organs of speech Rom. 3. 13, 14. Capel of tents. part 3 c. 4. Sect. 3.

The whole body of original corruption dwels in our bodies, Rom. 6. Let not sinne reign in your mortal bodies. This corruption defiles the body within, and issues out likewise, sometimes it will inwardly burn with lust and anger.

The members of our bodies are the instruments of sin:

The Tongue was given man to be an instrument of Gods glory; therefore David calleth it his Glory: since our fall the Spirit of God saith, It is a World of wickednesse. One hath written a large Treatise of the sins of the Tongue; with that we curse God and rail on men, much uncleanesse is acted by it. One reckoneth up four and twenty several sins of the Tongue, lying, swearing, ribaldry, scoffing, flattering, quarrelling, deceiving, boasting, tatling, &c. It is compared to a sharp two-edged sword, to a razor, to sharp arrows, to an Adders sting, to the poyson of an Asp, to fiery coles, to the fire of hell.

Eyes] Eyes full of adultery, 1 Pet. 2. an evil eye, a covetous eye.

Ears]

Ears] A deaf ear to that which is good, itching ears.
Hands] Full of violence, oppreſſing.
Feet] Swift to ſhed bloud.

4. The work of Grace in ſanctifying mans body.

When the whole work of Sanctification is intended; God ſometimes names onely the ſanctifying of mans body, Rom. 12. 1 Theſſ. 4. 3,4. Rom. 6. 12,13. 1 Cor. 6. 18,19.

The work of Grace in ſanctifying the body, ſtands not in making it the immediate and proper ſubject of Grace; that being ſpiritual cannot have its ſeat in male corporea, but in theſe particulars.

1. It ſhall be no longer at the command of the Devil, or a luſt, 1 Cor. 6.15. Job 31. 1. Pſalm 141. 3.

The members are become fit and ready for good. Pſ. 45. 1.

2. It is conſecrated to the Lord, Rom. 12. 1. 1 Cor. 6 19,20. It is made the Temple of the holy Ghoſt; where the holy Ghoſt reſides, he will ſpiritually adorn it that it ſhall be no more inthralled to ſin.

3. It is taken into a real and indiſſoluble union with God himſelf, 1 Cor. 6. Your bodies are the members of Chriſt.

The eye and ear are helps alſo to the ſoul, Job 31. 1. Mary Magdalen wipes our Saviours feet with thoſe locks of hers, which before ſhe had been ſo proud of, and inveigled others with. The body which heretofore hath burned with luſts, is now ready to burn at the ſtake for Chriſt.

4. Our bodies are the inſtruments by which the Spirit of God and our ſouls work Sanctification, Rom. 6. Give up your members as inſtruments of righteouſneſſe, 1 Cor. 6. 20. David often calleth on his tongue to bleſſe God, naming it his glory; it exalts Gods praiſes; Pſalm 141. 3. miniſters grace to the hearers, Eph. 4. 29.

The bridling of the Tongue ſtandeth,

I. In forbearing words,
1. Sinfull ſimply, whether
1. Impious againſt Gods
1. Being, Authority and Greatneſſe.
2. Worſhip and Word.
3. Name and Honour.
4. Sabbath and Reſt.
2. Injurious againſt

1. Betters, irreverent.
2. Equals, comparing and diſgracing.
3. Inferiours, vilifying, contemning.

2. Impure, unclean againſt the ſeventh.
3. Fraudulent and deceitfull againſt the eighth Commandment.
4. Whiſpering, ſlandering, flattering, bragging, backbiting againſt the ninth Commandment.
2. Superfluous, too many, Prov. 10. 8,19. 1 Tim. 5. 11.
3. Impertinent, not to the purpoſe, not concerning ones ſelf, Pſalm 73. 9.
4. Idle, to no purpoſe, Matth. 13. 36.
5. Unſeaſonable, uttered out of time and place; as to apply the comforts of the Goſpel to him which is not at all humbled; or denounce the terrours of the Law againſt one who is too much already preſſed with the ſenſe of his ſins.

II. Inuſing ſpeech, which is
1. Alwayes gracious, viz.
1. Diſcreet.
2. Gentle.
3. Lowly.
4. True.
2. Often Religious.

1 Theſſ. 4. 4.

Motives to preſerve our bodies in purity.

Conſider,

Firſt, What an excellent piece the body of man is in the Lords creation of it, wherein the Power, Wiſdom and Goodneſſe of God appears.

Secondly, Rather than it ſhould be loſt, Chriſt hath bought it with his precious bloud, 1 Cor. 6.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Thy body is joyned to Christ, and all the members are made members of his body.

Fourthly, The Holy Ghost dwels in it. God hath two thrones, the highest Heavens, and the body and soul of a believer: God would not let any natural filthinesse be amongst them while he was present with them.

Fifthly, Thy body shall be raised out of the dust, and made like the glorious body of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Sixthly, Look upon thy body in the relation it stands to thy soul; it is to be the vessel thy soul should use, by defiling it, and regarding it more than enough, you make the soul a slave to it.

Seventhly, Consider that our bodies without a great deal of looking to and watching over, will never be kept clean; original sinne hath overspread them.

Eighthly, A small temptation prevails over our bodies; they are more subject to spiritual than bodily evils.

Ninthly, Satan well knows, that although God most looks at the grace and corruption which acts in the inward man, for judging of the inward goodnesse or badnesse; yet when grace breaks out in the body it is majoris gloriæ; and when corruption appears there it is majoris infamiæ & turpitudinis.

Tenthly, In the judgement of God the greatest beauty and comelinesse to be found in our bodies, is to have them thus devoted and consecrated to God, and thus imployed. The bravery of our cloathes, washing, and trimming is to set out our bodies, because we would not appear deformed in the eyes of others, Prov. 3. 22,23.

Means to possesse our bodies in purity:

1. Take heed of over-loving or over-valuing the body, then I shall not put my body on any duty of mortification; the body is but a Scabbard, the soul is the Tool.

2. Above all look to thy heart within; keep that in a right frame, and the body will easily be kept. Jerom saith, I left the City and went into the Wildernesse, but I took my wicked heart thither.

3. Look to the senses, sin came into the world by our senses, the Devil spake flattering words to the ear, shew'd the fruit to the eye, she touched it and tasted of it, and perhaps smelt to it. Prov. 7. The harlot kist him for his touch; she had the attire of an harlot for his eye, perfumed her bed for his smell, her words dropt as the honey comb for his ear.

4. Keep the body as well as the soul in frequent Communion with God; exercise thy hands, eyes and ears in prayer.

5. Because our bodies being filthy vessels ever since our fall, and prone to be defiled; our care must be to wash them in clean water, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Heb. 10. 22,23. We must daily renew our faith and repentance, Psalm 51. Besprinkle me with hyssop and wash me.

I. For our external actions; they are

1. Sinfull; and here is all new; the grosse sinfull actions are removed, Old things are past away: Ye were sometimes thus, but ye are washed, cleansed. Hence they are called Saints, and called from the world, Let him that stole steal no more.

2. Common infirmities are much subdued, and what is yet remaining is much bewailed, Gal. 6. 24. You shall not see the same anger and loveas before. He that was a very Nabal before is turned to a meek Moses, and he that was a Tiger before is changed into a Lamb.

II. Natural and civil actions, they are altered

1. They are put upon a right end, Whatsoever you do, do all to the glory of God: so that as God made all things for himself, so we desire to live to him; whereas naturally a man doth all these actions for himself, as the utmost end; we eat, drink, and do every thing to the glory of God, either immediately when we give him the glory, and acknowledge him the author of these mercies we partake of; or else mediately, when we doe imploy and lay out the strength, ſtrength, comfort and profit we have, in the way which God hath required at our hands.

2. They are made but the acceſſary, and heavenly things the principal. Matth. 6. Seek firſt the Kingdome of Heaven. John 6. Labour not for the meat which periſheth. And what will it profit a man to gain the whole world? Naturally a man is ſo ſet on the world that he is taken up with it; if there were no Heaven, no ſoul, no better things to be looked after, it were another matter; but the converſation of the godly is in Heaven, and their affections are ſet upon things above.

3. In the uſe of all theſe they live by faith, Hab. 3. The juſt ſhall live by faith; it is thrice repeated in the New Teſtament; a man depends upon Gods promiſe in the moſt troubleſome ſtraights, believeth in God as a Father, Mat. 6. who will provide for him; care and diſtractions what thou ſhalt do, how thou ſhalt live, oppoſe the work of converting grace. Paul knew how to abound, and how to want; he ſaith, he had all things; becauſe he that by faith hath God as his, hath all things of God, his Wiſdom, Power.

III. Their religious actions; they are altered.

For, 1. Theſe are done with the inward man, with inward ſorrow and delight; people think that praying, and doing other duties is godlineſſe it ſelf, but here if any where grace makes a great change; for whereas before theſe duties were done out of cuſtome, and more verbally, now he performs them with more ſenſe of his unworthineſſe, the Spirit making groans unutterable, and taking away the ſtonineſſe of our hearts; now they are earneſt and fervent in prayer, and hear the Word diligently.

2. They are effects of faith reconciling us to God, whereas before his converſion all his duties were abominable things, yet he had high conceits of them, now they are accepted; converting grace working faith in them, which laying hold upon Chriſt, doth cover them all with his worth and excellency: before they were but the meer deſires of nature, ſuch as any Heathen would make, and they did no more prevail; and if God did hear them it was in a common way of providence, ſuch as he ſhews to the Ravens when they cry to him; but now they are the prayers and duties of thoſe which are in Chriſt in whom God is well-pleaſed. There is as much differenee between a believers prayer, and a natural mans prayer, as between Lazarus dead, and him riſen again.

3. They are done efficaciouſly to make us grow more, and to get more ſtrength, that is the end of prayer, of hearing the Word, of the Sacrament, partly to cleanſe us, and partly to further us in the way of ſalvation; the godly man faithfully uſing theſe Ordinances, findeth them ſuch bread, that in the ſtrength of them he liveth and groweth: but the natural man is never reformed by theſe, though he live under the Miniſtry, he retains the ſame old luſts and ſins.

4. They are ſo done, as that we go out of them and relie on Chriſt only. This is a wonderfull change wrought on the godly mans heart, that he goeth out of all his prayers, All our righteouſneſſe is as a menſtruous cloth; naturally a man relieth on theſe, and till God make us ſee the ſpiritual purity of his Law, and all the inward filth of our hearts, it ſpoils all our duties, and it is impoſſible that we ſhould depend upon Chriſt, and go out of all.

General Rules for the ſanctifying of Meats and Drink, Apparel, Sports and Labour:

1. All theſe being in themſelves neither morally good nor evil, but indifferent, we may uſe and deſire them too much or too little, therefore we ſhould be moderate in the uſe of them.

2. They ſhould be ſanctified by the Word and Prayer, 1 Tim. 4. The Word ſhews us the warrantable uſe of them, and teacheth how to uſe them; prayer obtains a bleſſing upon them, 1 Cor. 10. 31.

3. Our liberty in the uſe of them muſt not be a ſcandal to our brethren.

Special Rules for ſanctifying of Meats, &c.

A ſanctified uſe of meats and drinks ſtands

Firſt, In uſing them ſo as to glorifie God in them.

Rules

Rules to be obſerved, that we may eat and drink as becometh Saints.

The Caſuiſts and others referre all to four heads, Piety, Charity, Juſtice and Temperance. Two Rules will ſuffice, 1. A holy Liberty: 2. A holy Sobriety in the uſe of meats and drinks; the firſt is a Rule of extenſion, the ſecond a limitation.

Firſt, God allows all his ſervants a free and liberal uſe of meats and drinks, Deut. 12. 15. Acts 10. from 11. to 15. Rom. 14. 14.

Three things are comprehended under this liberty:

1. It refers to the quantity; they may eat and drink ſo much as is ſufficient, as will fill them.

2. To the quality; that which is good and pleaſant, they may eat the fat and drink the ſweet, according as God bleſſeth them, Pſalm 81. ult.

3. In regard of the comfort and contentment which our natural ſpirits may take in the creatures, Eccleſ. 5. 18.

Secondly, For reſtriction; they muſt obſerve a holy ſobriety.

Meats and Drinks are ſanctified:

1. In a holy abſtinence totally from the creatures a whole day, as when we obſerve a religious Faſt.

2. When men abſtain in part to have their ſpirits fitter for ſome ſervice of God.

3. For a civil uſe; to prevent or cure ſome diſeaſe.

There muſt be a holy ſobriety in the uſe of them, for which there are five Rules,

1. When God gives the creatures freely wiſely conſider they come from his hand, are our fellow-creatures; that we are unworthy of them, Prov. 23. 1.

2. Watch over thy appetite, eſpecially at a Feaſt, Prov. 23. 3. Noli gemmam perdere in die Feſto, is an Arabian Proverb, Ezek. 4. 11. Not as Leſſius ſaith, a man may eat ſo many ounces of bread, and drink ſo many ounces of beer; it's hard to make a rule for different bodies and conſtitutions in that kind: A mans experience will teach him, how much will ſtrengthen him, and how much will oppreſſe him.

3. It muſt be ſuch as may not diſpoſe us to ſinne, but fit us for duty, and accordingly as God hath bleſt us, Deut. 12. 25.

4. In reference to time; the times and ſeaſons of meat and drink are either common and ordinary, or Feſtival: we muſt not ſpend much time in eating and drinking, Prov. 23. 2.

5. In regard of the manner of eating and drinking; eat and drink not as bruit beaſts without fear, Jude verſ. 7. 1 Cor. 10. 31. We ſhould ſeek to God for his bleſſing, and nothing ſhould paſſe from us unſeemly to the preſence of God.

Matters of Apparel.

The Rules which the Scripture gives to direct Chriſtians about it, are

1. General.
2. Particular.

The General Rules about Apparel are two:

Firſt, The matter of it ſhould be indifferent to the people of God, they ſhould not be affected with it, 1 Tim. 6. 8. Raiment, that which will cover us, 1 Tim. 2. 8, 9. See Peachams Experience of theſe times, of following the faſhion.

Secondly, They muſt be bounded with thoſe ends for which God hath appointed apparel, which are theſe,

1. To cover our ſhame or nakedneſſe; Adam and Eve needed them not for the weather.

2. To preſerve the health of our bodies againſt the injury of the weather.

3. For ornament, to ſhew the diſtinction of perſons, and matter of gladneſſe.

More particularly, the poſitive Rules are ſix:

1. Our Apparel muſt be ſuch as may become the particular ſex; men muſt wear what is comely for men; and women what is comely for women, Deut. 22.5. 1 Tim. 2. It must become the shamefacedneſſe of a woman, 1 Cor. 11. In all publick meetings in the Eaſtern Countreys they were vailed, as Rebeccah.

2. It muſt be ſuch as may become their rank: Kings children did wear party-coloured coats. Thoſe that are in Kings Courts wear ſoft raiment: Nec affectata ſordes, nec exquiſita munditia Chriſtiano conveniunt. Hieron. ad Euſtathium.

3. It muſt be according to their holy profeſſion, 1 Tim. 2. their apparel muſt be ſuch as may become women profeſſing holineſſe; the Daughters of Jeruſalem ſhould not go as the Daughters of Babylon.

4. It muſt ſute the guiſe and cuſtom of their own Nation, Zeph. 1.8. it is not meant of idolatrous apparel, but affecting that of other Nations.

5. We ſhould go according to the example of thoſe, who moſt excell in wiſdom and holineſſe, 1 Peter 1.3. Sarah is ſet for a patern to women, and the elder to the younger.

6. It muſt be ſuited according to the variety of Gods adminiſtrations; in days of judgement they muſt lay aſide their ornaments, Exodus 33. and gird themſelves with ſackcloth; in dayes of Feaſting and rejoycing they may put on white apparel.

The children of God muſt alſo avoid the ſinfull abuſes of Apparel:

1. They muſt avoid both for matter and form, or manner of wearing it, levity, Eſay 3.2.

2. Coſtlineſſe and prodigality, 1 Pet. 3.

3. Pride; it is the baſeſt pride that can be, a man ſhould never have needed apparel, if he had not ſinned; yet this is common among young people.

4. It muſt not foment luſt in thy ſelf, or provoke it in others.

3. A ſanctified uſe of recreations and ſports:

We muſt not ſpend too much time in putting on our apparel.

1. There may be a ſinne in the defect and exceſſe of theſe things, which are of an indifferent nature, and good or evil as they are uſed.

2. Theſe are ſanctified by the Word, which ſhews the lawfulneſſe of them, and prayer for a bleſſing on them.

It is not neceſſary that we ſhould actually pray when we uſe them, but our prayers muſt reach all theſe things.

5. Particular Rules.

The firſt concerns the nature of them in general; there is a lawfull uſe unto the ſervants of God, of ſome ſports and recreations, Eccleſ. 3. A time to play. Solomons ſcope there is to ſhew, that there is viciſſitudo omnium rerum, Gods providence rather than mans duty; yet he ſaith, God hath made all of them beautifull in their ſeaſon. This liberty of things indifferent is one part of that liberty which Chriſt hath purchaſed with his bloud. Some of the ancient Divines (as Ambroſe, Chryſoſtome) endeavouring to raiſe up the Chriſtians of thoſe times to a high perfection, forbad all recreations.

The ſecond Rule for the matter; all recreations are not lawfull: The ſport of a fool is to do miſchief. The matter of our ſports may never be the holy things of God: Or, ſecondly, Moral duties which God hath injoyned in his Word: Non eſt bonum ludere cum ſanctis: We muſt not make jeſts on the Scripture, nor any ſuch things, in the uſe whereof Gods Commandments may be broken; nor ſuperſtitious, a wronging of Gods worſhip; as when the Iſraelites had made a Calf, They roſe up to play at the Dedication of the Calf: the Feaſts, Wakes, Ales and Games, which have been upon Dedication of Churches and Altars, as Whitſon-ales. For this cauſe the ancient Chriſtians condemned the Olympick-games (the games were good, running, wreſtling) becauſe kept up in honour of Jupiter Olympius.

Nor thirdly, They may not be hurtfull to our own or our brothers life, 2 Sam. 2.14. Let them come and play before us: The Romane ſtage-playes, when Fencers fought one with another, and men fought with wilde beaſts. So Bare-baiting, not the chaſing of a Bull to make him the better meat, but the bare exerciſe of cruelty.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, Not such as hurt our own or our neighbours chastity, which are the fewel of lust; as lascivious stage-playes, where wanton actions of men or women are represented; mixt dancing, abominable revelling.

Nor fifthly, That which shall hurt our own or our neighbours estate; under which are forbidden all costly games, or playing for a great summe of money: God hath not in his Word made this a way how I should gain a title to another mans goods or money. We must give an account for every shilling.

Nor sixthly, Any thing which will hurt our own or our neighbours good name; under which fall two things,

1. All scandalous sports, Cards and Tables: I shall give offence to others by it, I will never eat flesh while the world stands rather than offend my brother, though it be scandalum acceptum.

2. Positively; such things may be matter of recreation which are of an indifferent nature, and accompanied with no uncomely circumstances.

A third Rule, The time allotted for sports.

Three particulars come under this:

1. Not the holy-dayes set apart to God, Esay 58. Melius est arare quam saltare in Sabbato. Aug.

2. Not times of affliction, when God cals to mourning, Esay 5. 12. & 22. 12, 13.

3. It must not be a pastime, but to whet us to better things.

Fourthly, The manner how we should use our Recreations, besides the generals before-mentioned.

1. Our Spirit must be to the sport, as it is in its own nature, indifferent.

2. It must not crowd out necessary things, make us neglect weighties Duties.

Fifthly, The end propounded and kept in mind.

1. General, the glory of God.

2. Immediate and proper, to revive and fit the Spirit for the service of God, as sauce to meat.

Fourthly, The sanctifying of our Labour.

There are two common Rules:

First, All our Labours must be sanctified by the Word and Prayer.

Secondly, The matter of our bodily labour is indifferent in its own nature, therefore we must keep the mean.

1. The Rules which the Scripture hath given about ordering our bodily labour.

2. The sinfull abuse of them.

Of the first.

First, It is the will and Commandment of God, that all his servants should have some calling, wherein they must exercise bodily labour, the labour of the hand, head or something. When God made man in innocency, even then did God appoint man a labour; and after his fall, he told him, In the sweat of his brows he should eat his bread.

1. The Thing.

This Ordinance of God, to have a calling to labour in, is

1. Honourable; in the whole Creation, the most excellent creatures are most laborious. Kings, Prophets, Apostles, great labourers; excellent women, Sarah, Rebeccah, Solomons wife; the Heavens, Angels, Daniel 9. The Angel Gabriel did flee swiftly; the Church in the Revelation. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

2. Exceeding profitable and advantagious; while the servants of God are labouring, they are safe and under Gods protection, Psalm 91. John 11. 9, 10. The Lord made a Law, that the bird sitting on her nest should not be taken. It brings abundant blessings. God never spake well of the idle person in all the Scripture, unlesse in that one place, where one that stood idle, is bid to go into the vineyard. Peter, James, John, Gideon were blest when they were following their imployment, it maintains strength of body, Prov. 31. cloathed with strength, health, comfortable sleep, increase of our estate.

II. The Kind.

The matter of our labour, it must be,

1. Lawfull in its own nature, that which is good, Ephes. 4. 28.

2. Suitable and comely to him that works, Whatsoever things are comely.

3. It must be that which belongs to our own calling, our own worke, James 3. 12.

III. The measure. It must be moderate; we must not be cumbred with work, as Moses, Martha: which may be two wayes,

1. When we are involved in too many businesses at once, a bird that had too many claws was unclean.

2. When it is too great a labour.

IV. Concerning the time. We must not be alwayes at it, Eccles. 4. 8.

1. If for the weight or time, our businesse prove hurtfull and destructive to our bodies; as Jethro said to Moses, It will wear thee out. We must not perdere substantiam propter accidens.

2. When it hurts the soul, we must be then much more carefull to take the hand off; when worldly businesse takes us off from prayer, or fils us with disquieting thoughts.

V. The end, aim and scope of our bodily labour. We must work so, that God in all we do, may be glorified by us.

VI. The frame of our spirits in them.

1. In all thy imployments thy soul must be as if not, for having the heart set upon it, 1 Cor. 7. 27. There must be a holy moderation in it, because the things are but indifferent in their own nature, good or bad onely in the use.

2. We should have a cheerfull Spirit in all, Col. 3. 23.

3. We must have heavenly minds in all our earthly imployments; Our conversation is in Heaven.

Chap. XXIX.

Some special Graces Deciphered.

I. Bounty.

Bounty, or Liberality is the vertue of spending riches well.

It is an aptnesse to give good things abundantly and freely. The object of it is riches, the proper act of it is to spend them well.

It is a very commendable thing, He that hath a bountifull eye shall be blessed, saith Salomon. See 1 Chron. 22. 14. & 29. 13, 17. Matth. 26. 7, 9. Paul commends the Church of Macedonia for it in the Thessalonians and Philippians.

Reasons. 1. It shews that a man rightly understands the nature and end of wealth, viz. that it is but an instrument of well-doing, and all the good of it stands in using it well.

2. It is a usefull vertue amongst men, therefore praise-worthy, it brings forth many good effects, it feeds and cloaths men.

The occasions of this Bounty are these,

1. To a Superiour in times of some solemnities, or when we have occasion to deal with them to shew our subjection to them. Thus the people gave presents to Saul, those which came to Salomon brought gifts *, and those which came to David.

2. To an enraged enemy to pacifie him, as Jacob to Esau; for a gift in secret doth pacifie great wrath.

3. To

* The Queen of Sheba gave precious things to Salomon.

3. To a wronged friend or neighbour, to make satisfaction, as Abimelech restored Abrahams wife with gifts.

4. To an acquaintance to nourish love and kindnesse, especially in times of solemnity, as they sent gifts to each other in celebrating the dayes of Purim.

5. To any one which hath shewed himself carefull of us, and done us much good to requite him; as Saul brought a present to Samuel.

6. To such as we have occasion any way to use or imploy for our good, that they may more willingly help us, as 1 Samuel 17. 16.

The goods of this world are well spent and bestowed:

1. When the object is good, in good works, chiefly Mercy and Religion. Not to spend much is to be bountifull, but to spend upon things that are good, usefull and profitable: we must learn to maintain good works, 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18.

2. The quantity or measure of it, so much as the nature of the thing, and the ability of the person doth bear.

3. The manner of giving must be free and willing, prompt and ready, Rom. 12. 8.

Cautions. 1. A gift must not be a bribe to pervert Justice.

2. One must not rob the poor to give to the rich, refuse to pay debts that he may have to give; this is not liberality but robbery. The matter of bounty must be goods honestly and justly gotten.

Gift is a transferring of right from one to another by free will.

3. A man must not overcharge himself with gifts.

4. The motive and end must not be vain-glory, applause and conceit of merit, Matth. 6.

The offering of our hands, a giving part of our goods to God to maintain his worship and service is required; for he will not be served alone with the tongue and ear, but hand also. We must as well give to him as receive from him, that we may declare our homage unto God, Prov. 3. 9. The chief of all thy increase shews it undeniably that he means it not of common honouring him by a right imploying of them in thrift and liberality, but by a special honouring him in devotion; for the chief of ones increase denotes a gift to the God of his life, the chief Lord of all, Psalm 76. 11. Bringing of gifts is required to a true real testification of our fear of God as well as vowing and performing our vows. We have also clear examples of it. The Princes and people offered to the building of the Tabernacle, and at the Dedication of it. David and his Princes and people offered to the building of the Temple. Also the Wise men, Matth. 2. 11. offered to Christ gifts and presents, as a real acknowledgment of their faith in him. Acts 24. 17. Paul thought that something was to be offered to God as well as given to the poor. It is not meant of his offering for his vow; for he came not to Jerusalem for that purpose, but agreed to do it by advice of the Apostles after he was come; the end of his coming is by him named to be bringing of Alms and Offerings; it is meant therefore of such things as divers among the Gentiles had given to maintain the worship of God at Jerusalem, as well as Alms to maintain the poor. A voluntary occasional offering and giving what we see good of that God hath blessed us withall, either upon special occasion of using cost for Gods service to maintain it, as David to the building of the Temple, or for acknowledgement of some special blessing, as we see they did after great victories.

Rich men must chiefly be bountifull, but not only; a cup of cold water from him that hath no greater a gift, hath promise of a very great reward: the widows mite out-weighed all the rich gifts of the wealthier persons.

Motives to Bounty:

First, From God who hath commanded it and promised to reward it, and punish the contrary.

Secondly, All creatures invite us to it, the Sun, the Sea, the Earth, the flowers, all creatures, and especially the Creator who gives us all things abundantly to enjoy. Christ poured out his heart-bloud for thee.

Thirdly, From wealth, which is fickle and uncertain, and which we must all part with, and which will give no comfort nor bring no credit it self; there is no comfort in having, but in well bestowing a large estate.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, From our ſelves which muſt part with all at laſt; and why ſhould not we uſe our goods well, we are but Stewards, and muſt give an account of the uſing of them, and all that we have of Gods: Of thine own have we given thee.

Fifthly, What coſt have we been at for our luſts?

Sixthly, We expect that Chriſt ſhould be every day at coſt with us; we look for a full Table, a great deal of Gods Spirit and love.

Seventhly, Conſider the coſt that the Jews were at in all their ſervices, and that many Papiſts and Mahumetans are at.

Means to get this vertue:

1. Chaſe away the hinderances of it, covetouſneſſe, love of money, ſuch a one will be unwilling to part with it for good purpoſes; frugality cuts off ſinfull and ſuperfluous expences in cloaths, fare.

2. Fall to prayer and practice; lay out on Chriſt, his Saints, Ordinances, Truths, relieve the poor.

It is a Queſtion amongſt learned men, Whether of the two extreams of liberality, prodigality in the exceſſe, or covetouſneſſe in the defect be worſe? Covetouſneſſe is the worſe, becauſe

1. It is the root of all evil; Judas ſold Chriſt for it.

2. The covetous doth good to none, nor to himſelf neither; the prodigal doth good to many.

3. Age is ſome remedy, as againſt other vices, ſo againſt prodigality; covetouſneſſe then grows young.

*Quo animus vitio rectus, eo plus virtutis habet. See Dr. Prid. on 1 Pet. 5.6. Elton on Col. 3.12.

I. Confidence.

A ſure rule, a ſure promiſe will bear up a Chriſtians heart at all times. Tota Scriptura id agit ut credamus in Deum. Luther.

It is a difficult thing to ſee a need of truſt, to be in a truſting eſtate, to perform an act of truſt.

There are three enemies to truſt:

1. Doubts which ariſe from ſin, Pſalm 42. 5. It is difficult to overcome them; the ſpirit of bondage is not eaſily laid aſide.

2. Cares which ariſe from wants, Phil. 4. 5.

3. Fears which ariſe from dangers, Pſalm 23. 4.

This grace is of conſtant exerciſe:

1. Nothing makes us ſo conſtant with God, James 1. 18. unbelief makes us break off, Heb. 3. 12.

2. Nothing makes us ſo cheerfull, Pſalm 13. 15.

3. Nothing makes us ſo frequently with God, Pſalm 62. 8. Truſt is exerciſed in two things, in dealing with our own fears and doubts in private, or with God in prayer.

4. Nothing makes us ſo carefull not to offend God, Phil. 2. 13.

5. Nothing makes us ſo courageous, 2 Kings 18. 45.

6. Nothing makes us ſo uſefull and comfortable in our relations, 1 Pet. 3. 7.

Means to truſt in God:

1. Get an intereſt in God, Lam. 3. 24. Pſalm 31. 14. & 119. 94.

2. Get a greater knowledge of God, Pſalm 9. 10.

3. Get experience of him, Pſalm 71. 6, 7. 2 Cor. 1. 10.

4. Treaſure up principles of truſt:

1. Gods government of the world, and particular providence, Job 12. 8, 9.

2. Conſider his power, 2 Pet. 2. 19. Job 12. 8, 9.

III. Humility.

It is that grace whereby a man doth make little or no account of himſelf, Job 42. 6. Ezek. 20. 43.

That properly is ſaid to be humble which is even with the ground. Humility is well called by one a friendly enemy to ones ſelf.

Or

Or, It is a grace of the Spirit of God, whereby a man out of true knowledge of himself, his state and condition accounts himself vile and walks accordingly before God and man.

Every good man is humble, Prov. 30.2. Luke 18.13.

Poverty of spirit is the first step to Heaven, Mat. 5.3. High in worth and humble in heart, saith Nazianzen of Athanasius. All the Stars the higher they are the lesser they appear; so must all the Saints.

Humilitas virtus Christianorum, prima, secunda, tertia. Aug.

Augustine being asked, What vertue was most to be desired? he answered, Humility: being asked, What was the second? he answered, Humility: Which was the next, he said still Humility.

Primislaus the first King of Bohemia kept his shoes by him to put him in mind from whence he rose.

We read of Agathocles that King which was at first but a Potters son, and after advanced to the Kingdom of Sicily, that he would, together with his plate of gold and silver have earthen vessels on his Cup-board, to put him in mind of that condition he was in before.

Willegisus Archbishop of Mentz, having been a Wheel-rights sonne, was alwayes wont to have in his Oratory a painted wheel, with this Motto or Inscription, Willegise recole unde veneris: which Wheel was after given to the Archbishop of that Sea for their Arms by the Emperour Henry the second.

Gilbert Foliot Bishop of London being wont to inveigh against the pride of Archbishops, is said to have exhorted a man to humility in these words, Ad Zaccheum non divertisset Dominus nisi prius de Sycomoro descendisset. Godw. de Præsul. Ang. Comment.

That Minister was a rare example of humility, who being highly applauded for a Sermon preach'd in the University, was by a narrow observer found weeping in his study (presently after) for fear that he had sought, or his auditors unduly bestowed upon him applause. M^r Jenkyn on the 6^th verse of Jude, p. 488.

The young Marquesse of Castilion being to do publick exercise in his course of Philosophy, made it a case of Conscience, whether he were bound to dispute his best, fearing least vanity might transport him in the midst of those praises, which his Collegiates might give him. D^r Taylors Great Exemplar. pag. 3. Sect. 15. Considerations upon Christs Sermon of Humility.

Jacob saith, I am lesse than the least of all thy mercies. Abraham cals himself dust and ashes. David termes himself a dead Dog, 1 Sam. 24. A flea, that is, a poor, mean, base, worthlesse person. Paul terms himself, The least of all Saints, and the chiefest of sinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Though I be nothing (saith he) and I am the least of all the Apostles, not worthy to be called an Apostle. See of Monsieur De Renty his Humility, ch. 3.

God often cals for this grace, Eph. 4.2. Col. 3.12. Phil. 2.3.

God teacheth the humble, exalts the humble. He hath two thrones, one in the highest Heavens, and the other in the lowest heart.

Humility hath the promise both of temporal benefits, Prov. 22.4. and Spiritual, Prov. 3.34. Grace, Prov. 11.4. Wisdom, Prov. 22.4. the fear of God, and finally Blessednesse, Matth. 5.3.

Humilitas est animi demissio orta ex vera status & conditionis sua agnitione. Cameron. Prælect. in Mat. 18.2. Plutarch. Vide Piccarti observat. Hist. Polit. Dec. 4. cap. 3.

Psal. 22. I am a worm and no man. Peccator omnium notarum cùm sim. Tert. Before honour is humility. There is a double lowlinesse of mind, the one a moral vertue found in some natural men, whereby they do out of their own discretion and observation of their own defects account themselves very imperfect, insufficient and unworthy of any thing; this was in Saul, he is said to have been little in his own eyes, 1 Sam. 15.17,18,19. that is, meanly conceited of himself, as of a man insufficient for the weighty imploiment of a Kingdom. The other a Christian vertue, whereby men perceive their vilenesse in respect of sinne, and their baseneſse in comparison with God.

Reasons. 1. Because a godly man knows Gods excellency, the foulnesse of sin, and his own littleneſse and sinfulneſse, therefore must needs be mean in his own eyes, Job 42. 6. Esay 6. 6.

Secondly, There is no way to exalt mercy but by abasing self; it will not be prized unlesse self be abased, Deut. 26.5. The whole have no need of the Physician, but the sick.

Marks

Marks of this excellent grace:

Multi humiliantur nec sunt humiles. Bernard. A man may be much humbled by crosses and miseries, yet not truly humble.

1. We may judge of it by the efficient cause; the Spirit of God must be the worker of it. God when he converts a man shews him his own misery, and the excellency of Christ.

2. The effects of humility. It discovers it self in its carriage to God upon his dispensations toward us, if his wayes be wayes of mercy and enlargement, it admires the free grace in them all, 1 *Chron.*29.lat.end. that I should enjoy such blessings; if God send affliction he acquits his severity, and saith, The Lord is righteous, and submits to him.

The soul apprehends it self empty of all good, Rom. 7.8. and full of all evil, *Rom.*1.29. Unworthy of the least favour, the meanest service, to come into Gods presence

3. Such a one rejects himself as vile and abominable in the sight of God. Paul after his conversion saith, I know that in me dwels no good.

4. Such a one willingly imbraceth every service belonging to his relation. Christ washed his Disciples feet. Queen Bathsheba taught Solomon her son.

5. He is far from censuring and undervaluing of others. Be not many masters, James 3. 1.

The whole design of the Gospel lies in two things:

1. To make the creature nothing.
2. To make the grace of God in Christ all things.

Quickning Motives to provoke us to get Humility.

Meditate on three things:

1. The absolute neceffity of it.
2. The difficulty of it.
3. The excellency of it.

I. The neceffity of it.

God takes no pleasure in men, till he hath brought them into such a frame. Humility is necessary also for every condition of life; if God send crosses thou wilt never bear them, till he have humbled thy spirit.

Such as are poor in Spirit, are

1. Obedient to Gods Commands, Esay 65.1. Prov. 13.3.
2. Much in waiting upon God, Esay 64. 5.
3. Humble in their addresses to God, Gen. 18. 27.
4. Patient under crosses.
5. Thankfull for the least mercy, Gen. 32. 9.
6. Content with the meanest imploiment.

II. The difficulty of it.

It is hard to get the heart into such a temper; all that is in thee is against thee: The Grecians and Philosophers thought humility was not a vertue but a despondency of Spirit. All thy corruptions are against it, thy excellencies, wit, authority; thy graces against it, grace will be against grace: thou wilt be proud because thou art humble.

III. The excellency of it.

Thy heart shall be Gods Temple, a broken Spirit is in stead of all Sacrifices, it will nourish all graces in thee; a humble man seems to creep, but he flies to Heaven, saith Parisiensis: not one administration of God will passe without doing thee good, if thou hast an humble spirit.

Means to get it:

The consideration of our natural littlenesse, that we are indeed little; our bodies but a handfull of earth, not three yards long, and of little continuance; our souls but little things, as being included for being and working within the narrow compasse of the body: we understand, know, remember not the thousandth part of things which are to be understood, known and remembred, *Jer.*10.14. cannot do the thousandth part of things which are to be done, will breed that natural lowlinesse which was in Saul; but the consideration of our spiritual basenesse in regard of sin will breed spiritual humility.

First, See thy pride; all sin is resolved into pride, *Jer.*17.17.

Secondly, Meditate, 1. Of the baseneſſe of thy beginning and original, thou comest immediatly from the slime of thy parents loins, and mediately from the dust of the earth, and just nothing.

2. Consid:

2. Consider thy extream sinfulnesse. How little do we know in comparison of what we should know? How little do we love, serve and obey God in comparison of that our duty bindeth us? What a deal of atheisme, blindnesse, vanity is in our mindes? How forgetfull are we of God and our later end, how foolish and sensual?

3. We must put our selves in mind of our death and later end, we must shortly rot, putrifie, stink and crawl with worms; we must return to the dust, lie down in the grave, must be without wealth, honour, beauty, strength, wit, learning, knowledge: celebrate thy own funerals.

4. Consider of the torments and wofull condition which we have deserved, to which we must go; if we be not humbled in the sense of our having deserved it we cannot escape.

Thirdly, Adde to these meditations hearty prayers to God to humble you, to convince you of sinne, to open your eyes to know your selves and him. The knowledge of Gods holinesse, excellency, majesty, glory, will also abase us, Esay 6. 5. Job 42. 5,6.

The worst pride is an overweening of our selves, because of our graces. Consider,

1. That this holinesse is received from God, 1 Cor. 4. 17.

2. It is imperfect.

3. It is in its own nature defective, being a creature: Grace is depositum as well as donum, a talent or pledge that the Lord hath left with you, as well as a gift.

IV. Justice.

Justinian defines it thus, Est constans & perpetua voluntas suum cuique tribuendi, he begins his Institutions so. Dr Ames de conse. l. 5. *c.*2. saith, It is a vertue by which we are inclined to perform all due offices to our neighbour.

Remota itaque justitia, quid sunt regna, nisi magna latrocinia? Quia & ipsa latrocinia quid sunt, nisi parva regna? Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 4. c. 4. Eleganter & veraciter Alexando illi magno quidam comprehensus pirata respondit; Nam quum idem Rex hominem interrogasset, Quid ei videretur, ut mare haberet infestum? ille libera contumacia, Quid tibi, inquit, ut orbem terrarum? Sed quia id ego exiguo navigio facio latro vocor: quia tu magna classe, Imperator. Id. ibid.

Dr Hall[a] saith, Justice comprizeth all vertue, as peace all blessings.

[a] True Peacemaker. See more there, p. 539, 540, 541. and Weems his Christ. Synagog. p 187.

Antiochus of Asia sent his letters and missives to his Provinces, that if they received any dispatch in his name not agreeable to justice, Ignoto se has esse scriptas, ideóque eis non parerent. See Speed in the Reign of Henry the 5th concerning his Justice, pag. 625.

Scepters born by Kings, and the Maces of all Magistrates are straight, emblems of Justice. Dr Clerk.

Fiat justitia & pereat mundus.

Ferunt Imperatorem Maximilianum quotiescunque praeteriret locum supplicij publici, aperto capite eum salutasse his verbis, Salve sancta justitia. Luth. in Gen.

The Rules which must be observed in executing of Justice:

First, The doer must have a calling and authority to it: Peter had none when the High-priests servants came to lay hold on Christ, and he cut off the ear of Malchus.

Secondly, He must indifferently hear both parties. Philip kept an ear alwayes for the Defendant; therefore Suetonius justly chargeth Claudius with injustice for precipitating his Sentence, before he had given a full hearing to both parties, nay sometimes to either; Pronunciabat saepe altera parte audita, saepe neutra.

Thirdly, He must lay all he hears in an even balance, and poyse them together: Res cum re, causa cum causa, ratio cum ratione concertet.

Fourthly, He must maturely advise, and seriously consider of the matter before he passe sentence, Judges 19. 30.

Fifthly, The person punished must be indeed an offender or guilty person, not-made ſo to appear by forged cavillation, as Naboth; nor ſo reputed out of the rage of the puniſher, as the Prieſts of Nob in Sauls conceit: but having indeed done, and being duely convicted to have done ſome thing worthy of ſtripes, bonds, impriſonment; for elſe to ſtrike the innocent is abominable to God.

Sixthly, The puniſhment muſt be proportioned to the ſinne, as a plaiſter to the ſore; a leſſe puniſhment muſt be inflicted on a leſſe ſinne, and a greater on a greater, with this proviſo, that the greatneſſe of the ſinne be not meaſured alone by the matter of the thing done, but alſo by other circumſtances conſidered together with that: and chiefly by the miſchiefs which will enſue upon the doing thereof, and ſo thoſe faults muſt be puniſhed with capital puniſhments, which are either in themſelves very enormous, or in their conſequents and effects very miſchievous.

Seventhly, The motive and end in puniſhing muſt be a ſingle eye to the ſtopping and preventing of ſinne, that God may not thereby be diſhonoured; not any ſelf-regard.

Severity is the executing of puniſhment fully without ſparing in any part of the puniſhment, and ſpeedily without too long deferring and putting it off, Deut. 13. 8. & 19. 21. Ezekiel 8. 18. Solomon tels us, That a wiſe King turneth the wheel over the wicked*, that is, is ſevere to them. See Pſalm 101. 8. a parent muſt correct his ſon, and not ſpare for his much crying. God therefore often ſaith, I will not ſpare, nor mine eyes ſhall not pity: we muſt be juſt as our heavenly Father is, as well as merciſull as he is.

* Comparing him to a threſher; for in thoſe dayes the greater grain had a wheel turned over it to preſſe it out of the husk, that being the manner of their threſhing, it is as if he had ſaid in our phraſe, he threſheth the wicked.

Reaſons. 1. In reſpect of God we ought to ſhew a love to him and conformity to his judgment, and a deteſtation of that which he deteſts, and a care to pleaſe him in doing what he commands.

Facetè nihil candidius eſt. Sunt qui zelum ejus in boſtes veritatis miti gationem vellent: verum ego virtutem iſtam admirabilem, & non minus placiditate, ſi tempeſtiva fuerit, neceſſariam, vel nunc tandem crediderim. Epiſt. Oecolamp. & Zuing. lib. 4. Oecolamp. Luther.

2. In reſpect of the ſin, it is a thing wholſome and profitable for their ſouls, the welfare of which is to be preferred before eaſe. Puniſhment to a fault is like a medicine to a diſeaſe, or a plaiſter to a ſore.

3. This is requiſite for the good of others; as the Scripture expreſly noteth, that others may hear and fear, and do no more ſo wickedly.

4. It is requiſite for the publick ſafety; for what ſins are not duly puniſhed, will grow frequent, ordinary, general.

5. For the honour and credit of the Laws and Law-makers; if they did well in appointing ſuch a correction for a fault, why is not their order obſerved and put in practice? If ill, why did they make the Law?

He ſhews not due hatred againſt the ſin, nor due zeal to Gods glory.

6. The Governour is guilty of the ſinne if he forbear to puniſh when there is no juſt and due cauſe of ſparing. David and Eli were ſharply puniſhed for failing herein.

V. Knowledge or Wiſdom.

See Mr Hilderſ. on Pſal. 51. 6. Lect. 95. to Lect. 101. Concerning the ſeveral acceptions of the word wiſdome, ſee Dr Prideaux on Luke 7. 35. Job 28. 16. Prov. 6. 4, 7. & 8. 11. & 16. 9. Eccleſ. 9. 16, 18.

Wiſdom is, 1. Intellectual, which conſiſts in the knowledge of the languages, and the liberal Arts and Sciences.

2. Moral, which conſiſts in a graceſull, comely and diſcreet carriage of our ſelves, Epheſ. 5. 5. Col. 4. 5.

3. Civil, which conſiſts in an orderly Government of Corporations and Societies committed to our charge.

4. Spiritual, which conſiſts in the knowledge of the true God, and in the ſerving of him in a true manner, Prov. 1.7. 1 Chron. 28.9. Job 28. ult.

The knowledge of God and Christ is the ground of all our good, 2 Peter 3.1. Col. 2.2. Conversion it self is wrought in a way of conviction and illumination, John 16. 8, 9, 10. therefore it is called Illumination, Heb. 10. 32. Vocation comes in by knowledge, Ephes. 1. 8, 9. Justification, Esay 53. 11. Glorification, John 17. 3.

There is a two-fold Knowledge:

First, Speculative or Notional, whereby we assent to the truth revealed; this is found in the Devils in as large and ample measure as in the Saints, they being knowing Spirits, know and assent to the truth of every proposition that a child of God knows. 1 Cor. 8. 2.

Secondly, Experimental, whereby we do not only know that it is so, but taste and see it to be so, Heb. 5. 14. Phil. 1. 9. Quod in cibis est gustus in sacris est intellectus; where this is there must needs be faith. John 4. 42. 2 Cor. 5. 21.

The knowledge of God that is saving, is

1. In a way of reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5. 18. when God and we are made friends.
2. When we know our interest in him, know him to be our God.
3. Know him so as to choose him for our supreme good and happiness.
4. When we know him so as to have sensible communion with him, 1 John 3. ult.

There is also a fiducial knowledge, Esay 53. 11. There is no sound knowledge of God and Christ, till we be effectually called; knowledge and calling are joyned 2 Peter 1. 3. Knowledge and justification, Esay 53. 11.

We should labour not only to know God as God in the creatures by the light of nature and reason, but to know him in the Gospel by the light of revelation; and Christ in the excellency of his Person, as God-man, and the sufficiency that is in him; the riches of his grace and satisfaction, and our communion with him, Mat. 16. 16, 17. to know God and Christ, as calling and converting us, Ephes. 1. 17, 18, 19. Col. 1. 27.

Such a knowledge of God and Christ will fill us with high thoughts of them, and high apprehensions will breed strong affections to them, and increase all graces, Exod. 33. 19. Esay 6. 5, 8. Col. 3. 16.

The Devil much oppoſeth this knowledge, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 6. 12. whensoever God intends good to any soul, he brings it to the means.

There are several degrees of Knowledge:

1. Some have a simple nescience, Ephes. 4. 18. like children, Esay 28. 9, 10.
2. Some know things grammatically and literally.
3. Others have a dogmatical knowledge, are orthodox in their judgements, Rom. 2. 20.
4. There is a gracious illumination, understanding of truths so as to apply them, John 6. 44, 45. experimental knowledge, 1 Pet. 2. 3. Phil 1. 9.

Sound and saving knowledge of the truths of God is a great blessing. Sound and saving knowledge is,

1. Such a knowledge as establisheth the heart, Col. 1. 23. & 2. 2.
2. It commands the soul unto obedience, John 8. 32.
3. It gives us prudence, Psalm 119. 33. 1 Pet. 3. 7.
4. It ends in a taste, 1 Pet. 2. 2, 3.

Reasons.

1. Because of the excellency of knowledge, Prov. 23. 13, 14. Hosea 6. 3.
2. Because of the latitude of Christian knowledge, Luke 2. 52.
3. Because of the difficulty of it; natural blindness is hardly cured, Prov. 30. 2, 3. Job 42. 5.
4. The profit that comes by it, all grace comes in by the understanding; if we knew God more, we should love him, fear him, trust in him more, Psalm 9. 10. John 4. 10. 2 Epist of John 11.

Wisdome is an excellent endowment, a principal, and one of the cardinal Vertues, Wisdom and understanding have been rare in all ages, Job 28. 12, 20. & 32. 9. The wise men of the world stormed at and slighted Christ.

tues, much to be desired and esteemed. Wisdome is the chiefest, saith Salomon, he speaketh of spiritual wisdome, but the proportion holdeth fitly; as spiritual wisdome is the principal among spiritual graces, so natural wisdome among natural. The excellency of a thing, saith Salomon in another place, is wisdome, and who is as the wise man? And also, Wisdome maketh the face to shine: As light is better than darknesse, so is wisdome than folly. A poor wise childe is preferred before an old foolish King. Wisdome is one of the principal Attributes of God for which he is most exalted by his Saints, To the onely wise God be glory for ever and ever. To the onely wise God our Saviour be glory and majesty, dominion and power for ever.

David was commended to Saul for being a wise man.

Wisdome is one principal part of the excellency of the holy Angels; as they excell in power, so in wisdome; so saith the woman to David, My Lord is wise as an Angel of God; intimating that wisdome is an angelical thing. Salomon being put to his choice, asked wisdom at Gods hands, and God himself approved and commended his choice, and rewarded it also with an addition of other things, as it were advantages and appendices to it, giving him, as a wise heart, so likewise store of riches and honour.

Reasons. 1. It perfecteth the best faculty of the best part of the best creature, of all that God hath made in this inferiour world: Wisdome is a gift peculiar to men; beasts have strength, swiftnesse, beauty: Wisdome also is a quality that pertaineth to the best part of man, his soul; it perfecteth reason, the understanding and the will too, making the one to judge and discerne rightly, and the other to choose rightly; the one to see the best things, the other to take the best and leave the worst, and to persist in using the best means for attaining the best things; for wisdome standeth in these two things, in ability to discern what is most beneficial and good, and what helps do most conduce to the getting of it, and to sway the soul to a ready choosing of those means, and right using them for the gaining of those benefits.

Ephes. 1. 8. By wisdome he means in speculatives, and prudence, that is, in practicals.

By wisdome the holy Ghost meaneth not so much the speculative wisdom, which is called learning; the universal knowledge of all things humane and divine; the understanding of great and wonderfull things, as one defines it; but that which is termed prudence, the ability of managing affairs discreetly, the vertue of getting things necessary for our welfare.

The Scripture telleth us of two sorts of wisdom, a good wisdom and a bad; the good properly so called, because it is worthy that name; the bad improperly, because of some resemblance it hath in some respects unto the good.

First, The good wisdom is first and chiefly spiritual, by which the mind is enabled to see and attain its chiefest, highest, most noble end, its fellowship with God, its eternal welfare and happinesse, called, A being wise to salvation.

Natural, which is an ability to see and obtain the natural good, even those benefits which God hath provided for men to enjoy in this world.

A wise man is,

1. Ready to hear God, Prov. 15.
2. Deals securely, builds upon the Rock, Mat. 7. 24, 25.
3. Can undergo crosse grain'd providences, Eccles. 7. 4.
4. Layes up plentifully for himself, Prov. 10. 5. Matth. 25. the wise Virgins had oil in their vessels as well as in their lamps.
5. Looks upon the other side of Gods dispensations, Luke 16 8.

Secondly, Evil wisdom, called by St James, Earthly, sensual and devilish; termed so from the objects of it, the things about which it worketh, even about earthly, sensual and devilish things.

Wisdome is an excellent gift for these reasons also; three things commend a thing, and make it appear most excellent;

1. Rarity.
2. Difficulty.
3. Usefulnesse and profit.

First, It is a rare thing, Eccles. 8 1.

Secondly, It is a most difficult thing to get, therefore the holy Ghost bids us, Digge for it, cry for it, ſearch for it as for hid treaſures.

Thirdly, It is moſt uſefull and beneficial in regard of himſelf that hath it, and others too.

1. He that hath it gets by it comfort, good ſucceſſe and conſtant proſperity.

2. It is an honour to him before all men, The wiſe ſhall inherit glory; it will make the face to ſhine like an ointment, Salomons wiſdom commended him to all the world. Dr Hall cals him, the Oracle, the Miracle of wiſdom. Where ſhall we find a wiſe man like this? ſaid Pharaoh of Joſeph.

3. It makes him very beneficial to others; a poor wiſe man delivered a City that was beſieged by a mighty man. A skill to perform things well and fitly, that is meant by the word wiſdom in Scripture: Bezaleel was filled with wiſdome: A wiſe maſter-builder, ſaith Paul. It is ſuch a knowledge of things as inableth a man to order his actions and whole life aright.

It hath two parts, a right underſtanding, and an aptneſſe to uſe underſtanding.

Wiſdome, whether natural or ſpiritual, all good wiſdome is Gods gift; The inſpiration of the moſt High giveth wiſdome, out of his mouth cometh underſtanding.

The chief ground, The beginning of wiſdome is the fear of the Lord. A good underſtanding and obedience have all they which doe his precepts. This is the foundation of ſpiritual and true natural wisdome, without which a man may have wit and craft, but wiſdome he cannot have, except ſuch wicked wiſdome as St Iames deſcribes.

Theſe vertues of fearing God and obeying him, are both main parts of wiſdom, and the foundation of it.

Some common means for attaining both theſe kinds of wiſdom:

First, See our own want of wiſdom, together with the worth of it, that we may earneſtly deſire it; for ſpiritual wiſdom, Paul ſaith, If any would be wiſe, he muſt become a fool that he may be wiſe; his meaning is, he muſt take notice of his own folly, 1 Kings 3. 9.

A man knows nothing to ſpeak of, and of what he knows moſt he knows but the bark and outſide, the inſide and the moſt excellent things he knows not, nor can know, ſo that there are a world of ſecrets in a little graſſe, a worm, which all the deepeſt Philoſophers on earth cannot ſearch into.

Secondly, We muſt pray for it earneſtly, Iames 1. 5. Spiritual wiſdom was never obtained without it, and the other is not elſe ſanctified to a man.

Thirdly, Converſe with the wiſe, Prov. 13. 20.

Fourthly, Oppoſe thoſe things which are contrary to it.

1. Strong paſſions, eſpecially wrath and anger; this dwels in the boſom of fools and exalts folly.

2. Conceitedneſſe of ones ſelf, There is more hope of a fool than one that is wiſe in his own conceit.

3. Raſhneſſe, in doing things haſtily and on a ſudden, and of his own head, without deliberating with himſelf, and conſulting with others.

4. Voluptuouſneſſe, He that follows the idle is deſtitute of heart.

The ſpecial means of getting ſpiritual wiſdom:

To be conſtant and diligent in reading and pondering on the Scriptures; Gods oracles, Prov. 1. 4. Pſ. 119. 98, 99, 100. Theſe writings will make us wiſe to ſalvation, and teach us alſo how to be wiſe in the world, and to order all our affairs with judgment. To which adde prayer and practice.

Chriſt is our wiſdom, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Manifeſt Signs and fruits of wiſdom:

The Scripture gives ſome general Rules of diſcretion.

First, To take the due time and fit ſeaſon of things, As the Ant labours in Summer againſt Winter, ſo Salomon ſaith, The wiſe man will labour in harveſt.

Which way do your debates run? Luk. 12. 17. Jam. 4. 13. Rom. 13. 14.

Secondly, To be wary and deliberate, walking by advice and counſel, and not doe your fears runne? Prov. 22. 9. 3. What is the drift of your indeavours? Phil. 3. 12. 4. Where are your hopes and expectations, Matth. 6. 21.

follow

follow his own head, A wise man is of a cool spirit. In the multitude of counsellors is peace.

Wisdome is meek, quiet, gentle.

Thirdly, To use due secrecy, to know how to keep such things to ones self as should be reserved.

Wisdome is an ability to see and attain welfare and happinesse; an angry man cannot be happy, the meekest also.

Fourthly, To be somewhat hard of belief; A fool believes every thing, but a wise man will enquire into matters.

Fifthly, To know and prefer the most needfull things in the first place.

Sixthly, Will take reproof well; Rebuke a wise man and he will love thee.

because he cannot be quiet, therefore neither can he be wise: Christ the wisest of men was It is also humble, lowly, well acquainted with its own manifold defects. A fool is wiser in his own eyes than seven men that can render a reason.

Aristotle and the Schools say, Sapientia est altissimas causas contemplari.

Great natural wisdome separated from holinesse makes a man the more wicked and mischievous, as Ahitophels wisdom, 2 *Sam.*16.22,23. enabled him to do more mischief. The Apostle saith, The wisdom of this world is foolishnesse with God; And St James tels us, That this wisdom is earthly, sensual and devilish. We may see it evident in the Devil, who is of great understanding, but utterly unholy, and therefore the worst of all Gods creatures.

The foolish sinner is carried in all things, as if there were no God, no Heaven, God is not in all his thoughts. Prudence is recta ratio agibilium, it is practical and applies generals to particulars. The Schools make this difference between wisdom and prudence; the one is in contemplation, the other in ordering of that contemplation to practice. The godly man doth not only know things but doth them.

Reasons. 1. This wisdom looks onely to the things that are inferiour, and false goods, and so carry a man further from God the chiefest good.

2. Such wisdom inableth a man better to devise and contrive sinfull enterprizes, so that he can find out means fit and apt to bring to passe any evil design or intention which is within him.

3. It knows, how if need be, to hide and conceal sinne, and cover it with fair pretences and shifts, and to excuse and defend it.

4. It causeth him in whom it is to be more regarded by others, they listen to his counsel, and are ready to take and follow it.

The understanding of divine truths revealed in Scripture may be found in a greater measure in some hypocrites than some true Saints, because of their greater natural abilities, more ample instruction and better education. We know, saith Paul, that all men have knowledge. He that knows his masters will, and doth it not, saith our Saviour. To him that knows how to do well, and doth it not, saith James. Thus the Pharisees bragged of the knowledge of the Law, upbraiding the people with ignorance. Those that shall alledge prophesying in the name of Christ, had a large measure of knowledge. St Paul yeeldeth to the Jewes, that they had a forme of knowledge out of the Law. But the difference between the knowledg of a godly and wicked man stands chiefly in these things;

1. In the matter of this knowledge: the true Christian is ready to know all truths that God doth offer to his knowledge, submitting his reason and understanding wholly to God, and not detaining any part of the truth in unrighteousnesse, not willingly winking or refusing to know; but the hypocrite refuseth knowledge in some things, and will wink with his eyes: as the Pharisees would not understand that Christ was the Messiah; and of the mockers Peter saith, Of this they are willingly ignorant.

2. The hypocrite is most studious and inquisitive into the niceties of the Scripture, and of Religion, as I may term them, matters of doubtfull disputation, speculative points. But the true Christian is solid in his knowledge, cares to know nothing but Christ and him crucified; the substantial and essential points of Christian Religion, concerning Faith, Love and a good Conscience, which tend to practise.

Secondly, In the manner, the knowledge of the hypocrite is confused, of the true true Christian is distinct. The knowledge of the one is only literal, the others is a spiritual knowledge. A wicked man may have apprehensions of the truths of the Gospel, as great and good: the other hath an application of them as good to him. 1 Cor. 2. 15. 1 Joh. 2. 27.

Thirdly, In the Effects of it.

1. The Christian applies his knowledge to himself, to discover his own ways, and to rectifie and teach himself, but the hypocrite onely to teach and instruct others, and to censure, or only to talk and discourse with applause. Job 5. ult.

2. The Christian man fals to practise his knowledge, he hears and does; the hypocrite only talketh, and though he know how to do well doth it not, building upon the sand. Prov. 2. 9, 10.

Lastly, The hypocrites knowledge puffs him up, 1 Cor. 8. 2. and makes him despise those which do know lesse than himself. These people which know not the Law are accursed; thou art altogether born in sin, and dost thou teach us? but the true knowledge of the sanctified man humbleth him. Jobs knowledge of God made him to abhorre himself, that is the lowest degree of humility, Job 42. 5, 6. Prov. 30. 2.

The ignorance of sin keeps men from a godly life:

1. Of the nature of it,

1. When they know not such and such things in particular to be sinnes, Acts 26. 9.

2. When they are ignorant of the filthinesse and baseneſſe of sinne, and how abominable it is to God, Jer. 44. 4.

3. Of the deceitfulnesse of sinne, Prov. 16. 15. Heb. 3. 13.

2. Of the fruits and consequents of sinne:

1. The shame that follows it, Rom. 6. 20.

2. Horrour and disquietnesse in the conscience, Gen. 4.

Motives to Gospel-knowledge:

Consider, first, the knowledge of it; no knowledge no grace, John 6. 44, 45. Ephes. 4. 24. Col. 3. 12.

1. Humility comes by it, Esay 31. 18.

2. Strength to bear afflictions, Heb. 10. 36. No knowledge, no duty; our service must be reasonable: God regards not blind obedience, 1 Chron. 8. 9. John 4. 22. without knowledge the heart is not good.

Secondly, The possibility of it; God hath appointed the Ministry for this very end, Acts 26. 18. Observe how the promises runne, Psalm 19. 7. Jer. 31. 34. Esay 35. 18.

Thirdly, The dignity of it; it is a noble study; the excellency of the knowledg of Christ: it is the highest wisdom to know God in Christ, 1 Cor. 1. 20.

1. In the matter of it; only the Bible teacheth this knowledge.

2. The way God alone must teach you; you must see God by his own light. The Jews were honoured above all other Nations for their knowledge of the true God. See Jer. 9. 23, 24.

3. It is very profitable:

1. It hath a healing vertue, heals the understanding, John 17. 17. You are clean through my word.

2. Makes every one spiritually wise that hath it.

3. Will keep the mans soul from every evil way, Prov. 2.

4. The Devil much opposeth it, he would have the Bible burnt or corrupted.

We should therefore,

First, Labour to get knowledge, Prov. 2. 3, 4. Cry for knowledge and dig for it; a lazy prayer without endeavour will do nothing: it will make us more usefull in our relations, 1 Peter 3. 7. and establish us against errour, 2 Peter 3. 17.

Secondly, To grow in knowledge:

1. Let it be more comprehensive, Col. 3. 16.

2. Distinct truths are best known in their dependance, frame.

3. More experimental, Phil. 3. 8, 10.

4. More practical, 1 Joh. 2. 3, 4. one knows savingly no more than he practiseth.

VI. Mercy.

See Par. on Rom. 12.7. Mercy is either moral or Chriſtian; there is a naturall mercifulneſſe found in Heathens, when out of naturall motives and inclinations

A godly man muſt be a merciſull man; the Hebrew word for merciſull ſignifies godly, 2 Samuel 22.25,26. Pſalm 112.9. Our Saviour imitating or alluding to theſe words of David, ſaith, Matth. 5. Bleſſed are the merciſull. St Paul bids the Coloſſians, As the elect holy and beloved, to put on humbleneſſe of minde, and bowels of mercy. You ſee what apparel we muſt wear, if we will approve our ſelves to be choſen and beloved of God, that is, what vertues we muſt get and practiſe as conſtantly as we put on our cloathes to keep our bodies warme and decent, one is bowels of mercy, tender mercies, Micah 6.8. I will have mercy and not Sacrifice. God prefers it before all Sacrifices, Eſay 32.8. See 2 Cor. 8.2,3,7.

they are ready to ſuccour the miſerable. Chriſtian, when out of a Chriſtian inclination men are ready to help ſuch. The one flows from faith and love to God, the other not; the one looks to ſpiritual miſeries, the other only to temporal; the one is ready to ſhew it ſelf to enemies, the other not; the one aimeth at God and intendeth to pleaſe him, the other at credit, or at beſt at pleaſing it ſelf.

Chriſt himſelf though he lived upon Alms, had a bag for the poor. Job and Obadiah were merciſull, Job 31.16. 1 Kings 18.13.

The alms which ſhe gave in three quarters of a year in diſtribution, is ſummed to the number of fourteen or fifteen thouſand pounds. Foxes Book of Martyrs, vol. 2. p. 332.

Queen Anne of Bullen, beſides the ordinary of a hundred crowns and other apparel which ſhe gave weekly, a year before ſhe was crowned, both to men and women, gave alſo wonderfull much prime alms to widows and other poor houſholders continually, till ſhe was apprehended, and ſhe ſent her ſubalmner to the Towns about where ſhe lay, that the Pariſhioners ſhould make a Bill of all the poor houſholders in the Pariſh, and ſome Towns received ſeven, eight or ten pound to buy Kine withall, according as the number of the poor in the Towns were. She alſo maintained many learned men in Cambridge. She carried ever about her a certain little purſe, out of the which ſhe was wont daily to ſcatter abroad ſome alms to the needy, thinking no day well ſpent, wherein ſome man had not fared the better by ſome benefit at her hands.

See 2 Cor. 8. 2,3.

King Edward the ſixth upon occaſion of Biſhop Ridleys preaching to him in his ſickneſſe, and commending workes of charity, gave very liberally to the poore before his death, as Hayward relates in his Life, pag. 169, 170, 171.

Mr Fenner of the Aſſect.

Mr Fox himſelf was ſo zealous in his love to the poor, that he was in a holy manner cruell to himſelf, to give the very cloathes off his back, rather than the naked ſhould not be cloathed.

Mr Stock in his Funeral Sermon of him.

My Lord Harrington gave the tenth of his allowance to the poor, and other good uſes, his allowance being a 1000lb per annum.

Maſter Whately did the like, as Maſter Scudder relates in his Life; he was very bountifull himſelf, and did much ſtirre up others to that duty in his preaching.

Mr Hughes in his Preface to The embalming of dead Saints.

The like did Mr John Underwood of All-hallows in Breadſtreet. Every year when he made up his Books, and had ſummed up his debts and gains, he would conſtantly reſerve the tenths, and write himſelf, So much debtor to God. The better tenth of his eſtate he gave to God alſo in his laſt Will.

John the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was called the Almner, [illegible] Agnarius, becauſe he had a great revenew, but laid it out all on the poor, and at years end would ſay, I have nothing [illegible] me but my Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Richard Chriſtophilus the converted and baptized Turk, told Mr Whin, that once a year all the great men of Turkie, Baſhaws and others, had their whole eſtates valued and caſt up by their Stewards, and they give the tenth part yearly to charitable uſes.

autre Cele ordinairement Couronne: & la vision de ce nombre estoit, qu'ils n'auroient les plus grandes richesses, & ne pourroient dire; & ce qu'ils font en mal, cela le fait en bien. Histoire De Louis Le JUSTE Par Scripion Du Perix, Pag. 77.

The Dutch have a good Proverb, Thieves never inrich, Almes never impoverish.

Mr Baxter in his Preface to the Crucifying of the world, gives a Catalogue of seasonable good works.

Artaxerxes Longimanus had his name (some say) from his bounty, the right hand being more stretcht out to give than the other to receive. Plutarch in Crassus saith, that he did Decimam Herculi consecrare.

Reasons. First, This is to be like God who is good in himself, and does good to others.

Secondly, God hath therefore given to us, that like good Stewards we may give to others.

Thirdly, Faith if it produce not charity is a dead and counterfeit faith; it works by love; this grace is a most necessary, proper and inseparable fruit of true Christian charity.

Fourthly, All Devotion and religious Worship of God is feigned and hypocritical, if destitute of mercy, James 1. 27. Religion must be tried by mercy, our worshipping of God by our mercifulnesse to our neighbour. Fasting is no otherwise acceptable to God than as it is joyned with mercy, Esa. 58. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Christ hath joyned Alms, Prayer and Fasting together, Mat. 6. 1. so must we, Acts 10. 30, 31.

Fifthly, Without it we cannot attain mercy from God; his mercy is limited to mercifull men, 2 Samuel 22. 25. He shall never finde mercy with God that shews not mercy to men: Judgement without mercy shall be to him that shews no mercy, James 2. 13. Mat. 5. 7. Isa. 58. 9. Prov. 21. 13.

We should be merciful,

1. In all our relations; Christ was a merciful and faithful High Priest.
2. To the poor and needy, Heb. 13. 2. to our enemies Mat. 5. 44. Luke 6. 35.
3. To the dumb creatures, Exodus 23. 5. Prov. 12. 10.
4. To our selves, to our own souls, and near to the people of God, Gal. 6. 10. to their names, states, lives, liberties, bodies, souls.

We should shew mercy,

1. In giving that which is good, Ministring to the necessities of the Saints.
2. In forbearing one another, Eph. 4. begin.
3. In forgiving one another, Eph. 4. lat. end. Mat. 18. 22.
4. In forgetting injuries, as God doth our offences.
5. In pitying and praying one for another, Heb. 13. 3. 2 Cor. 1. 11. See 1 Cor. 5. 14. Heb. 12. 15.

We should give,

1. Cheerfully, 2 Cor. 9. 6, 7.
2. Speedily, Prov. 3. 28.
3. Plentifully, 2 Cor. 9. 6, 7.
4. Secretly, Matth. 6. 3, 4.

Mercy is a vertue by which men order themselves rightly to the miserable for their help and comfort. The object of mercy is a person miserable, the end of mercy is the help and comfort of such a person; the proper act of mercy is to cause a man so order himself as tends to that end. Misery is the being obnoxious to some evil of pain, at least to some evil that makes him unhappy. A man is miserable either

Alms in the Greek is ἐλεημοσύνη from ἔλεος mercy or compassion, because it is a gift given to the poor out of commiseration or pity, whence the French Aumosne. Εἰ τινος ἐστι δοῦναι ἐλεημοσύνην. Bellarm. lib. 3. de bonis oper. de Eleemos. cap. 1. In the Hebrew and Syriack it is called, Righteousness, as if it were by right due to the poor, Prov. 14. 18. Almes and relief of poor people being a work of charity, is accounted in Law divine service, for what herein is done to the poor for Gods sake, is done to God himself. Sr Edw. Cook on Lit. Fide Aquin. 2a. 2æ. Quæst. 32. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Religion teacheth a man to performe all offices of love to others out of pure respect to God, 2 Epist. of John 5, 6.

in deserving or in act, in deserving, when he hath done something that makes him obnoxious to misery, subject to it, that binds him to it, for it is a misery to lie open to punishment, to be in such a case that he may and must suffer it. In act a man is miserable when he doth now suffer evil of any kinde. Mercy takes order either to prevent this misery that it come not in some cases, so farre as is agreeable with justice and equity, or to mitigate and ease it when it lies on, or to remove it so soon as is fit.

There are two verses, one for ourward, and the other for spiritual alms.

The first is,

Visito, Pasco, Cibo, Redimo, Tego, Colligo, Condo.

The other is,

Consule, Castiga, Solare, Remitte, Fer, Ora.

Mr Lapthorn hath written a good Treatise of spiritual Alms, and Mr Whately of corporal, called, The poor Mans Advocate, set forth by me in his life time.

There are seven works of corporal Alms, and six of spiritual.

The Fathers and Schoolmen hold, that spiritual Alms Cæteris paribus are more excellent and acceptable than corporal, because

1. The Gift is more noble in its own nature.
2. The Object more illustrious, mans immortal soul.
3. The Charity more heavenly, which aimes at our Brothers endlesse Salvation.

Eleemosyna spiritualis præeminet triplici ratione.

Primò quidem ratione ad quod: cujus finis nobilior est, scilicet donum spirituale quod præeminet corporali. Secundò, Ratione ejus, cui subvenitur, quia Spiritus excellit in corpore. Tertiò, Quantum ad ipsius actus, quibus subvenitur proximo: quia spirituales actus sunt nobiliores corporalibus qui sunt quodammodo serviles. Aquin. 2a, 2æ. Quæst. 32. Art. 3.

Spiritual alms are these:

1. Wise and seasonable reproof, Levit. 19. 17.
2. Comforting and supporting afflicted consciences, Luke 22. 28.
3. Instructing the weak and ignorant.
4. Bearing the infirmities of others, Eph. 4. 2.
5. Praying for others, Phil. 1. 9. Col. 1. 3.

See a good Sermon, styled Provision for the poor on Ps. 41. 1. by Hen. Arth.

The poor is he who hath not enough of his own to maintain life, or to maintain it with any cheerfulnesse and plenty.

There are three sorts of poor,

1. The Devils poor,
2. The Worlds poor.
3. Christs poor.

And there are three Degrees of Necessity,

1. Extream, when there is nothing left, but they will starve if they be not supplied: in such a case the most wicked should be helped.
2. Grievous, when some thing is left, but they are in great want: in this necessity the worlds poor should be relieved.
3. Common and ordinary; Christs poor should then be relieved.

2a, 2æ Quæst. 32. Art. 8. Qui proprietatem & dominium non habent, ut nostra quæ sunt in potestate eorum, sicut qui sunt in potestate parentum, servi qui sunt in potestate Domini eorum, non habent, nec possunt Eleemosynam facere, nisi in extrema pauperum necessitate, vel in manifesta ratione, vel expresso superiorum. Bellarm. l. 3. de bonis operibus, c. 15.

Aquinas hath this Question, Utrum ille qui est in potestate alterius constitutus possit eleemosynam facere? Whether he which is under power may give alms? and resolves it negatively, because Inferiours must be regulated by their Superiours. But saith, If a wife hath any thing besides her Dowry, or gains any thing her self, or gets it any other lawfull way, she may give moderate alms of that without requiring her husbands consent; otherwise she ought not to give alms without her husbands consent, either expresse or presumed, unlesse in case of necessity.

Dr Gouge in his Domestick Duties resolves this Question much after the same manner.

Motives to Mercy:

First, Consider the exceeding plainnesse and frequency of the Commandments which cut off all excuse of ignorance; the exercise of this grace is so commanded that other Commandments must give place to it, Mat. 12. 7.

Secondly, We can do no service that the Spirit of God more delights in next to the snatching of souls out of hell than this, Esay ch. 1. & 58. Mic. 6. 7, 8. Heb. 13. This shews love to Christ to relieve his members. It discovers and adorns all our graces, Col. 3. 12. Esay 28. 4. & 62. begin.

Thirdly, God rewards no work more than this when done in a spiritual manner, and to a right end, Psalm 18. 25. Matth. 5. 7. He that gives to the poor lends unto the Lord.

I. In this world.

1. To their own persons whilst they live, Eccl. 11. Psalm 41. 1.

2. To their posterity, Psalm 112. 1. Esay 58. 12.

II. At the last day we shall meet with all in Heaven what ever we doe in this kinde, I was naked, and ye cloathed me. See Luke 14. 13, 14, 15. & 16. 8, 9.

Fourthly, They are commended often in Scripture who abounded in almes, as Tabitha, Act. 9. 36. and Cornelius, Act. 10.

Fifthly, God hath threatned judgement without mercy to the unmercifull, James 2. 13.

Sixthly, Thou desirest to find mercy both with God and man when thou art in any distresse; we should do as we would be done unto, Mat. 7. 12. We our selves may be as miserable and afflicted as any. God promiseth to forgive us as we forgive others.

We should labour to be rich in grace seeing other riches are so vain. See Eccl. 5. 10. to the end.

1. These are the true riches, Luk. 16. 9. other riches are deceiving.
2. These are our own riches, Luk. 16. 12.
3. Unsearchable riches, Ephes. 3. 18.
4. Spiritual riches, Matth. 6. 25.
5. Heavenly riches, Matth. 6. 29. 1 Cor. 15. 44.
6. Eternal, Luke 16. 9.

We should strive to be rich,

a. In knowledge, 1 Cor. 1. 5. 2. In faith, Jam. 2. 5. but especially in mercy, otherwise we cannot make it appear either to our selves or others, that we are rich in faith, James 2. 18.

Means to make one mercifull:

First, Meditate and ponder upon the motives, till they have brought you to sorrow and repentance for not having been mercifull. The plaister must be applied that it may cure the sore. The Word must be pondered upon, that the soul may receive the impression of it, and be made obedient to it. Take some time to call to minde Gods Commandments, promises and threats.

Secondly, You must adde prayer to meditation, and confesse to God your unmercifulnesse; beseech him to pardon the fault for Christs sake, and to make you mercifull like himself hereafter. To beg pardon of a fault and help against it from God is the way to mend it.

Thirdly, We must adde thereto resolutions and purposes of our own, saying, By Gods help I will be more mercifull, I will even stir up my self to shew mercy, Is it not my duty? Will it not be my profit? Shall I not have the benefit of it? Must I not obey Gods Commandments? Away objections, away fleshly reason, I must be mercifull, and by Gods help I will be mercifull, I can no further be a true Christian than I am mercifull.

Lastly, Must follow practice, a man must consider of some present occasion, that requireth the exercise of mercy; or if he finde none he must open his purse and lay aside some pence, or shillings, or pounds, as his estate will afford, and say, This I will sequester from my self, and lay aside for the performance of the next work of mercy I meet with occasion of performing: if one have not done so already, he must begin now, and put aside some such summe as his present abundance may well spare, and say, This shall be by me till the next opportunity of a mercifull deed, and then will I bestow some or all of it as need requireth.

This is the way to make you mercifull, meditate, pray, resolve, practice, these four things will work any grace and increase it.

The chiefest impediments to mercy remov'd.

1. Taken from our selves.

2. From thoſe we ſhould ſhew mercy to.

3. From others.

First, From our ſelves; one is, I have little enough for my ſelf and mine own, I have ſuch a charge, and but ſuch an eſtate, and what would you have me do? if I ſhould give ſtill I might ſoon give all away.

To which I anſwer, 1. Doſt thou think thou ſhalt have the more for thy ſelf and thine, becauſe of pinching from works of mercy? Hath not God ſaid in his word, He that ſaveth more than enough it is onely for poverty? Nay thy ſaving from works of mercy will cauſe God to croſſe thee in other things, with ſickneſſe, ill debters, loſſe of cattel, unfaithfull ſervants, riotous children, with ſome or other loſſe in thy body or ſtate, but if thou wouldſt give to the poor, thou ſhalt be bleſſed and have abundance.

2. This is a ſelf-loving heart, thou maiſt have for thy ſelf and thine; Haſt not thou ſome overplus too, if thou wouldſt think any thing enough for thy ſelf and thine?

Secondly, Some object they have not wherewithall to be mercifull in ſo great quantity.

Anſw. He that hath wherewithall to fare well and go well himſelf, and to diſpatch any other thing that he deſireth, hath wherewithall to ſhew mercy too if he want not will; when thou wanteſt any thing for thy ſelf, thou canſt find wherewithall to ſupply thee, but when God cals for it in works of mercy, thou haſt it not; this is to adde lying to unmercifulneſſe, and to go about to mock God as well as diſobey him.

2. From others.

I am as mercifull as ſuch and ſuch.

I anſwer, 1. Thou canſt not tell what another doth in ſecret. But

2. Suppoſe thou art ſo. God hath not given the liberality or mercy of men to thee for a patern and preſident of mercy, but his own, Be mercifull as your heavenly Father is mercifull.

3. What harm is it if thou ſhouldſt outſtrip others in mercy, and gain a greater bleſſing to thy ſelf than they do ſeek after.

is the perfection of a Christian mans goodnesse, he will do good to them that do evil to him.

VII. Patience.

Patientia est malorum, quæ aut inferuntur aut accidunt, cum æquanimitate perlatio. Lactan. l. 5. de Justitia.

It is a grace of the sanctifying Spirit of God, whereby the soul doth silently and freely submit to the will of God in bearing its own burden without inordinate sorrow or fretting discontent, 1 Samuel 3. 18.

First, A grace of the sanctifying Spirit, not a natural or moral patience, but wrought by Gods Spirit, Galat. 5. 22. the foundation of it is laid in regeneration.

Secondly, It is a silent submission to the will of God. David had a great trial by his sons treason and subjects rebellion, yet he submits to Gods appointment, 2 Sam. 15. 26. Levit. 10. 3.

Thirdly, It is a free submission, Acts 21. 13. Paul lookt on his sufferings as a Sacrifice, Phil. 1. 27. therefore it was to be voluntary.

Fourthly, Must submit to God in bearing his own burden; the object of it is malum triste, a man must take up his crosse, Ezek. 24. 16. Lam. 1, 10.

Fifthly, He must bear it without inordinate sorrow or anger.

See Dr Gouges Whole Armour, p. 80. & so forward. Dr Taylors Parable of the Sower, pag. 404. Dr Manton on Jam. 5. 7. It is a holy disposition, whereby the heart looking at Gods will in the disposing of all things, doth sustain any adversity for the Lords sake, Job 1. 21. A grace of the Spirit, whereby we are inabled to bear what ever may befall us in our course toward Heaven resolutely, cheerfully, quietly. One defines it a complacential submission to the will of God in bearing afflictions. The matter or object of it, bearing afflictions; the form, a complacential submission to the will of God, 1. Submission, Rom. 8 29. 2. To the will of God, not to an unavoidable necessity, Lev. 18. 31. 1 Sam 3. 18. Psal 39. 9. Acts 21. 14. 3. A submission with complacency, not forced, 2 Kings 20. 19. Job 1. ult. James 7. 2. Colos. 2. 11. Virtus non cerni non potest, nisi habeat vitia contraria, aut non est perfecta, nisi exerceatur adversis. Hanc enim Deus bonorum ac malorum voluit esse distantiam, ut qualitatem boni ex malo sciamus itemque mali ex bono, nec alterius ratio intelligi, sublato altero potest. Deus ergo non excluſit malum; ut ratio virtutis constare posset. Quomodo enim patientia vim suam, nomenque retineret, si nihil esset quod pati cogeremur? Quomodo laudem mereretur devota Deo sua fides; nisi esset aliquis, qui à Deo vellet avertere. Lactan. lib. 5. de Justitia. Est enim patientia, non virtus tantum, sed pro virtutibus alia, generosa indoles, & consummata sapientiæ argumentum: cujus tanta est efficacia, ut maximorum malorum sensum, non tempores modo, sed & quodammodo superat. D. Casau. de Nupera Homeri Editione Differt. 11. When a Courtier brought Philip the second King of Spain tidings of the great overthrow of his Navy coming against England in the year 88. without the least motion or change of countenance, he said onely, Welcome be the will of God, I sent my Cosen the Duke of Medina to fight with men, not with the elements. Howels History of the Kingdom of Naples.

Marks of Patience:

1. Such a one will find matter to blesse God in the greatest evils he lies under. Nemini mirum debet videri, si pro nostris sæpe delictis castigamur à Deo. Imo vero, cum vexamur ac premimur, tum maximè gratias agimus indulgentissimo Patri, quod corruptelam nostram non patitur longius procedere; sed plagis ac verberibus emendat. Ex quo intelligimus esse nos Deo curæ; quibus quoniam peccamus, irascitur. Lactant. l. 5. de justitia.

We suffer with Christ, 1. When the cause is Christs for which we suffer. 2. When the graces are Christs by which we suffer.

2. Such a one more desires the right use of the crosse he lies under, than to be freed from it.

3. Such a one will not give over serving God, loving and fearing him for any evil he lies under.

4. He will seek deliverance only in Gods way, Heb. 11, 35. If God will not help Saul he will seek to a Witch.

But when God was dishonoured, Moses (that was meek in his own cause) was very much moved. The Hebrews have a Proverb (as De Dieu notes) In omni re patientia bona est, præterquam in iis quæ amicum spectant.

Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo:

5. A patient heart will wait Gods time as well as go his way, Hab. 2. Psalm 27. last. end.

6. Till deliverance do come, he can find matter of joy and comfort in God in the midst of all pressures, Hab. 2. 17. Paul and Silas sang in the stocks.

Motives or Arguments to perſwade the heart to patient bearing of Afflictions:

I. From God: Conſider,

1. His abſolute Sovereignty over us and all creatures, he may throw thy ſoul and body into hell, if he will, Shall the potſherd ſtrive with the Potter? It is a venturous and rugged gueſſe and conceit which ſome men have, That in a perfect reſignation of our wils to the Divine will, a man ſhould be content with his own damnation, and to be the ſubject of eternal wrath in hell, if it ſhould ſo pleaſe God. Smiths Select Diſcourſes of true Religion. Pſal. 39.

2. His infinite Wiſdome; he doth nothing raſhly, but knows how to order all things for the beſt; his will is a wiſe and holy will, the Rule it ſelf, God is the word of the Lord, ſaid Hezekiah, when ill tidings came. Mr Dod ſaid to one that bore affliction grievouſly, Are you wiſer than God? Is his time or yours beſt?

3. His will is good to thee, All the wayes of God are mercy and truth, he aims at the good of his even when he corrects them.

4. Conſider that this God which hath laid this upon thee affords thee all the good things thou enjoyeſt, thou haſt one croſſe, and perhaps ten thouſand mercies; all theſe come from the ſame hand, Job 2. 10.

5. This God bears with thee every day, elſe what will become of thee? What made David ſo impatient toward Nabal, and ſo meek when Shimei reviled him, but becauſe he lookt up unto God in the one caſe, and not in the other.

II. From our ſelves:

We have reaſon to ſtoop to Gods will even when he pleaſeth to correct us, becauſe

We have cauſe of patience.

1. We have provoked him by our ſins to ſtrike us, and have deſerved far more evil than we ſuffer. 1. If we look upon our ſelves as creatures.

2. We cannot eaſe or any way deliver our ſelves from miſery by murmuring. 2. As ſinners, Lam. 3. 29, 39. Non tam miſeri quam mali.

This is, 1. A worthy ſervice; a child that quietly bears the ſtripes which his Father ſometimes layes upon him, pleaſeth his Father as much as he that readily goes about the things he is bidden. Chriſt himſelf learnt obedience by ſufferings. The principal part of his merit ſtood in that he ſubmitted himſelf to be made of no reputation, and became obedient even to the death of the Croſſe. Facile eſt etiam Stoico, nedum Chriſtiano, magnifice, dum nihil patitur de patientia philoſophari: ſed patienter ferre, ea tandem eſt viva Philoſophia. Oecolamp. & Zuing Epiſt. l. 4. Hanc ſe ſectari Philoſophi quoque profitentur, ſed tam illis patientia falſa eſt, quam & falſa ſapientia eſt. Cyp. de bono pat. 3. As Chriſtians, Col. 1. 24.

Defendenda religio eſt non occidendo, ſed moriendo, non ſævitia ſed patientia; non ſcelere, ſed fide. Lactant. l. 5. de Juſtitia. Patience is honourable, comfortable, profitable, for reaſon and for grace; Impatience is a ſhort fury.

2. It is a moſt profitable duty, turning evil into good, and making evils eaſie to bear, and procuring a ſafe and ſpeedy iſſue out of evil. Act. 5. 41. Hab. 3. 18.

3. From the grace of patience it ſelf.

1. The neceſſity of it, thou canſt not live without it, Heb. 10. 36 in regard of many afflictions, the labours and difficulties of life, and the delay of our expected bleſſedneſſe, Rom. 8. 25. the diſappointment of our endeavours, 1 Cor. 5. 14. Temptations and continual aſſaults from Satan, 2 Corinth. 12. 7, 8. We cannot performe a duty, mortifie a luſt, bring forth fruit, without patience; the good ground brings forth fruit with patience.

Cum videat vulgus dilacerari homines variis tormentorum generibus, & inter fatigatos carnifices invictam teneri patientiam; exiſtimant, id quod res eſt, nec conſenſum tam multorum, nec perſeverantiam morientium vanam eſſe; nec ipſam patientiam ſine Deo cruciatus tantos poſſe ſuperare, Latrones & robuſti corporis viri ejuſmodi lacerationes perferre nequeant, Exclamant & gemitus edunt, vincuntur enim dolore; quia deeſt illis inſpirata patientia. Lactant. de Juſtitia lib. 5. Vide plura ibid.

2. The excellency of this grace, it makes thee moſt like to God, it is a great part of his Image, to Chriſt: He was patient to death, 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4. it will make ong

one enjoy himself in the worst times, Luke 21.19. it will be helpfull to all graces and duties, make thee an amiable Christian, it will strengthen thy faith, subdue thy flesh in thee, bridle thy tongue. Impatience shews weakness, women, old and sick persons are most impatient.

Magna & praeclara virtus est patientia, quam pariter & vulgus vetus, publici & Philosophi, & oratores summis laudibus celebrant. Lactant. lib. 5. de Justitia.

4. From the things we suffer, the right consideration of the nature of Afflictions.

1. Afflictions, whether upon the Soul, State, Friends, Name, are no evidences at all of Gods displeasure for they are the lot of all Gods people, his dearest servants, Prov. 3.12. Job 7.17,18. Heb. 8,6,7,8.

2. God really intends his peoples good, and doth them a great deal of good by afflictions, Heb. 12. 6,7.

1. Hereby Christ makes all his people conformable to himself, Rom. 8. 28.

2. He purgeth out the reliques of corruption, takes down our pride, self-love, love of the world.

3. He exerciseth abundance of grace in his people, 1 Peter 1.7.

4. Makes them grow in grace, more heavenly-minded.

3. God will uphold thee in afflictions, 1 Cor. 10.13.

4. We shall have a most seasonable and merciful deliverance out of afflictions, Psalm 34.19. and God will do his people good according to their afflictions, leave in them an excellent frame of spirit. Jacob and David were rare men after afflictions, God makes the hearts of his people more holy and cheerful after, most of all do they find the benefit of their afflictions when they come to Heaven; for though that be given of free-grace, yet God rewards them proportionably to their good services and afflictions, 2 Cor. 4.17. If we suffer with Christ we shall reign with him.

Means to get patience:

First, The frequent Meditation of the former Motives, study those Arguments.

Secondly, Get faith, study to know thy interest in Christ, and eye the promises.

1. Know the nature of the Covenant, how fully and freely Christ offers grace to thee.

2. Give thy consent that Christ should be a Saviour to thee, that he should sanctifie thee as well as pardon thy sinne, Faith is an assent to the truth, and consent to the goodnesse of it, that Christ should be my Saviour, Psalm 132.7.

3. Either be silent, or return a soft answer when thou art provoked.

VIII. Peace.

Peace in the general notion and nature of it, is the correspondency or harmony of one thing to another, working in its proper place to the common end, the good of the whole.

It is a kind of sweet, divine and heavenly consent, harmony or beauty of things subordinate one to another. Dr Gouden.

If the world be a Ring, peace is the Diamond of it. The Hebrews use it often Pax itaque corporis, est ordinata temperatura partium. Pax animae irrationalis, ordinata requies appetituum. Pax animae rationalis ordinata cognitionis actionisque consensio. Pax corporis & animae ordinata vita & salus animantis. Pax hominis mortalis, est Dei immortalis ordinata in fide sub aeterna lege obedientia. Pax hominum, ordinata concordia. Pax domus, ordinata imperandi atque obtemperandi concordia cohabitantium. Pax civitatis, ordinata imperandi atque obtemperandi concordia civium. Pax coelestis civitatis, ordinatissima & concordissima societas fruendi Deo, & sibi invicem in Deo. Pax omnium rerum, tranquillitas ordinis. August. de civit. Dei, lib. 19. cap. 13.

for

for all prosperity of soul and body; they use Shalom in their letters, and say ordinarily, Peace be to this house, that is, All happiness attend you. It was Henry the sevenths usual Preface in his Treaties, That when Christ appeared the world Peace was sung, and when he went out of the world Peace was bequeathed. Sir Francis Bacon. The Apostolical Benediction is Grace and Peace. More properly it signifies Concord, Unity and Reconciliation. See Mr Warres learned Sermon of this subject on Rom. 14.19.

Peace is,

1. The mother of all outward blessings, Prov. 15. 17.
2. The fruit of the Spirit, Gal. 5.22.

There is Theological peace with God, Job 22. 21. Ecclesiastical and Political peace.

Peace Civil is a great blessing;

1. The safety of our persons, lives and relations is concerned in it.
2. We have thereby freedom from rage and fury of evil men.
3. The administration of justice and judgement, of the Laws.
4. It gives us the comfort of all other enjoyments.

But the peace, tranquillity and prosperity of the Church is a farre greater mercy, and therefore much to be desired, valued and sought after, Psalm 122. 6.

Reasons.

1. Because God beares a peculiar respect to his Church, Psalm 135. 21. Quicquid habet mundus habet beneficio Ecclesiæ. Luther.
2. When the Church wants its peace, God is greatly troubled at the afflictions of his people, Judges 10. 16. Esay 49. 16.
3. Because the honour of God and his worship is greatly concern'd in the Churches peace, Psalm 74. 22. 23. & 68. 26.
4. It is promised as a great blessing, Esay 65. 22. & 33. 20. Psalm 128. 5, 6.

Firm and stable peace is and must be the fruit of righteousnesse, Heb. 7. 1, 2. first King of righteousnesse, then of Peace. Hag. 2. 18. Jam. 3. 18. Righteousnesse is the qualification of the person to whom God will grant peace, it takes away all the matter which provokes God to wrath. No peace is to be had without Christ, Esay 48. ult. all peace by him, Eph. 2. 14.

1. With God, Rom. 5. 1.
2. In our own consciences.
3. With all the creatures, Ezech. 34. 25. Hosea 2.

There are many Scriptures which urge us to strive after peace, Psalm 34. 14. & 120. 6, 7. Prov. 16. 20. Matth. 5. 9. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Rom. 14. 16, 17, 18, 19. 1 Cor. 1. 10, 11. & 3. 3, 4. & Ephes. 4. 3. 1 Thess 5. 13. James 3. 17, 18. 1 Peter 3. 11. We are commanded to follow peace, Heb. 12. 14.

1. We must make it the chiefest of our study to obtain it.
2. We must shew our selves enemies to all unjust divisions.
3. We must suffer for peace, stick at nothing for the Churches peace.
4. We must do all this with constancy and importunity.

We should also entertain the peace of Christ, Job 22. 22. 2 Cor. 6. 20.

Motives to provoke us hereunto:

First, if we receive not peace when it is offered we shall not have it, Luke 14. 24.

Secondly, We shall be under hotter war, Micah 10. 14. 2 Thess. 1. 7.

Because this is,

1. A sinne to refuse the offers of peace, the Gospel.
2. A greater sinne than all the sins against the Law, Heb. 1. 1, 2. & 12. 24, 25. against the highest manifestation of love and light, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

Thirdly, We refuse all peace; Christ is the only peace-maker.

Fourthly, He offers this peace upon sweet and easie terms, Esay 55. 1, 2.

If we have interest in the peace which Christ hath purchased,

1. Then we have joy, Rom. 5. 2. Esay 25. 6. and that in the midst of worldly sorrows, Rom. 5. 3.
2. We are at warre with sin, 2 Cor. 7. 11, 12. Psalm 86. 10.
3. Our hearts are weaned from the things of the world, 1 Cor. 7. 31.
4. Praise God for it, Rom. 12. 1. Love him the more, Rom. 5 1, 5. and desire communion with him, Amos 3. 3.
5. Labour to be at peace with all men, and to help others to it, 2 Cor. 5. 11. Acts 26. 29.
6. Delight in the Saints, as Saints, Psalm 16. 3.

IX. Perseverance.

To persevere is to continue or remain, therefore perseverare and permanere are joyned together in the same sense ad verborum copiam. And as in the good part it is wont to be referred to constancy, so in the evil to pertinacy. Cujusvis hominis, est errare, nullius nisi insipientis in errore perseverare. Cic. de Leg. lib. 3 Quod si satis expenderent adversarij, in veritatis castra redirent. Gomari Defensio Doctrinæ de Perseverantia Sanctorum.

neralius tamen, perdurare seu permanere significat.

Perseverare, licet, à voce perseverus (qua rigidum atque obstinatum notet) derivetur Gomarus.

All agree that perseverance is necessary to the end that one may be saved, Matth. 10. 22. The negative may be gathered from the affirmative, That no man therefore shall be saved which shall not continue to the end, Heb. 3. 14. But all doe not agree what is the ground of perseverance, and to whom it belongs.

Vide Thes. Theol. Salmur. part. 1. de perseverantia fidei.

Reasons and Grounds of the Perseverance of Gods people:

First, The eternal love of God, Psalm 103. 17. John 13. 1. He loves his people with an everlasting love, Rom. 8. 38, 39. See John 10. 28, 29, 30. & 11. 29.

The sure mercies of David, Isa. 55. 7.

Secondly, The Covenant that is between God and them, is a stable and everlasting Covenant, Jer. 31. 31 & 32. * 40. Hosea 2. 19. 2 Samuel 23. 5. The Covenant made at first with the Angels and Adam might be broken, but this cannot; Christ is the Surety of it. What was but a Commandment to Adam, is a gift to us; that which would have been to him Merces obedientiæ, is to us Donum gratiæ.

* Quæ promissio non potest esse conditio nata ut quidam excipiunt, quia conditio esset negativa, quasi diceret Dabo ut non recedatis, si non recedatis, ut perseveretis, si perseveretis. Riv. Diss. 11. de persev. sanct.

Thirdly, The union between Christ and the faithfull is indissoluble, John 14. 19. 1 John 5. 11.

Fourthly, The Intercession of Christ for them, Heb. 7. 25. Luke 22. 31. John 17. 11, 20. God the Father hears him alwayes, John 11. 42.

Object. Though Christ have purchased the Spirit, and bestowed it upon us, yet we may cast off the Spirit.

Answ. We have the witnesse of the Father, Esay 59. 21. and of Christ, John 14. 16. that the holy Ghost shall never depart from us.

Vide Croc. in Aug. confes. Quæst. 4. c. 67. See Mr Calam. Serm. on Heb. 11. 13. and B. Halls Letter about Falling away from Grace, in his Remaining works.

S^t Augustine hath observed out of the Exposition of the Lords Prayer made by Cyprian, that almost in every Petition we pray for perseverance. B. Carleton against Mountag. c. 7. See more there.

Fifthly, The perpetual inhabitation of the Spirit of God, John 14. 16. He is Christs Deputy.

Object. Christ prayed conditionally, keeps them if they will, if they be not wanting to themselves, and he prayes for the Apostles.

Answ. There is no condition, and he prayes for all those which his Father had given him, John 17. 20.

Ipse ergo eos facit perseverare in bono qui facit bonos. Aug. de correptione & gratia.

Sixthly, The Lord hath ingaged his omnipotency to uphold them against all difficulties, John 10. 28, 29 That is a fond exception, that none can take them away whilst they remain sheep, but they may cease to be sheep, for that cannot be done except they be snatched out of Christs hand, whose sheep they are. See 1 Peter 1. 5.

This is not a Doctrine of carnal security, as some calumniate it:

1. That is against the nature of grace, Rom. 6. 1. 2 Cor. 5. 4.

2. Perſeverance is a duty as well as a grace; faith is a gift, Phil. 1. 29. and a duty, 1 John 3.23. Repentance is a gift, 2 *Tim.*2.25. and a duty, Acts 17.30. our obedience ſecures the comfort, and the comfort quickens our obedience, *Phil.*4.17.

3. They know they are ſubject to great temptations, they may fall grievouſly, and ſo greatly diſpleaſe God.

4. They know that no pleaſure of ſinne can make amends for ſuch adventures, 1 John 5. 18.

X. Self-denial.

All Chriſts Diſciples muſt deny themſelves, *Matth.*16.24. & Mark 8.34. Luke 18. 26.

There is a three-fold ſelf:

First, Natural ſelf, a mans being and well-being, life, learning, parts, riches, poſſeſſions, relations, theſe muſt be denied upon ſuppoſition, if the glory of God, and the good of the Church call for it, Acts 21.13.

2 Cor.5.14.

Secondly, Sinfull ſelf; all ſinfull deſires, temptations, James 1.14. theſe muſt be abſolutely and utterly denied without any reſervation or limitation, Tum 2.12. and above all, a mans darling ſin, Hoſea 14.8. *Rom.*6.2,6. & 8.10,13.

Thirdly, Renewed ſelf, which conſiſts in habits infuſed by God, Faith, Hope, Love, or in the acting and improving of theſe; all theſe muſt be denied when they come in competition with the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, either that I ſhould expect acceptation of my own righteouſneſſe, or look upon my ſelf as the ſpring of life.

Phil.3.7.

We muſt deny our own natural wiſdom in the things of God.

The extent of this Duty:

First, In regard of the Object and thing to be denied. We muſt eſpecially deny our ſelves where the wiſdom of the fleſh works.

I. In our underſtandings or wits; in three ſeveral things:

1. In the Myſteries of Salvation which are above our reaſon.

Prov. 3.5.

2. In the Means of Grace which are againſt them, The fooliſhneſſe of preaching.

3. In the Diſpenſations of Providence which are beyond them.

II. In our Wils:

1. In what we do by ſelf-reſignation, as Abraham.

2. In what we ſuffer, James 5.11.

3. In what we have and are; Paul a patern of contentment, *Phil.*4.12.

III. In our Affections:

1. In principling them.

2. In right ordering them.

IV. Our Excellencies of Parts and outward Priviledges.

V. Our own Comforts and carnal intereſt.

Secondly, In regard of the Subject.

All Callings, Sexes, Ages, Degrees.

1. Magiſtrates; Joſeph had no great poſſeſſions in Ægypt; Joſhua in dividing the Land of Canaan took his own lot laſt, Joſhua 19.49.

2. Miniſters of all men muſt deny their own ends, in their learning, parts.

3. Private men muſt be content to ſuffer loſſe for publick and pious reaſons, Luke 19.8. Acts 19.24.

4. Women muſt deny themſelves in the delicacies of life, that they may not wax wanton againſt Chriſt.

Chriſtianity is a ſchool and ſect of men that deny themſelves on religious reaſon.

God will try every Chriſtian ſome time or other in this duty, Geneſis 22.1. Matth. 19. 22.

Prayer and praiſe is a practice of ſelf-denial, prayer an humble appeal to mercy, praiſe a ſetting the crown on Chriſts head.

This is a difficult work, its hard to conquer the World and Satan, more to reſiſt and conquer a mans ſelf; ſelf-love is natural, Proximus egomet mihi.

2. This ſelf-loue is univerſal, all men agree in ſeeking themſelves.

3. Self is ſubtil and deceitfull, gets into Religion, Geneſis 34.23. Acts 9.9,13, 21,22. & 20.29. *Matth.*6. begin.

Reaſons. 1. No man can be a Diſciple of Chriſt, but he that enters in at the ſtraight gate, which is converſion; the great thing God hath to deal with in regeneration is ſelf.

2. Who-

2. Whosoever will be a Disciple of Christ must close with him in a work of faith; there is no benefit by Christ, unlesse we be united to him, 1 John 5.12. Faith is the great instrument of union, it receives all from another, therefore supposeth an emptinesse in ones self, Esay 55.1 one goes out of himself for righteousnesse, Cant. 4.15. Phil. 3.8,9. to deny self-righteousnesse is to deny the highest part of self, Rom. 10.3.

3. Therefore it is so hard to convert hypocrites and temporary believers, because they look on themselves as such who need no repentance, Phil. 3.9.

Secondly, Faith returns all to another, upon him is all our fruit found; he works all our works for us.

Thirdly, He that will be Christs Disciple must follow him, 1 John 2.6. All that he did in a way of moral obedience was for our example, 1 Peter 2.21. whatever he did he did in a way of self-denial, so must we, Phil. 2.7. he was obedient to his Parents, subjected himself to the creatures, denied his own glory, John 1.14. and ease.

Fourthly, All the Saints went to Heaven by self-denial, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that lived in Tents: see Numb. 32.32. Rom. 9.3.

Fifthly, Christs Disciples are not their own men, Rom. 14.6,7. We are servants, such are not sui juris; children, such are under government; the Spouse of Christ, 1 Tim. 2.12.

Rules to know whether we deny our selves:

1. Such a one is carried purely with respect to God and community, though there be nothing for self.

2. He lays up private interests if the good of community come in the way.

3. He is content to be nothing in service, 1 Kings 3.17.

4. Is contented that others be exalted, though he be abased, 1 Samuel 23.17.

5. He is meek towards all men, Rom. 12.16.

6. He is willing to be at most to do that service which others refuse, Phil. 2.30.

Motives to Self-denial:

First, Your condition both as creatures and Saints calls for it.

1. As creatures, God hath absolute Soveraignty over you; he is the first cause, therefore should be the last end, Rom. 11.36.

2. As Saints; you are created for him, Psalm 102.18.

Secondly, Self-opposition to God makes us like the Devil, 1 Tim. 3.6. Pride is an overweening of a mans self, 2 Thess. 2.4.

Thirdly, Self supports Satans Kingdom, Revel. 12.9. cast down self and you cast out Satan.

Fourthly, The spirituality of Religion chiefly consists in self-denial; Abraham and John Baptist denied themselves, and Christ himself for you.

Fifthly, This is a general or universal grace, not a particular grace, as Faith, Love, Hope, Joy. There are three universal or general graces which have an influence upon all the rest, Sincerity, Zeal, Self-denial. It fits a man to do or bear any thing from God; God only honours such as deny themselves, Luke 12.34,35.

See Luke 24. 27,28,29. We should not only look to the setling of our particular assurance, but also cast up our reckoning what religion may cost us, Matth. 19.21. Psal. 45.10. Rom. 8.5,29. 2 Cor. 8.9. Christ denied himself for us in the joyes of heaven, and in the glory of his Father.

XI. Sincerity.

There is a two-fold Sincerity:

1. Moral, when one does not intend to deceive, Psalm 32.2.

2. Supernatural, when all we do in Religion proceeds from a principle of grace, 2 Cor. 1.12.

It is the grace of the will, whereby it refuseth evil and chooseth good for Gods sake, when one labours to walk well out of this intention and purpose to please God, 2 Cor. 4.1. When the thing moving us to be good is Gods command, and See Mr Hildersh. on Psal. 32. Lect. 94. Mr Ball of the Cov. ch. 11.

In reference to the act of any grace, it implies truth opposite to hypocrisie, prayer which proceeds not out of feigned lips, truth in the inward parts, Heb. 10.22. Repentance, Faith, Love must be unfeigned. 2. In reference to the object, it takes it entirely, thoroughly, without reservation, loves God all in God, his holinesse as well as his mercy, hates all sin, and all in sin, Psal. 119.6. & 129,128. v. 3. In respect of the motive or end, singlenesse, oneness of heart, Isa. 44.20. Jam. 4.

the end whereat we aim is the glorifying and pleasing of God, then we serve him in truth.

Josiah pulled down the Images of Baal and broke his Alter, so did Jehu too, but alone for his own sake, to establish his Kingdom by pulling down the Religion which Ahab had set up, but Josiah was upright, because he did it to please God and for Gods sake. The grace is much commended, Psalm 51 6. & 45.18. John 1.47. Esay 38.3. 1 *Cor.*5.8. *Eph.*6.14.

David being an upright man is entituled, A man after Gods own heart, 1 Samuel 13.14. such a one as God would have him to be; all the promises are made to such, Blessed are the upright in heart, Lord, do good to those which are upright in heart, it becometh upright men to rejoyce, No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly, Psalm 37.18.

The comfort of all the Scriptures, right to all the creatures, benefit of all the Ordinances belongeth to the upright. Dr Harris. The same holdeth that innocency gives us before men, sincerity will give us at the judgement of God.

It is a Defence,

1. At time of death; so to Hezekiah, Remember, O Lord, how I have walkt before thee in truth with a perfect heart: See Job 33.6. The Devil will tell thee all thy holy duties were done in hypocrisie; the Devil laboured to perswade Job all was false, Psalm 37.37.

2. In calumnies and reproaches of men; so Paul was slandered by false Apostles, but saith he, We have the testimony of a good conscience that we did it in sincerity.

Signs of it:

1. He is fearfull of himself, fulfilling his salvation with fear and trembling.
2. Such a one will presse Gods Commandments and Threatnings upon himself in secret, and laments before God, and confesseth, and resists the secret evils of his heart and life.
3. Extends his desire and endeavour of doing good and shunning evil, to all kinds and degrees of evil and good, to all times*, and places, Psalm 18.22. desiring in all things to live honestly.
4. Is still humbled for his imperfections and failings.
5. Gives the praise of goodnesse he hath attained to God alone.
6. It makes him easie to see and confesse a fault in himself.
7. Rejoyceth to see others excelling him in good, and pities those that are bad.
8. Loves him that plainly admonisheth him, and is thankfull for the admonition.
9. Is at peace with those that differ from him in judgment.
10. Suffers wrongs patiently.

* He is the same in all times; when goodnesse is persecuted he is good; when evil is in credit he is against it; in all companies and places he is the same, in secret and publick, because God is always present and the same, and so apprehended by the true hearted. Mr Drake was the best anti-hypocrite (Christ excepted) that ever lived; for she alwayes wore her worst side outmost. So her dust still writes her selfe!

There are three main signs of it:

1. Such a one is set against every known sin, especially his darling sin, *Ps.*18.23.
2. Hath universal respect to all the Commandments, Psalm 119.6.
3. He is much in examination of himself, and jealous of his own heart, *Psa.*26.2.

The right Causes of it:

The Spirit, the Word, Faith, Love.

The right ends, the pleasing and glorifying of God and obtaining his favour.

The right Subject, both the inward and outward man too; the will is chiefly the seat of it: We are perswaded (saith the Apostle) that we have a good conscience (which is never separated from this uprightnesse) willing in all things to live honestly.

It is a firm purpose of the will, not a slight, weak and sudden motion or motion, as was sometimes in Saul to have persecuted David, and in Pharaoh to let Israel go, but a well-grounded stable, setled purpose, which holds out constantly, and is rooted in the heart, such as David noteth in himself, saying, I have sworn and will perform it, to keep thy righteous judgements.

Motives to it:

The Lord hath pleasure in uprightnesse, 1 *Chron.*29.17. Job 1.8. Esay 26.7. Psalm 147.10.

2. God will be upright with thee, if thou wilt be upright with him, *Psal.*18.25. if you be upright in the way of obedience, so will he be upright in his rewards, *Ps.*21.7.

Means to get a truth of Sincerity:

1. See the want of it.
2. To see the great danger of wanting it.
3. To desire it, and to pray to God for it.

4. To

4. To muse and meditate much of the goodness of God in his great worthinesse in himself, and to accustom our selves to direct our thoughts and intentions actually so in the particular deeds we do.

XII. Sobriety.

It is a vertue in all men, a grace in Christians. Aristotle and Plato, Socrates and Seneca teach it, Peter and Paul also, but differently.

1. One teacheth it by the light of Nature, the other by that of the Spirit.
2. Not upon the same principles; the Philosopher teacheth it upon a principle of ingenuity, morality, the other on a principle of spirituality.
3. They teach on their own authority, the others in the name of God.
4. The end, that they may get a name among men, these that they may honour God; the one is a vertuous, the other a religious Sobriety.

Some take a pride to be called the virtuous in contempt of the religious.

Sobriety in general is the due temper and moderation of the whole man, Phil. 4. 5.

Sobriety of the body is four-fold:

First, In the use of meats and drinks, and bodily pleasures, Matth. 24. 34. Luke 17. 28. The Schoolmen and Casuists give it in four words,

1. Frugalitè, over-lightly, unseasonably, Eccles. 10. 16.
2. Lautè, deliciously, Luke 16.
3. Nimis.
4. Studiosè, 1 Cor. 5. 33. Rom. 13. ult.

Secondly, In apparel in the matter of it, that it be not too costly; and in the fashion, when it is not curious, vain and affected, Zephany 1. 8.

Thirdly, In the behaviour and gesture of the body.

Fourthly, In the tongue and speech, Prov. 13. 3. James 1. 26.

Sobriety of the mind is two-fold:

1. Of our affections, of love, joy, fear, sorrow, anger, Ephes. 4. 27. and desires to the things of this world, Prov. 30. 8, 9. and great things, Esay 14. 13, 14.
2. Of the understanding and judgement:
   1. In reference to persons:
      1. Others, 1 Cor. 4. 6.
      2. Our selves, Rom. 12. 3.
   2. Things.
      1. Secret, Deut. 29. 29. Acts 1. 7.
      2. Revealed, but mysterious.

The End of the seventh Book.

THE

THE EIGHTH BOOK OF Ordinances, OR Religious Duties.

CHAP. I.

Something general of the Ordinances.

HOw a Christian stands affected to the Ordinances of divine worship, the exercises of Religion in general.

First, He makes great account of them, and finds more good, benefit and comfort by them, then by any other thing, as David saith, He loves the place where Gods honour dwelleth, Psalm 36. 1,2. and when he could not enjoy his Ordinances, his life was no life, he envied the Swallows, One thing have I desired, that I may dwell in the house of God all the dayes of my life, and inquire in his Temple; he loves them as the Babe the brest.

Revel. 21. 3. Secondly, He finds God and the power of God in them, else he is not satisfied; he rests not in a bare outward performance of them, but looks for the efficacy of them to unite him to God, and to strengthen and confirm his soul, and to make him grow by them in godlinesse, Psalm 84. 2. David saith, That he may enquire in his Temple, and Peter, That he may grow thereby. His life is sweet and joyfull when he feels the Ordinances of God in power, that they work on his heart to humble, reform him, beat down his flesh, edifie him in grace, then he is like a healthy man with a good stomack at a good meal. He not only makes God the object, but end of his worship, not only serves him but seeks him.

Thirdly, This respect to Gods Ordinances is joyned with a care of Righteousnesse, Mercy and Charity to men also; and the more forward he is in Religion,

Religion, the more he abouds in all other parts of good converſation, James 1. ult. Amos 3. 3.

He is conſcienrious in the uſe of all the Ordinances, is frequent and conſtant in the uſe of them. Some ſay they have liberty, they can hear or not hear.

Some ſay, we ſhould never go to duty, but upon ſenſible excitations of the Spirit; but God hath promiſed to give his Spirit to them that ask him; which confutes that opinion; though the excitations of the Spirit are frequent.

The Spirit fits us for Ordinances, and makes them effectual to us.

1. The warrant of duty is Gods Commandment; the influence of grace is a help to duty.

2. Our ſinfull impotence cannot excuſe us more in omiſſion than commiſſion; the ſuſpenſion of grace in the hour of temptation is no excuſe for ſin.

3. Natural men are bound to pray, much more thoſe that are renewed; grace is not only a gift, but a talent.

4. The outward act is commanded as well as the inward, Hoſeah 14. 1.

5. We are to wait humbly in the uſe of means for the power of Gods grace, Phil. 2. 12, 13.

6. Acting in ſpiritual things fits for them, the way to pray is to pray.

7. A ſupply comes in to Gods children ere they are aware, Cant. 6. 11.

God hath appointed his worſhip, not only that he might be honoured, and that we might performe homage to him, but for our good, Exodus 20. 24. & 25. 22. 2 Chron. 7. 2.

Chriſt is preſent in his Ordinances;

1. In Majeſty, Revel. 4 2, 3.

2. In Beauty, Rev. 4. 6. David cals it, The beauty of Gods houſe.

3. In Communion, Exodus 20. 24.

4. In wayes of Bounty and Communication; Gods people are transformed into his Image; that place in Exodus proves this alſo.

When there is little of the powerfull preſence of God in Ordinances, it is a ſign of his withdrawing from them, and of ſome farther anger to that people, 1 Samuel 28. 5, 6. Prov. 1. 23, 28. Hoſeah 5. 6, 9. Ezekiel 9. 3, 6.

1. When people remain ſtill blind, 2 Tim. 3. 7. 1 John 5. 20.

2. When few are converted by them, 2 Cor. 5. 9.

Ordinances ſhall continue in the moſt flouriſhing times and moſt glorious eſtate of the Church.

See Mr Bridges Sermon entituled, A vindication of Ordinances on Deut. 18. 15. Dr Hill on Epheſ. 4. 15. p. 18, 19. Dr Manton on Jam. 1. 19. pag. 153, 154. Mr Symonds Chriſtian plea at the end of ſight and faith.

Some urge that place, Cant. 2. 16, 17. Among the Lillies] that is, pure Ordinances; Till the day] of glory dawn, 1 Cor. 2. 12, 13. Now] while we continue in this world: Then] in the other world. Matth. 20. 18, 19. I am with you] not your perſons but ſucceſſours; with you] preaching and baptizing. Epheſ. 4. 9, 10, 11. Alwayes] to the end of that age, ſay ſome; nay, to the end of the world: See a parallel place, Matth. 13. 39. Under the Goſpel-Ordinances are more fully Vehicula Spiritus, canales gratiæ: See the promiſes, Eſay 59. 21. Mat. 28. 20. Acts 1, 8. Pſalm 110. 3.

The Miniſtry is to continue till all the Saints be perfected, therefore till Chriſts ſecond coming, Eſay 59. two laſt verſes. 1 Cor. 11. 27. You ſhew (or do you ſhew) the Lords death till he come, viz. to judgement; therefore the Ordinance of the Lords Supper muſt continue till Chriſts coming to judgement: Till he come in the ſoul, ſo ſome Familiſts; but they were not meet to partake of the Sacrament till then.

The Word ſhall continue:

1. In reſpect of purity of Doctrine, John 17. 17.

2. In reſpect of the faithfull diſpenſers of it, Jer. 3. 15.

Some in theſe dayes cry down all Ordinances, as things carnal and unbecoming a ſpiritual and raiſed eſtate; they call them low adminiſtrations, and our walking by them to be a walking by Moon-light. They ſay, theſe had their time, and may be of ſome uſe to ſome low ſort of people, but it is but an abaſement for ſeraphical and ſpiritual men to uſe them.

1. The Ordinances are compared to food, to a Feaſt; men are not above food.

2. Chriſt

2. Christ commands us to attend on the Ordinances; he prayed, preached, meditated and sang Psalms himself.

3. The Saints in Heaven shall praise God.

4. It is a sign men have found little relish in Ordinances, when they cast them off. But their Suppositum is, that they are in a state of perfection in this life: But perfectum est cui nihil deest, the Saints want many things here. Christ manifests not himself fully to them here, 1 Cor. 13.9. There is much lacking in their graces, 1 Thess. 3.10. Phil. 3.12. where there is growing there is no perfection, 1 Peter 3.18.

2. Perfectum est cui nihil contrarij sui adest. Saints have some sins with their graces, Eccles. 7.20. 1 John 1.8.

Consider the Titles given to them; Ordinances, they are Gods Institutions; Duties, therefore should be used diligently, frequently; Means, therefore should not be slighted nor idolized.

The Familists talk of living in God and upon God immediatly; they call Ordinances by way of scorn forms, they are so if they be rested in, but otherwise they are means of serving, pleasing and obeying God.

The Papists deny the prohibition of the second Commandment, they set up Image and Angel-worship; these the precept of it, it enjoyns instituted worship. Christ and the Apostles made use of the Ordinances, and pressed them upon the Churches. See Mat. 5.19. Acts 2. and 3. ch.

They urge Esay 60.19 which speaks not of the Scripture but prosperity. See Jer. 15.9. Amos 8.9.

They also urge that place Rev. 21.22. Brightman understands it not of the Church militant, but of the Jewish Synagogues, They shall not worship God after their own manner and worship, when the Jews are converted.

1. God hath chosen these to be Canales gratiæ, the Conduit-pipes whereby he derives himself and his graces to his people, 1 Cor. 1.24.

2. He hath commanded us to wait upon them, attend to reading, Search the Scriptures, John 5.39. Be baptized for remission of sins; Do this in remembrance of me; Pray continually; Despise not prophesying, 1 Thess. 5.19. Paul there intimates an aptnesse in men under the notion of magnifying and advancing of the Spirit to despise prophesying; and sheweth also, that the means to quench and extinguish the illuminations of the Spirit, is to have low and unworthy thoughts of the word of God, and of prophesying according to the Analogy and proportion of that Word. We use the Ordinances not only for the enjoyment of God in them, but as a testimony of our obedience. God gave not the Spirit for this end to be the only rule for man to live by, but to help him to understand the Rule, and enable him to keep it.

The Saints which had highest communion with God were most punctual in point of worship, Abraham to whom God often appeared built altars to him.

3. God hath limited us so to them, that we have no warrant to expect the communication of grace but by the Ordinances.

4. He hath threatned a curse to those that reject them, Heb. 10.25,39.

Observe the punishment both of Jews and Gentiles which slighted the Ordinances, 1 Cor. 1.22,23. compared with v. 24.

If these therefore be children which set so light by the Ordinances, they will not live long without bread. God hath given up the leaders of this errour to horrid blasphemous opinions, they think they have no need of Christ: Some think that they are Christ: Others that they are God, and that they are glorified, and cry down Sanctification as an Idol.

Mr Laurence his Vindication of the Scriptures and Christian Ordinances. See his Plea for the use of Gospel-ordinances.

This may suffice for the Ordinances in general; of the Ministry and preaching of the Word I have spoken already, the other particular Ordinances I shall handle and defend afterwards.

Some forbear publick Ordinances, some private, some secret duties.

Others run into another extream, and make Idols of the Ordinances.

1. By resting in a bare formal attendance upon them, as the Harlot in the Proverbs, I have had my peace-offerings to day. We must remember they are but means, the end is communion with God and Christ, and therefore we should not rest in the work done.

Some much slight and neglect them, when they do perform them.

2. By leaning too much upon them, they are means to which we are limited, but we should not limit the Lord, when thou hast done all, loathe thy self and all that thou hast done, and rest on free-grace. We should be carefull of duty as if there were no grace to justifie us, and so rest upon grace as if no work were to be done by us.

Some prefer prayer before preaching, but all the ordinances should have their due respect.

That

That we may meet with God in Ordinances:

1. We muſt come on purpoſe that we may meet with him.
2. Get our hearts prepared, Malachi 3. 1.
3. Put our ſelves there where he will meet with us, Cant. 7.5.
4. Give our ſelves to the practice of Gods wayes, Eſay 64.5.
5. Be tender of grieving the Spirit, Epheſ. 4.30.
6. Place our chiefeſt happineſſe in communion with God.

The Ordinances are either,

1. Ordinary, as Hearing the Word, Singing of Pſalms, Prayer, Receiving the Sacraments.
2. Extraordinary, Faſting, Feaſting, Vows.

Chap. II.

Of Ordinary Religious Duties, and firſt of Hearing the Word.

I. That we muſt hear the Word.

HEaring of the Word preached is a duty that lies upon all Saints, Eph. 2.17. Heb. 12.25. 1 Peter 1.11. & 3.18,19.

It is a neceſſary and beneficial duty:

1. Neceſſary; It is ſeed to beget and meat to nouriſh, 1 Peter 2.2. It is needfull in reſpect of our ignorance, Eph. 4.18. Forgetfulneſſe, Heb. 2.2,3. Eſay 62.6. 2 Peter 1.12. This is the Word by which we are to examine our eſtates, and by which God will judge us at the laſt day, 2 Cor. 5.15,16. All the Perſons of the Trinity ſpeak to you in every truth diſcovered. The Father, John 6.45. the Son, Heb. 12.25. the Spirit, Hear what the Spirit ſaith to the Churches.

In my firſt Book I have ſpoken of reading and meditating in the Word.

2. Beneficial:

1. Souls are converted unto God, as death comes by hearing, ſo life, Rom. 10.17. Revel. 6.1.
2. It is a great means of ſalvation, Rom. 1.16. it is called ſalvation it ſelf, the one thing neceſſary, James 1.21.
3. The Spirit is conveyed by it both in the gifts and graces, 2 Cor. 3.8. Rom. 1.12.
4. Growth in grace comes by it.
5. Satans Kingdome is overthrown by it; he fals from Heaven like lightning.

Object. I can reade the Word at home, which is more truly the Word then what others preach. If he were a man of an infallible ſpirit it were ſomething, but they may erre as well as we; ſome therefore will hear none, but look for Apoſtles.

Anſw. If they were men of an infallible ſpirit thou muſt try their Doctrines by the Word. If God ſhould ſend you Prophets and Apoſtles you muſt take nothing upon truſt from them, Gal. 1.8. 1 John 4.1.

II. How we muſt hear the Word.

SOme things muſt be done, 1. Afore hearing. 2. In hearing. 3. After hearing.

I. Afore hearing.

1. Thou muſt pray for thy teacher that he may ſo ſpeak as he ought to ſpeak *Eph.*6.19. Col 4.3,4. and for thy ſelf, that thou maiſt hear profitably and be bleſſed in hearing, *Prov.*2.3,5. Pſalm 25.4. & 119.10,18,27.

II. In hearing.

First, One muſt ſet himſelf as in Gods preſence, when he is hearing of the Word, Deuter. 33. 2. ſo Luke 10. 16. 1 Theſſ. 2. 13. ſo did Cornelius, Acts 10. 33.

See Iſa.55.20. Prov.22.17. Nehem.8.3. We muſt hear the Word with faith, Heb.4.2. that brings every truth to the ſoul with divine authority, 1 Theſſ. 2.13. Heb. 12.25. and cauſeth the ſoul thence to receive it with aſſurance, 1 Theſſ. 1.5. and to ſubmit to it.

Secondly, Attend diligently to what he heareth, Luke 19.48. Gods people are oft called upon to attend, Mark 4. 9,23. & 7. 14. It is ſeven times repeated, Rev. 2. He that hath an ear to hear let him hear; ſo did Lydia, Act. 16.14. Attentiveneſſe implies,

1. Earneſtneſſe and greedineſſe of ſoul, Bibulæ aures, Jam.1.19. 1 Peter 2. 2. ſo the people that flockt after Chriſt.

2. The union of the thoughts, and all other faculties of the ſoul; it is called attending upon the Lord without diſtraction, 1 *Cor.*7.35.

Thirdly, Hearing the Word with underſtanding and judgment, *Mat.*15.10. Pſalm 45.10. 2 Tim. 2 7.

Fourthly, Hearing with affection and delight, Deut. 32.46,47. Mark 13.37. Acts 2.4.

Fifthly, Taking every thing as ſpoken to himſelf, Matth. 19.25,27. & 26.22. John 5. 27.

III. After hearing.

1. We muſt meditate of what we have heard, Acts 17.11.

2. Apply it to our ſelves. To apply the Word is to take it as that wherein I have an intereſt, Pſalm 119.111. every precept, promiſe and priviledge. The life of preaching and hearing both is application. If one could repeat the Bible from one end to another, it would not make him a knowing Chriſtian. When our Saviour told his Diſciples, One of them ſhould betray him, they all ask, Is it I? A good hearer, Eſay 55.2. is ſaid to eat, which notes an intimate application; the ſtomack diſtributes to every part what nouriſhment is ſuitable to it.

Luk.24.15,30.

3. Conferre of it with others, Jer. 33. 25. See John 16.17,19. Mark 4.10. & 7. 17. & 10.10,11. Conference is that whereby we communicate to others what we have learned, or learn of others what we are ignorant of, or ſtrengthen one another in that which already hath been taught us, Prov. 1. 5. & 13. 20. 2 Peter 1. 12.

4. Practiſe it in our converſation, Pſalm 103.18. Matthew 7.24. Luke 11.28. Revel. 1. 3. If you know theſe things happy are you if you do them, Habits are perfected by action. Knowledge, a good underſtanding have all they that do thereafter. Faith and love are perfected by works; this glorifies God, Gal. 5. *Matth.*16.16. 1 Peter 2. 9.

This is, 1. The end of Gods teaching, Deut. 4. 5.

2. Not the knowing but the obeying of Gods will, will make us happy, Prov. 10. 17.

3. All the comfort and ſweetneſſe depends on our keeping Gods Word, Pſalm 19.11.

4. He that will do ſhall know, John 7.17.

Rules about practiſing the Word:

1. Be ſure your practice be univerſal; Herod did many things.

2. Think not to practiſe by your own ſtrength, but by the ſtrength of Chriſt.

3. You muſt not rely on your obedience; a holy life is a good evidence of the truth of our faith.

Motives

Motives to diligent attention in hearing:

First, Is it Gods Word, Thus saith the Lord, and The word of the Lord.

Secondly, It is of speciall concernment, the matter of it requireth attention; nit is the Word of life, of righteousnesse, it will sanctifie us, and make us grow in grace.

Thirdly, It is the introduction;

1. To understanding, Matth. 15.10. Acts 28.27.

2. To Obedience and Reformation, therefore hear is often in Scripture put for obey.

3. To Memory, James 1.23,24.

Fourthly, It is necessary to bring in and build up Gods people, James 1.21. Mark 4.24.

Fifthly, There are particular Promises to it,

1. God will give them strength to overcome their greatest corruptions, Psal. 119.9.

2. God will work peace in their consciences, Esay 57.19.

Obedience hearing is made a sign of grace, John 10.27. See John 8.47

CHAP. III.

Of Singing Psalmes.

A Psalm is a strict composition of words in measure and number fit to be sung to some tune.

A Song or Psalm is a composition of words to which numbers fitted to a musicall melody, or with an instrument. David made many of these. The word Psalm is usually limited to signifie a holy Song.

Singing of Psalms hath been of ancient and commendable use in Gods publick worship. It was used in Moses his time, Exodus 15.1. and in the times of the Judges, Judges 5.1. and in the dayes of Samuel, 1 Samuel 18.6,7. in Davids and Solomons time, 1 Chron. 6.32. in the dayes of Iehoshaphat, 2 Chron. 20.21,22. and of Hezekiah, 2 Chron. 29.28,30. and after the Captivity in Nehemiahs time, Nehem. 12.42. Yea in the New Testament our Saviour himself and his Apostles used it, Matth. 26.30. and prescribed it to Gods people, Col. 3.16. See 1 Cor. 14.15. & 26. Eph. 5.19.

Yea it was the exercise of the holy Angels themselves, Luke 2.13,14. The people of God in the Psalms are provoked, quickned and stirred up to this duty, Psalm 95.1. and the Psalm specially destinated for the Sabbath.

That singing of Psalms is a duty of the Gospel, see Mr Cotton of Singing of Psalms c.4. and Dr Manton on Jam. 5.13. and Mr Sidenham Treatise of this argument. Vide Danæum de Poteſtate Eccleſiæ, c.25,26,27. And Bodius on Eph. 5.18,19,20. p.725,726,727,728,729,730. Dr Hammonds Preface to his Annotations on the Psalms, of the duty, practice and constant use of Psalmody in the Church. Mr Ford proves Singing of Davids Psalms to be a duty of Christians under the New Testament, answers the objections against it, directs how to sing Psalms.

About this time (Anno Regis Edw. 6. 6^to^, 1552.) the Psalmes of David did first begin to be composed in English Metter, by one Thomas Sackvild, one of the Grooms of the Privy-chamber; who, translating no more than thirtey seven, left both example, and encouragement to John Hopkins and others, to dispatch the rest. Dr Heylins Eccleſia Reſtaurata, pag. 131. See more there.

It was used at Gods publick worship, 1 Chron. 23.30. and at their private prayer, Acts 16.25. Most usually they did sing Davids Psalms in the worship of God, and those that are accounted his, 2 Chron. 29.30. Ezra 3.10,11. Neh. 12.46. The Psalms of David were in such continual use with the people of Israel, that the boyes learnt their Hosannah from that, with which they cried to Christ in the Temple, which is a familiar acclamation with the Hebrews, as To triumph with the Romans or the Jews on the Feast of the Tabernacles carrying leaves and boughs according to Gods Commandment, did continually sing Hosannah.

The Pſalmes of David contain the very ſpirits, as it were, and are an abſtract of all the whole word of God, the choiſeſt works of God, the choiſeſt promiſes, threats, inſtructions, comforts. Some have the inſcription, and that worthily, of Jewels or golden Pſalms, becauſe they comprehend moſt precious matter.

All the while the burnt-offering was in offering they beſtowed themſelves in ſinging and gladneſſe, as we ſing a Pſalm in the celebration of our Sacrament, warrantably by this. Though ſome conceive it is better after. Contra ordinem ſit præſule etiam tuæ diœceſis dicentes præcipiat, ante illas officium ſanctæ trinitatis ad eam momento celebramus in eo edemque conventu, ut ſi in ipſo actu celebrando Euchariſtiæ populus cantet non lædat legat. Didoctat. in Alc. Damaſc. cap.

Reaſons: 1. God hath often ſhewed himſelf to take great delight in this part of his worſhip, 2 Chron. 5.13. & 20.22.

2. It is a ſingular help and means to ſtir up in us holy affections in Gods ſervice, Eph. 5.18,19. Acts 16.25.

Reformed Churches uſe to begin and end with a Pſalm and to ſing Davids Pſalms in order, that the people of God might be acquainted with them all; and profeſſors uſed to ſing Pſalms in their families, Pſalm 118. 15.

The Proteſtants in Montauban in France, when they (being beſieged) were compelled to fight in their own defence, they alwayes went out to fight ſinging of Pſalms, and grew ſo terrible to the beſiegers, that in the end, as ſoon as they heard their ſinging voice lifted up within the Town; before the Portcullis was drawn up, or the gates were opened, their hearts would fail them, and they uſed to cry out, They come, they come, and even fled away for fear. Mr Martial on Pſalm 8.2.

The Church of Rome have abandoned this point of Chriſtian devotion from all both publick and private uſe, becauſe they ſing not in a known tongue.

There is extraordinary ſweetneſſe of Heaven upon earth, when a company of godly Chriſtians ſinging a Pſalm together. Mr Ford. Mr Hildersam Haven.

Some think we ought to uſe as much or rather more devotion, attention and reverence in ſinging of Pſalmes, as in making of prayers or hearing, and that to ſing a Pſalme well, and as we ought, is one of the hardeſt exerciſes of Chriſtian Religion, becauſe it requireth moſt attention, and moſt affection.

We ſhould ſing in a right manner:

1. With underſtanding, Pſalm 47.7. 1 Cor. 14.15, which condemns Latine chanting in the Popiſh ſervice.

2. With feeling, Col. 3.16.

3. To the Lord, lifting up our hearts to him in this ſervice, Pſalm 101.2.

4. To edifie our ſelves by it, Eph. 5.19.

5. In a decent manner, obſerving the Tune, that the whole Congregation may be as one man in this ſervice.

It were good to learn by heart ſome choice Pſalms of moſt uſe and plainneſſe, that if we ſhould be caſt into dungeons and dark places, and could not enjoy a book or light, yet we might be able to edifie or ſolace our ſelves in ſuch extremities, as divers of Gods people have done.

The practice of Chriſt, Matth. 28.30. doth not onely juſtifie and warrant this manner of ſetting forth Gods praiſes by ſinging; but alſo commends it much to us. There is good warrant for performing this duty privately, alone, or in a family, and publickly in a Congregation. That direction James 5.13. warrants ſinging by one alone. Paul and Sylas ſinging of Pſalms, Acts 16.25. warrants ſinging by two or three together. The practice of Chriſt and his Diſciples ſinging after ſupper, Mark 14.26. warrants ſinging in a family. Dr Owen on Heb. 2.12. Serm. 115.

If all Scripture be written for our uſe and learning, why may not we ſpeak to God in the words of Davids Pſalms, as well as Scripture?

2. They being uſed by the Church till the Apoſtles times, where doe you finde that they did ever forbid or aboliſh that uſe? Maſter Baxters Quakers Catechiſme, pag. 13.

Some of our Sects have been bold to pretend, that the Pſalter or Pſalmes of David, are impertinent to the Devotions of Chriſtians, as concerning the particular condition of David, and compoſed with regard to it. Whereby they overthrow throw the foundation of Christianity, standing upon this supposition, that the Old Testament is the figure and shadow of the New, and that Christ hath the Key of the writings, as well as of the house of David. For, seeing Christ and his mystical Body the Church are all one, the meaning and intent of the Psalms cannot concern Christ, but it must end in his Church. Mr Thorndike's Due way of composing the Differences 60. Fol.

As we may lawfully sing Scripture-psalms, so also Songs and Psalms of our own inditing (say some) agreeable to Scripture, Sing unto the Lord a new Song, framed on a fresh occasion, therefore 1 Cor. 14. 26. a Psalme is named among those things which they had for the use of the Church. For seeing a Psalme is but a musical prayer for the most part, therefore we may make Songs for our selves agreeable to the Word of God as well as prayers, and God knowing the efficacy of Poetry and Musick, to help memory and stirre up affection, doth allow his people to use it for their spiritual comfort as well as natural. The Apostle speaketh of Psalmes, Hymnes and spiritual Songs, Ephes. 5. 19. and Col. 3. 16. Who can shew any reason to limit his speech to Scripture-psalms? Why may not one praise God in a Song for our deliverance in 88, or the Gun-powder treason?

Singing of Hymns is by some counted no Ordinance, that is, any portion of the Congregation exercising their own gifts, should sing an Hymne and sing it in the Congregation, all the rest being silent and giving audience. Mr Edw.

Whether Instrumental Musick be lawfull in the Church of God?

Bellarmine pleads for it. Lib. de bonis operibus c. 16, 17.

Dr Burges, who wrote in Defence of the Ceremonies, and some others of our Divines, affirm it. Thirdly, Musick used in the Old Testament was no Figure, Type or Ceremony, but a real thing for elevation of the soul; Types had their principal use in signifying something to come, but the first time we hear of a Psalm we hear of Symbels too, therefore they were used so before, else they could not have played presently; therefore that precept, Psalm 150. Praise God with Pipe and Harp, they think is moral, and binds in respect of the thing it self, and warrants its respect of the manner. See Dr Heylin on Psalme 31, 21. Musick (say they) is a natural help to devotion, which doth not further it by any mystical signification, but by a proper and natural operation, and therefore is not a typical Ceremony. Nature it self and God have fitted it to accompany a holy Song. Paul bids us, Edifie our selves in Psalmes, and a Psalme is a Song upon an instrument.

See Dr Willet on Exod. 15. pag. 192. See 1 Chron. 15. 27, 28. & 17. 4, 5. Baptisteria multa Ecclesia retinent, quadam tollunt; Organis pneumaticis quadam utuntur aliis non utuntur. Nulla, quod sciam, ut Antichristianas Ceremonias damnant. Crocius in August. Confes. Quæst. 2. cap. 29.

Dr Gauden in his Considerations touching the Liturgie of the Church of England, saith, Organical Musick certainly is as lawfull as any Meeter, Psalmody, Hymnology, or singing to Tunes. Yet in his Anti-Baal-Berith, pag. 218. he shews how our Church-musick may be regulated. Mr Croston in his Reformed Reformed saith, the one is expressly commanded, and directed by the holy Ghost, and hath been constantly practised in the Christian Church, even by Christ and his Apostles, and from their times, which you dare not affirm of your Musick, which yet you presume to warrant in prayers as well as praises. See more there.

Comfort in Musick in Divine Service feeds the ears, edifies not the mind, 1 Cor. 14. 15. Mr Perkins his order of the Causes of Salvation and Damnation.

The Papists have together with many other Jewish Ceremonies, introduced this also into the Church, enjoyning the use of Instrumental Musick in Divine Service. A thing no where commanded in the New Testament, and not practised in the primitive times. Instruments of Musick were not heard of in the Latine Church till the dayes of Vitalianus the Pope. The use of musical instruments is more apt to change Religion into air and fancie, and take off some of its simplicity, and are not so fitted for edification.

Chap. IV.

Of Prayer.

Prayer is expressed several wayes in Scripture.

1. By calling upon God.
2. By asking, Matth. 7. 7.
3. By seeking, Psal. 24. 6.
4. By knocking, Matth. 7. 7.
5. By pouring out the heart.
6. By lifting up of the soul to God, Psalm. 25. 1.
7. By crying, the children of Israel cried unto the Lord.
8. By wrestling or striving with God, Gen. 32. 30. Rom. 15. 30.

It is affectus vel Elevatio mentis in Deum, sive motus affectus in Deum directus; conversio in Deum propitium & humanus affectus. Gravissima oris ratio per quam intima cordis nostri manifestantur Deo. It is the manifesting of our will to another from whom we hope to obtain what we desire, Phil. 4. 6.

Mr Ball in his Catechism, and in his first Chapter of the trial of the grounds of Separation.

It is calling upon God in the name of Christ with the heart, and sometimes with the voice according to his will for our selves and others.

Or, It is a calling upon God in the name of Christ with Petitions and Thanksgivings, joyned with confessions of sin, and deprecations of punishment.* 1 Cor. 2. 2. Rom. 10. 13. See Psalm 141. per totum.

Or

Or thus:

Prayer is a lifting up of the heart to God our Father in the name and mediation of Christ through the Spirit, whereby we desire the good things he hath promised in his Word, and according to his will.

True Christian prayer is a right opening of the heart to God. Dr Gouge Whole Armour.

First, It is a lifting up of the heart to God by way of desire, and this is represented by those natural gestures of lifting up the hands and eyes to Heaven. See Lam. 3.41. Psalm 25 1. To thee O Lord doe I lift up my soule. Which phrase implieth,

1. That the soul is sluggish and pressing downward for sensible helps.

2. It denotes confidence, a heavenly temper. It is not your eyes, voice or bodies lifted up, but your hearts and spirits; thy heart in prayer must be with God in Heaven, thy heart must believe, lay hold on the promise. To pray then is a difficult duty, how hard is it to call off the heart from other things, to get it united in prayer, to seek the Lord with our whole hearts? If there be distraction, lazinesse or deadnesse, we cannot say, With my whole heart have I sought thee.

It is an acting and moving of the soul of man toward God, that we may affect him with his own praises, or the mercifull consideration of our suites. Oratio est voluntatis nostræ religiosa repræsentatio coram Deo, ut illa Deum quasi

It is not a meer calling upon God for relief, Hos. 7. 14. but an act of spiritual adoration, a coming to God by holy ardour and desire, Heb. 4. 16. The happinesse of the creature is expresst by Gods coming to us, and the duty of the creature by coming to him. In prayer all the three Persons in the Trinity are glorified, God the Father as the object, the Sonne as Mediator in procuring leave for us, the holy Spirit in giving us hearts to come to God.

Prayer is that duty in which all graces are concentred. Prayer is Charity, it is, faith, it is a conformity to Gods will, a desiring according to the desires of Heaven, an imitation of Christs intercession. Doctor Jeremy Taylor on Romans 8. vers. 9, 10.

Secondly, The object of prayer is only God, Rom. 10. 14. faith and calling upon God are linked together; as none but God is the object of faith, so neither of prayer; as it is the property of God to hear our prayers, Psalm 65. 1, 2. so invocation is a worship proper to him alone; therefore the Papists prayers to Saints, Angels and

By this argument the Fathers prove that Christ is God, and that the holy Ghost is God, because he is prayed to. We muſt pray to the Father through the Sonne, by the holy Ghoſt, Deus oratur à nobis, Deus orat in nobis, Deus orat pro nobis.

We muſt pray to the whole Trinity, we may direct our prayers to any of the three perſons diſtinctly, but not excluſively, ſeeing all the Perſons ſubſiſt in the ſame eſſence.

He that is Mediator muſt be worſhipped, becauſe he is God, Chriſt God-man is the object of divine adoration; but whether he be to be worſhipped, becauſe he is Mediator, or under this formal conſideration of Mediator. Some ſay, the prayers of Gods people are not only to be directed unto God, but Chriſt as Mediator, Luke 11. 5. Mat. 15. Jeſus thou ſon of David, not Son of God, afterwards ſhe cries out, Lord help me; all the Petitions in the Canticles they ſay are directed to Chriſt as the Churches husband. They give theſe reaſons for their opinion, 1. We ought to believe in Chriſt as Mediator, John 14. 1. See Rom. 3. 25. therefore we ought to pray unto him as Mediator.

Vide Amef. Aſſert. Theol. de Adoratione Chriſti. Vide Voetii Theſes, & Hornbeck. Apparatum ad controverſias Socinianas, p. 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, &c.

The worſhip of all the reaſonable creatures is appointed to him, Heb. 1. 6, 8. The Saints have directed their prayers to him.

1. Before his Incarnation, Abraham, Geneſ. 18. Jacob, Geneſ. 32. 24. & 48. 16.

2. In the dayes of his fleſh; the woman of Canaan, Mat. 12. 22. the thief on the Croſſe.

3. Since his Aſcenſion into Heaven, Acts 7. 51. becauſe it was for Chriſts cauſe he ſuffered.

There is a double Object of worſhip:

1. Materiale, whole Chriſt, God-man in one Perſon, Heb. 1. 6.

2. Formale,

2. Formale, the God-head of Christ, when we pray to him we pray to his Person, but the ultimate and proper object of our prayers is the Divine Nature.

1. In all our duties we are to take in the whole object of faith, John 14. 1.

2. This is the right way of honouring the Father according to the plot of the Gospel, John 14.13. & 5.23.

3. This is the only way to come to the Father to obtain any mercy of him, John 14.6. & 6. 37.

4. This answers the grand design of the Gospel, that each Person of the Trinity may be glorified with a distinct glory. The beginning of all is from the Father, the dispensation from the Sonne, the consummation from the Spirit.

In him only we are accepted, 1 Pet. 2.5. We need no other Mediators nor Intercessours. They who pray to God without a Mediator, as Pagans, or in the name of any other Mediator but Christ, as Papists, pray not aright.

Christus vel ut Deus, vel ut Mediator consideratur. Sicut Deus, dirigimus preces nostras ad eum. Adoramus enim Deum Patrem, Filium & Spiritum Sanctum, sic ut Mediatore preces nostras faciamus per & propter Christum. Strat. in Act. 12. 20. Lipsius when he was a dying, thus prayes, O Mater Dei, adsis famulo tuo cum istâ assertione decertanti, & non me deseras in hac hora, à quâ pendet anima mea salus aterna. Drexel. de Æternitate cap. 4. sect. 3. 1 Tim. 2. 5. To call upon God in the name of Christ imports two things, 1. To desire that for Christs sake we may be heard. 2. To believe that for Christs sake we shall be heard. Bish. Downe of prayer, chap. 28. It imports, 1. That we look up to Christ as obtaining this priviledge that we may ask things we ask have been purchased by him. 3. To ask in his strength. 4. That he intercedes now in Heaven for us.

We bear a natural reverence to God, we must honour Christ also, John 5.23. put up our requests into Christs hand, that he may commend them to his Father, and look for all supplies of grace to be dispensed in and through him, Ephes. 2.18. & 3. 12. Rom. 5. 2. In which three places the word rendred Access is one and the same, προσαγωγὴ, it properly signifies a introduction, or leading by the hand.

The Israelites under the Law were tied to pray either in the Tabernacle and Temple, Deut. 12. 5,14. Psalm 99. 6. or else towards the same, 2 Chron. 7. 18. 1 Kings 8. 44,48. Psalm 138. 2. Daniel 6. 10. yet now, all such distinction and difference of place being but ceremonial, is abolished. For that one place of prayer and Sacrifice was a Type of Christ Jesus the alone Altar, and the praying in or towards the same did figure out thus much, that onely in the mediation of Jesus Christ we are to call upon the Lord. Bish. Downe of prayer, Chap. 28.

There is a two-fold form of prayer:

1. Accidental, a form of words, this may be various.

2. Essential, in the name of Christ, John 16. 23. Col. 3. 17.

Fourthly, By the Spirit of God, Rom. 8.15,26. he helps us to call Abba Father, Ephes. 6.18. Jude v. 20. See Zech. 12.10. 1 Cor. 14.15.

The Spirit is said to pray in us, Rom. 8.26. and we are said to pray in him, Jude v. 20.

1. In regard of our natural estate we have no ability to pray, 2 Cor. 3.5.

2. In our regenerate estate; we are no longer able to do any good thing than the Spirit helpeth and assisteth us, Phil. 1.6.

3. Our prayer will not be acceptable to God, except it come from his Spirit, Rom. 8. 27.

The Spirit helps us, by shewing us the action of prayer, affording us matter, and inabling us how to pray, Rom. 8. 26,27. and giving us necessary gifts, whereby we may expresse our desires in apt words, 1 Cor. 14.15.

1. Habitually, by cleansing the heart, Ez. 36.25. Zech. 12.10. 2. Per suppetias actuales assistit, by Fifthly, Whereby we desire those good things he hath promised in his Word, Ps. 119. 28,38,41. Neh. 1.8.

We should therefore desire God:

1. To direct us to a suitable promise.

2. To shew us our interest in the promise.

3. To raise us to trust in him through the promise.

4. To inable us to wait upon him till he accomplish the promise.

We are to pray for such things as make for the glory of God, and the salvation of our ſouls. This is intimated in the firſt Petition of the Lords Prayer, 2 Theſſ. 2. 13, 1 Theſſ. 5. 9.

Some things we are ſpecially to pray for, for things of our ſouls, Matth. 6. 33. that we may be more holy and heavenly, and enjoy more communion with God.

For the Church, Pray for the peace of Jeruſalem, Pſalm 51. 18. For the propagation of the Goſpel; this is one main thing in that Petition, Thy Kingdom come, Gal. 4. 31.

Sixthly, According to his will, 1 John 5. 14. The Incenſe was made exactly according to Gods will, Exodus 30. 34, 35.

The matter of our prayers or things asked muſt be according to Gods will, for the glory of God, Matth. 6. 9. and for the good of our ſelves and others. One muſt ask things Temporal alone conditionally, as our Saviour, If it be poſſible; yet not my will: and things Spiritual ſimply, but in both one muſt referre himſelf to the wiſdome of God, for the time, means, and meaſure of granting his deſires.

a God hath ſet ſpecial bounds, 1. To our faith, he teacheth us what to believe. 2. To our actions, he teacheth us what to do.

3. To our prayers, he teacheth us what to deſire. The matter of prayer in general muſt be things lawfull and good. Dr Gouge Whole Armour, part 1. The properties of prayer. 1 muſt pray, 1. With underſtanding, 1 Cor. 14. 15. 2. Give up all the faculties of the ſoul in it, 2 Chron 20. 3. 3. There muſt be breathings of the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 28. 4. Come with a holy freedome, with the Spirit of Adoption.

II. For the Manner and end of our asking, one muſt ask,

Firſt, Faithfully, ſtriving to bring his ſoul to a certain and firm perſwaſion that he ſhall be heard in due time, James 1. 6. Let him aske in faith: and whenſoever you pray believe, think on that place Pſalm 65. 2. 3. Hence an Infidel cannot pray becauſe he hath no faith; as this is ſtrong or weak, ſo prayer is more or leſſe ſucceſsefull. We muſt acknowledge, 1. That God is; and that he is a rewarder of thoſe which ſeek him. 2. That he will grant our requeſts notwithſtanding our ſins; and this is the ſame thing, as appears in that James ſayes, He upbraids not, and ſo in the woman of Canaan.

Faith muſt be exerciſed in prayer

1. On the mediation of Chriſt for the acceptance of our perſons and prayers, Col. 3. 17. John 5. 16.

2. About the things prayed for.

See Exod. 32. 10. & 14. 15, 22. 2 King. 19. 4. Pſ. 2. 15. Mat. 15. 22. Mat. 28. Heb. 5. 7. 1 Cor. 12. 8. See thoſe Parables Luk. 11. ch. & 18. ch. 19.

Secondly, Fervently, James 5. 16. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man prevaileth much. See verſ. 17. It is called a pouring out of the heart, as if the whole ſoul were breathed out in deſire to God, and a crying, Exod. 8. 12. 1 Sam. 7. 9. Job 30. 28. Matth. 15. 22. Pſalm 22. 2. & 18. 6. & 28. 1. & 55. 17. & 88. 13. & 130. 1. Qui timide rogat docet negare dorſit. Pſal. 62. 8. 1 Sam. 1. 15. This was ſhadowed out in the Levitical Incenſe, and the whole burnt offerings which could not be offered without fire, nor might with any but that which came from Heaven, Pſal. 140. 2. the fervency of Gods own Spirit in us. The efficacy of prayer lies in the fervency of the affections, and the arguments of faith drawn from the promiſes of God, or relations of Chriſt. A fervent prayer conſiſts in three things. 1. When we lay out much of our ſpirits and hearts in prayer. 2. When it is performed with a great deal of delight. 3. When it is continued in. Be ſenſible of your own unworthineſſe. Etſi Deo non eſt opus ut ei per quibus egemus explicemus: tamen expoſitione atque commemoratione illa noſtra egeſtatis opus eſt nobis: ut ſerio ſenſu miſeriæ noſtræ afficiamur, & ardente deſiderio impetrandi ea quibus egemus. Piſcat. Exerc. Aphoriſ. de Precat.

1. In all our addreſſes to God he requires our affections, Prov. 23. 26.

2. God hates all our prayers unleſſe they be mingled with affection, Rom. 12. 11.

Thirdly, Conſtantly and continually, Rom. 12. 12. Eph. 6. 15, 18. Pray always, 1 Theſſ. 5. 17. Pray continually, when occaſion and duty requires; as that was called a continual Sacrifice, which was twice a day. Be ever in a praying frame, and pray in every thing you do.

Fourthly, Purely, 1 Peter 1.22. The prayer of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord. He hears not ſinners, Heb. 10.22. Rev. 5.8. Pure heart and hand, Job 27.26. John 9. 1 Tim. 2.8.

Fifthly, Sincerely, with reſpect more of Gods glory than a mans own ſatisfaction, Pſalm 145.18. & 17. 1.

Sixthly, With an united heart, 1 Cor. 7. We muſt attend upon the Lord without diſtraction; and we muſt be ſober and watch unto prayer, intimating that there are many enemies againſt it.

Seventhly, With a quiet ſubmiſſive ſpirit; as our Saviour, Not my will, but thy will; you muſt not preſcribe God what and when he ſhall do, but pray, and then reſign up your ſelves to be guided and governed by him.

Eighthly, Reverently and humbly[c], Pſalm 2. 11. & 5. 7. & 9. 12. & 10. 17. & 34. 6, 18. & 51. 17. & 102. 17. & 138. 5. 2 Chron. 7. 14 ſo did David, 2 Samuel 7. 18. Daniel 9.8. Abraham, Gen. 18.27. Jacob, Gen. 32.10. Paul, 1 Tim. 1.15. the Publican, Luke 15.

[c] See B. Down. of prayer, c. 19

Humility conſiſts,

1. In having a mean and low eſteem of our ſelves and prayers, Ezra 9.4.
2. In a meek and patient ſubmitting to God under all diſcouragements.
3. In contrition of heart and reverence.

The acts of the ſoul in prayer are two:

1. Of the will, willing that ſuch a thing may be, John 17.24.
2. Of the mind and underſtanding, making known ſuch an act of the will. We ſhould mingle with our prayers repentance and reformation of life, 2 Chronicles 7. 14.

Ninthly, We ſhould conſider our aim, when we go to an Ordinance, or any part of Gods worſhip, we ſhould do this,

1. As men; to know the end diſtinguiſheth a man from a beaſt.
2. Much more as Chriſtians.
   1. Becauſe there is an end appointed to every duty.
   2. God obſerves our end; Jehu did what God commanded, but he had not a right end.

The ends of prayer are theſe:

1. It is a means, whereby we profeſſe our dependance upon God.
2. A means of our Communion with God; therefore it is called a drawing nigh to God.
3. The main thing which ſhould ſtir us up to prayer ſhould be this, that we may honour God, Pſalm 29.2.
4. To obtain more grace, and to be ſetled in the aſſurance of glory, Heb. 4.16.

We may from hence obſerve the imperfections and defects that are to be found in our prayers; all which may be brought to two heads:

1. Omiſſion of the Duty.
2. Failing in performance.

Of the firſt,

Not only a total omiſſion, when one doth not pray at all for a long time together, is a fault, but the not being ſo frequent in it as we ought to be, and as leiſure and occaſion doth require, Job 15.4. Eſay 43.22. We ſhould pray continually; we ſhould be ever ready for this work upon every opportunity; but we many times neglect it, when we have time enough, and cauſe enough, and helps enough, yet out of a meer indiſpoſition to ſo gracious a work we let it paſs and ſlip it over, even becauſe we want will.

1 King. 8.30. Men neglect prayer, 1. Out of Atheiſm. 2. Hypocriſie, Job 27. 10. 3. Carnal delight, 2 Tim. 3.4. 4. For want of peace or ſpiritual ſtrength.

Secondly, The faults in performing this duty are of two kinds:

1. Some ſuch as do totally blemiſh and corrupt our prayers, as to make them loathſome to God; and theſe are in reſpect,
   1. Of the perſons which have an intereſt in prayer.
   2. Of the prayer it ſelf.

There are three perſons intereſſed in this duty:

1. He to whom prayer is made.
2. He in whoſe name it is made.

3. He by whom it is made.

Failing in these marres the prayers quite.

Cajetane saith, for prayer to any but God we have no warrant in all the Scripture. Vide Riveti Grot. Discus. Dialys. Sect. 9. The Papists acknowledge Invocation of Saints not used in the Old Testament, and give us reason for it, because the souls of the Patriarchs were not then in Heaven, and so not to be invocated; yet do they alledge very many places for it out of the Old Testament to make a shew of Scripture. So for the New Testament, they acknowledge Invocation of Saints departed was not commanded or taught by the Apostles, or in their time; yea and give us reasons why it was not published at first, because it had been unseasonable and dangerous for Jew and Gentile at first to have heard it, lest they might think the Christians set forth and worshipped many gods; or that the Apostles were ambitious of having such honour done them after their death. Yet they bring many places of the New Testament for a seeming proof of it. Dr Ferus Divil. between the English and Rom. Church upon the Reform. Sect. 21. Patriarcha in veteri Testamento nondum erant beati, ideo nihil de hac re habetur expressum. Salmer. Comment. in 1 Tim. 2. disp. 2.

First, If one pray to any other but the true God, his prayer is sinne, he gives Gods glory to another thing, and is a grievous Idolater, because as Paul saith, Galat. 4. 8. He doth service to that thing which by nature is not God; prayer is a service which God calls for to himself, if we leave him the fountain of living water, and go to cisterns that can hold no water, we displease him exceedingly. Thou art a God that hearest prayers, to thee shall all flesh come; so that if we go to any other we do manifestly break his Commandment, and dishonour him. It is to no purpose how we mince the matter with distinctions, and say, We pray to other things, not as the chief Authours of the good we ask, but as Intercessors for it to him. For if we go to them so in the way of praying, we doubt of his goodnesse and mercy, give them his honour to be a hearer of prayers. Indeed we may request one another's prayers, God allows us that, but we may not pray to them; the Church of Rome therefore offends against the object of worship in praying [d] to Saints and Angels.

[d] It cannot be proved that any of the Fathers for three hundred years after Christ, did make their prayers to any but only to God by Jesus Christ. But in them of later time, there is some mention of praying unto them. But where is either Commandment, example or allowance of such prayers out of the Scriptures. Doctor Fulk on the Rhem. Testament. 2 Peter 1. 15. Giving thanks to God for his graces multiplied upon them. 2. The honourable commemoration of their faith and vertues. 3. A desire and profession of imitating their godly examples. 4. That the holy Saints now triumphing in Heaven do pray for the state of the militant Church at the least in their general supplications. But we deny that Saints departed may be invocated or properly prayed unto. Bishop Mortons Appeal, l. 2. cap. 12 Sect. 1. Si innocentur vivendi ijs qui vivunt, multo (inferunt) consultius invocentur Sancti defuncti, cum majori flagrent charitate, & felicioris sint ad auxiliandum conditionis. Atque hoc argumentum (addit Bellarminus) adversari nunquam solvere potuerunt, sed Bellarminus ipse illud solvit. Præfatur enim Cardinalis nos legere in utroque Testamento viventes invocatos fuisse. At defunctos esse invocatos aut invocandos à viventibus, in neutro Testamento legimus, & nonne hæc sufficiens solutio? Hoc facimus quia legimus, illud non facimus quia non legimus. Dr Prid. Lect. 15. de sanctorum Invocatione. Bellarminus moriens inter Virginem Matrem & Filium divisibilem dividit animam. Id. ibid. Vide plura ibid.

Secondly, If we pray in any other name but Christs, our prayer is loathsome. There must be but one Mediator, as there is but one God. If men make distinctions of Mediators, saying, some be of Expiation, some of Intercession, yet the Scripture makes no such distinction, one Mediator as one God. Expiation and Intercession are not distinct offices, making two kinds of Intercessours, but distinct parts of one Mediatorship. A Mediator must make Expiation and Intercession after, and he that cannot do both must do neither. Christ saith, No man can come to the Father but by him; and saith, If you ask any thing in my name, you shall have it; he never sendeth to any other name, nor maketh any such promise; and the Apostle saith, By him let us offer to God the Sacrifice of praise; and therefore also of prayer; therefore the prayers of all Romanists which do offer up their services in another name, are altogether abominable to God.

Thirdly, If the person praying be an impenitent sinner, a man that hath not turned to God by repentance, but doth proceed to allow and serve sinne in himself, his prayer is abominable to God; for it is plainly said, The prayer of the wicked is an abomination to God; and what hast thou to do to take my name into thy lips, and hatest to be reformed? All that an impenitent man doth is loathsome; if he pray not he sins, because he omits a duty; if he pray he sinnes; his prayer prayer is defiled with his sins; so that till a man truly repent he cannot pray acceptably. These are faults in respect of the three Persons interessed in prayer, which do abolish prayer and turn it into sin. Some others there be in respect of the frame of the prayer it self.

1. For End of Prayer.
2. For Matter.
3. For Manner.

I shall speak of the End onely here, handling a little after the Matter and Manner.

Prayers made to wrong Ends are odious, Acts 8. 19. James 4. 3. For example, he that prayes onely to be seene of men, and hath none other drift in his prayer but to win applause and commendation of men, he hath his reward, God loathshim. The end of prayer is not to win praise of men, but to humble our selves before God. When we pray for spiritual blessings to be eased, our desires in asking should suit with Gods ends in giving, Ephes. 1 6. We should desire these things, viz. pardon of sinne, grace and salvation, that God may be glorified by them. When we desire outward protection and provision meerly that we may live more comfortably. Agur had an eye to Gods glory still in his requests, Prov. 30.8,9.

The great end of all our requests should not be our own interest and concernment, but Gods glory, Psalm 115.1.

Reasons. 1. Else they will not be successefull. 2. Because otherwise our prayers are not prayers, the end shews the quality of the action. We must not onely serve God but seek him. How to know that Gods glory is the great end of our requests? 1. By the working of our thoughts, the heart worketh upon the end. 2. By the manner of praying, we must pray absolutely for Gods glory, and submit to his will for other things, John 12. 27,28. 3. By the disposition of our hearts when our prayers are accomplished. God hath appointed prayer for other ends also. 1. To bear profession of our dependance upon him, that we might daily acknowledge Gods right and property in all we possesse, we thereby disclaim merit in the highest mercy, pardon of sin, Jer. 3.12,13. We professe our dependance for common mercies when we ask our daily bread. 2. To nourish communion and familiarity between God and us, Job 22 21. Isa. 26 16. 3. To keep the heart in a holy frame, 1 Pet. 3 7. 4. To quicken our affections to good things. 5. To be a means of comfort and spiritual refreshing, Job 16. 20. Phil. 4.6.

Another ill end is to satisfie Gods justice, or to deserve Heaven, or the like; this is like them that said, Shall I give my seed for my sin? This is to put Christ out of office, and offer strange incense to God. If all must be put up in the name of Christ, then sure we must not dream of satisfying or meriting by prayers. Prayers must be humble, but they are proud when we dare conceit such worth in them as to satisfie Gods justice for sin, or to deserve Heaven. Whosoever prays so, his prayer must needs be abominable to God.

Some pray,

1. To satisfie natural conscience, Rom. 2. 15.
2. To satisfie their lusts, James 4. 3,4.
3. To satisfie their necessities, Hoseah 7. 14.
4. For deliverance out of dangers, Jonah 1.5. or to be delivered from hell and eternal wrath, Acts 8.24.
5. By way of ostentation, to shew their gifts and abilities.
6. Because of the examples of others, it is the custome of the times, 1 Peter 1. 18.
7. To satisfie men.
8. For an outward advantage because God blesseth such, 1 Tim. 6.5.

These be the things which utterly spoil prayer; there are some other things which do somewhat blemish and fully this duty (as it were) but make it not wholly displeasing, if they be observed with humiliation and trusting upon the intercession of Christ for acceptance. These are brought to three heads.

1. In respect of entrance into prayer.
2. In respect of continuance in it.
3. In respect of the frame of the prayer it self.

First, There are two faults in regard of the entrance into prayer. The one, backwardnesse, dulnesse, averseness, when one hath no inclination to it, doth it against the hair, and puts it off still, and is manifestly unwilling to it. If

God

God loves a chearfull giver, ſurely then a man that comes to prayer willingly. This likely ariſeth from ſome guiltineſſe or unbelief, or eſtrangement from God, he draws not near with confidence that is ſo backward and loth to come to it.

Another fault in entring is to come raſhly before God; forbidden by Solomon, Be not raſh with thy mouth, neither let thy heart be haſty to utter a thing before God, Eccl. 5.2. when men ruſh into Gods preſence without any conſideration of Gods greatneſſe and their own baſeneſſe, without any endeavour before, at leaſt with ſome few ſhort thoughts, ſuch as the time and occaſion will permit, then he doth not declare a due eſteem of God; as if a man would break into the chamber of his Prince without knocking or uſing ſome means to make a fit entrance; for though God be ever equally at leiſure, yet we cannot be fit without ſome preparing of our hearts by ſome preconſideration of him.

For continuance of prayer there are two faults:

Firſt, When one is even weary of prayer, tired with it, and is even at a non-plus, knows not how to go forward, nor what to ſay next to God, no not ſo much as to ſigh, groan and cry to God, ſometime abundance of deſire hinders the orderly placing of words, this is no ſinne in ſolitary devotions; ſometimes a kinde of negligence and indiſpoſition cauſeth that a man is at an end before he begin, and hath no heart to proceed; this comes from deadneſſe of ſpirit, and ſhewes ſenſleſneſſe of our ſtate, hardneſſe of heart and unbelief, and cuſtomarineſſe, and cannot but be a great fault.

Another fault is chiefly in publick prayer, when a man goes beyond the limits of time, and by an unſeaſonable length of prayer, thruſts out other occaſions to the hinderance of himſelf or others, overlong praying ſpecially with others, and with our ſelves out of ſeaſon when other occaſions require us, is a fault, and this is often but a ſpirit of carnal devotion, by which the Devil ſeeketh to bring prayer in diſgrace. Indeed when a man hath fitted his occaſions, then if with our Saviour he ſpend the night in prayer, he doth well, but all unſeaſonable length is blameworthy. Now for the frame of the prayer it ſelf, one may offend in the matter and manner.

There are four faults for matter of prayer:

1. When one is very much ſtill in petitions, and hath but few and ſhort thanks, we ſhould pour forth ſupplications with thankſgiving, and in all things give thanks; when the parts of prayer have not ſome proportion, it is like an ill ſpunne thred, too great in one place, too little in another; it ſhews too much ſeeking our ſelves in prayer.

The ſecond fault is, when our prayers be almoſt altogether for temporal things, Corn, Wine, forgetting the more excellent, grace, holineſſe, yea much more for pardon of ſin than grace to mend, a plain fruit of carnal love to our ſelves, and carnal ſeeking of our ſelves.

The third, when one asketh things without due warrant, prayes God to kill him, to end his dayes, it differs from asking things ſimply ſinfull. Some things are not ſo fit for us when we beg them, as that I may be ſpeedily delivered out of this croſſe, or the like, a weakneſſe no doubt ariſing from want of due ſtooping to God.

4. Asking we know not what, begging what we our ſelves doe not well underſtand, as the ſons of Zebedee did.

Is it poſſible for any man to contrive a way to make the Decree of the Council of Trent, commanding the Publick Offices of the Church to be in Latine, friends with the fourteenth Chapter of the Corinthians? It is not amiſſe to obſerve how the Hyperaſpiſts of that Council ſweat to anſwer the Allegations of S^t Paul, and the wiſeſt of them do it ſo extreamly poor, that it proclaims to all the world, that the ſtrongeſt man that is, cannot eat Iron, or ſwallow a Rock. D^r Taylors Liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 6.

Theſe are great blots to prayer.

For Manner there are alſo four faults:

Firſt, Inattentiveneſſe, when a mans heart is through careleſneſſe and want of bending benaming his mind to the work in hand carried away to other things.

Si orationem Dominicam nullis aliis cogitationibus incidentibus pronunciare noveris, tum eximium magistrum te esse judicabo. Luther. in Joan. 17.

Oratio, quæ sibi non vindicat illa, Domi. Orbon. in Epig.

Sic audit, quæ sibi non vindicat illa, Deus.

1. There is a double distraction, one forced and compelled either by outward occasions of noises, or the like; or by inward oppositions through terrible and violent suggestions of Satan: these are not sins if resisted; there are some distractions that have a kind of voluntariness in them, when a man suffers his thoughts to wander from the thing in hand out of a kinde of negligence, and not striving to bend his minde to the work, and so perhaps even drops asleep, as Peter did when Christ bid him Watch. This is a great weakness, and he tels on God but with half a heart that prayes so.

This sinne of giving way to vain thoughts wrongs

1. Gods Omniscience, John 4.24.
2. His Majesty.
3. It hids the Spirit of God being conceiv'd in the heart where his presence is, Jer. 3.11.
4. Makes us loose so much of the service as we attend not to.

It is a Question often propounded, Whether wandring frustrate the duty?

There is a two-fold Attention:

1. Actual, when the soul distinctly and constantly regards every thing.
2. Virtual, when one hath a purpose to keep close to the duty.

Distractions when they are constant and allowed, they frustrate the duty; but when they are prayed against, resisted, they do not.

There are many causes of this roving and wandering of the mind in duty:

1. The Devil he injects vain thoughts into the mind, and presents objects to the senses, Zech. 3.1. Act. 16.16,17,18. James 4.7,8.
2. The natural levity of the Spirit, Rom. 7.21.
3. Want of love to God and holy things; affection and attention goe together, Psalm 1.2. & 119.97. Wearinesse makes way for wandering.
4. Practical Atheism, Exodus 32.1.
5. Slightnesse, irreverence, want of fear to God.
6. Security, if we were in great danger we would not pray so.
7. Strong lusts, covetousnesse and sensuality, Ezek. 33.31.

Another fault in prayer is coldnesse, heavinesse, dulnesse, customarinesse, when one prayeth indeed, and useth good words, but without any power of affection, he is not warme nor zealous, he prayes not fervently; this causeth suits to be denied, and if one stirre not up himself will end in prayerlessnesse, and often makes one ready to fall asleepe; yea the minde may be thus chill when in publick prayer a man may seem zealous; here is a Sacrifice without fire.

See Esay 35.3. Heb. 10.12.

This ariseth,

1. From a natural imperfection in the best of Gods people.
2. Sometimes,
   1. From the weaknesse of faith, Matth. 14.28.
   2. From impatience, 1 Samuel 27.1.
   3. From base fear of men, Jer. 23.9.
   4. From spiritual lazinesse, Esay 64.7.
   5. From want of a taste and relish of sweetnesse in the duty.

A third fault is doubting in our asking, when we ask but hold not fast a desire to be perswaded of Gods gracious acceptance, and his will to hear us. Such a measure of doubting as makes a man give over praying and be very inconstant in it, doth cause prayer to do no good; but doubting resisted so that a man continues to pray still, though it cut not off the fruit of our prayers, yet it is a weaknesse. We ought to lift up pure hands to God without wrath and doubting, as Saint Paul tels us 1 Tim. without giving our hearts leave to be carried away with contrary discourse.

Lastly,

Laſtly, Irreverent behaviour of body or minde is a great fault, when the heart hath loſt the apprehenſion of Gods greatneſſe and excellency; and the body is looſe and unmannerly, wandring eyes, gazing hither or thither, leaning this way; if the minde forget God the body will too, this is a very ſlighting of God; Chriſt praying fell on his knees, and lift up his eyes to Heaven. The heart ſhould be kept in ſuch an apprehenſion of God, as even to have a fear in it, leaſt it ſhould offend him any way, and that will keep every part of the body in tune, but when the heart hath let the conſideration of his preſence goe, then the body is ſtrait out of frame.

There are ſome more failings in regard of our carriage after prayer. A man hath not done all his buſineſſe about praying when he hath ſaid Amen. Some thing more is to be done, which ſo much as he faileth of, ſo many faults there be that need pardon.

The firſt fault after prayer is, neglecting to wait, and so mark the ſpeed which we have in praying, as if prayer were alone a duty, and not a means of attaining things from God, as if we had alone a commandment to pray, and not a promiſe to be heard. This not waiting on God and obſerving how we ſpeed, whether we be heard or not, hinders us much of the ſucceſſe of our prayers, ſhewes much formality in our prayers, and little fervency. David prayed and looked up; and the Church hearkned what God would ſay to his people. As David ſaith, He lifted up his eyes to God, as the hand-maiden to her miſtreſſe. We do not ſo idly preſent our petitions unto Governours and Rulers.

Secondly, Conceitedneſſe of our prayers, if we think we have done them in any thing a good manner. This is a fault common to prayer with other holy duties; we are apt to think highly of our ſelves; but as that knowledge which puffeth up proveth that a man knows nothing as he ought to know; ſo that prayer which puffeth up, proveth that he hath not prayed as he ought to pray. Prayer ſhould be an humbling of our ſelves before God, if it make us lift up our ſelves ſpecially with thoughts of comparing our ſelves with others by which we depreſſe them, then we do not pray ſo well as we ſhould have done.

Another fault is to be diſcouraged in reſpect of our wants in praying, and for want of ſucceſſe to our prayers. When we conclude as good not pray at all as in this poor weak manner that we do, and we have ſo long and ſo long prayed, and therefore not having been heard for ſuch a ſpace, we loſe our labour in praying, and ſhall not be heard. This is becauſe we conſider not of Gods wiſdom and mercy, nor of the interceſſion of Chriſt. We ſhould be humbled, but not made heartleſſe by our own weakneſſes or by Gods deferring. It was the Churches fault to think God had caſt her off, becauſe ſhe was not heard ſo ſoon as ſhe would.

Another fault is forgetting to return thanks at leaſt often and earneſtly enough for thoſe ſpecial benefits which have been granted unto our prayers. The fault noted in the ten Lepers, of whom our Saviour ſpeaketh, Ten are made whole, but where are the nine? none is returned to glorifie God but this ſtranger. What we have earneſtly and often asked, if we doe but ſeldome and ſlightly give thanks for, we ſhew that we ſeek our ſelves too much in praying, and the glory of God too little; this is a failing in our prayers, and may be an hinderance at leaſt to our ſpeedy attaining of our ſuits afterwards.

Three Corollaries from the defects of our prayers:

1. To teach us the vanity of the Popiſh Church, which put prayers, and ſuch a multitude and number of them upon men by way of a penance, by which they muſt ſatisfie Gods juſtice for their ſinnes, and by which they muſt deſerve and merit grace and ſalvation. How can our prayers ſatisfie for others faults, ſeeing themſelves are defective and faulty many wayes? And how can that deſerve Heaven, which when God heareth he muſt forgive, or elſe it will be hard with him that makes it? What a madneſſe is this, that when we have the ſatisfaction and merits of Chriſt, we ſhould not be ſatisfied therewithall, but ſhould thruſt our own moſt imperfect ſervices into that room? Let us pray, let us faſt, let us give alms, let us do good works in obedience to God, in aſſured faith of obtaining his promiſes, and being more than abundantly requited for our ſervice. But what ſhould this proud proud fancy of merit and satisfaction be added to our prayers? Why will we not suffer our selves to be made to see the weaknesse and faultes of our best services? Why should we stand upon such terms with God, as to think rather to satisfie him and earn of him, then to receive things that be good of his free favour in Christ, and to attain pardon of things that be sinfull for his meer mercy sake in the mediation of his Sonne, and for his satisfaction sake which he hath made? Woe unto them that seek to draw Gods people from relling wholly upon Christs merits and satisfaction, to rest in part upon their own poor, weak, and many wayes defective services, which further then they be washed with the bloud of Christ must needs be unacceptable, much more then when they are offered to such an intent as would utterly marre them were they otherwise never so perfect. What is it this be not to bring strange incense, strange fire, strange beasts, and strange Sacrifices unto the Altar of God. But thanks be to God that hath freed us from this amongst other errours of that Church by which they cut off all possibility of salvation from those that continue to believe their lies. For if any trust to the goodnesse of his own prayers, or other services by them to satisfie Gods justice, and to deserve Heaven, Lucifer himself shall as soon finde favour as he continuing thus, because he doth not seek to be found in Christ but in himself, and because as yet he is not poor in spirit, nor broken, nor contrite, nor heavy laden, and so not capable of Christ.

But secondly, Let Gods people learn to apply themselves to the work of praying with very great diligence and carefull observing of themselves, to prevent as much as may be those many defects whereto they are subject, and those many faults which they are apt to commit. If we set our selves with the best diligence we can to call on the name of God, we shall not escape some, nay many faults, but if we fall to make roving prayers (as it were) looking to nothing but the bare deed done, and thinking all is well if a few words be said over, and if so much time be spent in uttering some good speeches: O how much sinne will this ill carriage bring upon us! Let us therefore in praying pray, that is, pray with all earnest and heedfull observation of our selves; yea let us not think our selves sufficient to make our own prayers; but let us humbly beseech the Lord to assist us with his Spirit of prayer, without which we cannot pray as we ought in any sort. To pray as one ought to pray is a difficult, a hard, a painfull work. It requires the whole man, and the greatest labour, and even more than a man. No wit, no learning, no good parts will suffice to make a good prayer, unlesse we have the Spirit of prayer poured upon us from above. If prayer were onely a framing and composing of words handsomely together, and pronouncing them distinctly and fully, it were an easie matter to pray; but the affections of the soul must be set in a good frame as well as the words. The eye must see God, the heart must stoop to him, the whole man must be made sensible of his presence; a man must confer with his Maker, lift up his soul to God, pour forth his heart before him, and he knowes not himself that knows not this to be more than he can doe of himself. Wherefore we must not onely take great heed to our selves when we come to pray, but we must even trust upon God, and call upon him for the assistance of his Spirit to help our infirmities, or else our prayers will not be such as may give us comfort.

Triplex est attentio quæ orationi vocali potest adhiberi: una quidem, qua attenditur ad verba, ne aliquis in eis erret: secunda qua attenditur ad sensum verborum: tertia qua attenditur ad finem orationis, scilicet Deum, & ad rem qua oratur, qua quidem est maximè necessaria. Aquin. 2a, 2æ Qu. 83. Art. 13.

A godly mans calling upon God is a labour of the Spirit. He is much affected in the duty with the presence of God, his Glory and Majesty, and also goodnesse and mercy: he feels the taste and bitternesse of sinne in his confessions, is affected with the want of the things he asks for, and with the goodnesse of them, in his petitions.

Evagatio mentis quæ fit præter propositum, orationis fru ctum non tollit. Id. ib.

Thirdly, This should teach poor Saints not to be discouraged at the manifold failings of their prayers, but alone to be humbled. It is one of the faults accompanying prayers to be made heartlesse thereby, 1 Kings 8. 30. Salomon requests of God not alone to hear, but when he heareth to pardon. God will pardon and passe by all those weaknesses of our prayers which we labour to see and are carefull to mark and bewail, and cast our selves upon Christ for acceptation of. If we should finde our selves never so much assisted in praying, so that we could scarce say what is were that we ought to blame, yet if we do truſt to our prayers and their worth, God cannot be well-pleaſed with them, for he is not well-pleaſed but in Chriſt. On the other ſide, if we can renounce our ſelves, though our prayers have many weakneſſes, thoſe prayers ſhall be heard, becauſe thoſe faults in Chriſt ſhall be forgiven. Chriſt is our Mediator and Interceſſor, and he ſits at his Fathers right hand, by the ſweet Incenſe of his merits, as a thing moſt acceptable to God to do away the rank ſmell of our carnalneſſe, which ſhews it ſelf in praying. We are therefore to truſt on him, ſtay in him, reſt in his ſupplications and interceſſion. This thing which Salomon prayed for, he the true Salomon hath prayed for, and will procure. Wherefore be not heartleſſe, and make not any ſuch perverſe concluſion, Surely theſe Petitions cannot be heard, cannot be regarded. Conſider them in themſelves they cannot; conſider them as they are perfumed with the incenſe of Chriſts Interceſſion, they cannot but prevail. Chriſts Interceſſion doth not make our ſervices meritorious, that were to put them into the roome of his own righteouſneſſe, which he never intended to do, but he makes them as effectual and available, even as if they were meritorious, becauſe in him all their faults are pardoned. Therefore doe not ſuffer thy ſoul to give it ſelf a denial, and to pronounce againſt it ſelfe a reflection of thy ſutes, but flee to Chriſts Interceſſion, then thou ſhalt be heard and forgiven. But eſpecially take heed your diſcouragement goe not to ſuch an extremity as to make you reſolve not to pray, becauſe you cannot pray well. There be ſome things ſinfull for matter, thoſe we muſt not doe for fear of ſinning againſt God; there be ſome things ſinfull in regard of manner, and other circumſtances, thoſe we muſt do as well as we can, and not omit altogether for fear of doing them amiſſe. Better a great deal offend through failing in good things, then by a total omiſſion of them? There may be upright obedience ſhewed in doing them as well as we can, there is nothing but diſobedience ſhewed in omitting them. It is a carnal ſenſe of weakneſſe, and comes from the Devil and the fleſh that drives from the duty; that alone is a ſpiritual ſight and ſenſe of weakneſſe that drives to more care in the duty, and more humility after, and more earneſt longing after Chriſt, and high prizing of him.

That prayer of Salomon is one of the largest and most comprehensive in all the Scriptures.

We ſhould purſue our own Petitions:

Firſt, Expect and looke up to Heaven for an anſwer, Pſalme 85. 8. Habakkuk 2. 1. Hearken what God ſayes in this and that providence, inwardly by his Spirit.

Secondly, Patiently wait upon God, Heb. 2. 2.

Thirdly, Be very attentive upon thoſe means which will accompliſh our deſires; as prayer ſets God a worke, ſo it muſt ſet us a worke. See Jacobs example, Geneſis 32.

Fourthly, Search out whether there be nothing in us to check our own prayers, Pſalme 66. 18. If we pray aright we ſhall find our hearts and lives bettered by our prayers, Jude, v. 20.

Oh but I ſhall get nothing by theſe prayers!

Firſt, Say thou ſhouldſt get nothing, yet thou ſhalt doe a thing that God bids thee, and ſo obey him, and we muſt obey God though we get nothing by it. But

Secondly, If thou doſt not pray, ſurely thou canſt get as little by not praying as by praying weakly and diſtractedly. And Laſtly, If thou prayeſt thou ſhalt be heard and pardoned, and that is to get ſomething. Wherefore attribute ſo much to the infinite and fatherly goodneſſe of God, and to the perfect and conſtant Interceſſion of Chriſt, as to come with confidence to the throne of grace, even with thoſe prayers which are full of faults. The Father loves to ſee his children learn though they cannot yet write a fair hand.

Motives to prayer:

Prayer is one of the nobleſt exerciſes of Chriſtian Religion; or rather that duty

First, The Lord will take it kindly. Chriſt is the Churches Advocate, the Saints are the Churches ſolicitors, Eſay 62. 1, 7. Pſalme 122. 6.

Secondly, Prayer is the moſt principal part of Gods worſhip, Pſalme 96. 6. Let us worſhip and fall down, it is ſometime in Scripture put for the whole worſhip of God, being a principal part of it, Jer. 10. 25.

There

There is a visible advantage due to prayer above preaching in the publick Assemblies, because it is a means nearer the end of both. It cannot be denied that all preaching is to the purpose of informing the minde, or moving the heart to desire that which is good indeed: but prayer being the actual desire of it, is the exercise of the means which God ordaineth to procure it. Mr Thorndikes Service of God at Religious Assemblies, Ch. 6.

in which all graces are concentred. Dr Taylor on Rom. 8. There is no duty hath more commands and promises to it, and threatnings against those that omit it; there is no one duty

The Word of God is the great instrument in the hand of the Spirit by which all things are managed in the world; prayer is the great instrument in the hand of faith, by which all things are managed in the new man. When the Spirit comes in, it is a Spirit of Sanctification, and makes way for the Spirit of Supplication, and that for the Spirit of Illumination, Psalm 43.3. Psalm 139.ult. Jer. 31.9.

honours God more, and is more honoured by him than prayer; there is no one duty that a Christian hath more need of, no one duty that hath been more practised than this. God hath made many promises to prayer; 1. General, that he will hear and answer us, Isa. 30.19. John 16.23. 2. Particular: 1. Deliverance from any trouble and affliction, Psal. 50.15. or strength and patience to bear it, Jam. 1.5. 2. Whatsoever spiritual grace we stand in need of, Luke 11.13. 3. Inward joy and peace of conscience, Job 33.26. John 16.24. Hildersam on Psalm 51.7.

Thirdly, It is honourable, 1. To God, acknowledgeth the Souls dependance on him, his Omniscience, Bounty, Goodnesse, Omnipresence, Faithfulnesse in performing his Promises. 2. To us, to have the Princes ear still open to our petitions.

There is a great deal of sweetnesse in Communion with God. The act of prayer keeps the soul close with God, Psalm 27.4. & 42.1,2.

God is delighted with holy prayer, Cant. 2.4.

Fourthly, Necessary.

The Necessity of it appears,

1. In that hereby we are trained up in the conviction of our unworthinesse; prayer is a discovery of our beggery; thou hast not grace nor strength if it come not from Heaven; God would have this seen not only in those great precious privileges, but likewise in our daily bread, thy prayers ought to make thee humble; if thou hast grace of thy own, why dost thou pray for it? It is daily pardon and favour, and these must be sought for. We cannot ask a piece of bread in our own name, and we can doe nothing without the Spirits assistance, Zechary 12. 10.

2. All the best grace and strength we have is imperfect, 2 Cor. 7. Perfecting holinesse; our faith and righteousnesse hath much corruption mingled with it; we had need to pray that God would defend us against temptations; the Christian praying, and always seeking to God is seldom overcome.

3. Every thing becomes sanctified by prayer, 1 Tim. 4 5. all Sermons, Sacraments, mercies, afflictions become hereby sanctified; it makes the Word lively, the Sacraments efficacious.

A Saint of God had rather go without the mercy that he begs by prayer, then have a mercy without prayer. See Promises, 1. To prayer in general. 2. To the severall parts of prayer. Clarks Holy

4. It keeps off many blows, Phil. 4. 22. therefore Paul a stout Christian was much in prayer, and desired Philemons and others prayers.

5. It is gainfull, a key that opens all the treasures of God, 1 Kings 8.33,35. James 5.17,18. Matth 7.7. James 4.2. John 16.23. Rev. 11.6. The light as well as life of a Christian is laid up in another. Omnia in Christo sunt capitalia, say the Schoolmen. What ever is in Christ is in him as a Head with reference to the body, Cant. 4.15. Eph. 6.10.

6. It is very powerfull, it prevaileth over all creatures, yea with the Creator himself. God never left granting till Abraham left asking, Gen. 18. Psalm 145.19.&18. 6. Psalm 50.15 John 14.14. & 15.7. 1 John 3.22. & 5.14. Vincula invincibilia. Bern. Vis Deo grata. Tertul. Apol.

Incense, Rev. 8. 3. to 9. Gen. 32. 26,28. Some say, that prayer commandeth God, Isa. 45.11. Deum dicit, jugulum, humbi subditum. Aug.

The Saints pray,

1. To the Father who loves them, John 16. 27. and invites them to pray, Psalm 50.15.

2. Christ sits at Gods right hand to present their petitions, Esay 9.24.

3. The Spirit indites their prayers: They come to a God of grace, who hath made with them a Covenant of grace; and they have a Spirit of grace to assist them, and a throne of grace to flie to. Animata suo privilegio oratio ascendit in Cælos. Tertul.

Five and twenty of the Waldenses in the Valleyes of Piedmont, after they had sought God in prayer, assaulted the enemy so couragiously, that their hearts began to fail them, above all, for that they had observed them to fall down upon their knees before they came to fight; yea this their fear grew to such an height, that many as they were flying for fear, were drowned in a small Brook which they were to passe over in their Retreat. Mr Morland his History of the Evangelical Churches of the Valleys of Piedmont Book 2. ch. 1. p.229.

It is a catholick cure and sovereign Remedy against all troubles:

1. In respect of persons, To thee shall all flesh come.

2. In respect of times and occasions.

3. In respect of troubles, Psalm 50. 15.

Prayer not onely obtains the thing, but brings a sanctified use of it, turns it to the good of those that receive it, it gives efficacy to other means, or if they fail, it doth it it self, it hath not this efficacy from any intrinsecal vertue or merit to be found in it, the efficacy is wholly from God.

Prayer is available three wayes:

1. As it is a petition put up to God, and so it avails Via impetrationis.

2. As it is an exercise of the soul, and of the graces in it, and so it avails Via causationis.

3. As it is a commanded duty and a principal part of Gods service, wherein we give him the glory of his Omniscience, Mercy, Power and Wisdome, and so it avails Via retributionis. Mr Carter on Exod. 32.9,10.

The efficacy of prayer comes,

First, From God the Father, he is infinite in goodnesse, and of his own Nature much more prone to give good things than we to beg them, as appeareth by his daily lading us with such comforts as we never so much as craved at his hands, yea by casting of innumerable benefits upon his enemies.

All the Persons in the Trinity encourage us to pray,
1. The Father by his commands and promises, Psal. 50.15.
2. The Sonne purchaseth leave for us, Heb. 10.22. He is our Intercessour, Dan. 9.17.
3. It is the great work of the Spirit to bring us into Gods presence, *Zeph.*3.9. he witnesseth what interest we have in God, *Rom.*8.23. and gives us a feeling of our want, Rom. 8. 23. *Zech.*12.10.

Secondly, Christ, he hath deserved all good things by the infinite and invaluable merit of his most precious life and death, yea he hath commended us to his Fathers love and care by many fervent prayers made for us in the dayes of his flesh, and now he ceaseth not to make perpetual Intercession for us at his Fathers right hand, by presenting his own merits to the eyes of his Father, that they may actually speak in our behalf, and do away all the defects of our prayers.

Thirdly, The holy Ghost stirreth up in us earnest desires and groans, and doth as it were dictate our prayers for us.

Fourthly, From our selves, the people of God by praying are fitted to receive those benefits which they pray for, in the exercise of prayer increasing in themselves, faith, humblenesse of mind, an aptnesse to be thankfull for them, and an ability to use them well to Gods glory and their own good.

Helps and Means:

One must prepare his heart, that being naturally unfit for communion with God, which lieth,

First, In removing impediments, hardnesse of heart, want of sense and feeling of the woefull estate we are in, the command To pray always, implies that the soul should be alwayes in a praying frame. 2. Impatience, fretting, Pray without wrath.

Secondly, In bringing the positive furtherances,

1. Heavenly-mindednesse: If God be in Heaven there must our hearts be. Prayer being an humble discourse of the soul with God, Which art in Heaven. The natural gesture of lifting up our eyes and hands to Heaven, implieth this, this is opposed to worldly cares and earthlinesse, these are clogs; this made David say, It is better to be one day in thy house than a thousand elsewhere. Call in the help of the Spirit, Rom. 8.27.

2. Consideration of Gods benefits, it is good to have a Catalogue of them.

3. Study much the fullnesse and all-sufficieny of God, and his making over himself to you in his all-sufficiency, Gen. 17. 1.

4. Acquaint your selves with your own necessities, Let the word of God dwell richly in you, Col. 3. 16. The ground of prayer is Gods will; acquaint your selves with the precepts, promises.

5. Give your selves to prayer, Psalm 109.4. but I prayer, so the Hebrew; Oratio ego, so Montanus.

Prepare for prayer.
1. By getting powerfull apprehensions of the glory of God before whom you go.
2. By getting your hearts sensible of what you pray for, as pardon of sinne, power against it, assurance of his love. 3. Get your hearts separated from the world, and all things here below. Mr Burrh. of Gospel-worship, Esay 1. 13.

Helps against wandring and vain thoughts in holy duties, and especially in prayer:

1. Set a high price upon it, as a great Ordinance of God, wherein there is a Communion with him to be enjoyed, and the influence of the grace of God to be conveyed thorow it.

2. Every time thou goest to prayer, renew thy resolutions against them, till thou comest to a habit of keeping thy heart close to the duty.

3. Set the presence of God before you in prayer, his glory, and consider that he converseth with thy thoughts, as man with thy words.

4. Be not deceived with this, that the thoughts are not very sinfull; whatsoever thoughts concern not the present duty, are sinfull.

5. Blesse God for that help, if thine heart hath been kept close to a duty, and thou hast had communion with God.

The godly must pray *, by this Title the Scripture describes true Christians, Acts 2.41. and Paul saluteth All the faithfull that call upon the name of the Lord, 1 Cor. 1.2. a heart full of grace is also full of holy desires and requests, Cant. 1.2,4,7. It is called the Spirit of Supplications, Zech. 12.10. suitable to the Spirit of grace is the Spirit of Supplication.

They must pray daily, Psalm 55.17. & 147.2. Dan. 6.10. Luke 2.47. 1 Thess. 3.10. 2 Tim. 1.3. Christ prayed early in the morning, Mark 1.35. and late at night, Matth. 14.

* Dunam in his Preface to his Exposition of the Lords Prayer, having propounded this Question, Utrum Deus sit precandus? saith, Non dubito quin pis conscientiis vel ipse quæstionis status prima fronte displiceat, quam apud omnes hominet religionis luce & gratia vel leviſſimâ tinctos ea res nullam dubitationem vel disceptationem habeat. Vide ibid. c.4,5,6,7,8,9,10. & de orat. Dom. c.4.

Reasons. 1. It is equal that part of every day be given and consecrated to him who is the Lord of the day, and of all our time, they had a morning and evening Sacrifice in the time of the Law.

2. Prayer is a singular means of neer and heavenly Communion with God, therein the godly enjoy the face of God, talk familiarly with him.

3. Prayer sanctifieth to us (that is, obtaineth of God for us a lawfull and comfortable use of) all the things and affairs of the day.

4. Every day we stand in need of many things belonging both to temporal and spiritual life.

5. We are every day subject to many dangers.

Every morning and evening the Sacrifice, Exod. 29. 38. and Incense, Exo. 30. 7,8. were to be offered up unto the Lord. These were ceremonial Laws, but there is a moral equity of them which is perpetual, and these Laws concerned the people as well as the Priests, as appeareth, Luke 1.10. Hildersh.

A readineſſe to pray earneſtly to God for good things, and the ſame improved accordingly, is a kinde of pawn from Heaven to him that hath it, that he ſhall receive the good things prayed for.

A gracious heart is full of holy requeſts to God, Pſalm 8.10. *Rev.*5.8. *Rom.*5.5. *Ezek.*16.15. John 16.24. Jude verſ. 11. David ſometimes prayed thrice a day, ſometimes ſeven times a day; perhaps thrice a day was his ordinary daily courſe, and ſeven times was his practice upon Sabbaths and Feſtivals. It is no part of our ſpiritual warfare, becauſe it hath no piece of the armour allotted to it, yet it helps us to make uſe of all the reſt, Epheſ. 6.18. Four times are very ſeaſonable for prayer:

1. When a man is under ſad and intricate providences.
2. When one is under the power of any luſt.
3. When one is to undertake any weighty ſervice.
4. When one is under any grievous affliction.

Sometimes are unſeaſonable for prayer:

1. When a man is under the guilt of any known ſinne unrepented of, *Joſh.*7.10. Job 11.13.
2. When one is not reconciled to his brother.
3. When a man is under the paſſion of anger.
4. At Church when the Word is read or preached.

James the brother of our Lord by oft kneeling had his knees benummed and hardened like the knees of a Camel. Euſeb Eccleſ. Hiſt. l.2.

Every godly man muſt be conſtant and aſſiduous in prayer, perſevere in it, Pſalm 5.23. Pſalm 55.16,17. Pſalm 118.12,13. Will the hypocrite alwayes call upon God? ſaith Job: Daniel would not forbear the daily exerciſe of this ſervice, although it were with the hazard of his life, Dan. 6.10.

Aquinas 2a,2ae *Qu.*83. *Art.*4. determines this Queſtion, Utrum oratio debet eſſe diuturna?

See Dr Gouges Whole Armour, part.2. Treat. 5. Iſa. 62.6. Epheſ. 6.18. ἀγρυπνοῦντες is attributed to hunting dogs which will not ceaſe following the game till they have got it. Gabriel Sionita De nonnullis orientalium ritibus, &c. ſhews, that the Turkes pray five times a day. The more pious ſort among the Jews ſeem to have prayed at leaſt four times a day, twice at the Temple, if they were at Hieruſalem, and twice in their own private houſes.

Reaſons. 1. From God, who hath ſignified approbation of this ſervice by commanding it expreſly, ſaying, Pray continually; and Chriſt ſpake a Parable, That we ſhould be conſtant in prayer and not faint, Luke 18.1.

It was a prophane ſpeech of that atheiſtical wretch, that told God, He was no common beggar, he never troubled him before with prayer, and if he would hear him that time he would never trouble him again.

This hath been the practice of all the Saints of God. Jacob wreſtled with God and prayed all night. The Canaanitiſh woman had ſeveral repulſes, yet perſevered in prayer. Moſes held up his hands, which implies the continuance of his prayer, Eſay 62.1. Chriſt prayed thrice, and yet more earneſtly, Luke 22.44.

2. From our ſelves:

First, We have great need, for we abſolutely depend upon God, and he hath tied himſelf no further to do us good than we ſhall ſeek it in his Ordinance at his hands.

If we perſevere not, either God will not give us what we pray for, or if he do we ſhall have it as a curſe, becauſe it is not the fruit of prayer. Four things will drive the Saints to God: 1. The remainders of ſin. 2. The defect of graces. 3. The Devils temptations. 4. Outward affliction. Pſal.73.28.

Secondly, We have great helps, even ſuch as may enable us to perform the duty notwithſtanding any weakneſſe that is in our ſelves, for we have Gods Word and Spirit. If a man doubt to whom to direct his prayers, the Scripture cals him to God,

To

To thee shall all flesh come, Psalm 65. 2. If in whose name, it leads him to Christ; Whatsoever you shall ask in my Name. If for what to pray, for wisdom, for the Spirit, for patience, for daily bread, for remission of sins, for deliverance from evil, for the honouring of Gods name; in a word for all good things: If for whom, for Kings, for Rulers, for our selves, for others, for all men, except him whom we see to have sinned a sin unto death: If where, every where lifting [illegible] hands: If when, at all times, continually: If how often, why, morning, noon [illegible]: If on what occasion, in all things by prayer and supplications: If in what manner, why, fervently with an inward working of the heart in prayer, with understanding, in truth and in faith, and without fainting.

2. God will assist us with his Spirit; all those which addresse themselves to perform this work according to the direction of his Word, and beg the Spirit of prayer, to help them in praying, The Spirit maketh intercession, Rom. 8. Jude v. 20. Praying in the holy Ghost. The Spirit makes known our interest in God, as a Father, Matth. 7. 7.

Ephes. 6. 18. To pray so as the presence of the Spirit may be seen in prayer.

1. In a way of Direction, Rom. 8. 26.

2. In exciting holy affections when the heart is kindly affected with the sense of sin, love of God.

Thirdly, Constant supplicating to God doth honour him, and actually confesse him to be the universal Lord, the Ruler and disposer of all; yea to be liberal in giving, to be omnipotent in power, to be present in all places, to see and and hear all persons and actions, to search our hearts, and to sit at the stern of the whole world, so that he observeth also each particular creatures need and wants.

Fourthly, It is exceeding advantagious to our selves, seeing it acquaints us with God, and breeds a kinde of holy familiarity and boldnesse in us toward him. It exerciseth, reneweth and increaseth all graces in us, in drawing neer to God, and calling upon him, we grow like to him; this sets a work and increaseth knowledge of God, humility, faith, obedience, and love to him. It mortifieth lusts.

Fifthly, Because prayer it self is not only a duty but a priviledge, the chief purchase of Christs blood.

Sixthly, Because if we persevere and faint not, God will come in at last with mercy; in the fourth watch of the night Christ came, in the morning watch, the night was divided into four watches. Jacob wrestled all night with God, but in the morning he prevailed. Matth. 14.

Both the wicked and godly are weary of prayer and fasting.

First, The wicked are weary of prayer and fasting:

1. Because they want the principle of grace to carry them thorow.
2. They want the Spirit of Adoption.
3. They have no love to these duties.
4. They relish not the sweetnesse in prayer and fasting.
5. They have a mean esteem of these duties.
6. They want grace to wait.

The duty of prayer is established not only by positive institution, but it is a most natural duty. The Heathens (Plato and Proclus) have written Treatises of Prayer. It is better to fail in its performance, than totally to omit it, Acts 8. 22.

The godly also are quickly weary of these duties:

1. From the abundance of corruption in the best Christians, Exod. 17. Moses his hands were heavy.

2. From the misapprehension of prayer and fasting, some look upon them as legal duties, but they are chief Gospel-duties, Mat. 9. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 29. they call them beggarly formes; Christians (they say) must be above forms; the Ordinances are [illegible] Christi, cauties Cuti.

3. From the often and long continuance and easinesse of obtaining these fasting dayes.

Motives to persevere in prayer and fasting:

1. Have a high and honourable esteem of these duties.

2. Let

2. Let not the frequency of them take away the reverence and powerfulneſſe of them.

To be weary of prayer is to ſin contra medicinam unicam, & contra miſericordiam maximam.

Perſevere, 1. In private prayer, Pſalm 80.4. *Cant.*3.4.

2. In publick, 1. God commands it, *Eph.*6.17,18. The Saints have practiſed it, *Lam.*3.22,23,24. Pſalm 69.13,14.

3. There are many promiſes, Mat. 18.7. Luke 11.10.

It is a good and com[illegible]able thing in the Saints of God to be able to hold out long in their private [illegible] 1 *Sam.*15.11. In publick prayer with others, reſpect muſt be had as well to [illegible]s as to ones ſelf; and here we muſt conform our ſelves to their ability, that we tire not their devotion: but in our private and ſecret prayers betwixt God and our own ſouls, it is good to be large, 1 Samuel 1.12. Daniel continued his ſolemn faſt (not in abſtaining ſimply from all food, but from all pleaſant and delicious fare) for one and twenty dayes together, and therefore it is ſure he ſpent a great deal of time in praying. David, Pſalm 22. praid day and night. Chriſt ſpent a whole night in prayer.

We ſhould conſider all Gods promiſes he hath made to his Church. See Geneſis 3.9. 2 Chron 20.9. and his accompliſhing of them, Pſalm 74.3.

We ſhould perſevere in prayer, though we meet with diſcouragements from men, *Matth.*22.30. from Devils, Epheſ. 6.18. Matth. 26.31. from our own unbelieving hearts, Pſalm 69.3. from God himſelf, Pſalm 80.4. *Lam.*3.44.

Object. Long prayers are condemned in the Phariſees.

Anſw. Not the length but the hollowneſſe of their prayers is blamed, becauſe under ſhew of long prayers they devoured widows houſes, ſeeking to gain the reputation of men extraordinary devout, by drawing out their prayers, and they were publick not private prayers.

Object. Eccl.5.2. Solomon bids that in conſideration of Gods greatneſſe and our baſeneſſe, our words ſhould be few.

Anſw. Not all length in prayer, but haſtineſſe and rediouſneſſe without affection is there condemned; he ſaith, Be not haſty nor raſh, but let thy words be few, requiring that the words have their ground in a well adviſed judgement; and then they are few in his ſenſe, though they be otherwiſe many. Luke 18.1. Paul witheth to perſevere in prayer, watching thereunto, meaning it not alone of conſtancy in prayer and ſpiritual watching, but of the holding out in prayer.

It is a ſin to needleſſly to affect length of ſpeech and vain repetitions in prayer, *Matth.*6.7,8. Every long prayer is not forbidden, Luke 6.12. Solomons prayer was long in Dedication of the Temple; in extraordinary duties, length ſeems neceſſary, but a needleſſe lengthening of prayer, and the affectation of long prayers is bad. See *Mat.*23.14.

The general Rule is,

1. Be conciſe but full of affection,

2. So much time muſt be ſpent in prayer as may be profitable for our ſelves and others.

Reaſons may be added to what hath been formerly delivered:

1. In regard of our ſelves: we have much matter for prayer, many ſins to confeſſe and lament, many graces to ask, many wants to be ſupplied.

2. Many reaſons to enforce, and many objections to anſwer, and therefore ought ſometimes to enlarge our ſelves.

Secondly, In regard of God; by this means we ſhall declare a great love to God, and to this exercise, when we carry our ſelves to him as to a Friend, with whom we are not willing to leave conferring, but take delight to conſer much with him.

The way to continue in this duty is much to muſe of our wants and ſins, and Gods promiſes, and labour to have our hearts earneſtly affected with theſe things, and to take advantages of ſuch occaſions as the Lord affords us for this purpoſe; and let us propound the example of Chriſt and Samuel, and other godly perſons, and ſtrive to follow their preſident when time doth ſerve.

The woman of Canaan, Matth.15.

Four Cautions muſt be obſerved in long prayers:

1. That

Firſt, That in our meetings with Chriſtians we affect not to be long to get applauſe thereby, and to ſhew how farre we excell others in this gift, Matthew 23. 14.

Secondly, That we be enabled by God with underſtanding, and uſe not vain repetitions, *Mat.*6.7. Mr Hilderſam on Pſal.51.5.

Thirdly, That our hearts be able to hold out as long as our tongues do, James 5.16.

Fourthly, That we have reſpect to them that joyn with us, 1 Cor. 14. 19.

In prayer, Particular confeſſion of our ſins (ſo far as we can come to the knowledge of them) is requiſite, and for unknown ſins a general confeſſion will ſerve, Pſ. 19.13. See *Gen.*18.27. *Dan.*9.4,5. Ezra 9.6,7,9. Pſalm 51. 4,5. Joſhua 7. 19. confeſſion is put for prayer.

The acknowledgment of our own unworthineſſe becomes the preſence of God, 1 Kings 19.11. Job 42.5,6. & 25.5,6,22.

2. Confeſſion is a ſolid diſclaiming of the firſt Covenant, when we make grace our claim we muſt diſclaim works, Pſalm 115.1.

In every part of prayer ſome affection ſhould be exerciſed, in confeſſion, ſhame Micah 2. 6. Grief, Luke 18. 13. in requeſts, hope and deſire, in giving thanks, joy and love.

Confeſſion is but an act of the ſanctified will diſpleaſed with the remembrance of ſinne.

Objections of Libertines and others againſt prayer.

1. They think it needleſſe, they cannot alter God, Job 23. 13.

Anſw. We ſhould obey Gods command. By prayer there may be a change in our ſelves, it betters our hearts, makes us truſt in God.

Secondly, God hath inſeparably linked the means and the end. We pray not that Gods will may be altered but accompliſhed in his own way; his judicial ſentence may be altered though not his counſel. We may pleaſe God in praying for that which it is not his purpoſe to grant. 2 Sam. 7.27. Ezek.36.37. It is alſo a great argument God is ready to give us ſuch a mercy, when he ſtirs up our hearts to ſeek it, Pſal.10.17.

Secondly, Others ſay they cannot utter their minds to God, nor make known their wants. Prayer conſiſts not in eloquence, in a flowing tongue, but a broken heart. Hezekiahs prayer is called chattering, Eſay 38. ſometimes prayer is called roaring, ſometimes groaning, Rom. 8. 27. Sighing, Pſalm 79. 11. Breathing, Lam. 3. 56.

Thirdly, Others plead deadneſſe and indiſpoſedneſſe to the duty. This may ariſe either from the careleſneſſe of our hearts and wayes, 1 Peter 4.7. & 3.9. or from over-much caring for the things of the world; both theſe are reprovable; or elſe it may ariſe from the remainders of corruption within us. Prayer heals this, God accepts our wils, purpoſes, deſires.

Fourthly, Others are diſcouraged from prayer by Satans temptations. Prayer is therefore an excellent duty, becauſe ſo much oppoſed by Satan, Zech. 3.1.

2. It is one great means we uſe to reſiſt Satan, *Epheſ.*6.18. We reſiſt temptations by getting aid from Heaven.

3. Chriſt himſelf was tempted; the Devils temptations may be your trouble, but they ſhall not be reckoned among your ſins.

Fifthly, Others object they have prayed often, but can get no anſwer.

Anſw. 1. We muſt not neglect our duty, though God doth not preſently performe his promiſe; the time of anſwering prayer is in Gods hand, Pſalm 78. 41.

2. You may be anſwered, and not perceive it.

Sixthly, Others think they are above prayer, this is an inferiour duty for men of their rank.

Have neither they nor the Church any neceſſities? Chriſt who had fulneſſe of grace, often prayed, *Mat.*14.23,24. See *Rev.*4.10,11. Gods people are called his Supplants, *Zech.*3.10. a generation of them that ſeek him, Pſalm 24. 6.

Seventhly, Others will not pray but when the Spirit moves them.

This is not to come till God ſend for us. God withholds grace becauſe we ſeek it not in his own way. We muſt pray every day.

Eighthly, Others think they need not be so frequent in prayer; they say, the hours of duty are not determined.

The expressions for prayer are comprehensive, Pray continually, 1 Tim. 5. 17.

Chap. V.

The Sorts or Kinds of Prayer.

Prayer may be distinguished according to the matter and manner thereof.

1. In regard of the matter, the Apostle 1 Tim. 2. 1. maketh four several heads:

Dr Gouges Whole Armor. Treat. 3. part 2.

1. Supplications or deprecations, which are for the removal of evil.
2. Prayers, which are for the obtaining of good.
3. Intercessions, which are in the behalf of others.
4. Thanksgivings, which are for benefits received.

These four he referreth in another place to two heads, { 1. Requests. 2. Thanksgiving.

The most general and usual distinction is grounded on 1 Thess. 5. 17, 18.

Petition, } Phil. 4. 6. 1 Tim. 2. 1.
Thanksgiving, }

Petition may be divided according to the things or persons, in respect whereof it is made.

Petitio duplex est secundum rationem objecti vel rei quæ petitur: est enim vel appretiatio vel deprecatio. Appretiatio est Petitio de rebus bonis communicandis. Deprecatio est Petitio de rebus malis amovendis. Amef. Medul. Th. l. 2. c. 9.

The things which it respecteth, are either good to obtain them, which is most properly prayer or appreciation; or evil, to remove them, which is deprecation.

The Persons are our selves or others.

Prayer will bring in all the good things Gods people stand in need of, John 16. 24, 27. The Jews have a Proverb, Sine stationibus non staret mundus, without standing before God in prayer, the world would not stand; light and direction comes in by prayer, Prov. 2. 2, 3.

The godly man hath his daily bread as the fruit of the promise, and that leads him to his union with Christ, the fountain of all promises.

Object. The matter or object of our prayer must be good, how then can it admit a distinction in respect of good or evil?

Answ: Amotio mali habet rationem boni, Removal of evil hath the reason of good: therefore the benefits of God are either Positive or Privative. B. Down. of Prayer, Chap. 33.

Prayer is the great instrument of removing all evil from soul and body, Psalm 107. often.

2. Thanksgiving, which is a grateful acknowledgement of a kindnesse received.

The four first Petitions in the Lords Prayer concern the obtaining of good, the two last the removing of evil: either

1. Past or coming, in the fifth Petition. Or
2. Future, in the last Petition.

There are other distinctions of Prayer in regard of the manner:

1. Mental and Vocal.
2. Sudden, Composed.
3. Conceived, Prescribed.
4. Publick, Private.
5. Ordinary, Extraordinary.

In

In this distinction of prayer according to the matter,

I shall first speak of Petition for good things, and deprecation against evil, Intercession for, and imprecation against others, and then of Thanksgiving.

For Petition, which is the most principal kind of prayer; there are two things considerable in it,

1. What things we are to crave.
2. After what manner we are to crave them.

These have been handled partly in the manner and matter of prayer, therefore I shall but touch them.

The things which may be asked, must be lawfull and good, *Matth.*7.11. Those things are so which are agreeable to the will of God; a thing is therefore good because it is willed of God, *Heb.*13.21. 1 John 5.14. Gods glory is first, and most of all to be desired, 1 *Cor.*10.31. *Petit.*1. of the Lords Prayer, and the means whereby it may be effected in the 2d Petition, and the manifestation of it in the third. Our own good in the next place is to be looked after, in regard of which we may ask all needfull things, temporal concerning these frail bodies of ours while we live here in the fourth Petition, or spiritual, and that either respecting our Justification, the principal part whereof is a discharge of that debt, wherein, through sin, we are bound unto God, in the fifth Petition, or our Sanctification in keeping us from the pollution of sin, and preserving us safe from all evil unto Salvation, in the sixth Petition.

It is the duty of Gods people to turn precepts into prayers, Psalme 119. 4, 5. This

1. Suites with the Gospel-covenant where God gives what he commands, therefore all is put in the form of a promise, *Heb.*8.10.
2. Gods ends are hereby fulfilled. He requires what we cannot perform.
   1. To keep up his right.
   2. That we may be convinced of our impotency, *Rom.*7.18.
   3. That the creature may expresse his readinesse, *Phil.*2.13.
   4. To bring us to lie at his feet; Gods Sovereignty drives us to the riches of his grace.

We should ingenuously and freely unfold our cases to God, Psalme 119.26. This is necessary:

1. Because it is the condition of the Lords mercy, *Prov.*28.13. 1 John 1.9. Jer. 3.13. Psalme 51.3.
2. It is the onely means whereby we get our peace of conscience, Psalme 32. 3. Job 23.19.
3. This prevents Satans accusations, *Rom.*8.33.

This confessing freely to God, argues

1. Sincerity, Psalme 32.2. Hypocrites content themselves with a general slight acknowledgement; we are all sinners, or take up empty forms.
2. It argues somewhat of the Spirit of Adoption, 1 John 3.21.
3. It is a way to make us serious and affected with our condition.
4. It will be of great advantage in our spiritual life, 1 Pet. 3.7.

Secondly, In what manner we are to crave good things.

Things must be beg'd as they are promised, Faith hath an eye to Gods promises, and resteth thereon: as God hath promised any thing, so the faithfull ask it in prayer. Things absolutely promised may be absolutely askt; things not absolutely promised, we must pray for with subjection to Gods will and wisdom.

We must pray;

1. In faith, believingly, James 1.6. & 5.15. That we may pray in faith, consider,
   1. How gracious God is; all his communications are free.
   2. How worthy Christ is; he hath purchased grace for us.
   3. How he hath removed all hinderances, satisfied the justice of God, fulfill'd the Law, pacified God, taken away the guilt of sinne, and the enmity that was in God against us.
   4. That Christ prayes over all our prayers, appearing in Heaven, and interceding for us.

Supplication; when one begs some thing in general, help, deliverance, Psal. 70.1.

Insinuation, ostensio necessitatis, Joh.11.3 Temporalia licet desiderare: non quidem principaliter, ut in eis finem constituamus, sed sicut quaedam adminicula quibus adjuvamur ad tendendum in beatitudinem: in quantum scilicet per ea vita corporalis sustentatur: & in quantum nobis organicè deserviunt ad actus virtutum. Aquin.2a,2a, q.83. *Art.*6.

5. That God is pitifull and willing to help us.

2. With fervency, importunately. Jacob was called Israel, because he prevailed with God. Conſider for this purpoſe,

1. The neceſſity of grace:

1. For a comfortable life.

2. For a profitable life, John 15.5,8.

2. The excellency of grace.

So much for Petition for good things, for Deprecation againſt evil things we have expreſſe warrant in the 5th and 6th Petitions of the Lords Prayer: and alſo in the example of Chriſt, *Heb.*5.7. and in the many promiſes which God hath made to deliver us from evil.

See 1 King.8. 33. and 10 in other verſes there, of Salomons prayer, 2 Chron.7.13.

Evil to be prayed againſt, is either of fault or puniſhment.

The evil which we do deprecari, that is, deſire to be delivered from, whether in whole, ut averretur, that it may be averted, or in part, ut mitigetur, that it may be mitigated if it be upon us; or to be kept and preſerved therefrom if we be in any danger thereof, ut non eveniat, that it may be prevented, it is either the evil of ſin or the evil of puniſhment. B. Downs of Prayer, ch.34.

Evil of fault is ſin, the firſt and greateſt of all evils, in regard of this evil.

Three things are to be prayed againſt;

1. The guilt of ſin, in the 5th Petition.

2. The power of it.

3. Temptations thereunto, in the 6th Petition.

Againſt the guilt and power of ſin, we muſt ſimply, abſolutely and inſtantly pray, and never ceaſe till God hear us. Againſt temptations we are to pray eſpecially, that we be not given over unto them, and overcome by them.

Evil of puniſhment is three-fold.

1. Temporal.

2. Spiritual.

3. Eternal.

Temporal puniſhments are all outward judgements, miſeries and plagues in this world, the effects of ſin; Abſolutely they are not to be prayed againſt, but we are to pray either to have them removed, or elſe ſanctified unto us.

Gen.2.17.

Domine hic ure, hic ſeca & in æternum parce. Aug.

One may not pray for afflictions as they are a fruit of the curſe, but as they are part of the inheritance of the Saints under the ſecond Covenant, Mat. 10.13. and in reference to the ſweet effects that flow from them, *Jer.*10.24. ſo ſome hold they may be prayed for.

Spiritual puniſhments are, ſlavery under Satan, the world and the fleſh, a ſeared and a dead conſcience, hardneſſe of heart, blindneſſe of minde, carnal ſecurity, impenitency, infidelity, and ſuch like, theſe are to be prayed againſt as hell it ſelf.

Eternal damnation is abſolutely to be prayed againſt.

Interceſſion or praying for others, in the next place, is warranted from thoſe petitions in the Lords Prayer, which are ſet down in the plural number, Give us, Forgive us, Deliver us. The Apoſtle alſo expreſſly commandeth us to pray one for another.

Jam. 5.16. See 1 Theſſ. 5.24. and *Theod.*4.c.32. an excellent ſtory of Terentius a noble man, Captain under the Emperour Valens.

1. It amplifieth Gods glory, in that we call upon him for others as well as for our ſelves; we acknowledge him to be not only our own Father, but alſo the common Father of others, therefore Chriſt hath taught us to ſay, Our Father.

2. This is a principal duty of love, *Matth.*5.44.

3. It is very profitable, we cannot be more beneficial to any than in and by prayer. Auſtin ſaith to Ambroſe, Frater, ſi pro te ſolum ores, ſolus pro te oras; ſi pro omnibus oras, omnes pro te oramus.

Motives to pray for others:

1. It is a character of the Saints; Paul prayed much for others, *Eph.*3.14,16. *Phil.*2.9,10. *Col.*1.9,10. and almoſt in every Epiſtle he begs the prayers of others for himſelf, *Rom.*15.30. *Phil.*1.19. *Heb.*13.18.

2. This is the condition of Gods promiſes, Ezekiel 36.37. and the forerunner of Gods performances. When he delivered his people out of Æ- gypt,

Egypt, they cried mightily to him, and he ſtirred up a Spirit of prayer in his people before he delivered them out of Babylon, Daniel 9. 2,21. Jerem. 29.12. & 31. 9.

3. It is the Armoury of Saints, Preces & lachrymæ arma Christianorum, 2 King. 2.20. & 13.14.

Who thoſe be that are to be prayed for, all of all ſorts.

All in general are to be prayed for, 1 Tim. 2. 1.

Object. The Pope of Rome is Antichriſt, and he is that man of ſin which is the ſon of perdition.

2 Theſſ. 2. 3. It is an honor to pray for others, and a comfort alſo; a godly man hath a great ſtock in the Churches prayers.

Anſw. We may not conceive any particular man to be Antichriſt, but rather that Seat and State where the Pope ſitteth, or the Hierarchy, the Head whereof the Pope is, or the ſucceſſion of Popes one after another.

The firſt in order to be prayed for are Saints, the whole community of them, Epheſ. 6.18. John 17.9. Col. 2.1,2. We muſt pray for the Catholick Church, Eſay 62.6,7. Pſalm 51.18. Pſalm 137. 5,6. that God would ſanctifie and purge them from errours, Pſalm 122.6,7.

1. Becauſe God commands it.

2. Becauſe the Church needs and deſerves our prayers, it is the Spouſe of Chriſt, Pſalm 48.1. Gal. 4.26.

3. Becauſe of our neer relation to the Church.

2. Publick Perſons:

1. Magiſtrates, 1 Tim. 2. 12. Pſalm 72. 1.

2. Miniſters, Eph. 6.19. Act. 12.5. & 13.40. Matth. 9.38. Juvate me orationibus veſtris, ut ſemper poſſim & loqui quæ oportet, & opere implere quæ loquor. Bern. ſuper Cant. Serm. 36.

3. Thoſe to whom we are more nearly related, Rom. 9.3. Philem. v. 16. Friends, Husbands for Wives, Parents for Children, Maſters for Servants, the Miniſter for his people, Eph. 3.14,16.

4. Strangers, Gen. 18.24.

5. Enemies, Mat. 5.44. Luke 23.34. Rom. 12.14.

Now I ſhall ſhew who are not to be prayed for.

1. All ſuch as are dead, Matth. 5.35. 2 Sam. 12.23. ſuch prayers are vain and fruitleſſe, for Gods determinate judgement paſſeth on every one ſo ſoone as they die.

Bellarm. de Purgat. l. 2. c. 18. ſaith, It can neither adde any thing to the bliſſe of them that are in Heaven, nor take away any part of puniſhment from them that are in hell. Vide Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Prælect. 163.

Moſes in the Law preſcribed no prayers, no Sacrifices for the dead.

The Papiſts practiſe praying for the dead. They pretend for this the faireſt precedents of the Church, and of the whole world. * The Heathens they ſay did it, and the Jewes did it, and the Chriſtians did it. The Heathens prayed for an eaſie grave, and a perpetual ſpring. The Jews prayed, That the ſoul of their dead might be in the garden of Eden, that they might have their part in Paradiſe, and in the world to come. The Chriſtians prayed for a joyfull Reſurrection, for mercy at the day of Judgement, for the haſtening of the coming of Chriſt, and the Kingdome of God. But yet, the prayers for the dead uſed in the Church of Rome are moſt plainly condemned, becauſe they are againſt the Doctrine and practices of all the world.

Orate pro anima. Some diſlike alſo private Devotions in the publick Aſſemblies. See Beams of former Light, ch. 5. Sect. 2.

* Dr Taylors Epiſt. Dedicat. to the Rule and exercises of holy dying. De miror viros ſanctos tantopere inculcaſſe preces pro mortuis fundendas, cum hujus rei nihil in veteri, neque in novo inſtrumento, ullum exter, vel exemplum, vel mandatum. Elmenhort. Obſervat. in Arnob. l. 4. p. 152. Vide plura ibid.

Ignorant and ſuperſtitious Perſons likewiſe among us, if mention be made of any of their friends departed, uſe preſently to ſay, The Lord be with his ſoule, Gods peace be with him, with the like. If any reprove them for it, they ſay, What hurt is it? It is hurt enough that there is no good in it, it is vain and idle, Matth. 12.36. There is no commandment, example of any good good man, or promiſe in all the Scripture to prayer for the dead.

2. They which ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, 1 John 5.16.

The fourth and laſt branch of prayer is imprecation againſt others, which is a kind of prayer whereby judgement and vengeance is deſired.

Expoſtulation may be uſed in prayer, where there is no imprecation as well as when there is, Jer. 14.8,9.

Expoſtulation with God is a reaſoning the caſe with him, it is uſual in the Pſalmes, Pſalm 6.3. & 22.1,2. & 75.5. Pſalm 79.5,8,9, 10, 11, 12, 14. Pſalm 90.13, 14, 16, 17. & 37.9, 12. Pſalm 44.10, 12, 13, 14, 23. Pſalm 77.1, 9, 10.

The faithfull ſometimes in their mourning proceed to expoſtulations which are vehement interrogations expreſſed from them by their grief, whereby they do expoſtulate with the Lord concerning the greatneſſe or continuance of their afflictions, as Moſes, Exod. 5.22. Joſhua 7.6,7,8,9. the Church afflicted, Lam. 5. &c. and our Saviour, Mat. 27.46. But we are to take heed that it be a holy fruit of a lively faith, leaſt it proceed from want of patience, and degenerate to murmuring againſt God. Biſh. Down. Chriſtian exerciſe of Faſting.

Reaſons. 1. Venting of our ſelves to God giveth eaſe, Pſalm 39.2,3.

2. Complaints move both God and man.

3. By uſing ſtrength we get ſtrength, by diſcuſſing Gods ways our faith is confirmed, Pſalm 138.3.

Gods people differ from the wicked:

1. In the riſe of their expoſtulations, they are bottomed on faith, they reſerve to God all his glory. The wicked queſtion Gods providence.

2. In their progreſſe, the godly proceed in humble prayer, ſelf-abaſing; the wicked are not ſorrowfull nor humbled in their hearts.

3. In the ſucceſſe, they are confirmed in their principles of Gods excellency, are comforted; the wicked are ſteeled in their Atheiſme, and feared in their wickedneſſe.

No man muſt imprecate and pray againſt himſelf, we have no warrant for it, and it is againſt nature it ſelf, Eph. 5.29. Peter offended in this, Mat. 26.74. See Matth. 27.25. The Jewes were ſo fearfull of uttering imprecations, that when in their oaths they had occaſion to uſe them, they would either expreſſe them in general terms, God do ſo to me and more alſo, 2 Sam. 3.35. or elſe, leave them clean out, and make the ſentence imperfect, as, If I do this, or, If I do not that, or, If this be ſo, and there ſtay.

See Pſal. 132. 2,3,4.

Queſt. Whether is it lawfull, and how far to pray againſt others? There are divers Imprecations, 69, & 55, & 109 Pſal.

Mat. 5.44.

1. The Pſalmiſt was not only a ſervant of God, but a Prophet, he did not with a private ſpirit fore-tell their deſtruction.

2. He wiſht that their evils might be deſtroyed, not their perſons, Pſal. 59.11,13. & 83.15.

It was not ſo much votum as vaticinium. Vide Doctoris Arrowſm. Tactica ſacra, lib. 3. cap. 1.

We may rejoyce in vengeance upon the wicked, Pſa. 58.11. as it is an act of Gods juſtice; this is the proper and direct anſwer to all the imprecations of David, O God to whom vengeance belongeth, ſhew thy ſelf; the Iſraelites praiſed God for the overthrow of the wicked, Rev. 18.20. & 19.20.

We muſt 1. Pray for our enemies, but againſt Gods enemies, Pſalm 35.23. compared with 83.12. See Numb. 10.35. Pſalm 68.1.

2. We may lawfully pray againſt their deſigns, though not againſt their perſons, 2 Samuel 15.31. that their ſecret councels and plots may be fruſtrated.

3. We may pray againſt their perſons indefinitely, though not particularly, as Pſalm 129.5.

D. Hackwell on Judg 5.31. See D. Gauges Whole Armour, part 2. pag. 192, 193. Vide Balduin. de caſ. conſc. l. 2. c. 7, 8. Et Rivet. in Pſal. 40.15. p. 394, 395, 396, 397.

4. We may pray againſt their perſons in particular conditionally, though not abſolutely, 1. We are to pray for their converſion: and then if maliciouſly and wilfully they perſiſt in their obſtinacy; in the ſecond place, for their confuſion, Pſalm 83.16,17. We may wiſh them temporal evil, that ſo they may be converted, Fill them with ſhame, put them in fear, Pſal. 59.11,12.

Hitherto

Hitherto of thoſe ſeveral kinds of prayer which are comprized under requeſt. The next kind is Thankſgiving.

There are ſeveral kinds of praiſe:

1. External only, with the lips without the heart.

2. Internal only, when the heart is exerciſed in praiſing God, though it expreſſe not it ſelf outwardly, Pſalm 103.2.

3. External and internal both, when the mind thinks highly, and the tongue ſpeaks honourably of him, Pſalm 34.1,2.

The Schoolmen following Auſtin have diſtinguiſhed confeſſion into confeſſio laudis, to the honour of God, Pſalm 106.1. Confeſſio fraudis, to the diſhonour and ſhame of our ſelves, Titus 3.3.

The Jews have had a godly uſage, upon any occaſion of naming God in their writings, to inſert an abbreviature of praiſe, the holy one, the bleſſed.

Thankfulneſſe hath ever been ſo rare, that the learned Languages of Greek and Latine have no proper word for it, but unthankfulneſſe, as every where frequent, got a name in all Tongues, ἀχαριστία is a good Greek word, and ingratitudo a good Latine, ſo is not gratitudo which ſprang up after the purity of Latine ſpeech was exſpired, about the time of Tiberius. Mr Buck on *Rom.*7.25.

We ought to render to the Lord the calves of our lips, ſpeaking good of his name, Pſalm 95.1,2. Eph.5.20. 1 Tim.2.1. 1 Theſſ.1.18. As in confeſſing of ſinne we ſhould chiefly weep over the Attributes which in committing ſinne we have chiefly wronged. So in confeſſion of mercy we ſhould magnifie that Attribute chiefly which God in giving that mercy hath honoured.

Laus eſt ſermo elucidans magnitudinem virtutis.

To praiſe God is to ſpeak highly of thoſe excellencies that are in him. God needs none of our praiſes for himſelf:

1. Becauſe he is perfect in himſelf.

2. Incomprehenſible by us, but there is reaſon for it in reſpect of our ſelves and others, it begets in us a higher opinion of God, and in others greater reverence to him.

Reaſons. Firſt, From God, who muſt be praiſed,

1. For the perfection of his Being and Eſſence, the object of praiſe is excellency, Pſalm 145.3. See Dr Gouges Whole Armour, part 2. Treat. 3.

2. For his ſeveral Attributes, ſanctity, Exodus 15.11. Pſalm 150.1,2. Eſay 6.3. his goodneſſe, Pſalm 103.8. wiſdom, Pſalm 147.5.

3. For his glorious works, Pſalm 150.2.

4. For his mercies, Pſalm 103.2. Laus eſt commemoratio beneficiorum receptorum.

God is to be praiſed, Iſa 43.21. 1 Pet.2.9.

He is the Authour of benefits to us, 1. Many. 2. Great. 3. Conſtant. 4. Free.

1. Many.

So many limbs as we have about our bodies, ſo many joynts as are in a limb, ſo many veins, ſinews, griſtles and muſcles as are requiſite to the moving and uſing of every joynt, ſo many benefits, ſo many faculties as our ſouls are endued with of reaſon, ſenſe and vegetation, ſo many benefits. How many nights reſt, dayes quiet? How many journeyes ſafety? How many dangers eſcaped, contents enjoyed?

He is fearfull in praiſes: Thou that inheriteſt the praiſes of Iſrael, Pſalm 22.3. In another Pſalme, Praiſe waiteth for thee; and in another, He is greatly to be praiſed above all gods. See Pſal.33.11. & 10.7,8. Nehem. 9.5. David earneſtly cals upon all creatures to praiſe God, in Pſalm 148. Heavens, Earth, Sea, Angels, Men, Beaſts, Birds, Fiſhes, Trees, all things, becauſe in and from all we are to fetch matter of praiſing him. Pſalm 145.10. All his works yeeld the confeſſion.

2. Great, becauſe we ſtand in great need of them, and attain much good by them, and can by no meam attain them without God.

3. Conſtant, from the beginning to the end of our lives.

4. Free,

1. He gives merely of his own accord to exerciſe his goodneſſe without reſpect respect to any thing that we had done before to deserve, or could do after to requite.

2. All that God doth for and to us, is that he may be glorified, Psalm 50. 15. ult. it is Gods due, he is the great Landlord of the world.

Old mercies are like to old Coins and Records, the better and more authentick we should keep them in mind.

Reasons. 1. They are worth remembring, pleadable in the Court of Heaven, Psalm 74. 12. because God is unchangeable, his love and Covenant are the same.

2. God takes notice of all the mercies he bestows upon us.

3. Otherwise we can never be thankfull (as we should) for them, Psalm 103. 1, 2.

1. God hath delivered our Nation from Heathenism.

2. From Popery and superstition.

3. From the Spanish invasion in 88.

4. From the Gun-pouder-Treason, a mercy of above six and fifty years standing.

Secondly, From man, by whom thanks must be given.

1. In that we stand in continual need of Gods new favours, and are totally dependant upon him, and unable to recompence the old.

It is the constant exercise of the blessed Saints and Angels in Heaven. Love is the grace of Heaven, and praise the duty of Heaven.

2. From the duty it self, it is to God very acceptable, Psalm 69. 31. & 50. 8, 9. this is all he expects for his benefits, to us very profitable [a], and in it self needfull, excellent, pleasant and possible, a man hath understanding and speech, and a Christian hath the Scriptures to direct him.

[a] Thanksgiving doth continue, increase, and sweeten and sanctifie benefits. As the Husbandman will continue to manure that ground which fails not to yeeld him a harvest; so the Lord will continue to bestow blessings on them that are thankfull to him for them, yea he will adde new mercies to the old, and give more and more, greater and greater still, increasing his bounty as they increase their thanksgiving for what they have received. It sweetens the mercies, causeth them to be more delightfull and comfortable, in that it causeth the soul to taste Gods goodnesse in them, by which a man receives more comfort from these terrene things, than a beast. Lastly, These benefits are sanctified to us thereby, made holy in the use, so that we have Gods allowance to use them, and shall be blessed by them. It is a comfortable and pleasant duty, we again enjoy the sweetnesse of those benefits which we give thankes for, to be telling and thinking of the good I have received, and of the excellencies of him from whom I have received it: and most needfull, because it is so often, earnestly required, and in regard of the great danger which follows if we doe it not.

If any one desire to keep a Diary or Catalogue of Gods particular mercies, the better to enable him to this excellent duty. Mr Beadles Journal or Diary of a Thankfull Christian will be worthy his reading for that purpose. Observe a double Rule in making this Catalogue:

1. Make it as large and long as you can write down, National mercies, Personal, City and Family-mercies, corporal, spiritual, positive and privative mercies.

2. Leave a great space for forgotten and unknown mercies.

True thankfulnesse doth import two things: An acknowledgement of the benefit, and owes engagement for it, and then a ready willing mind if occasion serveth to requite it.

Paul scarce ever gives a precept concerning prayer (though he give many) but he is carefull to joyne thanksgiving with it, Phil. 4. 8. Colos. 4. 2. 1 Tim. 2. 1. 1 Thess. 5. 17.

The first Petition of the Lords Prayer, and the Conclusion is praise. We praise God for what he is, we thank him for what he doth.

Our own necessities and love of our selves will put us on supplication, but it is the love of God which maketh us praise him.

There is a difference between praise and blessing; praise hath respect to Gods excellency, the Angels praise him for his holinesse, Esay 6. 3. Blessing hath respect to his benefits.

We should especially praise God for spiritual blessings, Eph. 1. 3.

1. Because these come from his special love, Psalm 106. 4.

2. Concern

2. Concern the Spirit, the soul, which is the man.
3. Are pledges of eternal blessings.
4. Dispose the heart to thankfulnesse; temporal blessings may be motives to thankfulnesse.

Examples of Thankfulnesse we have,

Noah, Gen. 8. last end. Moses and Miriam, Exod 15. & 17. Judg. 5. Esther 5. David, 2 Sam. 22. 4. David spends the 78, 106, 107, and 135. Psalmes, in making a particular rehearsal of the Deliverances of the Lord. The 150 Psalme hath thirteen Hallelujahs. The Jews when they celebrated the Passeover, at the end thereof, they had a great Hallelujah consisting of divers Psalmes.

There is this distinction between the Papists and Protestants in France, the Huguenots are called the singing or praising people.

It is an excellent and transcendent duty, a most honourable service. See Psalm 50. 14, 23. a most immediate conversing with God; when we praise God we ascribe something to him.

In thanksgiving a man separates himself from himself, and all things to God, and so he doth draw neerest to God in this duty. It is a comprehensive duty, all duties runne into it; we pray that God may deliver us, and we may glorifie him, Psalm 50. 14. therefore it is called the Sacrifice of praise, Psalm 107. 22. as if it were in fer eminiam. We read, confesse and hear that we may praise God, Heb. 13. 15. it is the end of all our duties, and of all Gods workes and counsels, Prov. 16. 4.

It hath the largest object of any duty; Faith hath for its object Promises and experiences, fear, threatnings and judgments; Love what is lovely, Praise every good thing, 1 Thess. 5. 18. Col. 2. 7. Eph. 1. 4. 1 Tim. 4. 4.

It doth exercise and increase the principal graces of Gods Spirit in us, knowledge of God, love to God, faith in him; for all vertues are augmented by practice and exercise.

It must be,

First, To God alone, for there is the same object of petition and Thanksgiving, Psalm 50. 23. Hosea 14. 2. Therefore it so falls out, that those who have divided their prayers between God and others, doe also share their praises between God and others, as in Popery * they doe as often praise the Saints, as pray to them.

* The Papists joyn God and the Saints together, they say, Praise to God and the Virgin Mary. Omnibus propemodum libris Gregorii de Valentia subjecta est hac clausula, quod sacrosanctum carmen, Laus Deo & beatissimæ Virgini, & Jesu Christo. Et sic sæpe Baronius claudit Tomos Annalium; censens enim Matrem Filio deferre præsui. Atque ita in cæteris Italis Regii Templi Librisque confessariis quod & tam multis demeritis opulentos, & quod tanta devotione frequentetur, quam Templum Mariæ Lauretanum? Hoc putans Baronium sic claudere secundum volumen Annalium, ut Mariæ solum imagoffert Assequens rejecta intercessionis laboris sui & omnia bona quæ à Deo accepit, nullâ facta Christi mentione. Molinæi Hypaspistes, Li. c. 5.

Secondly, In the name of Christ, In every thing give thanks through Jesus Christ, See Rom. 1. 8. & 7. 25. Ephes. 5. 20. 1 Peter 4. 11. More of God is discovered in Christ than elsewhere, 2 Cor. 4. 4. He is his Image, our ability and acceptance is from him. For without his Mediation and Atonement our very prayers and praises will become most loathsome unto God. We should see all our mercies to be the fruits of his purchase.

Thirdly, By the help of the holy Ghost; for as we cannot pray, so neither praise God, but by his enabling of us. Open my mouth O Lord, and my lips shall show forth thy praise.

Fourthly, For good and lawfull things; as we are to pray for nothing but what is according to Gods will, so neither to praise God for any thing that is evil, for that were to make God the author of sin.

The manner in general; It must be

1. With grace in the heart, Psalm 103. 1.
2. With understanding in the mind, Psalm 47. 7.
3. With faith in the will. David was most thankfull when he believ'd

God to be his, and to have heard his prayer.

4. With joy and thankfulneſſe, Is any man merry? let him ſing pſalms.

5. With holineſſe of life, a real praiſing of God.

6. By preferring ſpiritual mercies before temporal.

7. With engaging our ſelves to God to walk more to his praiſe, 2 Chron. 15. 11.

8. With humility and ſelf-abaſement, Pſalm 22. Rejoyce with fear and trembling.

We may take notice of Gods graces in us, ſo as to give him praiſe, Pſalm 116. 10. yet we are to be ſenſible of our failings, and of our impotency without new grace.

God expects chiefly to be honoured by the Church, Pſalm 65. 1. & 150. 1. Eph. 3. 21. See Pſalm 22. 23, 25. & 40. 10.

1. Becauſe there he is moſt known, Pſalm 76. 1.

2. There are his greateſt benefits, Pſalm 84. 4.

3. The true members of the Church are only fit to praiſe him, Pſalm 50. 16. & 33. 1. Canticum novum & verus honor malè concordant. Bern.

4. The ſad blows which the enemies have had in all ages, come out of Sion, Amos 1. 1, 2. Joel 2. two laſt verſes. Jer. 51. 19. Obad. v. 17.

We ſhould praiſe God,

1. Intenſive, with the greateſt ardour and intention, Pſalm 103. 1. & 36. 10.

2. Extenſive, with all praiſe, Pſalm 9. 14. and for all mercies, Pſalm 71. 7, 8.

We muſt be thankfull,

1. In our hearts, Pſalm 103. 1, 2. there muſt be a conſideration of the benefits we have received, Pſalm 139. 14. Col. 4. 2.

2. We ſhould value and truly eſteem of them, 1 Cor. 9. 15. 1 Theſſ. 3. 2. Ezra 9. 13. Pſalm 40. 5. & 71. 15.

3. Have a ſenſe of Gods love in our hearts, Col. 2. 7.

4. Joy in the goodneſſe of God to us in the mercies he vouchſafeth, 1 Samuel 2. 1. 1 Chron. 29. 7.

Our praiſes of God ſhould be,

Firſt, Real, not oral only, we ſhould live to his glory. We ought yet to praiſe God with the voice.

1. For the quickning of our affections, Pſalm 63. 5.

2. For fixing and compoſing the mind.

3. That we may provoke others to the praiſing of God.

Secondly, Cordial, not hypocritical, Pſalm 104. Praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul, and all that is within me praiſe his holy name. We ſhould honour God as the author of all our mercies.

Thirdly, Zealous and ardent, as our Petitions for mercy.

Fourthly, An abiding praiſe, as long as we have any being.

Fifthly, They muſt be coſtly and chargeable, David would not offer to God that which coſt him nothing.

There muſt be two attendants of our Thankfulneſſe:

1. Charity to Gods poor.

2. Mortification of our beloved ſins.

Sixthly, It muſt be a God-admiring praiſe, Ezra 13. 11. Micah 7. 19.

Seventhly, A ſoul-humbling praiſe, 2 Samuel 18. 17. as Jacob, I am leſs than the leaſt of all thy mercies; Elizabeth, Who am I that the mother of my Lord ſhould come to me?

Eighthly, Our thankfulneſſe muſt bear ſome proportion with our mercies, if they be free and extraordinary, ſo ſhould that be too. Hezekiah is blamed for not returning proportionably to his mercies receiv'd.

Motives to praiſe God:

1. The freeneſſe of Gods love to us either in perſonal or publick mercies.

2. Our deſert of the contrary.

3. The glory of God is all he looks for, and therefore he commands this. He alſo takes a particular account of all his mercies, Judges 10. 11. and will call us to an account for them, Matth. 25.

4. It

4. It is a practical duty.

5. It breedeth in the heart love to God.

6. It is a duty which contains all excellencies in it, Psalm 147.1.

1. Good.

2. Profitable to us, the way to get more blessings, Phil 4.6,7. Ingratitude forfeits blessings, Deut. 28.47,48. 1 Tim. 4.4

3. Pleasant, 1. To God, Psalm 69.30,31. Ephes. 5.18,20. 2. To us, 1. Joy is the ground of it, we never thank God till our hearts be warmed, Luke 1.46,47. 2. True joy is the consequent of it, Phil. 4.6,7.

4. Comely, a debt: 1. It is all we can do to God, 2 Samuel 7.19,20. 2. It is all God requires, 1 Thes. 5.8.

Hitherto of the distinct kinds of prayer in regard of the matter.

Now follow the distinctions of prayer in regard of the manner.

First, It is either mental, or vocal, or mixt.

1. Purely mental, when the mind is elevated to God in holy desires, though the tongue be silent, 1 Samuel 1.13. Exodus 14.15. Spiritus gemit ad Deum. Luther. Psalm 31.22. Clamor fit ad Deum non voce sed corde. Hitherto belong holy ejaculations, short desires darted up to Heaven by way of petition, admiration, consolation, when one is in some imminent danger; of which see Mr Whites Power of Godliness, part 3. chap. 3.

2. Purely vocal; without conjunction of the heart: when a man useth the words of prayer, but attends not to the matter or end of his prayer, as ignorant persons.

3. Mixt, when one prays both mentally and vocally.

Mental or vocal prayer is directed to God.

Words are used,

1. That men might know the desires of one another's hearts, and so partake of the mutual prayers one of another. Vide Aquin. 2a 2æ. Quæst. 83. Art. 12.

* Mental prayer is the best remedy against lightnesse, and indifferency of affections; but vocal prayer is the speech & instrument of communion.

2. Because they not only declare, but also stir up and increase the affection of the heart. Angels have no tongues, beasts have no reason.

3. They are a special means to keep the minde from wandering, and to hold it close to the matter. We are more sensible of an interruption in our words than thoughts.

4. Because God is to be glorified not onely by our mindes, but also by our bodies, and so with our voice, 1 Corinth. 6.20. Our tongue is called our glory, Psalm 16.7. & 10.8. because it is that instrument by which we are to set forth Gods glory.

Secondly, It is sudden or composed:

Sudden prayer is, when upon some present occasion the heart is instantly lift up unto God, whether it be only by some sighs in the heart, or by some few words uttered, Neh. 2.4. These sudden prayers are called ejaculations, upon all occasions we must lift up our hearts unto God.

Composed prayer is, when a Christian setteth himself to make some solemn prayer unto God, whether it be in Church, Family, Closet, Field, or any other place, Daniel 6.10.

Thirdly, Prayer is conceived or prescribed:

Conceived prayer is that which he who uttereth the prayer inventeth and conceiveth himself, as are most of the prayers recorded in Scripture.

Prescribed prayer is when a set constant form is laid down before-hand, and either composed by others, or read out of a book or paper by him that uttereth it, and that whether he be alone, or in company. Vide Robins. Apol. Brownist. c. 3.

We should question the lawfulnesse of Conceived prayer, though Samuel prescribed. For one to be able to expresse himself, upon all occasions, both publickly and privately (many can privately, who have not the confidence to do it publickly) readily and fluently: but pertinently and reverently withall, is to be accounted a great gift: which though all men have not (not the best, the learnedst sometimes) yet all men should desire and honour it in others, that are orthodox and religious. Doctor Casaubons Vindication of the Lords Prayer, pag. 100, 101.

Vide Amesde consc. l.4.c.27. Quæst.5. & Perkin. lib. 2. de casu. consc. cap.7. Quæst. 3.

The use of set formes of publick Prayers, and Administration of the Sacraments in Churches is lawfull, but the prescription thereof ought not to suppresse or interrupt the exercise of the gift or grace of conceived, extemporary Prayers or Thanksgivings by Ministers, nor to hinder the constant preaching of the Word, neither should it be imposed, as a thing of absolute indispensable necessity. It is I say (these cautions observed) lawfull and warrantable.

There were set formes of confession of prayer and praising God. See 92. and 102, and 136 Psalms. 2 Chron. 20. 21. & 29. 30. Constantine the great prescribed a set forme of prayer to his Souldiers, which is set down in Eusebius his fourth book. In Origens time there were set formes of prayer used in the Church. Dr Preston. See Mr Balls Power of Godlinesse, l. 5. c. 5. and the Bishop of Armagh his Direction to the Parliament touching the Liturgy and Episcopal Government in Sanderson Reign of King Charles, pag. 263. and Mr Hooker his Treatise of Prayer, pag. 59. to 83. and Mr Bowers 4th Dispersion of Set forms given in ten propositions. The Book of Psalmes was the Jewish Liturgy, or the chief part of their vocal service wherewith they worshipped God in the Temple, 1 Chron. 16. 7. See Ezra 3. 11. Mr Mede on Revel. 8. Horum Exempla Reformata passim ad Bibliorum aut Psalterium sororum calcem annexerit sua Liturgia & nonnulla, quæ Basilius Magnus Ecclesiæ, & in extra communionem ac ministerium publicè constituerat. Marcel. *de Theol. Bishop Brumhall in his Answer to Milton, saith, It is evident, that they, who use not set forms in publick prayer, direct them more to the hearers, than to God, studying for expressions of their own parts, while others that use set formes have their affections more enlarged, and not yoked to the search of words. He saith further, That there was a Liturgy in the Church of the Jews, hath not been denied by any learned man; and it appears by the Titles of many of Davids Psalmes, that they were used by the Singers in the ordinary service of the Church. That Christians used the Lords Prayer, and other set forms cannot be denied; the Church never wanted Liturgies. See Dr Taylors Apology for Liturgy.

Mr Norton

Mr Norton in his Answer to Apollonius, cap. 23. saith, That the use of formes prescribed lawfull in themselves, may be unlawfull from unlawfull circumstances, as the tyrannical manner of imposing them repugnant to Christian liberty. He doth not disallow the imposing of them simply, but onely the tyrannical manner of imposing them, as repugnant to Christian liberty. And after he saith, Formulæ præscriptæ patent adeo compositæ, ut nihil omnino in precationis substantia mutetur, & absque omni repugnantia. That is to the very thing, that it is a prescribed form, is not repugnant to a lawfull prayer. He saith, There is not an approved example of set formes in scripture. Nor is there an example of the contrary practice, viz. that in the ordinary meetings of the Church prayers were then conceived. He saith, Formulæ præscriptæ parvitatem ministerii indicant. Not the prescribed formes, but a Church's unpreparednesse to frame them, is that which is unlawfull to use. Using these prescribed formes, gives occasion to that inconvenience. He addes, Si sufficiat ex libro precari, Quid non & ex libro concionari sufficit? If it be sufficient to use a prescribed forme of prayer to be lawfull, another to be sufficient.

Some will allow of no prayer, except with, or by a form. See M. Hodges his Epist. Dedicat. to his Treatise of prayer.

Publick, and set solemn publick assemblies

Publick assemblies is the custome of a Congregation, as of a Colledge, as the [illegible] Assemblies, Christ [illegible] went frequently to their publick Assemblies. See Luk. 2. 42. & 19. 47. Act. 2. 1.

Videt Ecclesiam incepisse statim ab ipso exordio suum [illegible] Grot. in Act. 2. Cœtum in cœtum & Congregationem Tertullian. Apol. cap. 39.

We should make special account of publick prayer, Malachi 1. ult. See Psalm 135. 2. God commanded the erecting of the Tabernacle and Temple.

1. The more publick prayer is, the more honourable and acceptable it is to God, Psalm 40. 10. I have spoken, I will declare this in the great Assembly.

2. It is more powerfull. See Deut. 28. 10, 11. Jonah 3. 8. For unto servile, there is a double promise to publick Ordinances, Exodus 20. 24. of Communion and Benediction.

3. It is an especiall means of mutuall edification, for thereby we stir up one and, and influence the affections of one another; the Saints enjoy a great part of their holy communion and comfort in it.

There were three times observed in the time of the Prophets, Dan. 6. 10. See Acts 3. 1. & 10. 3, 10, 30. Psal. 55. 18. Seven times in a day do I praise thee, said David. From this de-

Amyraut in Apol. pour cause de la Relig. Sect. 7. saith, There ought to be publick Assemblies where the whole world may be instructed in common by those to whom God hath committed the charge, and that those which separate from those Assemblies, separate from the Communion of Gods, and break the unity of his Church. And this was judged so necessary by the Apostles and ancient Christians, that they always practised it notwithstanding the Edicts of Emperours, and all the persecutions they made to hinder them: Desirum conventus ob insitam quandam defectionis, [illegible] Christi Dominique sui domus. We should pray concerning England,

1. That the Lord would continue his Gospel to our posterity when we are dead and gone, and that Popery may never be established here.

2. That the Lord would find a way to settle Religion, and to suppresse damnable errours.

3. That all the people of God may be one as God and Christ are one.

4. That the Lord would establish a righteous Magistracy, that may be nursing Fathers to the Church.

5. That there may be a blessed Succession of godly Ministers.

6. That the power of godliness may be amongst the people of the Nation.

Reasons for prayer in a Family. There are Family-sins and Family-wants. See 1 Sam. 20.29.

Private prayer is that, which is made by [illegible] together, 2 Kings 4.33. Luke 9.28. Acts 10.30. or by one alone, which may be called secret prayer, Matth. 6.6.

I will here give reasons both for prayer in a Family, and also for secret prayer.

I. For prayer in a Family:

1. There is a need of it. The Family hath need of peculiar blessings which are to be sought by prayer, and it receiveth many blessings, for which peculiar thanks are to be given in the house.

Families are the foundation of Cities and Churches, if they be good, Congregations, Cities will be good. Reformation must begin here. See Reiners Precepts for Christian practice, p. 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95.

2. There is profit and honour in it; it bringeth Gods blessing into his house, 2 Sam. 6.20. a Christians house is [illegible] Gods Church, Rom. 16.5. Philem. 2. The Apostle therefore calls the Families of [illegible] godly people Churches, because they had this domestical service of God, as well as the Church their Ecclesiastical. See 1 Cor. 16.

It is said Jeremy 10.25. Curse the families which will not call upon thy Name, as well as the Kingdomes! And again, they shall mourn over him every family apart. Our Saviour went about with his apostles (which was his Family) to pray.

This [illegible] one of the Reasons why husbands should dwell with their wives, that their domestical prayers be not hindered, 1 Pet. 3.7.

Reasons for secret prayer. What advantages secret and also publick prayer have. See Robins. Essays. Observ. 48.

It is requisite also to joyn secret prayer both to publick prayer in the Church, and private prayer in the Family. Christs precept, Matth. 6.6. practice, Mark 1.35. Col. 4.2. 1 Thess. 5.17.

Fifth, Prayer is a part of Gods worship; The Scripture bids us, Pray continually, manifestly alluding to the continual burnt Sacrifice which was twice each day offered. See Exod. 29.38, 39. & 30.7, 8. therefore every man should pray by himself twice a day; Christ teacheth us to say the 4th Petition to pray every day, that is, every day of our life; and his example also may teach us this duty, Matth. 14.23. his example bears the force of a precept in things moral, and the practice of the Saints, Daniel 6.10. Acts 10.2.

It conduceth much

1. To enlargement of heart, Gen. 32.24. Luke 22.41, 44.

2. Makes

2. Makes way for ſweet experiences and manifeſtation of Gods love, Daniel 9. 20,21. Acts 10. 3,4.

3. It is a great ſolace in afflictions, Job 16.20. My friends ſcorne me, but mine eyes powr out teares to God.

4. It is a great trial of the ſincerity of our faith, love, fear, Job 27. 10.

5. Great promiſes are made to it, Job 22.21. Mat. 6.6.

Secondly, Every morning we have received Gods ſpecial bleſſing, and every evening we have need of it, therefore are ſo oft at leaſt to addreſſe our ſelves to ſolemn prayer.

Prayer ſhould be clavis diei & ſera noctis, the key to open with in the morning, and the bar to ſhut with in the evening. God is little beholding to him that will not bid him goodmorrow, and good even.

Thirdly, All things muſt be ſanctified by prayer and thankſgiving, therefore the common labours of the day and reſt muſt be ſo ſanctified.

Fourthly, We may ſo more freely powr out our whole hearts unto God: Every one hath particular ſinnes to acknowledge, and particular wants to be ſupplied, 2 Cor. 12.7.

Fifthly, This both gives the beſt evidence of the uprightneſſe of a mans heart, and argueth a great familiarity with God, and is moſt comfortable.

Sixthly, This was Gods end in powring out his Spirit, Zach. 12. 10, 12, 13, 14.

It is not meet to utter ſecret prayer ſo loud, as any other ſhould hear it.

Fifthly, Prayer is ordinary or extraordinary.

We muſt ſeek for direction in the morning and proteſtation at night

Extraordinary prayer is that, which after an extraordinary manner, even above our uſual cuſtom, is powred out before God.

This conſiſteth partly in ardency of affection, and partly in continuance of time.

1. Ardency of affection, Jonah 3.8. Esay 52.12. Luke 22.44. compared with Heb. 5.7.

2. Continuance of time, when prayer is held out longer than its uſual and ordinary houres, Genes. 32. 24. 2 Samuel 12. 16. Luke 6. 12. Joſhua 7.6. continuance in time muſt not be ſevered from fervency in affection. For though prayer may be extraordinarily fervent, when it is not long continued, as Chriſts prayer, Luke 22. 24. yet ſeldom are prayers long to continue, except it be hearty and fervent; for then it will be no better then much babbling, Matth. 6.7.

Extraordinary prayer is extraordinarily powerfull and effectual, either for preventing and removing great judgements, or for obtaining ſingular bleſſings.

Another thing conſiderable in prayer is the geſture:

Geſtures have the force and uſe of ſpeech in prayer; kneeling or proſtrating the body ſpeaks humility: Beating the breſt, ſmiting upon the thigh, are ſignifications of ſorrow: Lifting up the eyes and hands to Heaven argue a fervent and attentive Spirit.

Precari manibus junctis ritus eſt eorum, qui ſe demittunt & humiliant, quaſi ligatis manibus ſiſterent ſe captivos coram majeſtate divina. Rivetus.

We have the examples of Gods ſervants, Dan. 6.10 Ezra 9.5. Acts 7.60. & 9.40. & 20.36. and our Saviour Chriſt himſelf for kneeling in prayer on the bare ground, Luke 22.41. and Paul alſo Acts 21.5 the holy Ghoſt expreſſeth the duty of prayer in this phraſe of kneeling unto God, Eſay 2.14. & 45.23. Mr Hildersham on Pſalm 51.7. Leſt. 115.

Hac manuum ad Deum Coelum verſus elevationes, veluti quaſdam indicia, unde expectarent auxilium ſibi implorantes teſtari fidem ſuam, quod acceptum eſſent à Deo neceſſaria, & ſe quaſi mendicos coram Deo ſiſtere manum elevantes, ut aliquid acciperent. Piſcat. in Exod. 9. 29.

Lewis manner habitus & geſtus ſuis orantium, Exod. 9.29. Hos. 1 15. 2 Tim. 2.8. Pſalm 141.2.

The poſture of our bodies in prayer hath as great variety, as the Ceremonies and Civilities of ſeveral Nations come to. The Jews moſt commonly prayed ſtanding: ſo did the Phariſees and the Publican in the Temple. In every Countrey, whatſoever by the cuſtom of the Nation, was a ſymbole of reverence and humility, of ſilence and attention, of gravity and modeſty, that poſture they tranſlated to their prayers. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, part 2. Sect. 12.

We

We should (if conveniently we may) kneel at prayer because we have no gesture in use amongst us so fit to expresse our humility by, there is a plain Commandment for it, Psalm 95.6.

2. They that cannot kneel should stand or shew as much reverence with some other gesture and posture of their bodies as they can: for standing there are directions, Neh 9.25. Mark 11.25. and for the bodily reverence that they should strive to shew which can neither kneel nor stand up; we have old and weak Jacobs example, *Gen.*47.31. M^r Hilderſam.

Sitting, though among us it do not seem a fit gesture in publick prayer, yet privately it hath been and may be used, 2 *Sam.*7.18. 1 Kings 19.4. B. Down. of prayer, chap.21.

Our gesture in prayer must be reverend and humble, Psalm 95.2. Ezra 9.5,6. Kneeling is the fittest gesture to expresse both these, and most proper to prayer. If conveniently we cannot kneel, then stand. This gesture Christ warranteth, Mark 11.25. Luke 18.13. the poor humble Publican stood when he prayed. To pray sitting, leaning, with hat on head, or any such like gesture, when no necessity requireth, argueth little reverence and humility. D^r Gouges Whole Armour, Part 1. Sect. 11.

* At prayer Bishop Morton never kneeled upon a Cushion (I think) in all his life, nor ever prayed but upon his knees. D^r Barwick on 2 *Tim.*4.7,8.

We believe kneeling at prayer to be lawfull, laudable, and the best gesture wherein to present our devotions to God; yet for standing at prayer there is,

First, Scripture, Matth. 11.25. Luke 18.11.

Secondly, A Decree in the first Nicene Council.

Thirdly, A continued practice of it in the Church for many hundred of yeares together. M^r Ley of the oath of the sixth Canon.

Therefore the people of God, in the Scripture, pray alwayes, either standing or kneeling, unlesse some special cause move them to prostrate themselves. That their ordinary posture was standing, appears by Matth. 6.5. Mark 11.25. Luke 18.2. Nehem. 9.5. *Jer.*15.1. & 18.19. Job 30.20. M^r Thorndikes 3^d Book of the Laws of the Church.

The ancient Jews (as Drusius on *Matth.*6. observes) prayed standing, whence ſtatio was one of the seven names of prayer, and that saying of Rabbi Judah, Sine ſtationibus non ſubſiſteret mundus.

Geſtum (in genere) tales debent eſſe, ut ſanctè exprimant internos affectus.

We must use that gesture which may best set forth and declare our humble heart and holy affection unto God. M^r Perkins.

Our Saviour Christ prayed kneeling, Luke 22.41. sometimes groveling, Mat. 26.39. sometimes standing, John 11.41. Luke 18.13.

It

It was an ancient custome in the primitive times, as Tertullian notes in his Apologetick, ad orientem regionem precari, to turn themselves unto the East when they said their prayers; and hath continued so till this very time most of our Churches, except some of late, being built accordingly. Dr Heylins Answer to Mr Burton, pag. 136.

The praying towards the East was ancient, but afterward changed, because of the abuse of the Manichees, who superstitiously worshipped the Sunne rising in the East, yet was it afterward revived again by Pope Vigilius about the year 537. B. Mortons Protest. Appeal, lib. 4. cap. 28. Sect. 1. Vide Voss. de Orig. & Progress. Idol. lib. 2. cap. 3. See Dr Duncon de Adoratione Dei versus altare, pag. 24, 25, 26. for it, and Mr Cawdrey against him, against it, pag. 9.

animi motus. Quia autem in omni oratione requiritur humilitas singularis, idcirco communis gestus solennis orationis, debet esse huic dimissioni consentaneus, qualis est declinatio capitis, & maxima ex parte, genuflexio, corporis insurvatio aut erectio. Sessio per se non est gestus orandi: quia nullam exprimit reverentiam neq; in Scripturis approbatur. Ames. Cas. Conse. l. 4. c. 18.

The Jews prayed toward the West, Ezek. 8.16. the gate of the Tabernacle looked toward the Sunne. The Holy of Holies opposite to it was turned toward the West. Whence they necessarily adored the West, which Moses did for that cause, lest if they had turned toward the Sunne, they should have adored the Sunne it self rather than God. But Christians ne viderentur judaizare, prayed toward the Sun rising, neither only for that cause, but because Christ was called by the Prophets, The East, Luke 1.78. so the LXX translated the Hebrew word, Jer. 23.5. Zech. 3.8. & 6.12. Scaliger. Eleuch. TRIHÆRES. Serar. c. 20 Tertullian in his Apology writes, that the Heathens thought that the Sun was adored by Christians, because they prayed turning toward the Sun. Vide Seldenum de Dis Syris Syntag. 2. cap. 8.

For the place of prayer, we must know that the prayer sanctifies the place, and not the place the prayer. We read of the Saints prayers made in the Temple, 1 Kings 8.23. in their own houses, Acts 10.30. on the house top, Acts 10.9. in the open field, Gen. 24.63. in a mountain, Luke 6.12. in a ship, Jonah 1.6. in the midst of the Sea, vers. 22. in a fishes belly, Jonah 2.1. in a journey, Gen. 24.12. in a battel, 2 Chron. 14. 11. That promise, Matth. 15.19. is not made to the place, but to the persons gathered together by common consent in Christs Name.

For the time. It was an ancient custome (saith Drusius de Tribus Sectis Judaorum, lib. 2.) to pray thrice a day, Psalm 55.18. which houres they define, the third, the sixth and the ninth. The third answers to nine before noon. The sixth is our twelfth, the ninth the third after noon.

If any man should say that a good man should do well to pray three times a day, he said true, and yet it were better to pray five times, and better yet to pray seven times, but if he does, yet he must leave spaces for other duties. But his best measures for publick and solemn prayer, is the custome of the Church in which he lives, and for private, he can take no measures, but his own needs, and his own leisure, and his own desires and the examples of the best and devoutest persons, in the same circumstances. Dr Jer. Taylors Worthy Communicant, ch. 5. Sect. 4. Quest. 3.

The Papists place Religion in their canonical hours, as though God were more ready to hear one time of the day than another. B. Dawn. of prayer, c. 27. Vide Bellar. de horis operibus in partic. l. 1. c. 11, 12, 13.

See Mr Thorndike of the Laws of the Church, chap. 21.

After prayer there must be a waiting upon God, and we must observe whether he grants or denies our requests, that we may accordingly either be thankfull or humble. Psalm 5.38. & 85.8. & 102.1, 2. & 104.27, 28. Hab. 1.

Christ saith, John 17. Father I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

Reasons why the people of God should specially observe the returnes of their prayers.

First, Prayers are the chief actions of our life, the first fruits of our Regeneration, Acts 11.15. Paul being a Pharisee prayed before, that was no prayer to this.

Secondly, The greatest works of God are done in answer to prayer, all the promiſes and threats are fulfilled by it, Revel. 8. 5, 6. & 16 1,

Thirdly, Whatſoever is given to a man in mercy is in the return of prayer, 1 John 5. 14, 15.

Fourthly, Every return is a ſpecial evidence of our intereſt in Chriſt, and of the ſincerity of our hearts.

God anſwers his peoples prayers ſometimes in kind, he gives the very things they ask, as to Hannah, 1 Samuel 1. 20, 27.

Sometimes he denies the thing, yet grants the prayer.

Firſt, When he manifeſts the acceptation of the Perſon and Petition, Geneſis 17. 8, 9.

Secondly, When he gives ſomething equivalent or more excellent, as ſtrength to bear the croſſe, Heb. 5. 7. a heart to be content without the thing, Phil. 4. 5. 1 Samuel 1. 18.

Thirdly, When he upholds the heart to pray again, Pſalm 86. 4. Lam. 3. 44.

Fourthly, When thy heart is kept humble, Pſalm 44. 17.

Fifthly, When he anſwers Cordium deſiderii, the ground of our prayers, 2 Cor. 12. 8.

Perhaps we are not fit yet to receive the mercy, Eſay 30. 18. God loves alſo to ſee us exerciſe our graces a while. Though we think the time long, yet it is not long to God, 2 Peter 3. 8, 9. It ſhews the greateſt degree of the grace of praying, when we continue praying, though we be not anſweted. If we pray as we ought, no prayer ſhall ever be loſt.

When God hath heard our prayers, we ſhould return to him:

1. A great meaſure of love, Pſalm 116. 1.
2. Praiſe, What ſhall I return to the Lord, I will take the cup of ſalvation.
3. We ſhould fear to diſpleaſe him, Pſalm 6. 8.
4. We ſhould be carefull to pay our vows, 1 Samuel 2. 27, 28.
5. We ſhould pray much to him, Pſalm 116. 2.

Chriſt delivered the Lords Prayer at two ſeveral times, and upon ſeveral occaſions; in the former he commands it as a patern and rule of all prayer, ſaying, Pray after this manner; but in the later (ſay ſome) he enjoyneth it to be uſed as a prayer, When ye pray, ſay, Our Father.

If ſo, then would it not follow, that whenſoever we pray, we ſhould neceſſarily (neceſſitate præcepti) uſe that form?

Michael

Michael de Montaigne in the first Book of his Essayes, Chap. 56. Of Prayers and Orisons saith, I wot not whether I be deceived, but sithence, by an especial and singular favour of Gods divine bounty, a certain form of prayer, hath by the very mouth of God, word by word been prescribed unto us, I have ever thought the use of it, should be more ordinary with us, then it is. And might I be believed, both rising and going to bed, sitting down and rising from boord, and going about any particular action or businesse, I would have all good Christians to say the Pater noster, and if no other prayer, at least not to omit that.

Mr Thorndike of the Laws of the Church, Chap. 23. saith, He conceives the Lords Prayer is justly called by Tertullian, Oratio legitima, or, The Prayer which the Law, (that is, the precept of our Lord in the Gospel; When ye pray, say thus) prescribeth, not as if he would have them serve him with no other prayer but this: But, that they should alwayes use this as a set prayer, what ever other occasions they might have, of addressing themselves to God with other prayers.

Robinson in his Treatise of publick Communion, and his Apologia Brownistarum cap. 3. saith, Neither do the two Evangelists use the very same words, neither if that were Christs meaning (to bind men to these very words) were it lawfull to use any other form of words. For he saith, When you pray, that is, Whensoever you pray, say, Our Father; yet he addes, though I doubt not but these words also, being applied to present occasions, and without opinion of necessity, may be used.

Mr White saith, It is lawfull to pray the very words, but not necessary, it may be used as a form, it must be used as a Rule. Sufficerit exprimi in precibus nostris ea in oratione Dominicâ expressa, licet non semper iisdem utamur verbis. Brochm. de Invocat. Dei. Sect. 8. Vide Danæum de Orat. Dom. c. 18.

What is objected against using this as a Prayer, may be said of using the precise words of our Saviour in Baptism and the Eucharist. See Hodges his Apology for the use of the L.P. pag. 87, to 102. and Doctor Casaubons Vindication of the Lords Prayer, as a formal prayer.

Pagets Arrow against the Separat. of the Brownists, chap. 3. Dr Gouge on the Lords Prayer, and others have the like re-

As a just weight or balance serves both for our present use to weigh withall, and also for a patern to make another like the same by it: So the Lords Prayer serves for a patern of true prayer, and also for our present use at any time to call upon the name of the Lord with those words.

semblance, comparing it to the Kings Standard, that is an exact measure it self, and the Rule of other measures.

The Lords Prayer may be used as a prayer:

1. An expresse commandment neither contrary to nature, nor analogy of faith, and agreeable also to the drift and tenour of the place, ought literally to be understood and obeyed. But this is such an expresse Commandment, Luke 11. 2.

2. If Christ had taught onely to pray to this effect, then had he taught nothing but that which Johns Disciples, and all the faithfull practised before.

3. Whatsoever Scripture hath in every respect the form of prayer, that hath been used also as a prayer: But this hath in every respect the form of prayer, as Our Father, Give us, Lead us, and Amen, annexed in the end: Ergo.

4. If those very words are not to be used as a prayer, no Christian for 1500 years and more, did understand our Lords meaning. Vide Tertul l. de orat. Mr Whites Discovery of Brownism.

The Reformed Churches (saith Dr Featley) generally conclude their prayers before Sermon with the Lords Prayer, partly in opposition to the Papists who close up plenius, & verioribus pro clausula suarum precationum, certius est quam ut multis sit demonstrandum. Matth. 6. 9. Id est, solemne fuisse, non enim præcipit Christus verba recitari, quod nec legimus Apostolos fecisse, quanquam id quoque fuerit non fortasse prohibitum, sed materiam precum hinc petere. Grotius in loc. Christus illam orationem docuit, non voluit unice præscribere formulam verborum quibus uterentur observandam: sed exemplar, vel ideam, secundum quam orationes suas dirigere debemus. Hoc inde satis apparet, quod non legamus Apostolos illam formulam unquam usurpasse. Aug. de cons. l. 2. c. 17.

Luk 11.2. Orationem Dominicam adhibitam fuisse

their devotions with an Ave Maria, partly to supply all the defects and imperfections of their own.

Bishop Usher constantly concluded his prayer before Sermon with it.

Almost every word of the Lords Prayer was taken from the writings of pious men of the Jewish Nation, saith Doctor Taylor in his Ductor Dubitantium, l. 2. c. 3. Rule 15.

Object. We never read, that the Apostles used this prescript form of words in prayer, but others Acts 1. 24. & 4. 24.

Answ. It is absurd negatively to prove from examples of men, against that which God in his Word so expressly either commanded or permitted: for we may as well reason thus, We do not read that the Apostles or the Church in their times did baptize Infants: Ergo. They were not then baptized. Or thus, We do not read that the Apostles did pray either before or after they preacht: Ergo. They did it not. Neither can they shew an example where the Apostles prayed before their Sermons.

Though the Apostles did not bind themselves to these words, yet this doth not prove, that they never used the same as their prayer: they might pray according to their several occasions, according to this Rule, and yet with the words of the Rule, so Paget.

The Lords Prayer is so a direction, that it may be lawfully and laudably used as a prayer. Mr Ball in his Catech.

The Lords Prayer is not only for direction, as a patern according to which we are to make other prayers; but may be also used as a prayer, so that it be done with understanding, faith, reverence and other graces necessary to the right performance of the duty of prayer. The Assemblies Larger Catechism.

Bishop Bramhall in his Answer to Milton, saith, The Lords Prayer had been very needlessly prescribed by our Saviour, if it had never been used afterwards, and it had been disobedience in the Apostles, if they did not use it, being by our Saviour commanded. Christ prescribed a set form of Prayer to be used by all his Disciples, as a Breviary of Prayer, as a Rule of their Devotions, as a Repository of their needs, and as a direct addresse to God. This Prayer was not onely a precedent and patern, but an instance of addresse, a perfect form for our practice. Dr Taylors Apology for Liturgy. See more there. That the Apostles (saith he) did use the Prayer their Lord taught them, I think need not much to be questioned, they could have no other end of their desire; and it had been a strange boldnesse to ask for a form which they intended not to use, or a strange levity not to do what they intended.

Vide Bodium in Ephes. 6. 18.

Here two extremities are to be avoided: The first of the Brownists, who think it unlawfull to use the prescript form of these words. The second of the Papists, who superstitiously insist in the very words and syllables themselves. Unlesse it be unlawfull to obey the expresse Commandment of our Saviour Christ, Luke 11. 2 it is lawfull to use these words, yet when Christ Mat. 6. commandeth to pray thus, he doth not tie us to the words but to the things. We must pray for such things as herein summarily are contained, with such affections as are herein prescribed. B. Downam on the Lords Prayer.

Evangelista duo Matthæus & Lucas quorum neuter non optime & callebat, & exprimebat Christi mentem, non eisdem per omnia verbis, in eadem explicanda, ut fuit. Robins. Apol. Brown. c. 3.

Object. 2. This Prayer (say some) is found written in two books of the New Testament (viz. Mat. 6. Luke 11.) but with diversity of terms, and the one of these Evangelists omits that which the other hath written. How then ought we to pronounce it? Either by that which is expressed in S[t] Matthew, or that which is couched by S[t] Luke.

We hold it is lawfull to use the same words as our prayer, either with or without such changes as are to be noted in the Evangelists recording them. If we precisely follow Matthew, it is no offence to Luke: If we use the words as they are in Luke, it is no offence against Matthew. If we vary in phrase from both of them, it may be without offence to either. Our tenet is, that either the same words, or to the same purpose, may lawfully be used of us. Pagets Arrow against the Separat. of the Brownists, ch. 3. Omnino credibile est in Græcis codicibus adjecta ex Matthæo quæ Lucas omiserat, cum non exstet in Latinis antiquis illud, Qui es in Cœlis, item fiat voluntas tua ut in Cœlo ita in terra, quod & Græci codices quidam habuerunt, & ego sic libenter puto à malo. Grot.

Answ.

Answ. If this Argument might take place, when we celebrate the Lords Supper, we must never pronounce the words which Jesus Christ spake in that action, for they are related diversly in four several books of the Scripture. When one of the Evangelists sayes, Remit us our debts, the other expounds it by saying, Forgive us our trespasses. It is indifferent to take either of these two expressions: both of them were dictated by Jesus Christ.

Our Saviour Christ propoundeth this Prayer as a brief summe of all those things which we are to ask. For as the Creed is Summa credendorum, the summe of things to be believed; the Decalogue, Summa agendorum, the summe of things to be done: So the Lords Prayer is Summa petendorum, the summe of things to be desired. Oratio Dominica est formula precandi perfectissima, brevissima & divinissima. Alstedii Theol. Catech. Sect. 13. c. 14.

Many desire a true notion of God in prayer, here is a full notion of him in this prayer; take the Preface and the Conclusion, an All-sufficient God and Father, an heavenly Father, to whom belongeth Kingdom, Power and Glory.

If a man peruse all the Scripture which hath frequently divers formes of prayer, he shall find nothing which may not be referred to some part of the Lords Prayer.

Oratio hæc quantum substringitur verbis, tantum diffunditur sensibus. Tertul. de oratione.

In this forme are comprized all the distinct kinds of prayer: as Request for good things, Deprecation against evil, Intercession for others, and Thanksgiving.

Quotidiè adhuc orationem hanc Dominicam quodammodo fugo, ut insufflatus, libo & mando uti adultus, nec tamen ea satiari possum. Atque etiam dulcior & gratior mihi est ipsa Psalmus, quibus tamen mirificè & unicè delector, quos & maximi facio. Luther. Tom. 7.

These Rules are to be observed in the Exposition of the Lords Prayer:

1. The Lords Prayer is to be directed to the whole Trinity. We believe in and are baptized into the Name of all the Tripity, therefore we ought to invocate the Trinity.

2. Each Petition doth imply some acknowledgemene or confession in respect of our selves.

3. Where we pray for any good, there we pray against the contrary evil, and give thankes for the things bestowed, evils removed, bewailing our defects with grief.

4. If one kind or part of a thing be expressed in any Petition, all kinds and parts of the same are understood, Petit. 4.

5. Where any good thing is prayed for in any Petition, the causes and effects thereof, and whatsoever properly belongs to the said thing, is understood to be prayed for in that Petition, and so when evils are prayed against, their causes, occasions and events are prayed against.

6. What we pray for, we ask not for our selves alone, but for others, specially our brethren in the faith, therefore the Petitions are usually expresst in the plural number, Give us, Forgive us, and Deliver us.

The Preface is laid down in these words, Our Father which art in Heaven.

The Petitions are six in number, all which may be reduced unto two heads,

1. Gods Glory.
2. Mans Good.

The

In petitionibus quæ Deum respicunt, Prima Dei gloriam apprecatur: Reliquæ duæ, rationem Dei glorificandi indicant. Cartw. in Har. Evang.

The three first Petitions aim at Gods glory: as this particle Thy, having relation to God, sheweth.

The three last Petitions aim at mans good; as these particles, Our, Us, having relation to man, imply.

Of those Petitions which aim at Gods glory: The first desireth the thing it self, Hallowed be thy Name: The second, the means of effecting it, Thy Kingdom come: The third, the manifestation of it, Thy will be done in Earth as it is in Heaven: Of those that aim at mans good, the first desireth his temporal good, Give us this day our daily bread. The two last his spiritual good, and that in his Justification, Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespasse against us. 2. In his Sanctification, And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

In the Conclusion or form of praise, three things are acknowledged:

1. Gods Sovereignty, Thine is the Kingdome.
2. Gods Omnipotency, And the Power.
3. Gods Excellency, And the Glory.

All these are amplified by the perpetuity of them, For ever, which noteth out Gods Eternity.

The entrance or preparation to the prayer contains such a description of God as is meet for us whensoever we addresse our selves to prayer, to have of him in our hearts.

Christ leads us here to direct our Petitions in the terms of affection, faith and fear: in the terms of affection, while we call God Father: in the terms of faith whilst we call him our Father, and by faith make him to be ours in Christ Jesus: and in the terms of fear, whilst we acknowledge his power in Heaven and Earth. Mr Wischart on the L.P.

Affectio filii & patris & potestatis est. Tertul. de orat. Jupiter optimè maximè. Cùm Deum Patrem vocamus; Christi nomen prævenimus. Calvin.

The Preface contains the a description of God to whom we pray, taken, 1. From his relation to us, that he is Our Father. 2. From the place where his Majesty principally appears, that he is in Heavens: The former signifying especially his love; the other, his power; the one his goodnesse, the other his greatnesse; therefore he is both able and willing to grant our requests. A due consideration of these both together is a special meane to preserve in us both confidence and reverence.

God is described partly from his goodnesse and mercy, partly from his greatnesse and Majesty.

In Greek, Oh our Father. The word oh is not in the original. Heavens in the plural number, by which the highest Heaven is understood; it is exprest in the singular number in the third Petition. Piscat. Exeg.

It is some advantage in prayer to look on God as our Father in this general way, Esay 64. 8.

1. This binds us to pray to him, Psalm 145. 15. Acts 14. 17.
2. This common relation draws common benefits, Matth. 6. 25, 26.
3. It gives us much confidence in the power of God, 1 Pet. 4. 19.

Fines proœmii tres, professio nostra fiducia, elevatio animorum, & reverentia Majestatis divinæ. Piscat. Exeg. Aphorif.

Four things are implied in this Preface:

1. Bonitas, the goodnesse of God, he is a Father.
2. Charitas, his love to us, he is Our Father.
3. Existentia, Which art.
4. Majestas, In Heaven.

Our Father] Father is taken, 1. Personally, My Father is greater than I, so the Father is the object of prayer, and each Person in the Trinity. So it is taken there, when Christ saith, Father, if it be possible let this Cup passe from me.

Secondly, Essentially, so here, and 1 Pet. 1. 17. when it is put alone, and spoken of in reference to the creature.

God is a Father,

1. More generally, so of all creatures by creation, Luke 3. ult. Job 38. 11.
2. In a peculiar way of his people,

1. By regeneration, Isa. 53. 10. Heb. 2. 13. James 1. 18. There must be likenesse and life.

2. By

2. By the grace of Adoption, *Ephes.*1.5. The language of the Spirit of Adoption is Father, *Rom.*8.15.

God is a Father to us only in Christ, and in him only we are adopted and born again, *Ephes.*1.5. John 1.12. *Gal.*4.4,5,6. Adoption is an act of the free grace of God the Father upon a believer accounting him a Sonne through the Sonship of Christ.

All by nature are strangers and enemies to God, have lost their Sonship: Adoption is to take a stranger and make him his Son, Extranei in locum liberorum sumuntur, saith the Civil Law.

2. It is an act of the free grace of God the Father, none but he hath power to adopt, *Eph.*1.5. 1 John 3.1. Men adopt because they want a posterity. God had a natural Sonne, *Prov.*8.30. and the Angels which never sinned were his Sons by Creation.

3. An act of God upon a believer, none are adopted but believers, John 1.12. *Gal.*3.26. till then we are enemies to God.

4. The nature of Adoption lies in accounting a man Sonne, and that by God, 1 John 3.10.

5. Through the Sonship of Christ, imputing Christs righteousnesse to us makes us righteous, God accounts you also sons through Christ, he gives you the priviledge of sons, John 1.12. He is the heir of all things, *Heb.*1.2. John 20.17. God is first his Father, then ours.

Christ brings this about:

1. By his Incarnation, was our brother, *Heb.*2.11.
2. He died to purchase this Title, Gal 4.4,5.
3. By his Spirit, he works a union between us and him, *Heb.*2.11.

It is lawfull and sometime profitable for a child of God to say in his prayer, My Father, to declare his particular confidence, not his singular filiation, yet it never ought to be so used exclusively in respect of charity, but we ought usually to call upon God as our Father in common. Damasus de orat. Domin. cap. 8. gives three reasons why we are taught by Christ to call God Our Father rather in common than peculiarly my Father.

Pater noster, id est, eorum qui credunt; eorum qui per eum sanctificati, & gratia spirituali nativitate renati, Filij Dei esse cœperunt. Cyprian. de orat. Domin. Hac vox noster, ad solos pios & fideles est restringenda, Psal. 147.19. Mat.5.45. Damasus de orat. Domin. c. 8.

In secret prayer which a man makes by himself alone, he may say, My Father, or my God, but not in publick, or with others: yet in secret prayer there must be that love and affection toward others, which must be expressed in publick, and with others.

This possessive particle is used:

1. To comfort us in the sense of our interest in God.
2. To mind us of the common interest of all the Saints in God, *Eph.*4.16.

To awaken our love to the Saints, must pray for others as well as our selves.

Brotherly kindnesse is exprest,

1. In a fellow-feeling of their miseries.
2. In wishing some good to them we do to our selves, *Ephes.*6.18.

If God be your Father, know your priviledges, and know your duty.

First, Know your priviledges:

1. Stand and admire the bottomlesse and matchlesse love of God, 1 John 3.1. not only in giving his natural Son, but in making us his adopted sons.

2. Consider the blessed condition you are advanced to. You have God for your Father, Christ for your elder brother, the holy Ghost the Spirit of Adoption to dwell in you, the Angels for your guardians, *Heb.*1.14. You are brought into a state of spiritual liberty, *Rom.*8.23. John 5.24. are secured from total and final Apostasie, John 8.35.

Habet oratio Dominica Rhetoricam suam. Nomen ipsum Patris pro nobis orat, quia Patris est Filiis necessaria providere Patris est, Filiis ignoscere. Maldonat.

Pater quid negabit Filiis, qui jam dedit quod Pater est? Homo perfectè credens se esse hæredem & Filium Dei, non diu superstes maneret, sed statim immodico gaudio absorberetur. Luther. See Rom. 8.32.

Father

A Father is full of pity and compaſſion, Pſalm 103.13. a Father is apt to forgive and paſſe by offences, Father forgive them, ſaid Chriſt, *Matth.*6.14. A Father is kind and tender, good and helpfull, you may then expect proviſion, protection, *Matth.*6.32. an inheritance from him, Luke 12.32. As he gave his Sonne in pretium, for a price, ſo he reſerveth himſelf in præmium, for a reward. Tam Pater nemo, tam pius nemo, ſaith *Tertullian. Gods love towards us is ſo much greater than the love of earthly parents, as his goodneſſe and mercy is greater, Iſa. 49.15. & 63.15. Pſ. 27.10. Luke 11.13. He loves you with the ſame kind of love that he loved Chriſt, John 17.23. when you die you go but to your Father, at the day of judgement our Adoption is perfected, Rom. 8.19,23. 1 John 3.2.

* Lib. de panit. cap. 8.

Pſal.22.1. Mat. 26.39. Joh.20. 28. Rom.1.8.

Secondly, Know your duty, Where is the filial diſpoſition you expreſſe towards him? Do nothing but what becomes a child of ſuch a Father.

This relation of a Father teacheth us theſe things:

1. To call upon God reverentially, *Mal.*1.6.
2. To call upon him with a holy dependance, *Mat.*6.26,32.
3. To call on him with confidence, *Mat.*7.7,8,9,10,11.
4. To call on him with an obediential frame, with ſubmiſſion to him, in reference both to good and evil, *Heb.*12.9.

Rules to know whether I am the child of God, or have received the Spirit of Adoption:

Firſt, Where ever the Spirit of Adoption is, he is the Spirit of Sanctification, 1 John 3.8,9,10.

Secondly, Where the Spirit of Adoption is, there is liberty, 2 *Corinth.*3.17. Pſalm 51.12.

Thirdly, The ſame Spirit that is a Spirit of Adoption, is a Spirit of Supplication, *Rom.*8.15.

Fourthly, This workes in that mans ſoul a childe-like diſpoſition, makes one tender of his Fathers honour, willing to love, and obey him, ingenuous in prayer.

Fifthly, It raiſeth up a mans heart to expect the full accompliſhment of his Adoption, Acts 3.19. 1 John 3.16. *Rom.*8.32. He deſires to partake of the inheritance to which he is adopted. Heaven is a purchaſe in reference to the price Chriſt hath paid, an inheritance in reference to his Sonſhip, Eſay 63.15.

All the Perſons have an intereſt in our Adoption: God the Father predeſtinated us to it, Epheſ. 1.15 and gave us to Chriſt. Chriſt hath purchaſed our Adoption, *Gal.*4.5. The holy Ghoſt applies it, and he is called the Spirit of Adoption, becauſe it is the worke of the Spirit to make us the Sonnes of God, and he ſeales it alſo.

Object. I am full of doubts, whether God be my Father or no, what ſhall I do in this caſe?

1. If your Regeneration and Adoption be not clear, come to him as a Father by creation, as the Father of Chriſt.

2. If you cannot come to God in the confidence of a child, yet come to him in the obedience of a child.

3. Call upon him as Fatherleſſe, *Hoſ.*14.3.

Which art in Heaven] In Heaven ſets forth his Greatneſſe, Pſalm 12.4. Gods Being, Majeſty, Glory, Job 4.19.

Heaven is all that ſpace which is above the earth: of which there are three parts, Cælum Aereum, Gen.1.8. James 5.18. Æthereum, Gen.1.14. Empyreum, Acts 3.21. The firſt, Air, in which are the Birds, Fowls of Heaven. The ſecond is that Heaven wherein the Stars are, which are called the hoſt of Heaven. The third is the ſeat of the bleſſed, and throne of God, called Cælum Empyreum, becauſe of the light, 1 *Tim.*6.16. and the third Heaven, 2 Cor.12.2. in reſpect of the two lower, and the Heaven of Heavens, Pſalm 115.16. 1 King 8.27. But this place is eſpecially to be underſtood of the third Heaven, 2 Cor. 12.3. which is the place of the Lords habitation, Deut. 26.15. 1 Kings 8.30. His Throne, Pſalm 11.4. Pſalm 103.19. *Mat.*5.34. See Mat 7.21. & 18.10.

God

God is every where repletivè, filling all places, Jer. 23. 24. but yet ſo every where totus, wholly. Yet after a more ſpecial manner, he is ſaid to be in Heaven, Pſalm 20. 4. & 123. 1. becauſe there he manifeſteth his glory, thence he ſendeth down his bleſſings and judgements, Rom. 1. 18. From Heaven, eſpecially the glory of his Power, Providence, Juſtice, Mercy, and other Attributes, is declared, Pſalm 19. 1. & 76. 8. Pſalm 102. 19, 20. James 1. 17. This is the moſt convenient place to ſet forth his excellencies, becauſe of the amplitude, ſublimity and purity of it.

He is not included in Heaven, or locally circumſcribed there, 1 King. 8. 27.

In the third Heaven eſpecially God declared his chiefeſt Majeſty as in his Kingly Throne.

The Reaſon of Gods dwelling in Heaven is double:

1. Becauſe he hath fitted that place for this purpoſe.

The Heathens have this notion by nature, that God is in Heaven, therefore in diſtreſſe they lift up their hands and eyes thitherward. Some ſay, that Heaven is every where, and every place is Heaven, why did Chriſt then aſcend? why was he carried up when he went to Heaven? Luke 24. 51. If Heaven be every where, there is no need of aſcending to get into Heaven. In my Fathers houſe there are many manſions. Vide Zanchium de operibus Dei part. 1. l. 1. c. 4. q. 1.

2. Becauſe he hath fitted thoſe perſons which are there for the beholding and enjoying of his glory, for here we cannot ſee God and live, but there it ſhall be our life to ſee and behold him.

There God is owned moſt by his Angels, and glorified Saints, and moſt injoyed, Pſal. 16. 11.

The great work in Prayer is to lift up our hearts to God, Pſalm 123. 1. Lam. 3. 4.

There is a double advantage by getting the ſoul up to Heaven.

1. It is a means to free us from diſtractions and doubts, though we have little on earth, yet we have a God in Heaven.

2. It imprinteth a holy awe and reverence upon our hearts, Eccleſ. 5. 2. Gen 8. 27.

Our prayers ſhould carry a correſpendence with our great aime, to be with God in Heaven, Col. 3. 1. Mat 6. 32, 33.

What an excellent place is Heaven then! how bleſſed, glorious! That muſt needs be the beſt place in which the moſt excellent perſons do inhabit, now God dwelleth there, that therefore is the beſt and moſt deſirable place. There nothing is wanting that may ſet forth the glory of his Majeſty, and may conduce to the compleat bliſſefulneſſe of thoſe that are admitted thither. The felicity of Heaven is known and apprehended under this notion, that it is Gods dwelling place, and that his glory ſhineth there more clearly than the light of the Sunne ſhineth here.

We ſhould therefore labour,

Firſt, To get Heaven aſſured to our ſelves, that we may know certainly that we ſhall have an inheritance there, and our habitation with God. We muſt not live ever in this lower world, of neceſſity we muſt depart out of this place, and be tranſlated into another. Wherefore our care ſhould be, that when we depart hence, we may be received into thoſe everlaſting manſions. Nature teacheth every thing to labour after its own perfection, and to ſtrive after that which is the beſt thing whereof it is capable, for when it hath once obtained that, then doth it find it ſelf fully ſatisfied and contented, and not till then. Now the being with God, and beholding his glory in Heaven, is the beſt thing whereof a reaſonable creature is capable. Wherefore we muſt put forth our deſires and endeavours to get this moſt perfect and abſolute eſtate, then which there cannot be a better thing beſtowed upon us, Our life is hid with Chriſt in God; This is the inheritance of the Saints in light, and of thoſe that are ſanctified by faith in Chriſts blood; We muſt therefore ſeek to get ſuch a faith in Chriſt as ſhall ſanctifie us, and then it will alſo ſave us. We are ſaid to be made meet for this inheritance; we are not made meet for Heaven, but by being made holy. Holineſſe is a being ſeparated to God, when the mind is wholly given up and ſet upon God, ſo that it endeavoureth to know, love, fear and delight in him above all things, then it is holy, and faith in Chriſt, if it be true, will work this ſanctity, and draw up the ſoul thus to God, and knit it to him.

Matth. 6. 33. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4.

Secondly, When we have gotten assurance of it, we must take comfort in it, rejoycing in the hope of the glory of God, as those do which are justified by faith. We must injoy Heaven by hope, before we come unto it, we must fill our selves with a certain expectation of coming in due time into the glorious Palace, and this expectation must enlarge our hearts with consolation, so that we may alwaies, and in all estates account our selves happy, and be satisfied in the certain looking for of our admission in due time into this blessed place of glory, where we shall see God face to face.

1. We should often meditate on heavenly things, Col. 3. 1. Ego non curo quid agat mundus, Papa, Cæsar, solum respicio Christum, & misericordiam ejus ad salutem. Lutherus.

2. Make them our end and scope, Phil. 1.4. *Mat.*16.20.

3. Intermeddle with the things of Heaven, God, Christ, Eternal life.

4. We should overlook and despise these present things, and live above them.

5. We should be still aspiring after heavenly things, often contemplate the glory of Heaven, 2 *Cor.*5.9.

6. We should be in a constant expectation of Heaven, and the glory there, and be breathing after that perfection, which is to be found only there, Phil. 1. 8, 12, 13.

7. We should endeavour to live a life here, suitable to the life of Heaven, Phil. 3. 20. place all our happinesse and contentment in God, *Heb.*12.23.

Thirdly, We must learn also most earnestly to desire to be in Heaven: whosoever hath hopes of any good thing, he cannot but long for the satisfying of his hopes. If Heaven be Gods dwelling-place, sure all that love him must desire to be where he is, that they may see his glory, and be happy in seeing it. We must long to be uncloathed of this flesh, and to be cloathed upon with our house which is from Heaven. Yea we must sigh and groan earnestly after the revelation of this glory and participation of this blisse. Paul longed to depart, or to loose and to be with Christ, he compareth himself to Sailers, or men that in a Ship lye waiting for a fit wind to carry them unto that place for which they are bound. Heaven is our Countrey, our Inheritance, there is our Father, our eldest Brother, there be all our Brethren and Sisters, there is our Head, and ought we not long to be there? Thus we must be heavenly-minded, because God is in Heaven, whom to enjoy is better than to enjoy all that is besides in earth and in Heaven. A bad man when he cannot tarry any longer here, out of a confused conceit, that Heaven is a good place, would fain go thither, but a good man out of the apprehension of the presence of God there, must even wish to leave earth at the best, and to be with God in Heaven. Indeed this desire must not nor will not be an impatient desire that cannot brook delayes, but a staid desire, that is willing above all things to be there, but contented to be here so long as God will, out of the assurance that he shall come thither at last, and in due time.

Phil.3.19,20.

* Some divide the Lords Prayer into seven Petitions, so Augustine in Enchir. and some other ancient writers, Luther and the Lutherans, and most of the Papists. Vide Aquin. Sum. 2a, 2æ Quæst. 83. *Art.*9 and some of our later Divines, but the usual division into six is the most natural, and observed by divers of the ancient Fathers, and many modern Divines.

Now the Petitions follow, which are six * in number. They are all most brief, yet so that in their manner they comprehend all things to be desired, and that in a most fit order. Either they concerne more properly and immediately the glory of God, without respect of our own profit: or else our own good, and mediately the glory of God.

In the three former we say, Thy Name, Thy Kingdome, Thy Will; in the three latter, Us and Our. Those which immediately concern the glory of God, are set down in the first place, and without a copulative, the three latter which concern our good are tied together with conjunctions.

Prov. 16. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 31.

This order teacheth us, that the main end of all our desires and actions should be the glory of God.

Petition I. Hallowed be thy name.

This Petition (saith Dunæus well, De Orat. Domin. cap. 11.) is most like to that precep-precept Exod. 20 7. It obtains the first place (saith Aquin.) because it is the end and scope of all the other Petitions. The glory of God ought to be the end of all our actions and prayers.

The Name of God is that, whereby God is made known. For that is the end and use of a name, to make known and distinguish that person whose name it is. By the Name of God all those things are meant whereby he is made known to us.

1. His Titles, Exod. 3. 14, 15 & 6. 3. Importing his being, Jehovah, Jah, Ebjeh, his strength, El, Elohim, his authority; he is called The Lord of Hosts, High, the Highest. These two Lord, God, are most usual in our tongue.

2. His Attributes, Exod. 34. 5, 6, 7.

3. His holy Ordinances, Psal. 58. 12. 1 Kings 6. 12. or his Word doth sufficiently, distinctly and fully make him known to us, Psal. 138. 2. John 5. 39. See Acts 9. 15 and 21. 14.

4. His Works, Rom. 1. 29. of Judgement, Psal. 9. 16. Isa. 30. 27. of Mercy, Isa. 48. 9, 10, 11.

5. Gods Name is his Glory, Exod. 9. 16. Psal. 8. 1. so Name is taken, Gen. 11. 4. & 12. 2.

To hallow or sanctifie, signifies either to make holy, or to acknowledge and declare holy, the latter is here meant. That which is holy in it self, is said to be hallowed by esteeming, acknowledging and [illegible] this is all the hallowing or sanctifying that can be done to the Creator. We [illegible] Name of God [illegible] in our hearts, words and deeds [illegible] and reverently.

God is said to be

1. Magnified, Luke 1. 46. that argues inward esteem and sense of his greatness.

2. Justified, Luk. 7. 29.

3. Glorified, John 17. 5. that is, to make him known to others.

4. Sanctified or hallowed.

Some say, the great thing we desire in this Petition, is, that the Name of God may be a sacred and precious thing among men, that there may be honourable mention of God in the world.

Gen. 2. 19, 20. Thy Name, there seems to be a secret opposition between our name and his. The Name of God is put for God himself, Joel 2. 23. Deut. 28. 58. Hereupon the Hebrews use to say, His Name is himself, and he is his Name. Summa est, ut operum summa haberi Dei honorem qui dignus est, ut nunquam de ipso loquantur vel cogitent homines sine summa veneratione. Calvin Instit. lib. 3. cap. 20. Sanctificare nomen Dei, est, sanctum agnoscere, separare ab omni contumelia & profanatione, praedicare, illustrare & glorificare. Pink & scopus hujus petitionis est serium promovendi gloriam Dei studium & desiderium. Communia hujus petitionis sunt Psalmus 67. & mera Christi pro se, pro Discipulis & tota Ecclesia. Eglard. Medulla S. S. Theol. To sanctifie God, is to acknowledge him, to look upon him, and honour him as a holy God. To know God in his glory is to glorifie him, to know him in his holiness is to sanctifie him. Damasc. De orat. Domin. observes, That some from John 12. 28. do think, that to glorifie and sanctifie the name of God are the same. He grants, that in that place, and often they are taken for the same; yet he saith there is some difference between them. Nam gloriosum Deum saepe etiam homines infideles: sanctificant autem soli pii & fideles.

To sanctifie God is

1. To know him to be a holy God, Prov. 9. 10. and to keep this knowledge always active in us. Out of him no evil can arise, he can take no pleasure in sin, he favours the [illegible], he loves all holy persons and things, is the fountain and rule of holiness in the creature. We should keep this knowledge always active in us, it should be the matter of our meditation day by day; the Angels continually give God the praise of his holiness.

What it is to sanctifie, See Doctor Gouge on Heb. 2. 11. Sect. 101.

2. To observe and admire his Holiness in all his ways and works, Lev. 10. 3. Exod. 15. 11.

3. To come into the presence of God in all services with a holy heart, Heb. 9. 14. The sanctification of the person is before acceptation of the service in the second Covenant.

God looks at the principle from which all your services flow.

Sanctus hujus Petitionis est, ut quaecunque in mundo gerantur ad Dei gloriam cedant, & quidem ut pii omnes hoc sponte & studio agant: impiorum vero facta, tametsi ex se gloriam divinae [illegible] nomen omnipotentis Dei sapientia ad ipsum gloriam, licet autem nolentibus aut non cogitantibus, conferquentur. Chemn. in Harmon. Evang.

Here it is said, let it be sanctified or hallowed, not only by our selves, but others, we must expresse our sense of their dishonouring of him, Isai 5. 16.

4. In our coming into Gods presence to look [illegible] Gods holinesse as the fountain of holinesse to us, Exod. 29. 43.

5. To strive to be spiritually pure in the inward man, Isa. 8. 13. 1 Pet. 3. 5.

6. To eye the rule of holinesse in every thing we do, Lev. 10. 3.

7. To be humble and abased before God in all our holy duties, because of their imperfections, Dan. 9. 7. Semper peccatum etiam dum bene facimus.

8. To bring the Lord Jesus Christ with us when we fall into Gods presence, 1 Pet. 2. 5.

Fourthly, we [illegible] those things which are to be desired in the first place, and with the greatest ardency, that concern Gods glory.

This is therefore set first, to shew, that this must be the end of all the things we desire of God. When we pray Thy Kingdome come, we desire ultimately Gods glory, Psal. 145. 10, 11. When we pray that Gods will may be done, we desire his glory, Rom. 12. 1, 2. When we beg daily bread, it is, that God may be honoured by us in the use of temporall [illegible] 1 Cor. 10. 31. When we ask remission of sinnes, it is, that God may be honoured thereby, Rom. 3. 23, 26. When we beg freedom from temptation, it is, that God may be honoured thereby, Prov. 30. 8, 9. When deliverance from evill, that he may be honoured, Psal. 50. 15.

Reasons.

1. As we are reasonable creatures, the glory of God is the end of our Creation, Prov. 16. 4. Rom. 11. 36. The end is first intended by any rationall Agent [illegible]

2. As we are [illegible] God in the first place, Matt. 1. 6.

3. [illegible] should be the first.

4. Our [illegible] that the glory of God should be prefer'd before the creatures good, John 12. 27, 28.

5. From the nature of prayer, all the acts of spirituall life are to God, Gal. 2. 19. Rom. 8. 15.

6. Love to God will put us upon it, it seeks the good of the partie beloved, Psal. 69. 9.

The necessity of putting up [illegible] request to God.

Those that would have Gods Name glorified, must seriously deal with God about it.

Reasons.

First, From the utility of it, that we may with calling God to witnesse, warn our selves of our own duty.

Secondly, That we may have a due [illegible] godly grief for Gods dishonour, Psalm 119. 136.

Thirdly, That we may come to [illegible] blessing when he is glorified.

There is a necessity of dealing with God this way.

1. In respect of persons.

1. Our selves, because we need direction, 2 Thes. 3. 5. Rom. 8. 26. quickning, being backward to this duty of glorifying God, Psal. 51. 15. uprightnesse and sincerity, Phil. 2. 21. submission to God, Rom. 14. 9. humility, that we may give Christ the glory of our graces, 1 Cor. 1. 29. holinesse, that we may not be [illegible] to God, Mat. 5. 16.

2. Others, a Christian is not content to [illegible] God himself.

1. We acknowledge Gods dominion over the spirits of men, that this is often given him, Neh. 1. 10, 11. & 2. 7, 8. & 27. 16.

2. Discover much love to God and to others.

2. In regard of things or events.

1. We [illegible] to his glory, Numb. 14. 15, 16.

2. Our [illegible] his wise and powerfull government.

Petition II. Thy Kingdome come.

In this second Petition we have the primary means by which the Name of God is sanctified among men, viz. by the coming of his Kingdome.

Here are three things,

1. The [illegible] of his Kingdome.

2. The

2. The note of distinction and appropriation, thy Kingdome.
3. The supplication about it, come.

This word Come is diversly to be expounded according to the divers significations of the Kingdome of God. The universall Kingdome, or Kingdome of power is said to come, when it is manifested and made apparent that all things are guided by the power and providence of God. The Kingdome of grace is said to come unto us, when it is either begun and erected in us, or continued and increased amongst us. The Kingdome of Glory, when the number of the Elect is accomplished, and all Gods enemies subdued, and all the Saints possessed of that glorious place.

Kingdome in generall is a government or state of men, wherein one governs, and others are subject to him for their good. The Kingdome of God is a state in which God hath supreame power, and men are so subject to him that they partake of eternall happinesse by it. The Kingdom, not only to distinguish it from the Kingdom of men, but Satan.

To come properly notes a motion, whereby a man goeth from one place to another.

Kingdome is taken.
1. Subjectivè, for the Country.
2. Objectivè, for the people in that Country.
3. Formaliter, The Kingdome for the exercise of the power. 4. Consequenter, for the visible glory. There is, First, of Grace. Secondly, Of Glory. 1. The Kingdome of Grace. There is, First, For the internall priviledges, Luke 14. 17. Secondly, External part. 1. Formally, The whole manner of Christs government of his Kingdome, Matth. 13. 24. all comers, [illegible] in Spirit, Matth. 5. 3.

2. Subjectively, The Church, 1. [illegible] 1. 24. The power in Spirit have a right, 1. To the [illegible] 3. The promises of grace, Luke 1. 53.

Five things are meant in this Petition:
1. Let the Gospel, the Scepter of this Kingdom be published and propagated.
2. Let the subjects of this Kingdom be converted.
3. Let the graces of this Kingdom be increased.
4. Let the enemies of this Kingdom be subdued.
5. Let the glory of this Kingdom be hastened.

Let it come universally in us and others, come where it is not yet come, and in greater power where it is already come.

Christs Kingdom is two-fold:

Triplex regnum Christo competit.
Primò, Regnum illud naturale, quo, qua Deus, in omnes creaturas absolutum habet & exercet imperium. Deinde Regum

1. His Universal Kingdom by which he ruleth over all creatures, even the Devils themselves, called the Kingdome of power and providence, so he is called King of Nations, Jer. 10. 7.

2. Peculiar, his Mediatory Kingdome, which he exerciseth over his Church as King of Saints, Revel. 5. 3. which is such an order wherein Christ doth rule, and the faithfull obey to their special good and benefit, or that government in which God most graciously ruleth, and we most willingly obey to our everlasting good.

[illegible] quo hanc in Mediator & beatos, [illegible] Deus Zebaoth, fungitur. Tertium est, Regnum tri-[illegible] officio resignato, in æternum potietur. [illegible] illud & tertium, ipse est cum Patre & Spiritu Sancto [illegible] secundum ipsius est progressus. Hoc dicitur [illegible] regna, scyptra, gloria unius, ejusdémque regni ex- emplaria ac exercendi ratio unica, [illegible] ob voces istas [illegible]. Bisterf. contra Crellium. lib. 1. Sect. 2. cap. 26.
Regnum essentiale, & œconomicum. See Master Gillespies Aaron and blossoming, l. 2. c. 5.

This is two-fold, 1. Of Grace, in the Church Militant. 2. Of Glory, in the Church Triumphant.

In the former grace raigneth, the other is called the Kingdome of glory, both in respect of the place and persons, Col. 1. 13.

The former is the way to the later.

The Kingdom of Grace is that government whereby the Lord doth effectually rule in our hearts by his Word and Spirit. The Kingdome of Glory is the blessed [illegible] ly in Heaven.

The Kingdom of Grace may be considered:

1. [illegible] externally administred in the means of grace, Matth. 21. 43.
2. As internally receiv'd, that grace of God which rules in the hearts of the elect, Luke 7. 21.

The

The Kingdom of Glory is either,

1. Inchoate, and begun in the moment of death, Luke 23.43. Phil. 1.22.
2. Consummate, when time and death are perfectly abolish, Mat 25.34.

The particular things which we desire are these:

1. That God would cast down the Kingdom of Satan; all men by nature are his subjects, until they be brought out of the kingdom into the Kingdom of God, and then Gods Kingdom is said to come to them.

2. That God would plant both outwardly and inwardly the external face and inward substance of his Kingdom where it is not yet, Cant. 8.8.

3. For them that are planted, we pray that God would supply to them what is wanting, and continue and increase what good they enjoy.

4. For the Church in perfection, that the Ministers of the Gospel may be enabled to preach and professe the truth with all courage, Be faithfull unto death.

Pis:ator in his Exegesi Aphorism. Apoc. 10. saith the Kingdome of glory is here properly and chiefly meant, and that the third Petition speakes of the Kingdome of Grace, but Danæus and others expound it more largely.

The Gospel is called,

1. The Word of the Kingdom, Mat. 13.19.
2. The Keyes of the Kingdom.
3. The ministery of the Kingdom.

The Gospel of the Kingdome of God. Mark 1.14.

4. The means whereby men are set in it, therefore we pray that it may run swiftly, 2 Thess. 3.1. and be a light to the world, and that God would by his Spirit (2 Cor. 10.4,5.) make it efficacious, that men may see their misery, the glory of the Kingdom, and give themselves wholly to God, that God would make Magistrates nursing Fathers and Mothers, Esay 49. 23. that the Seminaries of learning may be pure and religious, rightly ordered, religiously governed, and well seasoned with truth: for Ministers, that the Lord would send forth labourers into his harvest, and give them utterance, that they may open their mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the Gospel.

Regnum in duo illustrari, amplificari & augeri regnum Dei tum in nobis ipsis, tum in rebus omnibus. Danæus de orat. Dominic. cap. 12.

Stabiliri petimus Regnum ipsum Dei, everti vero quæcunque illud impedium. Id. ibid. Matthew 9. 38. Ephesians 6. 19.

Christs Kingdom is carried on by degrees, Psalm 110.1. 1 Cor. 11.21. it is a growing Kingdom, Esay 9.6,7. The Scripture seems to intimate, that in the later dayes there shall be a greater enlargement of Christs Kingdom, Revel. 11.15. and that it shall begin with the calling of the Jews, Micah 4.7,8. But Christs great imperial day, when all creatures shall be brought into a subjection to him, is at the day of judgement, Esay 45.23. Phil. 2.10.

The Kingdom of God is promoted and carried on in the hearts of men:

1. More generally,
   1. When the grace of God comes into mens hearts by conversion, Mat. 21. 31. Mark 12.34.
   2. When the work of grace is more deeply confirmed.
   3. When it is increased and augmented, Mark 4.30. Phil. 1. beginning. 2 Thess. 1.3.
2. Particularly,
   1. When there is an increase of spiritual and saving knowledge, Col. 1.9,10.
   2. When there is a progresse in the work of mortification, Eph. 4.22. when not only sensual but spirituall lusts are mortified, as self-love, unbelief, spiritual pride.
   3. When the habits of all saving grace are increased, when one acts with delight, Psalm 138.4,5. Facility, 1 John 5.18. Readily, Psalm 57.8. Speedily, Psalm 119.6.

In earth as it is in Heaven. Which words

Petition 3. Thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven.

This Petition is fitly subjoyned to the former.

The

The Kingdome of God is taken:

1. For his government over us, ſo the connexion is proper, after we prayed that God would rule us, now we pray for ſoft and pliable hearts that we may be ruled by him, God being an abſolute Sovereigne, it is fit he ſhould be obeyed perfectly.

2. For the priviledges of his government, eſpecially the conſummation of it; by doing of his will we enter into his Kingdom, *Matt.*7.21.

The will of God though but one, is conſidered ſeveral wayes:

First, As ſecret. This will of God is ever juſt, although the reaſon of it be incomprehenſible to us. But the Petition is not meant of this,

1. Becauſe no man can know it till it come to paſſe, whereas knowledge is neceſſary to the doing of this will.

2. Becauſe it is irreſiſtible and cannot be withſtood by any man, *Prov.*19.21. *Rom.*9.19.

3. There are no promiſes for the performing of that, ſeeing a man may do the ſecret will of God and periſh, as Judas.

4. A man may do the ſecret will of God, and yet ſin, and deſire * what is diſagreeable to the ſecret will of God, and not ſin, *Deut.*29.29. Vide Scultet. *Exercit. Evang. l.*2. *c.*33.

are an appendix to the three firſt Petitions, for though it be added to the third which concerneth the doing of Gods will, yet the ancient Fathers refer it alſo to the two former. So that we are to pray no leſſe, that Gods name may be ſanctified in earth as it is in Heaven, and that his Kingdom may be conſummate in earth as it is in Heaven, then his will be accompliſhed in earth as it is in Heaven. Biſhop Andrews on the Lords Prayer. * 2 Sam.3.3. compared with 1 King 8.18. In the firſt Petition the ſoul puts on the affections of a child, and diveſts it ſelf of its own intereſts, offering ſelf up wholly to the glorification of God. In the ſecond it puts on the relation and duty of a Subject to her legitimate Prince, ſeeking the promotion of his regal intereſt. In the third ſhe puts on the affection of a Spouſe, loving the ſame love, and chooſing the ſame object, and delighting in union and conformity. Dr Taylor, Great Exemplar part 11. Sect. 32. Quum proximè petierimus, ut Dei regnum ac imperium in Domino Jeſu Chriſto in omnia patefieret ac innoteſceret: hic jam poſtulamus, ut patefacto Dei imperio pateant quoque omnia. Sic Chriſtus Matth. 3.36. jubet nos quærere primum Regnum Dei, quod ſuperiore petitione comprehenſum eſt: deinde juſtitiam ejus, qua in vera & ſincera voluntatis Dei obedientia, & ſubjectione noſtra poſita eſt. Id quod hac precatio continet. Danæus *de orat Domin.*c.13.

Secondly, As revealed. The will of God ſetting down what we ought to do, believe, and leave undone.

That very ſame will of God, which being hidden from us is called the ſecret will of God, being manifeſted to us is called his revealed will.

There is, 1. The will of Gods Purpoſe, called Voluntas beneplaciti, this is to be admired and adored. There is no reaſon of this but his own pleaſure. This is infallible, *Rom.*11.33. called the counſel of his will, Act.4.28. Immutable and effectual, ſhall take place in all ages, 2 Tim. 1.9.

The will of God as manifeſted is,

1. The rule of all Chriſts obedience, Pſ. 40.8. of the Saints obedience in Heaven, as in this third Petition, and of the Saints obedience on earth, Rom. 12.2.

2. Of his Word, called Voluntas ſigni, what ever it is by which he hath declared his purpoſe, his counſel, commands, prohibitions, threatnings, promiſes; his Commandments are to be obeyed, his counſels to be followed, his threatnings to be feared, and his promiſes believed.

3. Of his Providence; this conſiſts in his permiſſion of evil and operation of good; the one is to be ſubmitted to, the other to be acknowledged, Heb. 12.9. No life is worthy the name of life till we be ſubject to God, then we live the life of grace and comfort. He is better and wiſer than our natural parents, and our obligation to him ſtronger.

See Mr Strong on Acts 21.14. from p.16, to 35. Our active obedience reſpects Gods Law and Commandment, our paſſive his providence.

Be done] It is ſet down impersonally to ſhew the extent of our deſire.

By doing of Gods will he means, the things he hath commanded, agreeable to his will; by ſaying, In earth as it is in Heaven, the right doing of his will is meant, purely, readily, willingly, zealouſly, reverently and continually. Dr Chuderton on *Mat.*7.21.22,23.

The note of appropriation, Thy Will contradiſtinct to all others, to our own wils, Epheſ. 2.3. the will of Satan, John 8.34. 2 Tim. 2.26. or the wils of men, 1 Pet. 4.2.

1. We

1. We beg both a heart to do it, *Deut.*5.29.
2. Skill to do it, Psalm 143.10.
3. Strength to do it, *Heb.*13.21.

* A double trope, 1. The place put for them that are therein, 2. A general is put for a particular,

In Earth] That is, by men dwelling upon Earth *.

As it is in Heaven] By the creatures in Heaven, the Angels, their habitation being put for them, Psalm 103.20,21. as here is not a note of equality, but of quality and likeneſſe, as 1 John 3.3. Forgive us as we forgive them that treſpaſſe againſt us, not that our forgiving is a patern for God.

in the ſame manner, though not in ſo compleat a meaſure. Qua ſimilitudine nimirum explicat, quam perfectè obſequium Deo præſtari, & ab hominibus reddi poſtulemus, quantum nempe & quale ab ipſis beatis Angelis ac Spiritibus eidem Deo in Cœlo exhibetur. Danæus *de orat. Dom. c.*13.

This is added,

1. To ſweeten our ſubjection to Gods will; we on earth are not held to a harder Law than they in Heaven, the Angels obey his will.

2 To ſhew us the reaſonableneſſe of our obedience; we would partake of their happineſſe, therefore muſt imitate their holineſſe.

3. That men might propound excellent paterns.

4. To teach us, that we are not only to look what we do, but in what manner, and with what hearts we go about it, *Prov.*16.2.

The Angels, 1. In all their worſhip have high and glorious apprehenſions of Chriſt, Eſay 6.1. & *Ezek.*1.26. eſpecially of his holineſſe, Eſay 6.26. *Revel.*4. See 2 *Chron.*29.1. 1 Cor. 14.25.

2. They are not acted by their own ſpirits in their ſervices, Ezekiel 1.19,20. See *Cant.*4.16. *Rom.*8.14.

3. They are abundant and conſtant in duty, Pſalm 103.20,21. they cry day and night.

4. They are harmonious in their worſhip, Ezek. 1.6. the Curtains in the Tabernacle had their hooks and taches: See *Zech.*14.9.

5. They are zealous in all their ſervices, therefore they are called Seraphim, they go and come as lightening, Ezekiel 1. 14. See Rom. 12. 11.

6. After all their ſervices they give an account to God, Ezekiel 9. 11.

They obey God (ſaith Danæus) Lubentiſſimè, citiſſimè, fideliſſimè.

Here we pray for grace and ſtrength to obey Gods will in all things.

1. Chriſt wholly gave himſelf to do Gods will, John 5.40. Luke 2.49.

2. Conſider Gods right to us as Creator, Preſerver, Redeemer, 1 Cor. 6.20. we are his workmanſhip, 1 Peter 4.3. Cant. 2.7.

3. Conſider our own incapacity, we are not able to guide our ſelves.

4. The benefit which accrueth to us by doing his will, ſhall have Gods favour here, Acts 13.22. and glory with him hereafter, *Prov.*13.13.

This Petition depends on the firſt as it is a means tending to that end which is there propoſed, on the ſecond becauſe it is an effect and complement alſo of that Kingdom.

Gods will is,

1. Really good, Deut. 33. 16.

2. Eſſentially, originally, the meaſure and rule of goodneſſe, Omnis boni bonum.

3. Perfectly good without any mixture of evil, *Rom.*12.2.

4. Immutably and infinitely good, Job 23.13.

5. Effectually, he brings good to paſſe, Pſalm 135.6.

6. Supreamly and ultimately.

Petition IV. Give us this day our daily bread.

Very fitly is the hallowing of Gods name, the coming of his Kingdom, the doing of his will, ſet before the requeſt of outward neceſſities, becauſe we ſhould demand them rather in reſpect of his glory, that he might thereby have a name and Kingdom here in earth, and his will performed, rather than we to have therein our neceſſities relieved. Knewſtub upon *Mat.*6.

Our

Our Saviour according to the use of the Scripture (which commonly handleth the shorteſt firſt) diſpateheth this Petition that concerneth the preſervation and maintenance of this preſent life.

A man muſt live before he can live vertuouſly, therefore we pray for the maintenance of this preſent life.

Panis nomine comprehenditur omne genus alimenti & quicquid præter ea ad neceſſariam huius vitæ ſuſtentationem requiritur. Gen. 3.20. Prov. 27.20. Luc. 14.9. Noſtrum, hoc eſt propium, ille unum tollet qui ad nos à bonitate divina per legitimos modos redit: quotidianum tantum vult nos Chriſtus petere, quantum quotidiè ad neceſſariam vitæ ſuſtentationem ſufficit notitia, qui ſumus Filij Dei & fratres in Chriſto, quouſque ? tantum bodie. Egardi Medulla S.S. Theol. Panis vocatur intelligitur quæcunque ad hanc vitam ſuſtinendam, Emicen Græcis propriè ſignificat, quod nobis ſuſtinendis aptum & accommodatum eſt. Ex quo liquet, peti hac nomine ut quæcunque ad hanc vitam oportuna & idonea ſunt, nobis ſua quoq; tempore à Deo miſericordiſſimo concedantur. Cartw. in Harm. Evang. Notandum vocabulo panis per Synecdochen ſpecies hic intelligi quicquid ad corpus in hac vita ſuſtinendum neceſſarium eſt ac conducit. Piſcat. Exeg. Authorif. Panis vocabulo omnes accipiunt hoc loco pro omni eo quod nobis ad vitæ hujus ſuſtentationem neceſſarium eſt. Sic Deut. 8.3. Act. 2.46. Gen. 28.20. Prov. 30.7. Unde & panem à Græco erat quidam deduxit propterea putant. Damas de orat. Dom. c. 14.

Others divide the Petitions thus:

1. Into thoſe of Supplication:
   1. Gods glory as the end.
   2. The coming of his Kingdom as the chiefeſt means.
   3. Our ſubjection to that.
   4. Our comfortable ſubſiſtence, that we may be in a capacity to glorifie God, and make this, the laſt of ſupplication.
2. Deprecation,
   1. For evil committed.
   2. That evil may not be admitted.

We are firſt taught to aſk temporal things:

1. Becauſe it is an eaſier matter to depend upon the providence of God for the maintenance of this life, than to rely on his mercy for the ſalvation of our ſ[illegible] and therefore the Lord would have faith trained up by the eaſier, that we may [illegible] to repoſe our truſt in him for the greater.

Ut noſtram infirmitatem ſublevaret, & gradatis ad majora nos reduceret, à facilioribus ad difficiliora, à terrenis ad cœleſtia. Damas de orat. Domin. cap. 135.

2. Becauſe the things of this life are amongſt thoſe things which we aſk of the leaſt value, therefore they are caſt into the middle rank, this order is inverted, Prov. 30.7,8. B. Down.

This is an expreſſe Petition for good, as the three former are: but the two laſt are deprecations from evil. It was therefore requiſite that all the good things to be craved ſhould be mentioned before the evils againſt which we pray. The things craved in the two laſt Petitions are to be obtained in this life. In this life if pardon of ſinne and freedom from Satans power be not had, they can never be had, it is therefore that life be firſt prayed for, and ſuch things as are requiſite for the preſervation thereof. The Lord by placing temporal bleſſings, whereof we are more ſenſible, before ſpiritual, doth endeavour by degrees to raiſe up in us a deſire of ſpiritual bleſſings, which though they be more needfull, are leſſe ſenſible. The Ruler whoſe ſonne Chriſt healed, was thereby brought to believe in Chriſt. Dr Gouges Guide to go to God. John 4. 53.

Dantur ſeu donantur quæ gratuita benignitate nobis conferuntur. Itaque ex mera Dei gratia victum vitæ terrenum nobis ab eo dari fatendum eſt. Damas de orat. Domin. c. 14.

We may aſk temporal bleſſings if lawfully,

1. For the order, not in the firſt place, Hoſeah 7.4.
2. As to the manner, in a moderate proportion, Prov. 30.8. 1 Tim. 6.8.
3. With humility and ſubmiſſion to Gods will, James 4. 13.
4. For a good end, Pſalm 119. 1.
5. From the mercy of God, not plead merit.
6. To give liberally to beſtow, and ſo it implies two things:
   1. That the thing given be good, for a gifteleſſe gift is no gift.

2. That it be bestowed freely. The Lord bestows upon us freely the good things of this life.

First, God gives us:

1. The possession of them, the primitive and original right is his, Psalm 24. 1. & 115.16. Acts 17.26. *Deut.*6 17,18.

2. Gives us a right and title, Dominium politicum fundatur in providentia, Evangelicum in gratia. Wicked men have not only a civil right before men, but a providential right; only believers have a Covenant right, and that by Christ, *Heb.*1.2. 1 Cor. 3. latter end, 1 *Pet.*4.3. We beg here a Covenant-right, that we may enjoy them as gifts of Gods fatherly love.

3. The continuance of them, Job 18. 40.

4. Leave to use them, Hosea 2. 9. Haggai 2. 18.

5. Ability to use them, life and strength, Numb. 11.33.

6. A sanctified use of them, 1 *Tim.*4.5.

7. A blessing upon the use of outward contentments, Psalm 106. 15. Acts 15. 14, 17.

Secondly, He gives them freely, Psalm 103.25.

1. He gives these mercies to those that can do nothing for them, Psalm 145.16.

2. To those that will not serve him, Esay 1.3, *Mat.*5.45.

3. Those which do service cannot merit any thing of God.

By Us is meant every one; here we beg for our selves and others.

This day] That is, as Luke expounds it, for a day: Quantum hunc diei sufficit, so much as sufficeth for this day, or as others expound it, According to the day: that is, Give unto us that which is fit and convenient for us in this our present estate.

In asking for temporal blessings Christ hath tyed us to this day:

1. That we might pray to God every day, 1 *Thess.*5.19.

2. There should be family-prayers every day. Give us.

3. To make way for thankfulnesse every day, Psalm 68. 19.

4. To shew us that every day we should renew our dependance upon God for temporal blessings.

5. That we should not be solicitous for to morrow, *Mat.*6.30.

6. That worldly things should be sought in a moderate proportion.

7. Christ would retain us up in the uncertainty of our present life, James 4. 13.

8. To awaken our desires after heavenly things, John 6.20.

Our daily bread] Bread is said to be ours,

1. When we are in Christ * and have title to it in him. God put all things in subjection under him, *Heb.*2.

2. When it is gotten by good means in a lawfull calling, Eph. 4.28.

3. When it is lawfully left or given us, or we are heir to it.

4. That which we lawfully possesse and use to the praise of God; that is not ours which we should give to the poor.

* Wicked men have a civil right and title to the things of this life, so that men cannot take them from them, nor a divine, as gifts of bounty and common favour, but as gifts of the Covenant. 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Bread by a Synecdoche signifieth not only food (in which sense it often used, Gen. 21. 54. Exod. 18. 12.) but also all other commodities of this life, serving either for necessity or Christian delight, Prov. 30. 8. Noster panis appellatur, quia nobis datus est a Deo. Damasc.

By bread some understand Christ, because this is set before the two other Petitions. So Mr Finch in his sacred Doctrine of Divinity on the Lords Prayer, and gives divers reasons for it, and so many of the Ancients, as Damascen shews.

Others expound it of the Sacrament, as Cyprian, but this being a platform of prayer, earthly blessings must necessarily be here comprised, otherwise there should be no petition for earthly blessings. So Damascen, Vives, and Dr Conge. Others the word of God. See Viret on L. P.

Daily] That is, that bread which is fit and meet for our substance and our condition and state of life, answerable to that *Prov.*30 8. That the Lord would grant us every day, whatsoever shall be the necessity of that day, giving alwayes the things of the day. Kornfub on Matth. 6. Some think this day hath respect to all the Petitions.

Some expound ἐπιούσιον supersubstantial, or above substance, that is, that bread, which is above substance, and better than all wealth and riches, meaning thereby our Saviour Christ, John 6.33. But the word it self, if we derive it from εἰμὶ, signifieth rather agreeing to our substance, than exceeding above substance, as the Greek Authors. So Basil (as Daneus shews) expounds it, Tale, aptum & corporis substantiæ commodum atque aptum.

It signifies that portion of temporal things which thou hast assigned as most fit and convenient for us, so Beza interprets it, Panem cibarium, vel panem nobis sustentandis idoneum, Bread fit for meales, or convenient to sustain us. This Exposition is the safest, because it is made by the Greek writers, and also because it agreeth with the Syriack interpretation, Da nobis panem necessitatis nostræ. R. Davidis. See Dr Sanders Guide to go to God. Vide Petavii Dissertat. Eccles. l. 2. c. 9.

As ἐπιούσιος a word like unto this, was first devised by the Septuagint, so was ἐπιούσιον in this prayer made by the Evangelists in imitation thereof, neither of both being any where to be found but in Scripture only. The prayer of Agur, Pro. 30.8,9. Lechem Chukki the bread of my competent allowance, is the same with this here, which Tremellius well observing in his most elegant Hebrew Catechism, renders this Petition in those very words of Agur, as though our Saviour had reference to them. M^r Medes Diat. par. 4. on Pro. 30.8,9.

Some say that both this place and that Prov. 30.8,9. are taken from that place, Exodus 16.16,17,18.

We pray in General, That the outward blessings and comforts which we doe possesse may be given us of Gods free love and favour, that they may be gifts of the Covenant, Hoseah 7.18. and that we may taste his love in them.

Particularly,

1. We beg contentation.
2. Love of Justice and Righteousnesse.
3. Sanctification of whatsoever we enjoy.

Godly men have a word that they shall be provided for, 1 Tim. 4.8. Matthew 6.33. 1 Cor. 3.22. 2 Peter 1.3.

1. The promises are made to believers in the use of the means God hath appointed, Prov. 10.22. & 12.27. Prov. 28.19,20. Eph. 4.28.

2. The promises of outward blessings are ever made with a reserve to the pleasure and purpose of God, a sufficiency of these things in order to salvation, 1 Cor. 12.11.

3. They are made good answerable to their needs, and the decency of their condition.

4. They are made good to them according to the power and skill that is in them, Deut. 8.18.

5. They are alwayes made with the exception of the crosse, Rom. 8.17. Acts 14.22. Mat. 12.30. Acts 5.41. 2 Cor. 12.9,10.

Considerance self as one man, so we pray for

First, Life and the continuance of it, that makes us possesse the other comforts, and length of dayes is a gift of wisdom, Prov. 3.16.

Secondly, For food the prop of life without which it cannot stand, 1 Tim. 6.8. & 4.3. The utter want of food subjects us to temptations, that the mind cannot think of any thing else, Mat. 4.11.

Under this title Bread are comprised meat and drink; yea food, raiment, sleep physick, and other things necessary for our bodies, even for the curing or preventing the health and strength of them, and such a competency as is given for the pious provision and help for us, for the charge of children and others whom we are bound to relieve, and for all those blessings of God which be hurt appointed for us: together with the continuance of prosperity. Verum est apud Hebræos, panem dici [illegible] apud Græcos [illegible] Sed & alias cibi, vox, & frangere panem & panem edere sumi generaliter pro omni victu, ut apud Græcos comprehendat cibum & potum, & apud nos similiter comporatio. Alsted. de Sacram. Novi Fœd. l. 1. c. 19.

Thirdly, Raiment, clothes to cover the nakednesse, 1 Tim. 6.8. Matth. 6.32. they are necessary,

1. To keep us from cold.
2. To hide our uncomely parts, to make us comely.

Fourthly, Fitting sleep, which is necessary, because
1. It much refresheth the mind.
2. Cheereth the body.
3. Preserveth health.
4. Is the most natural recreation.

Fifthly, Health, strength of body and vigour of mind, Psalm 144.

Sixthly, Habitation, 1 Cor. 11.

Seventhly, Gods blessing on our food, apparel, sleep, physick, labours, Psalm 127.

As we are members of a Family, we pray for these blessings.

1. Peace and quietnesse in the family.
2. Good and comely order.
3. Blessing on the Governours, good servants that are faithfull, diligent, trusty, laborious, wise.
4. Governours are to beg faithfull servants, Inferiours that they may be lawfully protected, rewarded and respected according to their pains.

As members of a Commonwealth we pray for, 1. Protection by the Magistrate from all wrongs.

1. That we may possesse our own with quietnesse.
2. That we may quietly reap what we have sowed.

It is a Question, Whether we may pray for riches. Outward things are necessary, sufficiency or superfluous.

1. There is a two-fold necessity, Necessitas naturæ enough to sustain life, 1 Tim. 6.7. and Necessitas status, Prov. 30.8. Thus a father or master of a family needs more than a single person.

2. Necessities are present or future, one may seek a competency necessary for the relief of his children when he is dead, Prov. 6.6 & 13.22.

2. Sufficient to have what is enough, when we have reasonable plenty so as to make us helpfull to others, Acts 20.35. Ephes. 4. 28. we may ask this with submission.

3. When we have more than enough, abundance, Esay 5.8. Deut. 7. 16, 17.

2. Prayer is but the expressing of our desires, we can lawfully desire no more than we may pray for.

2. The prayers of Gods people have been modest, Genesis 28. 20.

Petition V, And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespasse against us.

Oratio verò quotidiana, quam docuit ipse Dominus, unde & Dominica nuncupatur, debet quidem quotidiana petitione, non quidem dicitur, debita nobis debita nostra, quando id quod fingimus non solum dicimus, sed etiam facimus. Sed & nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris. Sed quia fiunt peccata, hoc dicitur, non ut ideo fiant, quia dicitur. Per hanc enim voluit Salvator ostendere, quantum libet juste in hac vita caligine atque infirmitate vivamus, non nobis deesse peccata pro quibus dimittendis debeamus orare, & eis qui in nos peccant, ut & nobis ignoscatur ignoscere. Aug. de civ. Dei, l. 21. c. 27. Et remittere & dimittere occurrunt apud probatos authores. Remittere [illegible] & dicimus. Dicimus enim, Credo remissionem peccatorum: & [illegible] eodem sensu utitur. Goulart. in Cypr. de orat. Dom. [illegible] Petimus, ut non modò præterita peccata nobis gratis condonet, ac remittat Deus: sed etiam ne quando [illegible] peccandi voluntate & affectu liberet ac munitos servet, malumque nobis radicitus adimat, ubertas in nobis culpæ. Damus de orat. Dom. c. 18. Summa hujus petitionis hæc, ut omnia peccata nostra nobis gratuita sua misericordia condonare velit Deus. Nam nos quoque condonare fratribus omnes injurias nobis ab illis factas, adeò ut hoc quod à nobis est, implerum apud illum profitemur. Id. ibid.

And forgive us. This connexion [and] links it to the former Petition, it is not in any of the rest of the Petitions.

It

It is here put for three Reasons.

1. To shew, that without pardon of sinne, all the blessings of this life will do us no good.

2. To shew us our unworthinesse, our sinnes are so many that we are not worthy a morsell of bread, Gen. 32.10.

3. That sin is the greatest hinderance of all good things we expect from God, Jer. 5.25.

To forgive, is so to passe by an offence, as neither to exact nor to expect any thing either in way of recompence or punishment for it. Both recompence and punishment are counted a kind of satisfaction, which is directly contrary to remission.

Forgivenesse of sinne is a free and full discharge of a sinner from guilt and punishment, whereby he is received into favour with God.

God doth freely and fully discharge us from all our sins, Eph. 1.7. Rom. 3.24,25. Forgivenesse being an act of God, it must needs be both free and full. For whatsoever God doth he doth freely for himself, without any former desert, without expectation of any future recompence.

In this prayer we do not only get further assurance of the pardon of our sins (as some conceive) but a reall forgivenesse of our daily sins, that saying, Our sins past, present and to come are all forgiven at once, is true*,

1. In respect of Gods purpose.

2. In respect of the price of our redemption.

3. In Christ our Head, yet sinnes to come cannot actually be forgiven to the person before they be committed. That is the licence and indulgence of Papists, and will take away repentance for sins committed, and also care for time to come John 13. 10.

Justification is actus indivisibilis, in reference to one future wrought simul & semel, it is one continued act from vocation to glorification.

* Mr Lyford on Tit. 3. 5. Though the sinnes of justified persons be not actually remitted, yet they are virtually and in respect of their state.

We pray here,

First, For the grant of a pardon, that God would accept the satisfaction of Christ for our sins, Psal. 32.5,6.

Secondly, For the continuance of pardon, because justification is not compleat till the day of judgment, Acts 3.19.

Thirdly, The sense and manifestation of it, let us know that they are forgiven, Psal. 51.10,11,12.

Fourthly, The effects of pardon, or freedome from those evils which are the fruits of sin, Prov. 11.ult.

Pardon supposeth alwaies an offence past, Rom. 3.25. Jer. 33. & remembrance is of that which is past.

2. Confession and repentance is constantly joyned with pardon of sin in Scripture, Act. 3.19. Joh. 1.9. therefore remission of sin is of sins past, one cannot repent of that which is to come.

3. To the pardon of sin the Lord requires faith in a Mediator. In the Law they confessed their sins on the Sacrifice, put the sins on the scape Goat.

4. Remission of sins is a judicial act, Justification respects God as a Judge, he cannot pardon sin before it is committed.

5. This Doctrine that all sins to come are pardoned, layes the foundation of two corrupt principles. 1. That justified persons need not confesse sins. 2. That they may take as much comfort in the grace of God in all their sinfull courses, as if they walked [illegible]

[illegible] we pray for greater assurance of [illegible] Petition is a means appointed by God to work that assurance, but for the sins that daily are committed, it is the direct pardon of them which we desire of God in this Petition. And if these words Forgive us do signifie, Make us to know that we have long since forgiven us, as the Antinomians say, then why shall not the next words, As we forgive, receive the same interpretation? and why should it not also hold in the 4th and 6th Petition?

Sect. 1. Burgesse of Justification, from Scripture 14. to 25.

This Doctrine overthroweth the heresie of the Novatians, who do deny the forgivenes of sins after Baptism.

Nam sicut debitum à creditore requiritur; ita peccatum à Deo in die judicij necessario exigitur, nisi hic, dum vivimus, per pietatem & indulgentiam ipsa nobis exoffa condonetur; & merito remitti cuncta hic rogamus, ubi debita committimus, quoniam in futuro, sicut precari non licet, ita non vacat pœnitere.* Venant. Fortunat. Expos. orat. Domini.

The original word which we translate Trespasses, properly signifies Debts. Saint Luke 11. 4. setting down this form of prayer, thus expresseth this Petition; Forgive us our sins: for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us, that is, which hath offended us. Sins are called Debts, because for them we owe punishment. For as in the Law there are two things, 1. Præceptum, commanding or forbidding, and 2. Sanctio, threatning punishment against the transgression of the precept: so in every sin there are two things answerable, reatus, the fault transgressing the Law, and the reatus binding over the transgressor to the punishment. In respect of which punishment every offendour of the Law is a Debtour, untill either the Debt be remitted him, or else he hath born the punishment, which is without end. When we pray therefore that the Lord would forgive us our debts, we do not only desire that the Lord would forget the fault, but also that he would remit the punishment unto which the guilt of our fault doth bind us over. The Papists hold that the Lord many times forgiveth the fault and retaineth the punishment. But sin is called a debt in respect of the punishment which we owe for it: and therefore this debt is not remitted if the punishment be retained. Again, the mercy of the Lord pardoneth no sin for which his justice is not satisfied.

We owe to God,

1. A debt of duty, worship and obedience, Luk. 17. 10. Rom. 8. 12. by virtue of that command he hath over us, Gal. 5. 3.

2. Of punishment, for the neglect of our duty, here we desire to be acquitted of guilt and punishment.

There is no debt like this,

1. No debt to man can be equall to that to God, Mat. 18. 24, 28.

2. In other debts there is a day of payment set, here none, Luk. 12. 19.

3. There is no arrest, and the execution begins at death.

We are in danger by sin, God is the Creditor, Luk. 7. 41. as our Creator and Benefactor; as a Lawgiver, and as a Judg that will call us to account, Luk. 19. 23. Debts stand upon Record, and charg'd upon a Book of account that they may not be forgotten, Job 13. 26. Mal. 3. 16. a day of reckoning will come, when God will put the Bond in suit, Luk. 16. 2. Rev. 20. 12.

Sinne is like a debt:

First, In the nature of the thing. A debt is the not paying of something which is due and reason a man should pay and perform. So sinne is the not rendring unto God the due service and homage which we are bound in reason and conscience to perform unto him, since we are his creatures, and have received all from his bounty, and that upon condition of obeying him, we are bound to obey and serve him in and with all, seeing the same goodness which gave them doth also continue them to us.

Secondly, In the effects of it, which are principally two:

1. A man is still liable to actions and suits for it in the Courts of humane Justice, and to Writs and Arrests for that purpose, and therefore he cannot be in quiet and freedom if his Creditors will still stand upon their right: So are we by sinne made liable liable to the bitter and terrible accusations of our consciences, and to severe punishments and miseries as it were arrests or writs summoning us to appear before Gods Tribunal, whither at length also death will drag us in spight of our hearts there to answer for our sins, but with this difference, that there is no shifting or eluding those arrests.

To be in debt is a trouble to a man.

re, & Gallicum payer, esse corrupta ex Latino pacare, & quid creditori quietis affert, si tranquilletur, si fiat persolutio. Nostra vox mihi Scrupuli, l. 1. c. 16.

Mihi longe simplicius, ac verius videtur, & Italicum paga-

2. A man not having to pay, forfeits his body to imprisonment by the just sentence of the Judge. So we have forfeited our bodies to the lingering of Gods most bitter wrath and displeasure, and to the suffering of eternall torments in Hell, Luk. 12. 58,59. 1 Pet. 3.19.

Thirdly, In the discharge. A debt is discharged upon two considerations, either paiment and satisfaction or free pardon. And paiment is either made by the parties [illegible] by some other for his behalf, with the consent and acceptance of the Creditor. We our selves can make no satisfaction [illegible] to Gods justice, but Christ our Surety, Heb. 7.22. hath made satisfaction to his Fathers justice, and he was accepted for us, Luk. 4.19. Heb. [illegible] Matth. 3.17.

As we, or, For we forgive.

The Petition is confirmed,

1. By an argument, a fortiori, where [illegible]
2. It may be taken a minori, from [illegible]
3. It may be taken from the practise of those who expect pardon, Matth. 6. 14.

This noteth not any deserving, as if our sins were forgiven by reason of our forgiving them that offend us. But it is added for our instruction, to teach us that the pardon we require at Gods hands, to be merciful, because he is merciful; and for our comfort, to assure us, that if we pardon others, God will pardon us.

Luke 12. 4. Knewstubs Lecture on Matth. 6.12. There is a reason given in this Petition more than in any other, because when the soul is once awakened with the apprehension of sinne, we have most need to have our faith confirmed in this than any other Petition. Matth. 18.35. Note that we or any creature can forgive sinnes, because no man can satisfie for sinne which is directly against God, and a breach of his righteous Law: therefore we can never satisfie Gods infinite justice. The meaning therefore is, that we put away malice and all desire of revenge against them that have wronged us. Higher [illegible] Our forgiving others, is [illegible] a work in our power, it is a duty we are bound to. 2. Imperfect and broken pardon. 3. Disproportion to the mercy we crave.

Equality [illegible] to be understood, but [illegible], for although we cannot be equall with the Lord, yet we must be like him, although we cannot forgive and love in the like measure, yet we must in like qualitie, we must forgive truly as God doth perfectly. So then the meaning is, we desire the Lord to forgive us, for even we also unfeignedly forgive our brethren.

Our forgivenesse of others cannot be a Samplar by which the Lord should pardon us, for we desire better pardon than we can shew to others.

2. Our brother cannot offend so much against us, as we do against God, therefore we beg a greater pardon. It is to be understood, [illegible] 1. As an argument to presse the Lord to pardon us. 2. As a qualification of one that would be pardoned, if we would be pardoned we must pardon, Matth. 6.14. 3. It is a sign whereby we may conclude that we are pardoned, Matth. 5.7.

In trespasse there are two things, Damnum & injuria. A damage; this may be so great as we may seek satisfaction, but we must passe by the wrong.

There are divers Reasons why we should forgive our brethren the injuries they offer us.

First, From God, who not only commands it, but hath given us an example to [illegible], Exod. 34. 7. He so great and infinitely excellent above us, pardons us far greater indignities than the injuries offered to us.

Secondly, From our selves. We have more grievously offended God than any can us, and some other men perhaps as much.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, From our Brethren which have offended us; they are our brethren, men and women as we are, have one Religion, serve one God, and trust in one Saviour. Forgive us our debts, as we forgive (that is, brethren to him) the trespasse of the servants of the God of thy Father. Those which offend us are the servants of the God of our Fathers, even of the same God whom we and our fore-fathers have worshipped.

Fourthly, From the duty it self.

1. In regard of the danger that will follow if we do it not, being excommunicated, unit were, from Gods house and all his Ordinances, Forgive us as we forgive others, but we forgive not others,

2. One prayers are turned into sinne, for we lift not up hands without

3. We bear in vain, having not put off the superfluity of naughtinesse.

4. We come not to the Sacrament to our profit, for we have not purged out the

5. We [illegible] conformable assurance of the remission of our sins, Matth. [illegible] and [illegible]

The Christian knows no enemy he hath, that is, though persons may be injurious to him, and unworthy in themselves, yet he knows none whom he is not first bound to forgive, which is indeed to make them on his part, no enemies. Doctor Taylor of Friendship.

2. In regard of the good we shall obtain if we do it.

1. We may know by this that God hath forgiven us, We love, because he first loved us, 1 Joh. 4. 19. and we forgive because he first forgave us.

2. We may hereby comfort our souls in the day of temptation, when the conscience is perplexed with doubting of pardon.

We shall be forgiven, we have Gods promise for it, Matth. 6. 14. our forgiveness doth not deserve forgiveness, but it is only a sign and assurance of it, our services are acceptable, and our souls capable of eternall felicity, it brings a great deal of ease and quietnesse to the mind. For so far as any man can forgive a wrong, so far it ceaseth to vex him, not the injuries we receive disquiet our hearts, and interrupt our peace, but the frowardnesse of our spirits which cannot pardon and passe by these wrongs.

Petition VI. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

The former Petition was a deprecation against evill past, this is for prevention of evill to come: It is laid down negatively, where preventing grace is desired, and affirmatively, where recovering grace is begg'd.

In the former Petition we begged the grace of justification, in this we crave the grace of Sanctification, in the former we asked freedom from the guilt of sin: In this we crave deliverance from the evil and corruption of sin, and strength against tentations alluring to the same.

This Petition well followeth the former. For when it pleaseth the Lord to forgive sin, he delivereth them from being hardened therein. Newstub on the Lords Prayer.

Lead us not into, or rather bring or carry us not into.

This implies,

1. Gods providence.

2. His justice and our desert.

3. That we are unable to stand in such a condition, if he help us not.

It is one thing to tempt, and another thing to lead into tentation. We do not desire (as some think) not to be tempted, but when we are tempted to be delivered from evill, that we quail not in the tentation. And so our Saviour prayeth, Joh. 17. 15. Therefore these two branches are not to be distinguished into two Petitions, as the adversative

adversative particle But sheweth. As if we should say, O Lord, do not thou give us over to the tempter, nor leave us to our selves, but with temptation give an issue, that we be not overcome in the temptation, but saved and delivered from evil.

Temptation is a proving or making triall of a thing or person, Psal. 95.9. Deut. 8.2.

Temptation unto sin is any thing, person or implement, which brings evill into, or draws evill out of the heart, Matt. 16.23. 1 Tim. 6.9.

We pray,

1. That we may not be tempted.
2. Not to yield to temptation.
3. Not to be overcome of it.

Temptation unto sin is here meant, whether it arise from Satan, our selves, or other men. The principal thing against which we are to be taught to pray is the power of temptation, as is evident by this particle but.

In that God permits, and inclines such tempters to tempt men, and withdrawing his grace which is sufficient for them, leaveth them who are not able to stand of themselves, he is said to lead them into temptation.

First, He who hath been overcome by any sin, hath entred into temptation, Gal. 6.1.

Secondly, Temptation may be certain if the degrees when one begins to love the matter of temptation, as John to his profession, his zeal to God.

Thirdly, When ones particular corruption through his course of life meets with a suitable object.

Fourthly, Negligence in performance of holy duties, by them whom they are more lively.

God tempts us

1. To prove us, Deut. 8.3. that we may know our selves.
2. To humble us.
3. To do us good in the end.
4. By leaving us to our selves, that we may know how weak we are, 2 Chron. 32.31.
5. By extraordinary Commandements, Gen. 22.1.
6. By outward prosperity, Prov. 30.8.

God leads us into temptation

1. By withdrawing his grace and holy Spirit.
2. By offering occasions.
3. By letting Satan and our own corruptions loose. Vide Strangium de Voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, l. 4. c. 5.

The Devil moveth, alloureth * and provoketh man to sin, Exod. 17.2. Deut. 6.16. Psal. 78.18, 19. hence he is called the tempter, Mat. 4.3.

He tempts,

1. By inward suggestion, 1 Chron. 21.1. John 13.2. being a Spirit he hath communion with our souls, and can dart thoughts into us, so he filled the heart of Judas.
2. By outward objects, Josh. 7.21. Prov. 23.31. Matth. 4.3,4,8. he sets his baits to our constitutions, the tree of knowledg was present to the eye, pleasant and good for food, there was an outward occasion.
3. By the perswasions of his instruments, Matth. 16.23.
4. By stirring the humours of our bodies to anger and wantonnesse.

The world tempts by persons in it, or things of it. The flesh tempteth, when we are enticed by our own corruptions, Jam. 1.14. Matth. 15.19.

Temptation hath five degrees.

1. Suggestion.
2. Delight.
3. Consent.
4. Practice.

* Though Satan doth tempt us, yet he cannot prevail over us, but by our selves, John 14.31. so he found nothing in Adam, but he yielded to him. Job stood under greater temptations than Adam fell.

Its no sin to be tempted of the world & Satan.

1. Every sin is actus proprius, the soul that sinneth it shall dye.
2. Actus derelictus, a declining from that integrity God bestowed on us. We have no power over the world and Satan.

5. Perseverance or constancy in sinning.

God permits us to be tempted:

First, To discover the freenesse and riches of his grace, *Rom.*7.25.

Secondly, For the triall of that grace which is wrought, Matth. 15.25. Heb. 11.17.

Thirdly, To humble us; temptations humble us more than outward afflictions, there the breach is made on our souls.

Fourthly, To conform us to Christ, *Heb.*2.17.

Fifthly, By temptations God mortifies sin, *Psal.*51.5.

Sixthly, To make us more to pitty others, 2 *Cor.*1.6. Gal 6.1.

Seaventhly, It occasions much experience of the care and providence of God.

There are certain seasons of temptation:

1. Unusuall outward prosperity, *Prov.*1.32. *Hos.*6.13. *Psal.*30.6.

2. The decay of grace, as to the exercise of it, *Cant.*5.2.

3. A time of self-confidence, as in Peter; he was ever after more fearfull, and watchfull of temptation, 1 Pet. 1.17.

4. Abundance of spirituall revelations, 2 *Cor.*12.7.

The Devil fought to perswade Mr Knox near his end, that all his Labours in the Ministry and the fidelity that he had shown in that service, had merited Heaven and Immortality: But blessed be God (said he) that brought to my mind these Scriptures, What hast thou that thou hast not received? And, Not I, but the grace of God in me.

Those two words, *Matth.*26.41. watch and pray, comprize the whole indeavour of faith, that the soul be not overpowred with temptations.

They shew,

First, It is an evill thing to enter into temptation, since we ought to watch and pray against it.

Secondly, That it is not in our own power to preserve our selves from entring into temptation, 1 *Pet.*1.5. John 17.15.

Thirdly, That we are to act faith upon the promises of God for our preservation, James 1.6,7.

God preserves his people from Satans temptations six wayes:

1. By laying a restraint on Satan, that he cannot tempt them. See Job 2.3. and *Luk.*22.31. God will not give Satan a commission to tempt them.

2. When he preserves them from occasions of evill without. Satan doth not only stir up lust within, but lays bait without, *Jam.*1.14. God will not suffer Satan to lay a bait for them, *Psal.*96.3. *Eccl.*7.26.

3. When he so strengthens their graces that a temptation shall not take, *Gal.*5.27. *Col.*2.15.

4. When he layes affliction upon them, as preventing physick, Job 33.16,17. the Crosse keeps them from sin, *Hos.*2.5,6.

5. He shews them the beauty of holinesse, by which the glory and sweetnesse of sin vanisheth, *Psal.*110.3.

6. By casting into the soul quenching considerations.

We should,

I. Watch against temptation.

Consider,

1. What the temptation aims at.

2. That Satan is at thy elbow in every temptation, his design is to destroy thy interest in the Gospel.

II. Meet every temptation with consideration of the Crosse of Christ; the Papists have lost the power and keep up the forme, signing themselves still with the Crosse; think of Christ who died for that sin.

III. If the temptation have gotten ground on thy soul, then

1. Beseech the Lord that it may depart from thee as Paul, fix thy thoughts on the trouble and danger of it.

2. Act faith in a peculiar manner on Christ as he was tempted, Heb. 2.17. 4.15.

3. Expect

3. Expect assistance from God according to his promises.

But deliver us from evill, or, out of evill, the evill one, or the evill thing.

By evill we are to understood all the enemies of our salvation, the flesh, world, and the Devil, sin and Hell, and all puuishments of sin, but especially the Devil, who in the Scriptures is called ὁ πονηρὸς, the evill one, though not only him, as Scultetus seems to interpret it. Exercit. Evang. lib. 2. cap. 33. Vide Ursini explicat. Catechet.

By Dr Downam. See Elton.

Under evill is comprized,

1. Satan the principall author of evill, that if we be tempted by him, he may not have his will upon us, he hath the great stroke in temptation, Matth. 4. 10.

2. All other kinds of evil.

Dr Gouges Guide to go to God. The Article doth not necessarily imply that the Devill onely should be here meant, yet he may be it. It is best in the largest words.

Satan in other places is styled the evill one, 1 John 2.13,14. and this word Evil is oft put for every thing that is contrary to good, and that with the Article prefixed before it, Matth. 5.39. Rom. 12. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 3. 1 Joh. 5. 19. Now as this Title good is of a large extent, so on the contrary is evill, Gen. 48. 13. The greatest evill of all is sinne, Mark 7. 23. Judgement also for sin both temporall, Zeph. 3. 15. and eternal Luke 15.25. are styled evil. In this large extent is the word here to be taken. And because it compriseth under it all manner of evils, it is fitly set in the last place.

included among other evils. The word is of all genders, and may comprise all evils under (where there is no circumstance of restraint, as here is none) to expound the Scripture in the largest extent, especially in such a summary as this, where so much matter is comprised under Doctor Gouges

Evill in Scripture hath three significations:

1. Afflictions and crosses, so the time of old-age is an evill time, Eccl. 12.1.

2. By evill is meant the Devil, Matth. 5.37.

3. By evill is meant sin especially the power of it, and so it is taken here, not excluding the Devil, say some: Evill here is taken in a large sense, any kind of evill that may hinder our salvation.

Verse Deliver signifieth two things:

1. To keep and preserve, to protect and defend from evill, that we fall not into it, as 1 Thess. 1.10. See John 17. 15.

2. To deliver, and as it were to pull us out of the hands, that is, power of our spirituall enemies: as the word is used, Luke 1. 74. Matth. 27. 43. Rom. 7. 24. 2 Tim. 4.17,18. 2 Cor. 1. 10. To deliver by strong hand, the same word is used, Col. 1. 13.

This deliverance which we crave is either inchoate in this life, or perfect in the life to come, both by Christ, Luke 1. 74.

But deliver] These words are a limitation or explication. But couples like things together. This is like that place, John 17. 15. We desire to be kept, 1. From the corruptions and raigning sinnes of the world, James 1. 27. Enochs and Noahs walking with God, consisted in keeping themselves from the corruptions of the present age. 2. From the evill customes and examples of the world, Rom. 12. 2. 3. From the prejudice and hurt of scandall, Phil. 1. 10. 4. From the hurry and distractions of the world, so as to forget God, Hos. 13.6. 5. From the inordinate cares of the world, Matth. 13. 22. 6. From the hurt of the world, as to spirituall things. 7. From the blandishments and enticements of the world. 8. From sinne, which may be occasioned by affliction. 9. From being swallowed up in pursuing ones own private and selfish ends, Phil. 2.21. 10. From the evill of murmuring and man-pleasing, Prov. 29.25.

We desire in this Petition,

That we may not be exercised with triall in our estate, good name or body, if God so please, or that he would support us if we be tried.

The deliverance which we crave is either inchoate in this life, or perfect in the life to come: both by Christ, Luk. 1.74.

Some from these words, Deliver us from evil, hold that one may pray for perfection of holinesse, to be freed from the very being of sinne, the words mean (say they) to be delivered from all sin, and all degrees of it. They alledge also other places to prove this, viz. 2 Cor. 13.7,9. Col. 4.12. Heb. 13.21. 1 Thess. 5.23. Though these prayers (say they) be not fulfilled in this life, yet one should lay up prayers for absolute perfection.

1. Because thereby he manifests his perfect displeasure against sinne, and perfect love to the Commandment of God.

2. Hereby he manifests the truth and sincerity of his heart, he would not onely not have sin reign, but he would have it not to be in him.

3. Hereby he doth his duty in striving after perfection, Phil. 3. 12. herein he makes his heart and the Law even, though his life and it be not.

4. His prayer shall be answered in degrees, though not in perfection: as there are severall degrees of accomplishing Prophecies, so of answering Prayers.

5. Your prayers are of an everlasting efficacy, because they are offered to God by the eternal Spirit, Heb. 9. 14. upon the same Altar that Christs Sacrifice was offered, therefore Christs righteousnesse is everlasting, because it was offered to God by the eternal Spirit.

Others say, such perfection may be desired, and were to be wished, if it might be had, yea must be set before us as an exact copy to write after, white to aim at, with endeavour to come as near it as we can, but they see no ground to pray for it, since they cannot pray in faith, because they have no promise; nay it is not a state compatible with this life since the fall, and they think it is too great a presumption to pray for that which they have no promise for, and ambition to affect such a prerogative as no child of God ever since the fall here enjoyed, or is like to do.

Hitherto of the Petitions: Now followeth the Conclusion of the Lords Prayer in these words, For thine is the Kingdome, the Power and the Glory for ever and ever Amen; that is, these which we beg are for the honour of thy Kingdom, for the manifestation of thy Power, and the Glory of thy Name and Mercies, and it is an expresse Doxology, which is fit to conclude all our prayers.

By Downam. * Vide Scult. Exercit. Evang. lib. 2. cap. 33. Et Brochm. De Innocat. Dei Sect. 8. Et Danæum de orat. Dominic. cap. 17.

For howsoever this clause is omitted of the Latine Interpreters, and is rejected by Erasmus *, yet was it added by our Saviour, and registred by Matthew.

1. The Greek Copies have it.

2. The Syriack Paraphrast translateth it.

3. The Greek Writers expound it, as Chrysostome and Theophilact. And

4. It is not only consonant with the rest of the Scriptures, but also in this prayer hath a necessary use. For praise is to be joyned with prayer, the Petitions contained a specification of our desires, this conclusion partly a confirmation of our faith joyned with praising God, in these words, For thine is the Kingdome, and the Power, and the Glory, for ever and ever: and partly a testification both of our faith, and of the truth of our desires in all the former Petitions, in the word Amen.

These words are not found in the Evangelist Luke, but in Matth. 6. 13. they are expressed, and it is sufficient that one Evangelist hath recorded them. Elton.

It appeareth manifestly, that this sentence was borrowed from the Prophet David, 2 Chron. 29. 11. with some abridgment of the Prophets words.

Cartw. on the Rhem. Test. Some say from Dan. 7. 14. Hæc verba adjecta sunt ut fiduciam nostram firment & stabiliant. Quemadmodum ergo plena fiducia in Dei bonitatem & potentiam exorsi discimus: Pater noster qui es in Cœlis: ita tandem finimus dicentes, quia tuum est Regnum, Potentia & Gloria in æternum. Discrimen inter Regnum, Potentiam & Gloriam hominum & Dei: Homines habent Regnum, Potentiam & Gloriam, Sed, 1. Non habent à seipsis sed à Deo. 2. Non habent sibi sed Deo cujus sunt loco. 3. Habent ad breve tempus. Egardi Medulla S. S. Theol.

2. Without this we should not have had a perfect form of prayer; it consisteth of Thanksgiving as well as Petitions.

It is both a Doxology, a giving praise, and an Aitiologie, a rendring a reason, therefore our confidence is in thee, and thou wilt do for us according to our requests.

God in this reason is set out by his Attributes, for these words, Kingdome,

* Power,

Power, Glory, For ever, do point out foure diſtinct Attributes of God, which are,

1. Soveraignty, Pſal. 22.8. Kingdom.
2. Omnipotency, Jer. 32.17. 2 Chron. 20.6. Power.
3. Excellency, Pſal. 113.4. & Iſa. 6.3. Glory.
4. Eternity, Pſal. 90.2. Iſa. 57.15. For ever.

Theſe Attributes are applied to God by a ſpecial property and excellency. So much doth that particle Thine, and the Article Thy import. As if he had ſaid, Thine and thine only are theſe. Thine they are originally of thy ſelf, and that in an infinite meaſure and degree. Though the particle Thine be but once expreſſed, yet by vertue of the copulative particle And, it is particularly to every of the other properties.

This prepoſitive Article importeth two things, 1. A generality, God is King over all the earth. 2. Superiority, He is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.

As for the fourth Attribute Eternity, intimated in this clauſe, For ever, it is ſo expreſſed, as appertaining to all and every of the other three. For Gods Kingdom is for ever: his Power for ever: his Glory for ever: and whatſoever elſe is in God, is as God himſelf, for ever.

Biſhop Andrews. The end of our Petitions why we ſhould have them granted, is, that Gods Kingdome, Power and Glory may be advanced. By this alſo our faith is ſtrengthened in the hope to obtain our requeſts.

By this, 1. We are taught what ſhould be the end of our Petitions, why we ſhould have them granted, even that his Kingdome, Power and Glory may be advanced. The deſire to have him glorified, ſhould be both at the beginning and end of our prayers.

2. By this alſo our faith is ſtrengthened in the hope to obtain our petitions, becauſe the Lord cannot neglect the glory of his name, and the honour of his Kingdom, which dependeth upon the performance of his mercy toward his ſervants that call upon him.

3. We are admoniſhed that it is not the worthineſſe of our ſelves, nor yet of any other, but the honour of his name that commendeth our ſuits and petitions unto the Lord.

4. Herein we are admoniſhed of a ſpecial worſhip and ſervice, which is thankſgiving unto God, whenſoever we receive any benefit, of what kind ſoever. Knewſtub upon Mat. 6.9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

There is a two-fold Kingdom of God:

1. Univerſal, which ſome call the Kingdom of his Power, whereby he ruleth and governeth all things, Pſalm 103.19. 2 Chron. 20.6.

2. Special, the Kingdome of Grace in this life, and of Glory in the life to come. In the former he communicateth Grace to his ſervants, ruling in them by his Word and Spirit. In the later he communicateth Glory to his Saints, vouchſafing unto them the fruition of himſelfe, who ſhall be to them all in all.

Gods only is truly and properly power, his is the power. See Pſalm 62.11.

Gods power is his ability to do any thing, it extendeth it ſelf to every thing that by power may be done, Gen. 18.14. Jer. 32.27. See Luke 1.37. Mark 10.27. In this reſpect he is ſtyled God Almighty, Gen. 17.1.

And the Glory] Whereby is meant that excellency which is in God. For the excellency of a thing, that which cauſeth it to be in high eſteem, and procureth a name, fame, and renown unto it, is the glory of it. Cabod the Hebrew word ſignifieth alſo weightineſſe. The Greek word δόξα, Fama, Gloria, both Fame and Glory, for Glory cauſeth Fame.

For ever.

The Kingdome, Power and Glory of God are amplified by their unchangeable continuance. This phraſe [For ever] implieth both Eternity and Immutability.

The phraſe in the original, to tranſlate it word for word, is for ages. The original εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, in ſecula. αἰὼν, quaſi ἀεὶ ὤν, Ariſt. l. 1. de Cœlo. Seculum Latinis ſpatium eſt centum annorum. Itaq; multitudine ſæculorum æternitas intelligitur. Rami Commen. de Relig. Chriſt. l. 3. c. 10.

ginal root (עוֹלָם) doth properly ſignifie that which is for ever. Now becauſe an age is the longeſt uſual diſtinction of time, the ſame word that ſignifieth eternity is put for an age. And when there is no end of that which is ſpoken of, the plural number indefinitely without any limitation thus for ages, is uſed to ſet out the everlaſtingneſſe of it.

Amen.

It is a witneſſing of our faith, and of our deſire of the things prayed for, it is as much as So it is, or, So be it; This we have prayed for, and this we heartily deſire, and moſt aſſuredly look for, 1 Kin. 1.36 Mr Dod.

Jerome calls it fitly, Signaculum orationis.

It is the ratification of all, the teſtification both of our faith and of the truth of our deſire. It ſignifieth two things, a [a] wiſh of the heart to obtain what hath been uttered, or elſe a perſwaſion of heart [b] that the thing ſhall be obtained, both here.

The meaning of it is thus much; as if we ſhould ſay, As I have made theſe requeſts unto thee, O Lord, ſo do I both unfeignedly deſire the performance of them, and alſo truly believe that thou in thy good time wilt grant my deſires ſo farre forth as they ſtand with thy glory and my good: and in this perſwaſion I reſt, attending thy good pleaſure.

It is an Hebrew word ſignifying Truly, Even ſo, or, So be it, and yet confirmed in all languages, and by the uſe of it as well known as any other Engliſh word.

Amen in the Creed is not only to aſſent to the truth of the Articles, that Chriſt was crucified, died, but to aſſure our ſelves by faith that all thoſe benefits are ours, and ſo in the Lords Prayer. Dike. Amen imports, 1. An aſſent to all that hath been before-mentioned, Deut. 27.15, &c. 2. An earneſt deſire thereof, Jer. 28.6, 7. 3. Faith in obtaining our deſire, 1 Cor. 14.16. Dr Gouge in his Catechiſm. Some good Divines have held it to be an Oath; it is an aſſeveration, and ſeems to be the ſame with Yea, Yea. Vide Fulleri Miſcel. Sac. lib. 1. cap. 2. & Dilherri Electa lib. 2. cap. 20.

Since our Saviour teacheth us to end our prayers with Amen, it is our duty to ſay Amen, Neh. 8.6. 1 Cor. 14.16. Vide Bezam in loc. See Deut. 27.15. 1 Chron. 16.36. Pſalm 106.48. It is a common ſubſcribing as it were unto the Petitions and Thankſgivings which are offered unto God.

Chryſoſtom celebrated the Euchariſt among the Grecians, in Greek, and Ambroſe amongſt the Latines, in Latine; The ſame may be ſaid of Baſil, Nazianzen, Jerome and other Fathers. In Italy, Greece, Aſia and Ægypt, the Liturgy is celebrated in the ſame tongue in which the Sermons were preacht. The Armenian, Ethiopick and Muſcovite Churches now perform their Divine Service in the vulgar tongue. See B. Daven. Determ. of Queſt. 41.

3. Men ſhould be attentive when they pray with others, how canſt thou otherwayes ſay Amen, and aſſent to the prayer?

4. We ſhould wait upon God for the accompliſhment of our deſires.

Mr Perkins on the Lords Prayer, ſaith, It is of more value than all the prayer beſides. His reaſon is, becauſe it is a teſtification of our faith, whereas all the Petitions beſide are teſtifications of our deſires.

Chap. VII.

Of the Sacraments.

I. The Name.

THe word Sacrament (being Latine) is not found in the Scripture, but the thing is there.

Divines agree not what it properly ſignifies, and how it came to be applied to this Ordinance.

The Oath that the old Roman Souldiers took to their General to live and die with him, was called Sacramentum. See Molin of the Euchariſt. Some think it is ſo called, becauſe it is to be received Sacramente. Tertullian was the firſt that uſed this word; the Church hath uſed it a long time, it being above fourteen hundred years ſince he wrote.

The Greek Church hath conſtantly uſed this word μυστηριον; a Heatheniſh ſuperſtitious word: and the Latine Church in like manner; the word Sacramentum, a Heathen military word: to ſignifie thereby the holy Sacraments of the Chriſtian Church. Doctor Sanderſon on 2 Tim. 3. 16. See L' Eſtrange of the Liturgies, Chap. 8.

Some think the names of Gods appointing are better than what are given by Eccleſiaſtical cuſtom.

Unanimi ſenſu & conſenſu appellationem Sacramenti omnes retinent, orthodoxæ Eccleſiæ, Scholæ: teſtes confeſſiones publicæ, privatæ diſputationes, commentarioles, volumina & libelli theologici. Wendel. Exercit. Theolog. pars 2da Exercit. 76. Vide Brochm. de Sac. Sect. 1.

Vox Sacramentum non occurrit in Scriptura quia eſt Latina: Prophetæ verò, Apoſtoli & Evangeliſtæ ſcripſerunt Hebraicè & Græcè; occurrunt tamen quædam vocabula in duabus his linguis, quæ Latinæ voci Sacramenti tranſlata fuerunt, quæ ſæpius in verſione vulgata generaliſſimè pro Græco μυστηριον accipitur, vox autem Græca generaliter pro omni ſecreto animo generaliter pro ſecreto divino, & ſpecialiori ſignificatum, pro ſecreto divino ſymbolis, ſignis, figuriſque exterioris propoſito ac repræſentato. In hac ſignificatione reſpondet ei vox Latina Sacramentum, quæ deducta eſt à verbo ſacrare, & à ſcriptoribus Eccleſiaſticis Latinis à militia deſumpta fuit, in qua juramentum quo milites duci obſtringebantur, vocabatur Sacramentum. Riveti Catholi. II. The

II. The proper Nature of a Sacrament.

It is an applying of the Covenant of Grace to Gods people for their good by visible Signs.

Signum est, quod præter speciem, quam ingerit sensibus, aliud quidpiam in cognitionem inducit. A sign is that which represents one thing to the eye and outward senses, and another to the mind.

Circumcision is called a sign and a seal; *Rom.*4.11. See *Gen.*17.11.

Some signs are only significant, as the Ivie of wine, some obsignative, as the seal, the thing contained in the Writ; some exhibitive, as anointing the Prophetical, Kingly or Priestly Office: The Sacraments do not only signifie the promise of grace in Christ, but also seal and exhibit the thing promised. Vossius de Sacramentorum vi & effectu.

The Sacraments are signs to represent, Instruments to convey, Seals to confirm the Covenant.

Others thus distinguish of Signs:

There are three sorts of signs.

1. Some only serve to signifie and call to remembrance; as the picture of a man is such a sign as cals him to remembrance.

2. A ratifying sign; as a Seal, if one conveys Lands or Goods to another, and sets his Seal to it, this further clears his Title.

1. Of Gods wrath, such are prodigious events. 2. Of his power, such are miracles. 3. Of his grace, such are Sacraments. Dr Featleys Grand Sacrilledge of the Ch. of E. In whatsense the Protestants hold the Sacraments to be exhibitive signs. See Mr Gillesp. Aarons Rod blos. l.3.c.12. p.496.

3. Which exhibit, the putting on a Cap or Ring makes one a Master of Doctor, the delivering of a Staff is the making of him a Lord Chamberlain, the Sacrament is all these. Christ cals to thy remembrance, and sets before thy eyes all the benefits that come by him, and shews thee all thy duties thou owest him.

Sacramenta non sunt signa tantum significativa, quale fuit manna, sed etiam signa exhibitiva rerum quas significant, & gratiæ in Evangelio promissæ. Ursini Thesis xxxv. De Sacramentis.

2. It is a sealing sign, so Circumcision is called, Christ, Grace, the Promises, Heaven are thine.

3. It is an exhibiting sign, brings Christ to the believer, communicates him more to him.

What ever other Ordinance the Church hath wanted, ever since the Lord had a Church on earth, it hath had this.

When man was perfect, God gave him Sacraments even in Paradise, the Tree of Life, and the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil.

Veteres de Sacramentis loquuti sunt maxima cum reverentia, sacra, appellarunt horrenda & tremenda mysteria. River. Institut. præpar. ad comm. Danie. c.5.

Some Sacraments God gave unto man,

1. In his innocent estate, which were two,
   1. The Tree of Life.
   2. The Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil.
2. In his corrupt estate:
   1. Either before Christ, prefiguring him.
   2. Or after Christ, as memorials of him.

The Sacraments before Christ were

1. Either such as did belong to all sorts of people,
   1. The Flood and Noahs preservation in it.
   2. The Rainbow.
2. Such as were peculiarly appointed to the Jews:
   1. Extraordinary, during but for once, or a short time, and answering either to Baptism, as 1 *Cor.*10. 1. The Red Sea. 2. The Cloud. Or to the Lords Supper, 1. Manna. 2. The Water flowing out of the Rock.

2. Ordinary,

2. Ordinary, as
   1. Circumcision answering to our Baptism, Col 1. 2.
   2. The Passeover answering to the Lords Supper.

Circumcision as a Sacrament doth signifie two principal things:

1. An engagement to, and profession of faith in the promised Seed, as promised and future.

2. An engagement to Moses Law, for this use it had after the Law was given. Mr Baxter of Catholick Unity.

1. It signified and confirmed the promise of the blessed Seed Christ, as born of the posterity of Abraham.

2. It signified that all men begotten by natural propagation are guilty.

3. That the masse of sinne is to be cast away.

4. That a Covenant made with God, belongs not onely to the Parents, but the off-spring.

The Passeover was a memorial of their freedome in Ægypt, and also signified deliverance from sinne and death, and their feeding on Christ. Ursini Theses de Sacramentis.

The Sacraments after Christs coming to continue till the end of the world, were,
   1. Baptism.
   2. The Lords Supper.

III. What is the use of the Sacraments in the Church, and what benefit the people of God receive from them.

They convey the mercies of the whole Covenant of Grace, therefore Circumcision is called the Covenant, Gen. 17.

All the benefits of Christ are applied in the Sacraments; the water out of the Rock is called Christ, 1 Cor. 10.

God doth nothing by the Word or Prayer, but this Ordinance doth the same thing; the one of the Sacraments is for begetting of life, the other for confirming it.

It is an application of the whole Covenant of Grace in a sign.

IV. The Parts of a Sacrament.

A Sacrament taken in its full extent comprehendeth two things in it:

1. Rem terrenam, That which is outward and visible, which the Schooles call properly Sacramentum. And

2. Rem cœlestem, That which is inward and invisible, which they term Rem Sacramenti, the principal thing exhibited in the Sacrament.

3. This sign must have the expresse Commandment of Christ, for none can institute a Sacrament but he that can give the inward grace.

4. There must be a promise of divine grace, else it is no seal, and it must be annexed to the Sacrament by God. The command is for our warrant, the promise for our encouragement.

Conditiones Sacramenti sunt tres,
1. Ut sit signum institutum.
2. Ut sit institutum ad signandum & obsignandum gratiam.
3. Ut habeat mandatum & promissionem in sacris literis, unde institutiones Apostolicæ non sunt Sacramenta, quia Sacramenta sunt ex institutione solius Dei, ut apparet ex institutione Baptismi & Cœnæ Domini.

In Baptism, 1. The Signum is washing with water. 2. The Signatum, the bloud of Christ applied by the Spirit, John 3. 5. Titus 3. 5. This was represented by the vision at our Saviours Baptism of the holy Ghost, descending upon him in the similitude of a Dove. As in our natural birth the body is washt with water from the pollution it brings with it into the world; so in our regeneration or second birth, the soul is purified by the Spirit from the guilt and pollution of sinne. See Ezek. 16 4, 5. & John 15. 5. 3. Christs command is Matth. 28. 19. Go and baptize. 4. His promise is, He that believes and is baptized, shall be saved.

So in the Eucharist * the outward and visible sign is the Bread and Wine.

2. There is an Analogy between Bread and Wine which nourisheth the body, and Christs body and bloud which nourisheth the soul.

* The Institution of it, Luk. 22. 19.

3. A promiſe of ſaving grace to all that uſe the outward rites according to Chriſts inſtitution, Matth. 26.28.

V. The Neceſſity of the Sacraments.

Non minus ſine Sacramentis ſalvatus, eſt latro, quam cum Sacramentis damnatus eſt Judas. Notum illud Auguſtini & Bernardi non privationem Sacramenti damnare ſed contemptum. Voſſius in Theſibus. Sacramenta ſimpliciter & abſolutè non ſunt neceſſaria ad ſalutem, tamen ratione infirmitatis noſtræ, fidei & divinæ inſtitutionis, quia Deus Baptiſmum & cœnam tanquam certa media & inſtrumenta obſignandæ ſuæ gratiæ, & admonendi noſtri officij, inſtituit, neceſſarius eſt eorundem uſus. Sneeanus loc. commun. de Sacramentalibus ſignis. Vide Cl. Gatak. adverſarie Miſcellanea. cap. 28. Si avant l' inſtitution du Baptesme, ou de la Circonciſion, on a peu eſtre ſauvé ſans iceux, il n'y a point de raiſon pourquoy cela ne puiſſe encore aduenir depuis leur inſtitution. Car les Sacrements ont eſté donnez pour aides, non pour empeſchements du ſalut. Actes De La Conference Tenue A Caen entre Bochart & Veron. Tome ſecond Troiſieme partie.

They are neceſſary only Neceſſitate præcepti, not medii; men may be ſaved without them. That is neceſſary to the ſalvation of man without which he cannot poſſibly be ſaved.

Theſe things are either,

1. Simply neceſſary on mans part, acknowledgement of ſinne, faith in Chriſt Jeſus and repentance.

2. So far neceſſary, as that the contempt or neglect of them bars a man of ſalvation. Such are the Sacraments and outward profeſſion. The neglect of Circumciſion and of the Paſſeover, and the abuſe of the Sacrifice of Peace-offerings by eating the ſame in uncleanneſſe wittingly, was to be puniſhed with cutting off. No man was circumciſed in thoſe fourty years in which the Iſraelites were in the wilderneſſe, but many were born and died in that time.

Mark 16.16. he ſaith, He that believes not ſhall be condemned, not he that believes not and is not baptized ſhall be condemned.

See that place John 3.5. anſwered in my Annotations.

VI. The Efficacy of the Sacraments:

Qui ſemel à gratiæ cognitione exciderunt præcipites ruunt, nec ubi ſiſtere poſſint, inveniunt. Atque hinc eſt, quod Pontificij gratiam Sacramentis & aliis inſtitutionibus alligatam ſomniant, ita, ut nec fide, nec bono aliquo motu opus ſit, quandoquidem ex ipſo, ut loquuntur, opere operato, gratiam conſequi poſſint. Hæc eſt gratia Pontificia. Epiſc. Carlet. conſenſ. Eccleſ Cathol. contra Trident. de gratia, cap. 4. Per barbarum hoc opus operatum (merito illud ſic voco, quod vocem paſſivè accipiant, quæ apud illius lingua autores activè tantum ſumitur) intelligunt, quod vera legis, ut vocant Sacramenta, in debita materia ac forma adminiſtrata, producant gratiam in iis, quibus adminiſtrantur, tanquam veræ cauſæ: Non quemadmodum vetera quæ non juſtificarunt hominem ex eorum opinione, niſi quatenus cauſa morales & meritoria, ſicut jam credunt opera juſtificare, hæc vocant opus operantis. Rivet. in Catholico orthodoxo Tractat. 3. Quæſt. 1. Tritum eſt inter Pontificios, Sacramenta veteris legis contuliſſe gratiam ex opere operantis, hoc eſt, ex fide, devotione, & bono motu utentis: noſtra autem conferre gratiam ex opere operato, id eſt, ex ipſa Sacramentali actione, quamvis fides nihil agat, modò obex non ponatur. Epiſc. Davenant. Determinat. Quæſt. 23. Hoc figmentum de gratia ex opere operato collata fidem ſuo munere ſpoliat, & illis beneficium largitur quibus Deus ſupplicium minitatur, Marc. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 11. 29. Id. ibid. Vide Eccl. Homil. 10. in Cant. Cantic.

The Papiſts ſay the Sacraments conferre grace by the work wrought, as the pen of it ſelf writeth, the hand of the writer moving it: ſo the Sacraments of themſelves ſanctifie being adminiſtred by the Miniſter.

They hold the efficacy of the Sacraments to be ſo great, that there needeth no preparation or qualification of the receiver. The Reformed Churches maintain, That except the receiver be thus and thus qualified, he loſeth the benefit of the Sacraments. See Act. 10.47.

Sacraments do not conferre grace by the actuall doing and exerciſing of them, the elements are changed relatively in reſpect of their uſe and end, and though not ſubſtantially, they are not meer ſigns, but ſuch as beſides their ſignification ſeal unto us our remiſſion of ſins and Gods favour.

See Dr Sclat. on Rom. 2 p. 235, to 241.

But, 1. The Word it ſelf doth not profit without faith, much leſſe the ſeals of it.

Mr Burgeſſe of Grace and Aſſurance § 3. Ser. 19. p. 105.

2. People are exhorted to examine themſelves before they come to the Sacrament, 1 Cor. 11. therefore the very uſe of the Sacraments conferres not grace, though the heart of man put forth no good motion at that time, we ſhould not there relie upon the externall acts of receiving, there is panis Domini and panis Dominus.

Object. Act. 2. 38. Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, for the remiſſion of ſins.

Anſw.

Anſw. They are ſaid to be baptized for the remiſſion of ſins, not that Baptiſm, ex opere operato doth remit ſins, but becauſe it is a Sign and Seal of the pardon of them.

The Sacraments receive their power from the Lords own inſtitution.

Some ſigns ſignifie by nature, as ſmoke is a ſign of fire; the picture of my friend makes me remember him.

Secondly, Other Signes come wholly from Inſtitution, as the heap of ſtones called Galeed between Jacob and Laban; there is a kinde of reſemblance and aptneſſe in the things which God hath choſen to ſignifie, but the efficacy of them depends on the Inſtitution of Chriſt, which containes two things,

1. A word of command to do ſuch a thing for ſuch an end.
2. A word of promiſe that it ſhall be effectual for ſuch an end.

A piece of Wax annexed as a Seal to the Princes Patent of pardon, or other like deed, is of farre other uſe and greater efficacy and excellency than any ordinary Wax is, though it be the ſame ſtill in nature and ſubſtance with it. So the Bread in the Lords Supper being a Seal of Gods Covenant, and of Chriſts laſt Will and Teſtament, is of farre other uſe, and of farre greater efficacy and excellency than any ordinary bread is, though it be the ſame ſtill in nature and ſubſtance with it. Relationes non faciunt realem mutationem in ſubjecto, ſed tantum in eſſe.

Tam verbi quam & Sacramentorum efficacia illa qua gratia ſunt exhibitiva, pendet primariò quidem & principaliter ab inſtitutione divinâ abſque qua nihil aut efficere aut obſignare ſunt nata: ſecundariò tamen ab uſu morali illo, quo tanquam medio neceſſario adhibito, ad gratiam tam ingenerandam, quam & fovendam & promovendam ſunt actu efficacia. Cl. Gataker. De Baptiſm. Infant. vi & efficacia Diſceptat. Sect. 7. Signa ſunt, 1. Naturalia, quæ à ſuapte ſuapte natura habent vim ſignificandi aliquid, ut ſumus indicium eſt ignis latentis, & pallor morbi: & lacrymæ doloris. 2. Inſtituta, quæ ſignificandi vim habent præter ſuam naturam ex peculiari inſtitutione, ut hodera ſuſpenſa vinum venale portendit: & annulus hodiè matrimonio dicatus eſt. Sic iridem Deus inſtituit, certam teſſeram nunquam rediturę diluvij. Chamier. de Sacr. l. 1. c. 11.

VII. Why hath the Lord made choice of ſuch an applying the Covenant of Grace by ſignes, and vouchſafed ſuch an Ordinance as this in the Church, ſeeing the ſame things are done by preaching of the Word and prayer?

Verbum non tantum offert ſed etiam confert gratiam; etſi minus clarè, & ſenſibus accommodatè: & Sacramenta quidem gratiam conferunt, ſed (ut ex Scholaſticis etiam ſenſit

There are excellent Reaſons of it:

First, It is a great part of Chriſts Sovereignty to make any thing, though never ſo contemptible a part of homage to him; no reaſon can be given of it, but onely his will; as a Lord will have Land paſſe by delivering a wand or twig.

Secondly, It is a glory to his power that he can make a little water or wine, ſign and ſeal the conquering of my ſins, and ſalvation of my ſoul.

Paludanus) virtute quidem ſigni diſpoſitivè: at immediata Spiritus Sancti virtute effectivè. Voſſius de Sacrament. vi & efficacia.

Thirdly, Chriſt hath herein exceedingly condeſcended to his peoples weakneſſe in applying the Covenant of Grace by ſigns, while we are in the fleſh to have ſenſitive things to repreſent ſpiritual, theſe ſigns inform the judgement, work on the affections, help the memory wonderfully, recall the Covenant of Grace, act faith and other graces; a naked word is enough to a ſtrong faith, but theſe are great props of our faith in our weakneſſe; ſo Gideon was confirmed; Thomas when he put his hand into Chriſts ſide. He acts the things before our eyes that he ſaith in his Word.

The Sacraments are the Goſpel abridged, ſigns and ſeals of our intereſt in the Covenant of Grace.

They differ thus.

Theirs were præannuntiative of Christ to come, Ours annuntiative of Christ exhibited, so Austin. Theirs were given to the Jewes, ours not to one but to all people.

1 Cor. 10.

The matter of both theirs and our Sacraments is one, They ate and dranke the same spiritual meat and drinke, that we do, that is, Christ. The effects also are the same in kind and nature, which is a partaking of Christ, they differ in the manner. Christ is more plentifully partaked in ours, more sparingly on theirs. Cartw. on Rhem. Test.

Circumcision is the same with Baptism for the spiritual part, it was the seal of the new-birth, Deut. 30. 6. so Baptism, Tit. 3. 5. Col. 2.

Secondly, Circumcision was a seal of the Righteousnesse of faith, Rom. 11. 11. so Baptism, Acts 8. it was the seal of the Covenant of Grace, so Baptism; it was the way of admittance and entrance into the Church, so Baptism, Matth. 28. Acts 2. it was the distinguishing badge between them who were Gods people and the rest of the world, so Baptism, 1 Cor. 5. 12. it was but once administred, so Baptism. None might eat the Passeover till they were circumcised, Exod. 12. nor are any to be admitted to the Lords Supper till they be baptized, Acts 2. 41, 42.

Mr Martial, Defence of Infant-Bapt. p. 185, 196.

Circumcision was a seal of the Covenant, Gen. 17. 10, 11. so Baptism: that being the nature of a Sacrament, it was a seal of the righteousnesse of faith, so Baptism, Acts 8. 37, 38.

2. It was the Sacrament of initiation under the Law, so is Baptism now under the Gospel, Mat. 28. 19.

5. It was partaked of but once, so Baptism.

Our Sacraments differ from the Sacraments of the Jews accidentally only, in things concerning the outward matter and form, as their number, quality, clearnesse of signification, and the like, not essentially in the thing signified, or grace confirmed, 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 3. John 6, 35. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Phil. 3. 3. Col. 2. 11.

IX. The Sacraments of the New Testament are only two.

* Siquis dixerit aut plura esse Sacramenta aut pauciora.

* All Christians agree that Christ hath established Baptism and the Lords Supper.

All the Reformed Churches concur in this, that there are but two only to which properly the definition of a Sacrament doth belong, though there may be many in a mea metaphorical ſenſe. The Papiſts ſay they are ſeven, adding Orders, Matrimony, Confirmation, Penance, Extream Unction, ſo called, becauſe it belongeth to the ſick in extremity.

The Fathers do commonly uſe the word Sacrament for a myſtery or ſign of a holy thing, ſo there may be many Sacraments.

But as the word (Sacramentum) is taken in a ſtraiter ſignification to note the viſible ſigns inſtituted by Chriſt for the aſſurance and increaſe of Grace in the faithfull, ſo there are but two. The Schoolmen themſelves who were the firſt authours that raiſed them up to the preciſe number of ſeven (for we find it not in any of the Fathers or other Writers whatſoever before a thouſand years after Chriſt) have ſhewed that the ſeven are not all Sacraments, if the name of Sacrament be taken properly and ſtraitly. Rainolds againſt Hart.

The five baſtard Sacraments, 1. Order; 2. Confirmation; 3. Extream Unction; 4. Penance; 5. Marriage, are no true Sacraments.

1. In every Sacrament is neceſſarily required an element or viſible matter, there is none in theſe.

2. Chriſt did inſtitute the proper Sacraments of the Church, not theſe.

3. They belong to all Chriſtians, becauſe they are ſeals of the new Covenant, which is made with all Chriſtians. Whitaker againſt Duræus.

The Schoolmen, Alenſis and Holcot have denied Confirmation to be from Chriſt his Inſtitution; their Hugo, Lombard, Bonaventure, Alenſis, Altiſſiodorus, have affirmed the ſame of Extream Unction: which in the primitive Church (by the judgement of their Caſſander) was not ſo extream. Matrimony and Confirmation were held by the Schoolmen to be no Sacrament.

John the Evangeliſt notes, that out of the ſide of Chriſt being dead, there came bloud and water; hence aroſe the Sacraments of the Church. Paul twice joyns them both together, 1 Cor. 10. 1. & 12. 12, 13.

The Fathers intreating preciſely of the Sacraments of the New Teſtament, do only expreſſe two, Baptiſm and the Euchariſt; ſo Ambroſe in his Treatiſe properly written of the Sacraments; and Cyril in his Book entituled a Catechiſm: Only Baptiſm and the Lords Supper in the New Teſtament were inſtituted by Chriſt, Matth. 28. 24. therefore they onely are Sacraments of the New Teſtament. Chriſt did only partake in theſe two. Paul acknowledgeth but theſe two, 1 Cor. 10. 2, 3, 4.

Matrimony

Matrimony, first, Being ordained before the fall, can be no Sacrament, which is a seal of the Promise and Covenant of Grace after, and by reason of the fall.

Cartw. on Match. 1. See Mr Cartw. Rejoynd. part 1. p. 297. Rogers of the Sacrament.

Secondly, It is not proper to the Church as Sacraments are, but common to Jews, Turks and Infidels.

Thirdly, Every Sacrament belongs to every member of the Church, but this belongs not to their Priests and Votaries. See Mr Clarkwrights Rejoynd. part 2. pag. 82, 83.

The Apostles anointed with oil by vertue of an extraordinary power to heal the sick, Act. 4. Iam. 5. 13.

Cajetane denies that the Text of John 20. 23. & Ephes. 5. 32. & James 5. 4. (being the sole grounds of Scripture which Papists have for three of their Sacraments, Auricular Confession, Matrimony and Extream Unction) do teach any such thing.

The Papists themselves deny Extream Unction to be necessary, either Necessitate præcepti, or Necessitate medii. They anoint only those that die of a disease, not children, nor mad men. Vide Dallæi Disputat. De Extrema Unctione, lib. 1. cap. 10.

The Roman Church (which derives and retains many Ceremonies observed by the Gentiles) borroweth that which they term Extream Unction.

It came not from the Lord to ordain one Sacrament for the Clergy, as Orders, a second for the Laity alone, as Marriage, a third for catechized ones, as Confirmation, a fourth for sick ones, as Unction; a fifth for lapsed ones, as Penance. These are no Scripture but tradition Sacraments.

Bellarmine saith, There are only two more principal ones.

The Council of Trent thus argues, There are seven defects of a man, seven degrees of the body, seven Ægyptian plagues, seven planets, seven dayes in the week (they should adde also seven heads of the Beast:) Therefore there are seven Sacraments. Vide Aquin. part. 3. Quæst. 65. Art. 1.

And Gregory de Valentia saith, The number of seven arose not from the Scripture.

X. The use of the Sacraments of the New Testament.

1. To quicken our dulnesse and stirre up our care in performing the duties whereto the Gospel bindeth us, viz. to endeavour and labour to repent and believe, and obey, out of an assured confidence that God will accept and help our endeavours.

2. To confirm and stablish our hearts in faith, that we may setledly believe that God hath and will perform the good things sealed up, viz. Remission of sins, sanctification and salvation, all the spiritual blessings of the new Covenant.

The uses or ends of the Sacrament are especially three:

1. To strengthen faith.
2. To seal the Covenant between God and us,
3. To be a badge of our profession. Arterf. of the Sac. l. 1. c. 3.

XI. Whether any other but a Minister, lawfully called and ordained, may administer the Sacraments, Baptism and the Lords Supper?

Augustana confessio sic loquitur, De ordine Ecclesiastico docent Ecclesiæ nostræ, quod nemo in Ecclesia debeat publicè docere, aut Sacramenta administrare, nisi rite vocatus, quæ confessionis verba opposita sunt calumniis Pontificiorum, qui dicunt omnia in Ecclesiis nostris confusè & sine ordine geri & cuivis in Ecclesia docendi potestatem apud nos concedi. Gerh loc. com. de Ministerio Ecclesiastico, cap. 3. Sect. 1. Res inter se perpetuo nexu conjunctæ, pascere Ecclesiam salutis Doctrina & Sacramenta administrare. Calvin. Catech. Relig. Christ. See Mr Baxters Infant Church membership. part 2. Errour 2, & 3.

It is held by the Reformed Churches, and by the soundest Protestant Writers, That neither of these Sacraments may be dispensed by any, but by a Minister of the Word, lawfully ordained.

1. God hath appointed the Ministers of the Word lawfully called and ordained, and no other to be stewards and dispensers of the mysteries of Christ, 1 Cor. 4. 1. Titus 1. 5, 7.

2. He hath appointed them to be Pastors or Shepherds, To feed the flock of God, Jer. 3. 15. Eph. 4. 11, Acts 20. 28. 1 Pet. 5. 2. much of this feeding consists in the dispensation of the Sacraments.

3. Christ

3. Christ gives a Commission to the Apostles to teach and baptize, and extends the same Commission to all teaching Ministers to the end of the world, Mat. 28. 19, 20. Eph. 4. 11, 12, 13.

Neither of the Sacraments have efficacy, unlesse they be administred by him that is lawfully called thereunto, or a person made publick and cloathed with Authority by Ordination. This errour in the matter of Baptism is begot by another errour of the absolute necessity of Baptism. Mr Hendersons second Paper to the King.

The Scripture joyneth together the preaching of the Word and dispensations of the seals, both belonging to the Officers who have received Commission from Jesus Christ, Mat. 28. 19. 1 Cor 1. Mr Ball.

Heb. 5. 4. No man takes this honour but he which is called, as was Aaron; which sentence doth manifestly shut out all private persons from administration of Baptism, seeing it is a singular honour in the Church of God. Cartw. 2d Reply, 11th Tractate.

The example of Zipporah either was rash or singular, and also no way like womens baptizing: Circumcision was then commanded the Head of the Family, Baptism belongs only to Ministers, Mat. 28. she circumcised her son when he was not in danger of death, as these baptize.

Chap. VIII.

Of Baptism.

BAptisme is taken sometimes for the superstitious Jewish ablutions and legal purifications, as certain representations of our Baptisme, as Mark 7. 3, 4. and Hebr. 9. 10. Sometimes by a Synecdoche for the Ministry of the Doctrine and Baptisme of John, Matth. 21. 25. Act. 1. 5. Sometimes for the miraculous and extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghost, Acts 1. 5. Sometimes by a Metaphor for the crosse and afflictions, Matth. 20. 22. Luke 12. 50. Lastly, for the signe of the Covenant of Grace, Matth. 28. 19, 20. Mark 16. 15, 16.

Dicitur Latinè Baptismus in genere masculino, in neutro quoq; Baptisma indiscriminatim apud omnes veteres Ecclesiasticos Scriptores. Hebræi habent duo vocabula quæ idem significant, quorum unum proprium est & speciale, alterum verò generale. Proprium est Rachatz quod est lavare, & mundare quippiam à sordibus. Baptismus & baptisma voces sunt, ad usum Latinæ Ecclesiæ, à priscis theologiæ translatæ; sed Græca origine. Gomar. Disputat. 32. De Baptismo.

Our Lord took Baptism (as some have observed) from the Jews baptizing of Proselytes, and washing of themselves from uncleanesse, which was known and usual among them. And he chose the Lords Supper likewise from a custom observed among the Jews at the Passeover: at the end of the celebration whereof the Fathers of Families were wont to take a Cake of bread, and after the blessing thereof, to break and distribute it to the Communicants: As also after that a Cup of wine in the like sort: Whereunto that may have reference, Psalm 116. 12, 13. Johns. Pref. to his Christian Plea.

This custom Mestrezat Tableau du Sacrament de la Saincte Cene also mentions, and saith, The Master of the Family in giving the bread to every one of his domesticks set at a Table, used these words, Hold; Eat, This is the bread of the misery which our Parents did eat in Ægypt, and he quotes Deut. 16. 3.

Baptism is the Sacrament of our inititiation or ingraffing into Christ, of our entrance into the Covenant and the solemn publick and visible way of admission of members into the Church, Rom. 6. 3. our insition and incorporation into Christ is signified and sealed up by Baptisme: and hence it is once administred, and

See Dr Gouge on Eph. 5. 26. Baptismus signum est initiationis quo in and never again to be repeated because of the stability of the Covenant of Grace.

Mr Thorndike in his Covenant of Grace, Chap. 5. observes, that there is a Pamphlet out under the Title of The Doctrine of Baptismes, attributed to the Master of a Colledge in one of the Universities, the intent whereof is, by a studied Discourse to prove, that it was never the intent of our Lord and his Apostles, that the Baptism of water should be used to make men Christians with. How that University (saith he) will wash their hands of acknowledging, as Master of a Colledge, one who cannot passe for a Christian among Christians, supposing him the Author of this Book, is not for this place to enquire.

Baptism is a Sacramen of Regeneration, wherein by outward washing of the body with water, In the Name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, the inward cleansing of our souls by the bloud of Christ is represented and sealed up unto us, Titus 3. 5. Matth. 28. 19. Ephes. 5. 2. Doctor Gouges Catechism.

It may be thus briefly described:

Baptismus est Sacramentum, quo aqua in nomine Patris, Filii & Spiritus sancti semel abluti Christo initiamur ad profitendum sanguine Christi nos à peccatis ablui. Rami Comment. de Relig. Christ. l. 4. c. 5. Baptismus ab Ecclesiasticis scriptoribus appellatur Sacramentum insitionis & initiationis in Christo, idque tribus potissimum de causis. 1. Quia successit in locum circumcisionis, quæ olim Sacramentum fuit primæ admissionis in populum Dei. 2. Quia per Baptismum repræsentatur mors peccati, mortificatio veteris hominis, purgatio à peccatis & hominis à morte ad vitam traductio: quæ omnia cum reali insitione & initiatione in Christo sunt conjunctissima, primamque vocationem propriè denotant. 3. Quia per Baptismum prima nostra cooptatio in familiam & regnum Christi repræsentatur. Unde in Christum quoque baptizari dicimur: adeóque distinguitur hoc modo Baptismus à Cœna Domini. Wendel. Christ. Theol. l. 1. c. 22.

It is the first Sacrament of the New Testament, wherein every one that is admitted into the Covenant of Grace being by Christs Minister washed in water, In the Name of the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost, is thereby publickly declared to belong to Christs Family, and to partake of all the benefits that belong to a Christian.

First Sacrament, because first instituted and by the Lords order first to be administred, being a Sacrament of our new birth.

2. Of the New Testament, because the old Sacraments ended with the old administration of the Covenant, wherein the way to the Kingdom of Heaven is more clearly revealed.

3. Instituted by Christ himself the author of it.

4. The subject, it belongs to all persons who can lay claim to the Covenant.

5. To be administred by one of Christs Ministers, Mat. 28. 19. He never gave commission to any to administer this Sacrament to whom he gave not authority to preach.

6. The form, to wash with water, In the Name of the Father, Son and holy Ghost. See Aquin. partem tertiam Quæst. 66. Art. 6. Utrum in nomine Christi possit dari Baptismus. See also the 5th Article there.

7. The use and end of it is to to be a publick declaration from God, that one belongs to Christs family, and partakes of all the benefits that concern a Christian. See of the uses of Baptism. Perk. Cas. of Consc. l. 2. p. 130, to 135.

A converted Pagan which makes profession of his faith, and a child not baptized may have right, but this is a solemn declaration of it.

This washing with water, In the Name of the Father, Son and holy Ghost, properly and by the Lords appointment notes the washing with the holy Ghost, John 3. 5. Tit. 3. 5. Mat. 3. 16. The Spirit descended like a Dove, not only to confirm the Godhead of Christ, but to shew the fruit of Baptism, Heaven is opened and the Spirit poured out abundantly. The Lutherans and Papists say, we make it Signum inutile, it is not a naked and bare sign.

The great Gospel promise was the pouring out of the holy Ghost, and the sign water, Esay 44 3. Zech. 13. 1. The Analogy lies in this, the first office done to a new born child is the washing of it from the pollution of the flesh which it brings from the mothers womb; so the first office Gods Spirit doth, is to purge us from our filthinesse. In the Eastern Countreys when they would shew no pity to their childe, childe, they threw it out unwasht, Ezek. 16. 15.

Baptism is a publick tessera or seal of the Covenant:

First, The priviledges of the children of God by Baptism are many.

1. I am united to Christ and ingrafted into that stock, his Spirit poured out on the soul is the bond of union between Christ and the soul, therefore we are often said to be baptized into Christ, Rom. 6. 3. Gal 3. 27.

2. Hereby we are declared to be the sonnes of God; we are said to be regenerate by him, that is sacramentally; Baptism is a publick standing pledge of our Adoption.

3. It is a constant visible pledge that all our sins are done away in the bloud of Jesus Christ; therefore these are joyned together in Scripture, Mark 1. Acts 2. 38. See Acts 22. 16. Rom. 6. 18. Eph 5. 26.

4. It seals to us a partaking of the life of Christ, our Regeneration and Sanctification. See Acts 19. begin. It is called the Laver of our Regeneration, Titus.

5. It seals to us the mortifying of all the reliques of corruption, and that we shall rise out of our graves to enjoy that eternal life purchased by Christs bloud.

6. It gives us a right to all Gods Ordinances.

Lucian scoffingly said, he got nothing by his Baptism but a syllable to his Name; when he was a Pagan; he was called Lucius after Lucianus, so Genebrard. See Camd. Rem. Surnames. Lewis the 9th King of France call'd St Lewis, was baptized in the little Town of Poyssy; and after his return from Ægypt and other places against the Saracens, being asked by what Title he would be distinguished from the rest of his Predecessors after his death? He answered, That he desired to be called Lewis of Poyssy. Reply being made, That there were divers other places and Cities of Renown where he had performed brave exploits, and obtained famous victories, therefore it was more fitting that some of those places should denominate him. No (said he) I desire to be called Lewis of Poyssy, because there I got the most glorious victory that ever I had; for there I overcame the Devil: meaning, that he was christened there.

Baptism is not thus effectual to all but only to the elect, Mark 16. 16. These great benefits of union with Christ, regeneration and pardon of sinne are not alwayes bestowed at Baptism, Acts 19. 3, 4.

Secondly, The Duties Baptism doth ingage us unto.

All that Christ requires of his people either in faithfulnesse to him, or love and unity to his Saints, Rom 6. We are buried with Christ in Baptism, therefore are obliged to walk holily, Ephes. 4. When the Apostle presseth the people of God to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, he saith, There is one Baptisme.

Baptism serveth for two uses:

First, To teach us our filthinesse that have need of washing, and to bind us to seek to God for the spiritual washing.

Secondly, To assure us by pawning the truth and fidelity of God unto us for that end, that upon our so doing we shall be washed with the bloud and Spirit of Christ.

We should make use of our Baptism:

1. To resist actual temptations, I have given up all to Christ, 1 Cor. 6. 15.

2. As a cordial in all dejections of spirit, Shall I doubt of the love of God and pardon of my sin sealed to me in Baptism?

3. In our prayers to God, he hath given us his hand and seal, 2 Sam. 7. 27.

In Baptism we devote our selves to God: it's an Oath of fealty to Christs Laws: As therefore Baptism is a pledge to us of what we may look for from God, so it is likewise a pledge of what he may expect from us, it will be a witnesse against us if we make not right use of it, Psalm 87. 6. See Jer. 9. 26. & Acts 7. 51.

The Turks say, what, a Mussel man, one that is a professed servant of Mahomet (as we say baptized) to do this! See Rom. 6. 2.

Luther tels a story of a pious Gentlewoman, that when the Devil tempted her to sin, she answered Satan still, Baptizata sum, I am baptized.

Ex veteri Ecclesia consuetudine in Baptismo renunciatur Satanæ & pompis ejus. Vossius de orig. & progres. Idol. We cannot serve both God and the Devil, such contrary Lords, Mat. 6 24. See 1 Cor, 10. 21.

Baptiſm is adminiſtred but once, the uſe of it continueth as long as we live. We ſhould make uſe of it:

1. To quicken our repentance? Have I ſo long ago promiſed to renounce all ſin, and yet am I hard hearted and impenitent? The Scripture cals it the Baptiſm of repentance for remiſſion of ſins, becauſe it ſerveth not alone as a bond to tie us to ſeek to God for repentance, and to ſet upon that work, but alſo to tie the Lord God unto us to give us the grace of repentance when we ſeek it at his hands, and endeavour to practiſe it, and whereby we are ſaid to put on Chriſt, and to be baptized into Chriſt and his death, becauſe the Lord will as aſſuredly ingraff us into Chriſt, and clothe us with his righteouſneſs, as we have the outward waſhing, if we deprive not our ſelves thereof by our own careleſneſſe.

2. We ſhould ſtir up our ſelves to walk cheerfully in Gods Commandments: Hath he promiſed to ſanctifie me, and ſhall I live as the men of the world?

The Parts of Baptiſm,

The eſſential Parts of Baptiſm, are the Matter and the Form.

That the Matter of Baptiſm is water, it appears from the word baptizing, which ſignifies waſhing, the Miniſtry of John and the Apoſtles of Chriſt, Matth. 3. John 1. 31, 33. that anſwers to the flood, the Red Sea, and divers purifications of the Law, 1 Cor. 10. 1 Peter 3 Heb. 9. it alſo well agrees with the thing ſignified, viz. with the bloud of Chriſt, and the waſhing away of ſinnes by his bloud.

The Papiſts groſly abuſe the Sacrament of Baptiſm by their own devices, they add divers Ceremonies to Baptiſm, they have their oil, cream, their lights, tapers, &c.

The firſt Baptiſm in the New Teſtament was in the River water, and at the River Jordan, Mat. 3. 6. afterward ſome were baptized in fountains, as the Eunuch, Acts 8. 38. Some in Rivers as Lydia, Act. 16. 15. ſome in particular houſes as the Gaoler in the priſon, ver. 33. of the ſame Chapter. Vide Voſſ. in Theſ. See Mr Beaſ. on the Sac. par. 1. c. 2.

That which Chriſt did to one man, they will do to all, yea to young children, whom they hold not to be of the Church before they be baptized: That he did extraordinarily they make ordinary; that he did in healing the body, they will do in healing the ſoul, preferring their filthy ſpittle (which they make the meanes of curing the ſoul) unto our Saviours ſpittle, who applied his only to the cure of the body. Garn. on Mark 7. 34. See Dr Hampſon on 1 Joh. 2. 19. p. 16. Materia Baptiſmi olim alia veteribus quam novis Romanis: nunc benedicta aqua infunditur capiti baptizandi, antiquitus pura aqua aut etiam perennis, ac fluminea. Salmaſ. Apparat. ad primat. Pap.

Some object Acts 2. 38. & 19. 5. as if it were enough to baptize only in the Name of Chriſt. Part there by a Synecdoche is put for the whole, it being a form of Baptiſm known in thoſe times. Id eſt (ſaith Grotius in Acts 19. 5.) in nomen Patris & Filii & Spiritus Sancti.

Baptiſm borrowing a Ceremony from exoreiſing, which in thoſe dayes was a giſt in the Church of caſting out Devils by adjuration, it ſignified thereby not that men before Baptiſm are poſſeſſed with the Devil, but firſt what they are by nature, that is, children of wrath and ſervants of the Devil, and ſecondly, what they are by grace (whereof Baptiſm is a Sacrament) that is, freed from the bondage of Satan, and made coheirs of the Kingdom of Heaven. Dr Chaſon.

In the Weſt (or Latine) Church, the Miniſter ſpeaketh thus to him that is baptized, Ego baptizo te, &c. In the Eaſt or Greek Church, Baptizetur iſte, &c. but it is no material difference. Beza likes that form of the Latines beſt.

The Rites or Ceremonies of Baptiſm.

Dr Featleys Animad. upon the Anabapt. Confeſſ.

In the beginning Chriſtians had no Churches nor Fonts in them, and there being many hundreds, nay thouſands to be baptized together, there was a neceſſity that this Sacrament ſhould be adminiſtred in Rivers, or ſuch places where was ſtore of waters, John 3. 22. See Mat. 3. 6. Acts 8. 38.

The Rites of Baptiſm in the Primitive times were performed in Rivers and Fountains, whence the perſon to be baptized ſtood up and received the Sacrament. This manner of baptizing the ancient Church entertained from the example of our Saviour who baptized John in Jordan; this was convenient for that time, becauſe their converts were many and men of years. Hence it is that we call our veſſels which contain the water of Baptiſm Fonts or Fountains. Ridley of the Civil Law.

Zanchius

Zanchius and Mr Perkins preferre (in persons of age and hot Countries where it may be safe) the Ceremony of immersion under the water, before that of sprinkling or laying on the water, as holding more Analogy to that of Paul, Rom. 6. 4. That we are buried with Christ in Baptism. Dr Burges of the Cerem.

Sprinkling of water is no instituted Ceremony distinct from that washing which Christs Apostles used. It is very probable also that the Apostles going into the colder part of the world did use sprinkling. Dr Ames against Dr Burgess, par. 2. pag. 140.

The allusion of burying with Christ in Baptism is for us rather, we lay men in the grave with their faces upwards, and do not plunge them into the dust and earth, but poure and sprinkle dust and broken earth upon them. Cobbet of Baptism par. 2. c. 3. sect. 16.

Those expressions which the Anabaptists so much insist upon, being born of water, John 3. 5. Buried by Baptism, Rom. 6. 4. And buried through Baptism, Col. 2. 12. are meerly figurative and do not bind us to any literal observance.

It is the received Doctrine of all the Protestant Churches now (as their practice, together with their Catechisms, and divers of their Liturgies, sufficiently demonstrateth) that it is a thing indifferent whether Baptism be performed by immersion, a total washing of the body, or by sprinkling the head or face only. Master Lawrence pleades much for the Ceremony of Dipping, in his Treatise of Baptisme, chap. 4th & 5th.

The Ceremony used in Baptism is either dipping or sprinkling, dipping is the more antient, at first they went down into the Rivers, afterwards they were dipped in the Fonts. In colder climates, and in case of weakness, the custom of the Church hath been to pour water on the face. The substance is washing, hence Baptism is termed washing, Epes. 5. 26. Tit. 3. 5. to wash the body either in whole or part, and so that this be done the manner is dispensable by the Church.

Dipping over head and ears is hurtfull to the life and chastity of man, many in hotter climates at some times of the year cannot be plunged over the head in cold water without hazard of life or health.

2. Sacraments are to be celebrated in the face of the Congregation, it is a scandal for naked men to go into the water with women. Master Bailey's second Book, Chap. 7.

The Necessity of Baptism:

This grows from Gods command and our weakneſſe: not the compelled want, but the careleſſe neglect and wilfull contempt of it doth damn.

Some who are baptized are nevertheleſſe condemned, becauſe they believe not: and ſome who believe are ſaved, though they be not baptized.

Auguſtine held that children dying unbaptized are neceſſarily damned, and in that regard was ſtiled Durus Pater infantum.

It was the opinion of Pelagius (ſaith Auſtin. de Haret. c. 88.) That children dying unbaptized, do enjoy a certain bleſſed life out of the Kingdom of God. Auguſtine in that Doctrine in which he dealt with the Pelagians (ſaith Rivet) bended the Tree too much the other way, that he might make it ſtraight.

The Papiſts make Baptiſm abſolutely neceſſary. Vide Bellarm. de Statu peccati, l. 6, c. 2. but Circumſion (being the ſame in uſe and ſignification with Baptiſm) was omitted in the Wilderneſſe fourty years. David doubted not of his uncircumciſed childes ſalvation, and children are holy in the root through their believing parents, 1 Cor. 7. 14.

1. Grace is not tied to the Word, therefore not to the Sacraments.

2. They were ſeparate in the firſt and greateſt Miniſter of Baptiſm, John himſelf, who confeſſed that he could not baptize but with water.

3. The every baptized party ſhould be truly regenerate, but the contrary appears in Simon Magus, Ananias and Saphira, and others.

4. Some are juſtified before Baptiſm, as Abraham was, Rom. 4. 10. Cornelius, Acts 10. 47. the Eunuch, v. 37, 38. ſome after Baptiſm, as many who are daily converted, ſome out of Popery, ſome out of prophaneneſſe.

The opinion of tying grace to the Sacraments, overthroweth

1. The higheſt and moſt proper cauſe of our ſalvation, which is Gods free election to which only grace is tyed.

2. The only meritorious cauſe of our Regeneration, which is the bloud of Chriſt properly purging us from all ſin.

3. The moſt powerfull, next and applying efficient, which is the holy Ghoſt, Titus 3. 5.

The Papiſts thruſt the ſouls of ſuch babes as dye without Baptiſm into a Limbus puerorum, a place very near Hell, and their bodies out of Chriſtian burial (as they call it) into an unhallowed place. The Thief on the Croſſe wanted the outward Baptiſm, yet was ſaved, Luke 23. 43. He that believeth and is baptized ſhall be ſaved. See Maſter Perk. Caſ. of Conſc. l. 2. p. 108, to 115.

Baptiſm is neceſſary not only as a thing commanded, but as an ordinary means of Salvation, yet that neceſſity is not ſo abſolute, that the denial of Baptiſm even to Infants ſhould be a certain argument of perdition.

The Perſons who muſt baptize:

The Papiſts ſay, Thoſe that are not ordained, and women in caſe of neceſſity may baptize.

1. The Miniſter in his miniſterial actions ſuſtaineth the perſon of Chriſt, which a woman cannot do.

2. Thoſe which are called to baptize, are called alſo to preach, for the Sacrament without the Word is a dumb Ceremony, and as a Seal to a blank; and Paul who would not permit a woman to teach miniſterially, would much leſſe ſuffer her to baptize. Christ commands all Nations to be baptized, Infants are part of a Nation, Mat. 28.11. I think the Apostle doth plainly hold, *Col.*2. that Baptism hath succeeded in the room of Circumcision, which is also the common and received opinion of Divines. Gillesp. Miscel. c. 18.

In the Old Testament a Jew, qua Jew, had a right to have his child circumcised, when the Father by reason of his uncleanness was uncapable of the Passeover, the child might be circumcised.

As all children are part of their Parents, make but one person by the Laws of God and men; so Christian Infants are one person with their Christian Parents, and make but one body with them, as the root and branches are but one Tree; and this by divine ordination, and especially in obligations to duties, and right unto favours and priviledges spirituall, so far as they are capable.

We derive Baptism of Infants from the force of Christs words of institution, and of his discourse with Nicodemus, and the Analogy of circumcision, and the practice of the Jews in baptizing their children, and many proprieties of the Scripture, and the effect of the Sacrament, and the necessities of generation. Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, l. 2. c. 3.

Infants of Christian Parents ought to be baptized, because the children of the Jews in Covenant were circumcised, for let the particular differences between Circumcision and Baptism be never so many, yet in this they agree, that they are both Sacraments of initiation, and so belong to them that be in Covenant, the faithfull and their seed. That which confirms me f in the belief that the Apostles did baptize Infants where they baptized housholds, where fathers and children were together, is, because of the continued practice of it in the Church of God ever since, of which we have as good evidence as of any controverted point in Ecclesiasticall History. f Gertes Vindic. Pædo baptism. cap. 3. The most antient credible Writers refer the original of Baptism of Infants to the Apostles times. Churches Divine warrant of Infant Baptism, Argument 4th.

Supposing Infant-baptism a nullity, I cannot understand how any in the world should this day be lawfully baptized, unlesse it can be made good that a person unbaptized himself may be a lawfull Minister of Baptism to others: for certainly untill the Anabaptists arose in Germany, all the baptized world were baptized while they were Infants, and consequently the first Anabaptist was baptized by an unbaptized person, and so in conclusion we must all turn Seekers, and be content without Baptism till Christ give some extraordinary commission from Heaven unto some men to be Apostles in this businesse. Mr Marvials Denfence of Infant-baptism, p. 245. Quicunque parvulos recentes ab uteris matrum baptizandos negat, anathema esto. Concil. Milvit, Can. 20. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, part. 1. Sect. 9. Of Baptizing Infants. See more there. I am verily perswaded with Augustine, that there hath been a continued series of the Baptism of Infants from the utmost Antiquity, from the Apostles age to this very day. Master Stephens of the Baptism of Infants. See Master Baxters Infant Church-membership, par. 2. chap. 15.

A man by embracing one errour undertakes for all of the same cognation and line; as for example, He that is entangled with the errour of those who deny the lawfulnesse of Infant-baptism, stands obliged, through his engagement to this one errour, to maintain many erroneous and Anti-Evangelical opinions. Mr Goodwins Preface to his Redemption Redeemed. He reckons up eight errours there. God alwayes made provision for Infants, under the Law by circumcision, then there was a promise suitable to it, Deut. 30. 6. and there is a promise suitable to Baptism, Isa. 44. 3.

Where ever God takes Parents into Covenant, he takes their children also. See Deut. 27. 14, 15. Gen. 17. 7, 12, 13, 14.

2. Infants are as capable of the benefits of Baptism as men, there is no benefit of Baptism, but the party that receiveth it is passive, we are said to be brptized into Christ, to be made one with him, the union begins on his part, so to receive remission of sin. Exod. 12. 48, 49. compared with Act. 2. 38, 39. & 3. 25. & 16. 15.

3. Infants while they are so, may be truely members of a visible Church, Luke 18. 16. Col. 2. 11, 12.

One hath better ground to go by to administer Baptism to a child of believing Parents, then to men of years; a mans profession may be unsound and hypocritical, for the other I have Gods promise, I will be thy God, and the God of thy Seed. What Abraham had by circumcision, the Saints have by Baptism; for so the Apostle intimates in that place of the Colossians. Master Laurence of Baptism, chap. 9. (though he oppose this place alleadged for this purpose,) yet he saith this Argument seems to carry the greatest weight, and to speak loudest for Infant-baptism of any other. Master Tombes in his 3d Part Sect. 17th saith, It is doubtfull in what sense Baptism is said to be a seal of the Covenant of Grace, so as to be the genus of it; or whether it seal the making of the Covenant, or the performing of it, or the thing covenanted, what they mean by the Covenant of Grace, which is that Covenant, whether it seal all or a part of it; whether it seal Gods Covenanting to us, or our Covenanting to God, Acts 2. 38, 39. There is mention of children in the reason, therefore the precept of baptizing there spoken of implieth them also, otherwise how will the Anabaptists prove, by the institution, or first celebration of the Lords Supper, that women shall be partakers thereof? Seeing that neither there, nor elsewhere in the New Testament there is mention of any women by name, that were present and did partake thereof. And yet seeing the reasons that are annexed to the precepts thereof, do necessarily imply women as well as men, and there is no where any special prohibition to the contrary, who can deny it unto them without great sinne and impiety? Mat. 26. 17. & 20. 26, 27, 28. Luk. 22. 14, 19, 20. 1 Cor. 11. 23, 24, 25. Johns. Christians Plea. Treat. 1. p. 6.

The

The Anabaptists,

Though the other errors of Anabaptists be ancient, a thousand years old, yet the denying of Baptism to children was never heard of till within a hundred years and less. Dr Donne.

1. Frame a Covenant that God never made, with Parents without their seed: the Covenant of Grace alwaies was with Parents and their seed, in the first discovery of it, *Gen.*3.15. therefore Eve is called the mother of us all: So before the Flood, *Gen.*6.18. and after 9.9.

2. By this means there is great injury done to Infants, for *of such is the Kingdome of Heaven; it is a great evil to seclude any from the Ordinances that have a right, *Gal.*3.15. the Covenant of grace is also a Testament, there is no child so young but he may have his name put in his fathers will, 1 *Cor.*10 23.

3. Hereby the practice and prayers of the Church are sleighted, Consuetudo matris Ecclesiæ in baptizandis parvulis nequaquam spernenda est, neque ullo modo superflua deputanda. August. de Genes. ad literam c. 22. The Pelagians of old and Anabaptists of late are to be condemned therefore, who deny Baptism to be administred to children.

The Anabaptists bid us prove that children are of the Church, and to be baptized: But we require of them proof, how they are cast out of the Church, and Baptism thereof; And how the grace of God is so shortened by Christs coming in the flesh, as to cast out of the Church the greatest part of the Church, before the Infants of believers: * Neque hoc leviter præterendum est, quod infantes sibi offerri Christus jubet, addita ratione, Quoniam talium est regnum Cœlorum. Si eorum est regnum cœlorum, cur signum negabitur. Calv. Instit. l.4.c.16.

See Master Baxters Infants Church-membership, *par.*2. c.1,2,3,4,5,6.

The main Arguments to disprove baptizing of Infants, answered.

Object. Every one that is baptized is first to be made a Disciple by teaching, because Chrst saith plainly *Matth.*28.19. Go teach all Nations and baptize them, thereby intimating that they should not baptize those who were not made Disciples by teaching. Infants cannot be made Disciples by teaching, Ergò, Infants may not be baptized.

Answ. The major is false, and the proof brought for it doth not confirm it. For Christ doth not here prescribe a course to his Apostles to be observed toward all, but alone toward those Nations which were to be newly converted unto Christ, and there is a great difference betwixt these, and the Infants of beleeving Parents.

Distinguere oportet inter Ecclesiam constituendam & constitutam: in illa adulti prius docendi, & ubi crediderint, tum ipsi, tum ipsorum liberi sunt baptizandi: in hac vero infantes prius baptizandi ac postea sunt docendi. Vide Gen. 17. 10. & 21. 4. Vossius in Thes. & Disputat. 13. de baptism. Vide Horas Hebraicas D. Lightf. c.28. v.19. p.323.

To the minor, I answer, by distinguishing; there are Disciples made actually and virtually. Infants cannot be made Disciples by teaching actually, but they are made such virtually by their Parents accepting of the Doctrine of the Gospel.

Object. All that are to be baptized have actual faith and repentance. See Mark 1.4. *Act.*2.37. onely such were baptized by the Apostles, as appears in divers places, Whosoever believeth and is baptized, &c. Now Infants have not actual faith, but onely an external profession of faith, Therefore they must not be baptized.

Per fidem in infantibus intelligimus principium sive semen fidei, non habitum fidei aut actualem fidem. Potentia respondet semini, habitus arbori, actus fructui. Semen fidei etiam in infantibus esse potest. Habitus non est, nisi eorum qui operantur ex habitu. Voss. in Thesibus. Sunt increduli infantes negativè salutari fidei habitu destituuntur, non positivè, contrario habitu non sunt polluti. Id. ibid. & Disputat. de Baptismo. Pœnitentia exigitur ab iis qui pœnitenda egerunt, Rom.9.2. Voss. Disputat. 15. de Baptismo

Answ. All that are to be baptized have not an actual faith, but onely an external profession of faith, as appeareth, because even hypocrites are baptized that onely make a shew to believe and repent. Infants have an outward profession of faith in their Parents which bring them to Baptism, and desire Baptism for them, for the profession of faith made by the Parents is to be taken also for the childe. The places which shew how the Apostles baptized believers, do not prove that all must in Children that were to be circumcised the eighth day, could neither believe nor make a profession of their faith. See Mr Brinsleys Doctrine and Practice of Pœdo-bapt. p.86,87,88,89. Quæ igitur hæc qua nos impetunt argumentationis erit forma? Qui adulta sunt ætate, antè instituendi sunt, ut credant, quam baptizandi: Baptismum ergo infantibus communem facere nefas est. Calv. Instit. l.4.c.16. De quæstione ista, an Infantes præditi sint fide justificante. Vide Wendilini Christ. Theol. Systema minus, l.1.c.24.p.1033,1034.

their

their own persons make actual profession of faith, but only that such ought as are there spoken of, viz. men of years, to be converted from another Religion to Christianity. For in all places where mention is made of the Apostles baptizing believers, they have to do with persons converted from some other Religion to the Religion of Christ. Therefore those places prove only that all such ought to make profession of actual faith in their own persons, but they prove not that this is absolutely required of all to be baptized.

By Act. 16. 29, 30, 31, 32, 33. it will appear, that though a Profession of faith be required, yet not a distinct belief of every thing in Christs Religion, for that could not be comprehended in the space of an hour, so Act. 8. 35, 37. and 18. 5, 8. and in all other places, there was so little space between their Preaching, and baptizing, that they could not well be taught more than this, that he was the Messiah, or Christ that was expected, and that all must be obedient to him. Mr Patricks Aqua Genitalis, or Discourse concerning Baptism.

We say (saith Whitaker against Duræus) that to men of years without faith, Baptism is a Sacrament, but not a saving Sacrament; to children of believing Parents, though they cannot for their years believe, yet it is a saving Sacrament, as Circumcision was to the Infants of the Jews. For we doubt not but the Spirit of God is powerfull unto them after a hidden and wonderfull manner. As in the examples of Jacob, Jeremy, John Baptist, and others.

Object. Christ was not baptized till he came to years, Therefore we should defer it till then.

Ans. He was circumcised in his Infancy, and so did partake of all Ordinances, (Luk. 2. 21.) in the Jewish Church, as a member of the same, therefore he could not be then baptized, because the time of bringing in Gospel-administrations was not yet come.

2. There is not the same reason for us; this Ordinance was commanded by Christs institution, and commended by his example.

Object. What hath neither example nor precept, nor just consequence out of the Word to warrant it, that is evil, Gods Word is generally a lanthorn to our feet, and a light to our paths.

Answ. Baptizing of Infants hath a general and implicit precept for it, though not expresse and direct in so many words, Matth. 28. 19. Baptizing them; By Them our Saviour doth not mean only the persons themselves that are made Disciples, but them and theirs considered as a whole body, and a Nation to be made a Church to him. The believing Gentiles are graffed into the good Olive, instead of the unbelieving Jews cut off, therefore in what sort those Jews stood in that Olive before their cutting off, in the same state stand these Gentiles since their graffing, seeing they are equally made partakers of the root and fatnesse of the Olive, Rom. 11. 17. Now the believing Jews stood so in the Olive, that every one did bring his seed into the same participation of the Olive with himself, so the whole body was counted to be in that alone, as well Infants as others. For the Apostle saith, The Promises are made to you and to your children; And Moses saith, That the little ones did enter into a Covenant with God, that he should stablish them for a people to himself, and that he might be unto them a God, Deut. 29. 11. & 26. 16, 17. wherein Infants

See Brinsleys Doctrine and Practice of Pœdobaptism, pag. 70, 71, 72, 73, 74.

This divine Evangelical Institution, was consigned by three Evangelists, Matth. 28. 19. Mark 16. 16. John 3. 5. agreeable to the decretory words of God by Abraham in the Circumcision, to which Baptism doth succeed in the consignation of the same Covenant, and the same spiritual promises, Gen. 17. 14. The words are so plain that they need no Exposition, and yet if they had been obscure, the universal practice of the Apostles and the Church for ever, is a sufficient declaration of the Commandment. No Tradition is more universal, no not of the Scripture it self, no words are plainer, no not the Ten Commandments. Doctor Taylors Discourse of Baptism. Anabaptists say, Where have we taught that Infants should be baptized in all the Scripture? Not in expresse termes, but by just consequence we have it; From the General, Matth. 28. 19. From Parity, Gen. 17. 14. From Principles, Acts 2. 39. Where find we (saith Bellarmine de Justic. lib 2. & lib. 1. cap 16.) that Christs Righteousnesse is imputed to us for Justification? In expresse termes we have it not, but virtually and by just consequence we have it, 2 Cor. 5. 21. In the equivalent we have it, Rom. 5. 17, 18, 19. We find no where those words, James 4. 5. in all the Scripture in expresse terms. By deduction we have them, Numb. 11. 29. Doctor Sclater on Rom. 4. 6. Baptism was used in the Church of the Jews long before John Baptist baptized, there needeth not therefore a particular precept or example, it having been well known and used before. Christ conformed to the Church of Israel in his Gospel-institutions, in the Lords-Prayer, Ministry and Baptism. Universall custom and consent gives a great gloss and lustre to the Canon of the Scripture, to the Lords-day, and to Infant-baptism, as well as to Episcopal-eminency. Dr Gaudens Anti Baal-Berith.

as parts of the whole body must be conceived. Therefore it will follow that when a Nation or people by believing and being baptized do avouch God for their God, and are avouched by God for his people, then the whole body of the people so doing, their Infants and all comprehended, are to be accounted so to vouch him, and are avouched of him, which being proved, we have here a precept to baptize such, because they also are part of the Nations made Disciples, not actually but virtually, as the Israelitish Infants could not actually make a Covenant with God, but virtually in their Parents.

It can be no good Argument to say, the Apostles are not read to have baptized Infants, Therefore Infants are not to be baptized: but thus, We do not find that Infants are excluded from the Sacraments and Ceremonies of Christs institution, Therefore we may not presume to exclude them. For although the negative of a fact is no good Argument, yet the negative of a Law is a very good one. We may not say, the Apostles did not, Therefore we may not: But thus, they were not forbidden to do it, there is no Law against it, Therefore it may be done. Doctor Taylors Discourse of Baptism, part 2.

Secondly, We have most probable examples, for we read of housho'ds baptized, and therefore also children which were a part of the household, yea Act. 16.33. It is said, the Goaler and all his were baptized, not all that believed, but all his, whereby it is most probable, that he had Infants which were baptized, for else why is it said all his, not all those that believed or received his Word; or if he had no such Infants it is all one: For had there been Infants, this shews they should have been baptized seeing they were some of his. Indeed it is said, He did preach the Word to all in the house, but they were not all his, and perhaps not all baptized, for it is not said, they did believe; but whether they did or no, he did, and whether they were baptized all of them or no, yet all his were. For it is no news for a Goaler to have more in his house than be his, even strangers from his Family.

Act. 16.15. 1 Cor. 1.16, the Apostles baptized whole houses without any exception and distinction of person and age, that Infants are comprehended under houses and families, it is evident by the use of the whole Scripture, Gen. 14. 16. & 18. 19. Prov. 31.15. Luk. 19.9. Act. 11.16. & 16.31.

M^r Toombes in his 3^d part. Sect. 18. saith besides this, that no Infants are there expressed, in the same Chapter or elsewhere, the speech is plainly interpreted to be meant of those that heard the Word, and believed, as Act. 11.14. & 16 32, 34. & 18. 8. 1 Cor. 16. 15. as if the holy Ghost had of purpose prevented this misconstruction and frivolous consequence of Pœdobaptists.

We should take heed of wronging our children, by neglect or contempt of Baptism.

1. This is a wrong to God, we rob him of his portion, the children of those that are in the Covenant are his; and we gratifie the Devil by it, he ever had a spight to the holy Seed.

2. It is a wrong to our children, grudg not Gods bounty to them, ingage them unto him betime, and to our selves, 1 Cor. 7.14.

3. It is a wrong to the Church, we seek to cut off the continuance of it, Psal. 102. ult.

M^r Wheatley at the end of new-birth.

Parents must bring their children therefore to Baptism with an high esteem of that Ordinance, and with fervent prayers to God for his blessing upon it, that it may be effectual for their regeneration. Set a day (at least some good time) apart to seek the face of God, to confesse thy sins, chiefly the original sin which thou hast derived to thine Infant, lament it in thy self, and lament it in and for him; Baptism cannot be reiterated as the Lords Supper, therefore what thou canst do but once for thy child, be carefull to do it in the best manner.

Parents should offer their children to God in Baptism:

1. With earnest prayers to God for a blessing on his Ordinance.

2. In faith, plead your right with God, he hath promised to be the God of his people and of their seed, there are promises which suite with the Ordinance, Deut. 13.6. Isa. 44.3.

3. With reverence, Gen. 17.2, 3. 2 Sam. 7.18, 19. their hearts should be affected with with that great priviledg, that God ſhould take themſelves and their ſeed into the Covenant.

The Baptiſm of Infants without a mighty cauſe, and in a ſort compelling, is not to be deferred:

Firſt, Becauſe the equity of the eighth day appointed for Circumciſion hinders the procraſtination of it.

Secondly, Becauſe this delaying of it ſhews a kind of contempt of the Ordinance.

It was a common but an erroneous practice even in the Primitive Church, to deferre their Baptiſm till they were old, ſo ſome of the Chriſtian Emperours, becauſe an opinion prevailed upon them that Baptiſm diſcharged them of all ſinnes.

Vide Voſſii Diſputat. de baptiſmo. Diſput. 1. 6. Et Zepperum de Sacramentis, Et Balduinum de Caſ. Conſ. lib. 4. c. 5, & 6. Caſ. 8. Alij in multos annos & ſuum & liberorum ſuorum Baptiſmum differre ſoliti fuerunt: Conſtantinus ſiquidem magnus, quod profectionem in Perſos ſuſcipere, & in Jordane baptizari, non ſine ſuperſtitioſa quadam opinione, quod nimirum in illo Chriſtus quoque baptizatus fuerit, conſtituiſſet, in ſenectutem uſque Baptiſmum diſtulit, quemadmodum, l. 4. c. 62. De vita Conſtantini. Author eſt Euſebius. Vide Evang. Hiſt. Eccleſ. l. 2. c. 41.

I think that the delay of Baptiſm which Conſtantine and ſome others were guilty of, did creep in among other corruptions, and was grounded on the falſe doctrines of thoſe Hereticks that denied forgiveneſſe of ſinne to thoſe that fell after Baptiſm, which affrighted poore people from that ſpeedy uſe of it which the Scripture preſcribeth. Maſter Baxters Infant Church-memb. part 2. chap. 15.

Conſtantine much eſteemed and favoured Euſebius who was a very ſubtil and malicious Arian, and yet Conſtantine even to his death extreamly hated and deteſted Arianiſm, one token of which love was his receiving the Sacrament of Baptiſm at his hands, when he was extreamly ſick, and near his death. Crakanth. Defence of Conſtantine, cap. 6. See pag. 80, to 86. and 92, 93.

But Conſtantine received Baptiſm at Euſebius his hand, when he was a Catholick Profeſſour, and earneſt in that profeſſion. The Apoſtles and Chriſt himſelf held communion; and received the Sacrament with Judas, Mat. 26. 23, &c. ſo long as he kept the outward and Catholick profeſſion, though in his heart he was an Apoſtata, yea Devil, Id ib. p. 96, 97.

Chryſoſtome and Gregory Nazianzen (ſaith Grotius) were not baptized till they were twenty years old at leaſt.

Pleroſque Baptiſmum ſuum diſtuliſſe in articulum mortis, res eſt notiſſima ex Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica; unde Clinicorum nomen. Mareſius de precibus pro mortuis.

Auguſtine, Jerome and Ambroſe, were baptized when grown up men, yea, but when they better underſtood the point, they diſallow neglect of childrens Baptiſm, as the Parents ſinne, as Jerome in his Epiſtle to Lata, and Auguſtine frequently, and ſo Ambroſe, all one for Pœdobaptiſm, as an Ordinance of God, and ſo as counting it ſinne to neglect it. Cobbet of Baptiſm, part. 2. Sect. 5.

Some hold that only Infants of Church-members are to be baptized.

But although the Parents of thoſe Infants be not members of any particular Church, yet if they be members of the univerſal Church, as they are certainly, if they be baptized, and profeſſe the Catholick Faith, that is enough for the adminiſtring of Baptiſme to their Infants, otherwiſe there will be no difference between their Infants, and the Infants of Turkes, which is not to be admitted.

See Mr Blake of the Coven. c. 46, 47, 48. that children of all that are Chriſtians in profeſſion are to be baptized Mr Baxt. in his 3d Diſputat. denies that Infants of notoriouſly ungodly Parents have right to be baptized, and 4th Diſputat. diſcuſſeth that Queſtion, Whether any beſides Regenerate Believers have a right to the Sacraments given them by God.

We admit children to Baptiſm:

1. By vertue of their remote Parents, who may be good though their immediate Parents be bad, Acts 2. 39.

2. They may be admitted by ſtipulation of others, to ſee them educated in the faith into which they are baptized, be the Parents themſelves never ſo wicked. Vide Amef. Caſ. Conſc. l.4 c.27.

Whether the uſe of Witneſſes be neceſſary.

Peter Martyr in loc. Commun. cals it, Utile inſtitutum, a profitable conſtitution.

In ancient time the Parents of children which were Heathen and newly converted to Chriſtian Religion, were either ignorant and could not, or careleſſe and would not bring up their children agreeably to the Word of God, and the Religion which they newly profeſſed. Hence it was thought meet, that ſome perſons of good knowledge and life, ſhould be called to witneſſe the Baptiſm, and promiſe their care for the childrens education.

This Objection carries ſome force with it, and there is a very ſtrong Objection likewiſe againſt this opinion, ſince thoſe for the moſt part that maintain this, ſay, The Parents that give the federal right to their children muſt be viſible Saints or Church-members, as they phraſe it. is this, The wickednesse of a Jew could not prejudice the childs right that was to be circumcised, therefore neither the wickednesse of a Christiana childs right that is to be baptized. And whether their Baptism be not null which had no right, and so they ought to be rebaptized, should be seriously considered by them that hold that tenet.

Quest. What if the immediate Parents be believers only in shew?

Answ. 1. The profession of the faith is sufficient.

2. Children have right to Baptism by vertue of the first Covenant with Abraham, in whom we have as true an interest as the Jews ever had, Acts 8. 12, 13, 38. with 10. 47. Gal. 3. 29. Rom. 11. 17. So that the wickednesse of the immediate Parent doth not prejudice the right of the child: for then Hezekiah should not have been circumcised, because he had a wicked father. Mr Lyfords Principle of Faith and good Conscience, Chap. 49.

Object. The children of the faithfull only are to be baptized, because only those Infants are judged to be in the Covenant, and only holy.

Answ. 1. We are not to regard the ungodlinesse of such as are their natural Parents of whom they were begotten, but the godlinesse of the Church, in which and of whom they were born: for the Church is as it were their mother.

2. We must consider not only their immediate Parents but their fore-fathers and ancestors which have led a godly life, Rom. 11. 16. By the name of root in that Nation of the Jews, he doth not understand the next Parents who peradventure were prophane and ungodly, but those first Parents of that people, viz. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to whom the promise was made, and the Covenant confirmed.

They are to be baptized who in charity may be thought to be in the Covenant, such are all that professe themselves to be of the Christian faith, and also their children, Acts 10 45. 1 Cor. 7. 14. Dr Gouge his Carechism.

Parents being in the Church by the profession of Christian Religion, their children are within the Covenant, Ezek. 18. 20. So that the impiety of the Parents prejudiceth not the child that is born in the Church.

2. By Parents are to be understood, not those alone of whom children are immediately begotten and born, but their Progenitors and Ancestors also who feared God and lived in the Church, though many generations before. For God made not his Covenant with Abraham and his immediate seed only, but with all his seed after them in their generations, Gen. 17. 7.

Lastly, Be the next Parents whosoever they will be, yet their children being born in the Church, the Church is their Mother, and the faith and piety of the Church investeth such as are born in her unto the Covenant. Down. of the faith of Infants.

Either by Baptisme men are admitted into the particular Church, or the whole Church, or no Church: but not into the particular Congregation, no man is baptized into the particular Congregation, it is not the seal of the particular Covenant: therefore it is into the whole or none. If a Heathen be converted in a Congregation, first he receives Baptism, afterward is admitted a member of the particular Congregation. Mr Hudf. Vindicat. chap. 5. See him chap. 6. pag. 134, 142.

A baptized person is baptized not to that particular Church only, but to all Churches; and in every particular Church where he cometh, he hath all the priviledges of a baptized person. Sealing Sealing the promiſe by an initial Sacrament, is not only in reference to a particular Church, either National or Congregational, but principally in reference to the Catholick Church. Churches Divine Warrant of Inf. Bapt.

Mr Ball in his Catechiſm hath this paſſage, Baptiſm is a Sacrament of our ingraffing into Chriſt, Communion with him, and entrance into the Church; for which he citeth *Matth.*28.19. Acts 8.38. And afterwards explains himſelf; It doth (ſaith he) ſolemnly ſignifie and ſeal their ingraffing into Chriſt, and confirm that they are acknowledged members of the Church, and entred into it. And that we are thereby admitted members, not of a particular Congregation, but the Catholick Church, appears, becauſe we are baptized into one body, 1 *Cor.*12.13. See Mr Hudſ. ib. quæſt. 2. *p.*239. & *p.*238.

Whether the children of Infidels (viz. Jewes, Turkes and Pagans) may be baptized?

Baldwin a *Lutheran, Caſ. Conſc. lib.*4. *cap.*8. *Caſ.*8. maintains it lawfull to baptize the children of profeſſed Infidels, if jure belli, [a] or the like way they come to be under the power of Chriſtians; but he ſaith, Si Infans valetudinis ſit ſatis firmæ, mile eſt, ut prius in principiis doctrina Chriſtianæ inſtituatur, quàm ad Baptiſmum afferatur.

[a] The like holds Crocius in his *Antiweigelius part. poſteriori, cap.*7 *Qu.*1. and ſaith, they come lawfully into the power of Chriſtians, which are bought, or taken in a juſt warre, or adopted. The children of Jewes and Turks may be baptized if their parents be content and deſirous. Such parents give ſome hope that in time themſelves will profeſſe the faith.

Rivet on Geneſis 17. allows the baptizing of the children of meer Pagans, if they be in the power of Chriſtians to diſpoſe of them as their own, in that Abrahams ſervants bought with money, or born in his houſe, were to be circumciſed.

There is a large promiſe to Abraham, ſtretching Covenant to his ſeed, not only to the children of his own body, and to his proſelyte ſervants, but alſo to all them that were born in his houſe, or bought with money, *Gen.*17.12,13. which happily may grant ſo much liberty to a Chriſtian Sponſor, that if a ſtranger or wicked man ſhould give him his child from his Infancy to be brought up as his own, it may be baptized as his own.

Whether the children of Papiſts may be baptized?

Many hold that the children of Papiſts being either offered by them, or in the tuition of others, are not to be excluded from Baptiſme, ſince the Papiſts (though groſly erroneous) do profeſſe the ſubſtance of Chriſtian Religion.

Baptiſm celebrated in the Church of Rome is true Baptiſm, becauſe albeit the Papacy be not the true Church, yet the true Church is in the Papacy, God preſerving the remnants of it in the middeſt of the bowels of Antichriſt. Atterſol of the Sacrament, *lib.*2. *cap.*3. See cap. 6. Vide Balduinum *de Caſ. Conſc. lib.*4. cap. 8. *Caſ.*7.

I dare not wholly take away the name of a Church from Rome. I know that Antichriſt ſhall ſit in the Temple of God: That Baptiſme cannot be adminiſtred out of the Church: And when the entire form of Baptiſm is obſerved, St Auguſtine hath reſolved, Non hæreticus, ſed hæretici manu Chriſtus baptizat. Therefore the Council of Nice determined very gravely, That there ſhould be no rebaptization of ſuch as were baptized by hereticks. Doctor Hampton in his Sermon on 1 John 2.19.

Although there be many devices of men ſinfully annexed to Baptiſm in the Church of Rome, and ſome wicked opinions erroneouſly held concerning it among them: yet Baptiſm both was there, *Rom.*6.34. & 1.7. as Gods Ordinance, before theſe corruptions and errours, and ſo hath been continued in that Church to this day, and ought alſo ſtill to be retained: the corruptions only and the errours being renounced and rejected. Johnſ. Chriſtian Plea, c.3.p.53.

There is one Baptiſm, as there was one Circumciſion. And Baptiſm had in the Apoſtate Churches of Chriſtians, is anſwerable to Circumciſion retained in Iſraels Apoſtaſie. Now Circumciſion being once received in the Apoſtaſie of Iſrael, was not repeated again at their returning to the Lord, and leaving of their idolatrous wayes to ſerve him according to his Word; but they that were ſo circumciſed were (without any new circumciſion of the fleſh) accepted at Jeruſalem, and admitted to the Paſſeover, of which none might eat that was uncircumciſed. In like manner alſo, Baptiſm being once received in the Apoſtatical Churches of Chriſtians, is not to be repeated again, when any ſo baptized return unto the Lord, and forſake their Idolatries, ſubmitting themſelves to the truth of the Goſpel. *Johnſ. ibid. cap.*3.*p.*27.

Whether the children of ſuch as are excommunicated, may be baptized?

Mr Cotton and Mr Hooker oppoſe this, The Sacraments (ſaith he) are given to the viſible particular Churches of Chriſt Jeſus, and to the members thereof, ſuch therefore as are cut off from their member-like Communion with the viſible Church, are cut off alſo from the Seals of that Communion, Baptiſme and the Lords Supper. As therefore we do not receive an Heathen to the fellowſhip of the Supper, nor their ſeed to Baptiſm, ſo neither dare we receive an excommunicate perſon (who is to us as an Heathen) unto the Lords Supper, nor his children to Baptiſm.

3. Baptism succeeds Circumcision, which was but once administred, nor to be administred any more, as is clear from the total silence of the Scripture, and Josh. 5.4.

4. It is numbred among Heresies in the ancient Church to reiterate a Baptism, which was acknowledged to be valid. Mr Martials Defence of Infant-Baptism, pag. 68.

The Errour of Rebaptizing arose upon a corrupt understanding and interpretation of that place, Acts 19.5. They are not the words of Luke the writer, but of Paul the speaker, continuing his speech of Johns Disciples and hearers, and are not to be understood of the twelve Disciples.

Some prove from that place that Johns Baptism and Christs do differ, but few urge it for the reiterating of Christs Baptism.

Private Baptism.

Those which in the case of some private fast, can be content for their preaching to change the Church into a Chamber, in the case of Baptism, make dainty to change a Chamber into a Church. Bishop Hall to Mr Struther in his Remaining Works.

Cartwrights Reply to Whitgift in Defence of the Admonit. p.112.

From St Johns preaching and baptizing in open meetings, we conclude that both preaching and baptizing ought to be in publick Assemblies.

Hence Austine concluded, that all not baptized were condemned, as he doth from *Joh.*6.53. that whosoever received not the Sacrament of the Supper is damned.

The Baptism of Midwives and in private houses, rose upon a false interpretation of John 3.5. where some do interpret the word rather of the material water wherewith men are washed, whenas Christ takes it there by a borrowed speech, for the Spirit of God, the effect whereof it shadoweth out, cleansing the filth of sin, and cooling the great heat of an unquiet conscience, as water washeth the thing which is foul [c], and quencheth the heat of the fire.

[c] Cartw ib. p. 113. The same hath Calv. Epist. 244. Non est privatæ familiæ alicujus actio, sed merè Ecclesiastica. Beza.

It is not a private action of faith, but publick, and of the whole Congregation, whereby another member is received into the visible Church, and as it were incorporated into the body, all ought to have their part in it, as they are members of the same Church, and so it ought to be then done when all may best take knowledge knowledge of it. As in Corporations both of the Universities, and also of the Cities and Towns, none are admitted in them but in a full Congregation, or in a publick Assembly where all may be present, and give their consent: So in the visible Church by Baptism they ought then to be incorporated when the Assemblies are greatest, and when all may most conveniently be present, which is the Lords Day.

The Minister may not baptize with any other liquor and element, than with natural, common and ordinary water. The command is for water only, John 1. 33. and the servants of God have used onely that, Matth. 3. 6. John 3. 22. & 4. 2. Acts 8. 38.

Balduinus the Lutheran in his Cases of Conscience, l.4.c.8. case 4. propounding this case, Num minister Ecclesiæ ditioribus parentibus gratificari salvâ conscientia possit, si fortè liberos suos vino generoso, aut aquâ rosatâ baptizari petant? Answers, Partes substantiales hujus Sacramenti nequaquam sunt mutandæ: Non enim oportet nos sapientiores esse Christo, qui regenerationis Sacramentum aqua fieri voluit, Johan. 3. 5. neque melliores, quia ipse etiam aquâ Jordanis, aquæ ac alij baptizari voluit, Matth. 3. 16. Jam verò constat, aquam esse partem alteram substantialem Baptismi, & quidem aquam fontanam aut fluvialem, prout eam Deus condidit, absq; mixturâ herbarum aut aliorum liquorum. Many reasons he there also alledgeth against changing water in Baptism. Quasi res esset contemptibilis ex Christi præcepto, aqua baptizari, inventa est benedictio, vel potius incantatio quæ veram aquæ consecrationem polluerit. Calvin. Instit. l.4.c.15.

If no composition may be used, then much lesse may any other signe be used, and so the element clean changed, and the Ordinance of God altered: for the Church of God hath no liberty to bring in any other signe in place of water. See *Levit.*10.2.

Whether it be lawfull to use the sign of the Crosse in Baptism?

In St Augustines time, yea before it, the Christians as they used to signe their fore-head with the Crosse, in token that they were not ashamed of Christ crucified (whom the Jews and Gentiles reproached for the death which he suffered on the Crosse:) so they brought thereof into the Sacraments, and used both the figure of the Crosse, and crossing in other things of God also. Doctor Rainolds against Hart, p 504.

Scimus veterem Ecclesiam (sc. Primitivam) & in vita communis usu, & in ritibus sacris, multum usam esse venerabili signo crucis, sed ut pia ceremonia, quæ orationi adjecta, animos fidelium ad Christi crucem everteret; non materia alicui terrenæ, aut figuræ, aut gestui affigeret. Hoc sensu sanctissimi prudentissimiq; illi Antistites, qui Ecclesiæ in Anglia reformandæ negotio præfuerunt; & in publicis locis cruces passi sunt remanere, & in nonnullis etiam ritibus sacris retinuerunt, ut in Baptismo. Casaub. *exerc.*13. ad annales B.

In the Revelation the worshippers of the Beast receive his mark, and the worshippers of the Lamb carry his mark, and his Fathers in their fore-heads. Hence came the first use of the Crosse in Baptism, as the mark of Christ, into whom we are initiated, and the same afterwards used in all Benedictions, Prayers and Thanksgivings, in token they were done in the name and merit of Christ crucified. Mede on *Ezek.*20.20.

Had not the Popish abuse and superstitions about the Crosse made us jealous of all use of it, who would not have thought this a decent ceremony at the administration of Baptism, to remind all the Congregation of their Christian profession and warfare to which the Sacrament it self doth oblige them? Traditiones rituales quæ ad ordinem & ritus cultus divini pertinent, are to be received upon this condition only, modo ne veritati, pietati simplicitati & libertati Christianæ adversentur.

The unconformists dispute against the Surplice and Crosse, not onely as monuments of Idolatry, but as signs analogical of mystical or sacramental signification, in nature and use, one with the Jewish ceremonies, a will-worship, having no ground nor warrant from the Scripture, and against the second Commandment. Mr Ball.

Signum crucis (nominis valorem superans, non signum tantum est crucis, sed planè crux Christi.

The Heathens did object to the Christians in time past in reproach, That the God which they believed in was hanged upon a Crosse. They thought good to testifie therefore that they were not ashamed of the Sonne of God by the often using of the sign of the Crosse. But we now live not among Turkes that contemn the Crosse of Christ, but Papists which esteem more of a wooden Crosse than of the true Crosse of Christ, that is, his suffering. We ought therefore to take away the use and superstitious estimation of it. Cartwrights Reply to Doctor Whitgifts in Defence of the Admonition, *pag.*136. The body and blood of the Lord. The three Evangelists and Paul say, that the Lord called it so, because of the neer union between the signs, and things signified.

The New Testament in Christs blood, Luke 22. 20.

1. To put us in remembrance, that all the blessings in the new Covenant are the purchase of blood. Blood was anciently the sanction of Laws and Covenants, Sanctio à sanguine, say the Grammarians.

2. Because by this Sacrament the blessings of the New Testament are confirmed and sealed up to us.

It is called by the Ancients Synaxis, which is a Greek word and signifies the same with Congregation, or a meeting together, 1 Cor. 11. 20. it is a collection, gathering together, or assembling of the faithfull. Videtur nomen à primis Christianis formatum, ut discrimen inter Christianas Synaxes & Judaicas Synagogas ponerent. Jonstonus de commun. vet. Eccles. c. 1. Artic. 2.

The most common name of it among the Fathers, is the Mystery, or Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ. Three Evangelists have mentioned Christs last Supper, Matth. 26. Mark 14. Luke 22. and Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 4. and more fully, 1 Cor. 11. 26. Sacramentum Novi Testamenti, quo animis & actibus nostris in Christo obsignatur. Wendelini Christiana Theol. Systema Maius lib. 1. cap. 23.

The Papists call it A Masse, The Sacrament of the Altar, and The Sacrifice.

Some things are necessary in their nature, as love and fear of God; Some only by a Law are necessary to our life, so all institutions of Christ. Paul cals it the Lords Supper, which imports Christ the Author, as indeed he was, as the Evangelists do witnesse. See 1 Cor. 11. 23. It is a standing Ordinance, he enjoyns the use of it, Till the Lord come, ver. 26. which cannot be meant of coming in the Spirit, for so he was already come according to his promise made before he departed from the world.

The Lords Supper is thus described by one:

It is an Institution of Christ or second Sacrament of the New Testament, consisting of bread and wine, wherein by performance of divers acts about it, the Covenant of Grace is confirmed to every worthy receiver. This is too obscure and confused.

Others thus:

It is the second Sacrament of the New Testament instituted by Christ himself, wherein by taking and eating of bread, and by taking and drinking of wine, the Covenant of Grace is confirmed to every worthy receiver, Matth. 26.26. Mark 14.22. Luke 22.19. 1 Cor. 11.23.

It is the eating and drinking of consecrated Bread and Wine given to seal up our feeding and nourishment in Christ Jesus.

Dr Featley in his Grand Sacriledge of the Church of Rome, c. 15. thus defines it, It is a Sacrament of the New Testament, sealing unto us the perfect nourishment of our souls, by the participation of the sacred elements of Bread and Wine.

Dr Gouge in his Catechism thus defines it, It is a Sacrament of our spiritual nourishment, wherein by receiving of Bread and Wine according to Christs Institution, our Communion with Christ is represented and sealed up unto us.

Cœna Domini est Sacramentum nutritionis & auditionis fidelium in Christo. Amef. Medul. Theol. l. 1. c. 40.

It is a Sacrament of our nourishment and our growing up in the Lord Jesus, and therefore it is appointed by him to be frequently used, as being one of the standing dishes which the Lord Christ hath provided for the daily diet, and the household provision of his faithfull ones who are of his family, 1 Cor. 11.26,34. Bread sustains the hungry, Wine refreshes the thirsty, both satisfie to the full: Christ saves perfectly all that come unto him. Hookers Survey of the Summe of Church-Discipline, part 3 c. 2.

Cœna est Sacramentum, quo actis Dei gratiis pane & vino utimur ad profitendum nos Christi corpore crucifixo, sanguineq; fuso, in æternam vitam sustentari: Ut enim à Baptismo primum est Christianismi initium, sic à Cœna perpetuum deinceps est alimentum. Rami Comment. de Religione Christiana lib. 4. cap. 8. Panis Eucharisticus dicitur Panis quotidianus, Tertulliano, Ambrosio, Cyrillo, Augustino, quod anima & corporis subsistentiam fulciat, ut Damascenus ait, vel potius, quod in quibusdam Ecclesiis quotidie daretur. Jonstoni Symag. De Commun. vet. Eccles. cap. 3. Vide cap. 4 Art. 3.

Only Ministers lawfully called are to administer the Supper, because the preaching of the Word and administration of the Sacraments are joyned together, Mat. 28.19. and because also those only are to administer it, who can try the faith of him that receives it, 1 Cor. 11.28.

Here we have more immediately to do with the Person of Christ: we draw nigh to God in prayer, but we become one with him in the Supper, 1 Cor. 10.16. here are the sweetest refreshings that ever we receive, other duties seem rather to be our work, this is our meal: all other duties are to fit us for the Supper, Examination, the Word, Prayer. This is a duty of the highest and most mysterious signification, Epitome Evangelii: Here are the benefits of the Covenant in one rite, 1 Cor. 11.25. the whole contrivance of salvation is represented in a little bread and wine, it is a duty wherein God seals up to his people the assurance of his love and special favour, John 6.33.

The Lords Supper is,

1. A spiritual medicine to cure the remainder of corruption.
2. Spiritual food to strengthen our weak graces.
3. A spiritual cordial to comfort our distressed consciences.
4. A strong obligation to all acts of thankfulnesse and obedience unto Jesus Christ.

What are the special and spiritual ends for which the body and bloud of Christ is exhibited and applied in the Lords Supper?

1. In the transacting of the services there done, the whole Covenant of grace is sealed and personally applied, the body and bloud of Christ may be held forth in a Sermon, God renews unto them all that he hath promised, Mat. 26.22. This Cup is the New Testament in my blood, as the New Testament is founded in the bloud of Christ, so it is exhibited and sealed therein.

2. It serves for the nourishing and building up of his people in all graces, it is called eating and drinking, He that eats my flesh and drinks my blood.

Two things are comprehended under nourishment:

1. The maintenance and preservation of the stock of spiritual life which we have got already, as by our meat and drink we are preserved and continued in our life.

2. In children it serves to augment their parts, make them larger, stronger, the Lords Supper was appointed by Christ to be one of the great means of our spiritual augmentation.

The

The Sacraments are not properly Seals unto our faith, but of the Covenant: They may be said to be seals of our faith consecutivè, by a consequence of speech, because as seals confirm a thing, so faith is confirmed and strengthened by receiving; but they are not formaliter, in a true proper sense, seals unto any thing but the Covenant.

All graces are nourished and increased by the Lords Supper, because the new Covenant is sealed: but three cardinal Graces especially, as in the body, nourish the stomack, liver, brain, heart, lungs, nourish them and you nourish all the rest.

1. The in-dwelling vertue of the Spirit of God, they receive an increase of the Spirit.

2. Faith, nourish that and you nourish all, it is called the life of faith. Faith is the condition of the Covenant, and we seal to our condition.

3. Love to God and his people, it doth enflame thy love to God and his people, it is a communion, we are all made one Spirit.

This Sacrament doth not beget but increase and strengthen Grace where it is already wrought.

See M^r Gillesp. Aarons Rod Blossoming, l. 3. c. 12. 13, 14. The Word makes bad ground good, the Sacrament onely makes good ground better. The Word doth both convert, and edifie, the Sacrament onely edifies. We have no promise or president in Scripture for the conversion of any by receiving the Lords Supper. It is not set forth under the notion of Immortal seed, but under the notion of food and nourishment. Dostor Drakes Answer to Suspens. Suspended. Durand saith, It can exhibit no more than it signifies: What can bread and wine doe to a dead man?

This holy Sacrament is a nourishment of spiritual life, and therefore cannot with effect be ministred to them, who are in the state of spiritual death; it is giving a cordial to a dead man. Although the outward rite be ministred, yet the grace of the Sacrament is not communicated, and therefore it were well that they also abstained from the rite it self. D^r Taylors Great Exemplar, part 3. Sect. 15. Of the Institution and Reception of the Sacrament.

Christ is conveyed in this Sacrament by way of food. The Word was appointed to work conversion, Faith cometh by hearing. This Ordinance was not appointed for conversion, but it supposeth conversion, it seals mens conversion, it may occasion the conversion of one. See M^r Baxters second Disputation, pag. 138. Therefore in the primitive times they let all come to the hearing of the Word, and then when the Sermon was done, there was an Officer stept up and cried, Sancta Sanctis, Holy things for holy men, and then all others were to go out, and therefore it was called missa (though the Papists did corrupt it, and so called it the Masse afterwards, by mixing their own inventions in stead of the Supper of the Lord, but it had that name at first) because all others were sent away, and onely such as were of the Church and accounted godly stayed.

M^r Burth. Gospel-worship.

Reasons. 1. The nature of it, being the seal of the Covenant of Grace, it must be supposed that all which come hither must be in Covenant with God. The condition of the Covenant of Grace, is, Believe and be saved, therefore it is appointed for believers.

Secondly, It is the Ordinance of spiritual nourishment, there must be first life before there can be any nourishment received in. If it be appointed to nourish and increase grace, then surely there must be grace before. See John 6.57. that is, shall receive an increase of spiritual life and grace by Christ.

Thirdly, We are required to examine our selves, 1 Cor. 11. and of our godliness, examine what work of God hath been upon the soul, and to remember Christ, 1 Cor. 11.24. affectionately.

Parens saith, Sacramenta sunt instituta non in fidelibus, sed conversis.

Fourthly, It is a Sacrament of Communion with God and with the Saints, 1 Cor. 10.16. and, What communion hath light with darknesse? Or, What fellowship hath Christ with Belial?

Communion supposeth union; unbelievers cannot have communion with Christ nor his members, being not ingrafted into the body, Ephes. 2.12.

All ignorant prophane scandalous persons, and such as are meerly civil are hence excluded.

Conversi-

Conversion is sometimes (and that improperly in Scripture, as Matth. 18. 3.) taken for the renewed exercise of faith and repentance in one that is already converted, but the Question is, Whether the first work of Regeneration, the infusing of the first habits, principles and seed of grace, be effected by the Lords Supper received?

It is one thing to be converted at a Sacrament, another to be converted by the Sacrament, there is some expounding, praying, &c. It is one thing intentionally to convert as an institution, and another accidentally to convert as an occasion. Philip Goodwins Evangelical Communicant.

Solt Christiani ad sacrum convivium admittendi sunt, non tamen promiscue omnes, sed illi tantum qui ipsi esse probare, Cœpiscopi Domini, recte discernere, & hoc Sacramentum admonitis Christi commemorationem celebrare possint & velint. Cœpii Synag. Theol. lib. 4. cap. 14. Nec illi admittendi sunt, qui vel publice tuentur errores pugnantes cum fundamento, vel perseverant in flagitiis notoriis. Ursini Thesis de Cœna Domini. Hæretici & scelerati, si accedat pertinacia, à cœna Domini sunt arcendi. Zanch. de Eccles.

The Assembly upon these grounds thought it fit, that scandalous sinners (though not yet cast out of the Church) should be suspended from the Sacrament.

1. Because the Ordinance in self must not be prophaned.

2. Because we are charged to withdraw from those who walk disorderly.

3. Because of the great sin and danger both to him that comes unworthily, and also to the whole Church. The Scriptures from which they did prove all this, were Mat. 7. 6. 2 Thess 3. 6, 14, 15. 1 Cor. 11. 27, to the end of the Chapter, compared with Jude v. 23. 1 Tim. 5. 22.

When a crime is made publick and notorious, the Governours of the Church according to their power, are to deny to give the blessed Sacrament, till by repentance such persons be restored. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, Part 3. Sect. 15. See more there, and his Worthy Communicant, c. 5. Sect. 3, 6.

Another Proof added by the Assembly, was this, There was power and authority under the Old Testament to keep unclean persons from holy things, Lev. 13. 5. Num. 9. 7. 2 Chron. 23. 19. And the like power and authority by way of Analogy continues under the New Testament, for the authoritative Suspension from the Lords Table, of a person not yet cast out of the Church.

Wicked men (saith Master Hilderſam) should not be admitted to the Table of the Lord, Ezra 6. 21. holy things are prophaned thereby, Ezek. 22. 26. 1 Cor. 5. 6.

There should be a publick confession for scandalous sins. David was more honoured for this, Psal 51 than dishonoured for his sinne. Salamon left his Ecclesiastes as a monument of his Repentance. Paul frequently mentions his faults, Tertul. de pœnit. and others speak of it.

For above six hundred years, the Church of God did give the holy Communion to newly baptized Infants. Dr Taylors Worthy Communicant, chap. 3. Sect. 2. See more there.

H. Smith Sect. 3. if fools can desire it, and can be kept innocent, the Church did never deny it to them. If mad men were men of a good life, they may in their intervals, that is, when they can desire it, and when they will not use the Sacrament irreverently, communicate.

Why should any that are not Saints be admitted to one of the highest privileges of Saints, Church communion in the highest? The Sacrament of the Lords Supper is a distinguishing Ordinance; they who have no union with Christ, can have no communion with him. Mr Cheynel on Zech. 2. 7.

It was their great sin in the Church of Corinth, that they did not cast out the incestuous person, and it was a commendation to that Church, Rev. 2. that they could not endure the Nicolaitans.

A prophane person in Augustines, Chrysostomes time, Tertullians and Cyprians time in Pauls, in Justins time, could not come to the Sacrament. They are called Tremenda mysteria, mysteries which the soul is to tremble at, the Fathers call it the most moſt terrible day and hour, as if it were a day of Judgment.

This Suſpenſion is called by the Schoolmen, Excommunicatio minor.

The power of ſuſpending one from the Sacrament, is given not uni, but unitati, to the Elderſhip, not to any one either Miniſter or Elder. M^r Gilleſp. Aarons Rod bloſſ. *l.*3.*c.*1.

Church-officers ſhould not admit all promiſcuouſly, but be carefull whom they admit to the Supper. See Beza on 1 Cor. 11. 28.

That they be not cruel to the ſouls of them they admit, and to the Nation, and their own ſouls, by being guilty of other mens ſins. Pareus ſaid to thoſe of Heidelberg, When I ſee your Sacrament prophanation, I wonder not at the Warre.

It becoms all people chearfully and willingly to ſubmit to that courſe of Examination; Miniſters muſt give an account to God for them, therefore they ought to take an account of them. See 1 Pet. 3. 15.

Yet M^r Ford in his Century of Familiar Letters, *p.*130,131,132,133,134. ſaith, the Scripture no where commands Examination of others.

It is lawfull to joyn with a known unſanctified man in the ſervice of God, 1 Sam. 15. 30, 31. Chriſt knew Judas to be an hypocrite, a Devil, a Traitor, yet admitted him to be at the laſt Paſſeover which ever he received, though not to the Supper, for that was not adminiſtred till his departure, not becauſe it had been unlawfull to have received with him.

Becauſe the Lord who commandeth his worſhip, never puts in any ſuch limitations and exceptions, unleſſe a wicked man be preſent.

Object. Chriſt was the Son of God, and as ſo knew the theft and hollowneſſe of Judas, and therefore his example in this caſe cannot be our warrant.

Anſw. Though he did know as God his wickedneſſe, yet he did receive the Paſſeover with him as man, and how he came by the knowledge of his faultineſſe it matters not, ſince he knew him faulty. Therefore our Saviour alſo went up to the uſual feaſt, and to the Temple, when he was ſure to meet there with the moſt abominable Scribes and Phariſees, 1 Sam. 2. 2. Hannah and Elkanah went up to the houſe of God to Shiloh to worſhip there with the ſons of Eli, Hophni and Phineas, there not alone with wicked people but Prieſts they did partake in divine ſervice.

Some

Huſſeys Plea for Chriſtian Magiſtracy.

Some endeavour to prove out of 1 Sam. 2 17. that wicked men by coming to the Sacrament do pollute it, becauſe the ſinfull carriage of Eli's ſons, cauſed men to abhorre the offering of the Lord: but note the reaſon why the offering became abominable, becauſe they offered not the Sacrifice according to the Commandment of God, they would not have ſodden fleſh but raw: If the doctrine of the Sacrament be corrupted, if it be celebrated under one kind, if water be mingled with wine, this is to pollute the Ordinance.

Object. We are commanded to ſeparate our ſelves from the wicked, and to come out from amongſt them, 2 Cor. 6 17.

Anſw. We muſt indeed come out from amongſt thoſe which do ſerve falſe gods, and ſeparate our ſelves from the familiar ſociety of wicked perſons, but other ſeparation was never practiſed by any Prophet or Apoſtle, or ever meant. Immediately there it follows, Touch not the uncleane thing, that is, do not joyn with others in their pollutions, Eph. 5. 6, 7, 11.

Some ſay he ſpeaks to profeſſours of Chriſtian Religion concerning Heathens, to leave familiar fellowſhip with them, as joyning in marriage, and the like, which is the thing he had ſpoken of immediately before.

To have none good is the property of a Church malignant, to have all good and none bad is the property of the Church triumphant, to have ſome good and ſome bad is the property of the Church militant.

Men openly wicked and ſcandalous ſhould be caſt out of the Congregation of Saints, but it follows not, that becauſe ſuch ſhould be caſt out and be not, therefore others ſhould abſtain from the Aſſemblies of the Saints.

The Browniſts abſtain from coming to the Word and Sacrament amongſt us, becauſe many openly prophane and known wicked men are admitted to our Aſſemblies, therefore they think they cannot with good conſcience ſerve God with ſuch perſons, but no good man in the Scripture did therefore withdraw himſelf from the Temple or their Synagogues. See M^r Hilderſ. on Joh. 4. 22.

[a] Goſpel-worſhip. See D^r Homes his miſchief of mixt Communions.

The Ordinance (ſaith M^r Burroughes [a]) muſt be received in a holy Communion, or in a Communion of Saints, 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17. therefore all that come to receive the Sacrament, muſt ſo come as they muſt be one body, one ſpiritual corporation.

[b] On Hoſ. 5. 3. Cant. 7. 2. The navel and belly are both hidden parts, and therefore ſet forth the myſteries or Sacraments of the Church, Baptiſm and the Lords Supper. The navel ſerving for the nouriſhing of the Infant in the womb, reſembleth Baptiſm nouriſhing Infants, it wanteth not liquor. 1. Of the blood of Chriſt to juſtifie us from ſinne. 2. Of the Spirit of Chriſt to ſanctifie and cleanſe us from ſinne. The Belly, viz. The Lords Supper is an heap of Wheat, for ſtore of excellent, ſweet and fine nouriſhment; ſet about with Lillies, becauſe onely the faithfull pure Chriſtians ſhall be admitted to partake in the Sacrament. Maſter Cotton in loc. The corruptions of the Church of England are ſuch, that a man in abſtaining from the pollutions thereof, ought not to ſever himſelf from thoſe open Aſſemblies wherein the eternal Word of the Lord God is Preached, and the Sacraments adminiſtred, although not in that purity which they ought to be. Cartw. ſecond Reply againſt Whitgifts ſecond Anſwer, 38.

This Sacrament (ſaith he [b]) is not defiled to the right receivers of it, meerly becauſe wicked men are preſent there, but becauſe the Congregation neglects their duty of caſting out the wicked from thence, when they diſcover themſelves. The example of the inceſtuous Corinthian, 1 Cor. 5. (ſaith he) is a plain place for it, A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. The Lump there is the Church-communion, and the leaven the inceſtuous perſon; while this leaven continues, if you do not your duty to caſt out this ſcandalous perſon, your whole lump, your whole communion will come to be defiled. Particular perſons and communicants come to be defiled in this, if they neglect the duty that belongs unto them as Chriſtians, Mat. 18. 15, 16, 17 if thou haſt done this duty to all ſcandalous perſons in the Congregation, then the ſin be upon the Church, thou maiſt receive the Sacrament with comfort, though wicked men be admitted there.

As I never found one word in Scripture where either Chriſt or his Apoſtles denied admittance to any man that deſired to be a member of the Church, though but onely profeſſing to repent and believe; So neither did I ever there find that any but convicted Hereticks, or ſcandalous ones (and that for the moſt part after due admonition) were to be avoided or debarred our fellowſhip. The rest of the Congregation is not polluted by the mixture of unworthy persons with them, unlesse they be consenting to their wickednesse, no more than in the duties of hearing and prayer with the wicked in a mixt Congregation. M^r Lyfo. Princip. of Faith and a good Consc. c. 52.

For that Objection, A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

Answ. This is a Metaphorical speech, the meaning of it is not, that one or two sinners cause the whole Congregation to be so corrupt and unpleasing to God, that whosoever joyneth with them is polluted, but alone this, One sinner suffered and not punished, the infection spreads farther and farther.

1 Cor. 5. 6. Tametsi impiorum causa, qui se Sacramentis admiscent, Sacramentum non est declinandum; tamen quoad datum, & nostra in potestate est, omnis conatus & diligentia adhibenda est, ut nos cum pijs aggregantes, improbos à Sacramentorum communione procul abigamus: quod ut omnibus promiscuè incumbit, ita singulari cura & industria ab Ecclesiæ moderatoribus procurari debet. Cartw. in Harm. Evang.

Objection, We are commanded not to eat with a brother, if he be so and so.

Answ. It signifieth to have familiar civil society with them, in inviting them or feasting them. But if one may not have familiar civil conversation with such, much lesse may he eat with them at the Sacrament. It follows not, for in withdrawing our selves from them we punish them, and shew our dislike of them, but in withdrawing our selves from the Sacrament because of them, we punish our selves. The Church of Israel in the time of Hophni and Phinehas was a mixt multitude. In the time of Christ the Church of Jerusalem, for they plotted Christs death, and had decreed to cast out of the Synagogue every one that should confesse him.

1 Sam. 2. 17. The Priests were unsanctified men, therefore no doubt many more.

M^r Downame * saith, None ought to refrain coming to the Lords Table, because they see scandalous sinners and unworthy guests admitted. For

1. The Apostle, 1 Cor. 11. 28. doth not enjoyn us to examine others but our selves.

2. Because the Apostles, yea even Christ himself did joyn with those Assemblies in the service of God, and particularly in the use of the Sacraments which were full of corruptions, both in respect of doctrine and manners, as viz. this Church of Corinth it self. See 1 Cor. 11. 21. The word usually signifies to be drunk, and here they are sharply reproved for a great fault.

* On 1 Cor. 11. 28. Zanchy taxeth such as will abstain from the Lords Supper, and those also who will say, Manebimus quidem in Ecclesia, veniemus eam admittantur ad audiendum verbum & ad preces, sed quì possumus in cœna communionem vobiscum habere, cum ad multi imputi, ebrij, &c. He saith, Non aut ob talem abusum Ecclesia desinit esse Ecclesia Christi, aut pij impiorum in sacris communione possunt contaminari.

3. Because one mans sinne cannot defile another, nor make the seals of the Covenant uneffectual to him who cometh in faith and repentance, and even hateth that sinne which he seeth committed, especially when he hath no power committed unto him by God and the Church, of repelling the wicked from this holy Communion.

4. Because the punishment denounced against unworthy receivers is appropriated to them who thus offend, and reacheth not to the innocent because they are in their company, 1 Cor. 11. 29.

It were much to be desired (saith M^r Downame) that all wicked persons were excluded from this outward Communion with the Saints (for what have dogs to do with holy things, or swine with pearls?) and it were a great comfort to the godly, if none but such as are like unto themselves, had fellowship with them at this Feast; our Love, Zeal, and Devotion is more enlivened in this action by our mutual prayers, when with one mind and heart we joyn together, yet it should not wholly discourage us from coming to this sacred Feast (though wicked persons be there present) if we our selves be duly prepared. For though we would not willingly eat with slovenly persons, nor permit them to put their unclean hands into our dish, yet if we have a good appetite and cannot help it, we will rather admit such inconvenience, than for want of food pine with hunger.

Animam prius tradam meam (inquit. Chryſ. in Matth. Hom. 83.) quam Dominicum corpus alicui indigno: Sanguinémque meum effundi potius patiar, quàm ſacratiſſimum illum ſanguinem præterquam digno concedam.

Theodoſius the Emperour being a man guilty of raſh effuſion of blood, coming upon a Sabbath-day to the place of publick worſhip, would have received the Sacrament: Ambroſe ſeeing him coming, goes and meets him at the door, and ſpeaks thus to him; How dare thoſe bloody hands of yours lay hold on the body and blood of Chriſt, who have been the ſhedders of ſo much innocent blood? Which ſpeech did ſo ſtartle him, that he went away and was humbled for his ſinne, and afterwards came and made his publick confeſſion, and then was received in. Whence we may ſee, ſaith one, that even Emperours have been kept back from the Sacrament. *

The Canons of our Church (Can. 26.) ſtraitly charge every Miniſter, That he ſhall not in any wiſe admit to the Communion any of his flock which are openly known to live in notorious ſin without repentance.

Whether Judas received the Sacrament of the Lords Supper?

S[t] Auguſtine and others think, Judas was admitted to the Lords Supper, and Maſter Cartwright alſo ſo judgeth from that connexion, Luke 22. 19, 20, 21.

Mr Gilleſpie in his Aarons Rod bloſſoming, chap. 8. holds he did not, and chap. 9. queſtions, Whether he received the Sacrament of the Paſſeover that night in which our Lord was betrayed: and chap. 10. ſaith, If it could be proved that Judas received the Lords Supper, it maketh nothing againſt the Suſpenſion of known wicked perſons from the Sacrament.

Si pij communione in ſacris cum impijs polluì poſſunt: cur ergò Chriſtus à Cœna non arcet Judam, quem optimè norat eſſe impuriſſimum nebulonem, ne cæteri Apoſtoli ejus conſortio polluerentur? Zanch. de Eccleſ. cap. 7. Yet afterward he ſaith, Conſtat Dominum Jeſum non prius ſuam inſtituiſſe cœnam, quàm legalem de Paſchate abſolviſſet, Joan. autem, cap. 13. ait, Judam poſteaquam à Domino Jeſu offulam, intinctam (in catino; ubi agnus erat) accepiſſet, hoc eſt, ſtatim exiviſſe. Si ſtatim exivit, nondum abſolutâ legali cœnâ, quomodo interfuit cœnæ Dominicæ, quæ illam conſecuta eſt? See Doctor Taylors Great Exemplar Part 3. Sect. 15. of the inſtitution and reception of the Sacrament. See of ſuſpending men from the Sacrament which are not excommunicated, Mr Baxters Appendix to his Gildæ Salvianæ.

Mr Humphreys Vindication of a free admiſſion to the Lords Supper.

One ſaith, The evidence of this fact hath ever appeared ſo fully to the Church, that this alone hath been ground ſufficient to deduce their right of free admiſſion. Dr Drake in his Barre to free Admiſſion to the Sacrament, pag. 5, 6. urgeth reaſons that Judas did not receive the Sacrament, and ſaith, that it makes nothing for free Admiſſion if he did.

See Maſter Baxters 2[d] Poſtſcript to his Diſputations.

William Klebitus (ſpeaking of the Soppe which Judas did eate) proves, that it was not the bread of the Euchariſt, and Anſwers ſix Arguments alleadged for his receiving of the Sacrament. It is in the Ninth Tome of the Bibliotheca Criticorum. Gulielmus Klebitius de buccella intincta quam comedit Judas.

M. Selden De Synedriis veterum Ebræorum, cap. 8. ſaith, Seriò perpendatur, Judam ipſum, Furem, Proditorem, Sceleſtiſſimum, hiſque nominibus ſatis notum & publicè peccantem in ipſa inſtitutione cum reliquis undecim, Sacramenti Euchariſtiæ, juxta pleroſque & Veterum & Recentiorum, participem fuiſſe, nec omninò ex interdictum. He hath much more there out of divers ancient and modern Writes to confirm that opinion.

Voſſius Harmon. Evang. lib. 1. cap. 14. alſo alleadgeth divers of the Greek and Latine Fathers, and other modern Writers for it, and ſome others againſt it. Vide Jonſtoni Syntag. de Commun. Vet. Eccleſ. cap. 2. Artic. 2. Secretary Morice in his Common Right to the Lords Supper, Sect. 2[d]. pag. 169, to 188. is for it, and Sect. 11.

It followed the celebration of the Paſſeover which

At what time the Lords Supper was inſtituted:

Chriſt inſtituted it at night, becauſe occaſion ſo required: we have not the like occaſion, therefore are not bound unto it. In Trajans and Tertullians time Chriſti-ans did celebrate the Sacrament before day, * Tempore anteluncano, becauſe of perſecution they durſt not receive it in the day time; in S^t Auguſtines time, Tempore Antemeridiano, ſo now. It behoved that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer at the time of the Paſſeover, to ſhew himſelf the true Paſſeover, 1 Cor. 5. 7. and immediately after the eating of the laſt Paſſeover ſhould inſtitute this Sacrament, to ſhew that now he abrogated the Jewiſh Ordinance, and did appoint this in ſtead of it. A fair intimation that Baptiſm follows in the room of Circumciſion, as the Lords Supper doth the Paſſeover.
